1 Circuit Court of the United States, Southern District of New York.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION
v.
EDWARD H. HARRIMAN and OTTO H. KAHN.

In the Matter of the Petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission for an Order Requiring Edward H. Harriman and Otto H. Kahn to Answer Certain Questions Propounded by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Petition.

To the Honorable Judges of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York:

Now comes the Interstate Commerce Commission, represented by Henry L. Stimson, United States district attorney for the Southern District of New York, pursuant to the direction of the Honorable Charles J. Bonaparte, Attorney-General of the United States, and presents this, its petition:

That the Interstate Commerce Commission was duly created and organized under and by virtue of the act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, as amended by an act approved March 2, 1889, and by the act approved February 10, 1891, and by the act approved February 8, 1895, and by the act approved June 29,
2 1906, and by the joint resolution approved June 30, 1906; reference to which statutes is hereby made for greater certainty.

That under and by virtue of the provisions of said act to regulate commerce, the Interstate Commerce Commission has authority to inquire into the management and the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, to keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted, and has the right to obtain from such common carriers full and complete information necessary to enable the Commission to perform the duties and carry out the objects for which it was created.

That among other duties of said Commission, as prescribed by said act, as amended by the act approved June 29, 1906, is to require annual reports from all the common carriers subject to the provisions of said act, and from the owners of all railroads engaged in interstate commerce as defined by the said act, and to prescribe the manner in which such reports shall be made, and to require from such common carriers specific answers to all questions upon which the Commission may need information.

That such annual reports are required to show in detail the amount of capital stock issued, the amounts paid therefor, and the manner of payment for the same, the dividends paid, the surplus fund, if any, the number of stockholders, the funded and floating debt and the interest paid thereon, the cost and value of the carrier's property, franchises, and equipments, the number of employees and the salaries paid to each class, the accidents to passengers, employees,

3 and other persons, and the causes thereof, the amounts expended for improvements each year, how expended, and the character of such improvements, the earnings and receipts from each branch of the business and from all sources, the operating and other expenses, the balances of profit and loss, and a complete exhibit of the financial operations of the carrier each year, including an annual balance sheet; also such information in relation to rates or regulations concerning fares or freights or agreements, arrangements, or contracts affecting the same as the Commission may require; and the Commission may, in its discretion, for the purpose of enabling it the better to carry out the purposes of the act, prescribe a period within which all common carriers subject to the provisions of the act shall have, as near as may be, a uniform system of accounts, and the manner in which such accounts shall be kept. It is the duty of said Commission to make a report on the 1st day of December of each year, containing such information and data collected by the Commission as may be considered of value in the determination of questions connected with the regulation of commerce, together with such recommendations as to additional legislation relating thereto as the Commission may deem necessary.

It is also made the duty of the said Commission, under and by virtue of the said act, to have general supervision over the question of rates, fares, and charges, and, upon an investigation as provided by said act, to prescribe just and reasonable rates to be observed as maximum charges.

That, for the purpose of enabling the Commission to perform its duties, it is authorized to investigate all of the said subjects—
4 the manner of conducting the business of a railway company, the amount of its capital issued, and the amounts paid therefor, and the manner of payment of the same, the dividends paid and the surplus fund, the funded and floating debt, and the cost and value of the carrier's property, franchises, and equipments; and that said Commission is authorized to inquire into all of the things required by said act to be made public by the said carrier, its officers, agents, and employees.

That pursuant to its said power the Commission did, on the 15th day of November, 1906, hold a regular session at its office in the city of Washington, D. C., and that there were present at said hearing the following-named Commissioners: Martin A. Knapp, Judson C. Clements, Charles A. Prouty, Franklin K. Lane, Edgar E. Clark, and James S. Harlan; and that at said time and place the said Commission duly passed a resolution and made an order as follows, to wit:

"Whereas the act to regulate commerce provides that the Commission 'shall have authority to inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, and shall keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted,' and also requires the Commission 'to execute and enforce the provisions' of said act;

"And whereas it appears to the Commission that consolidations and combinations of carriers subject to the act, and the relations now and heretofore existing between such carriers, including community of interests therein, and the practices and methods of such carriers affecting the movement of interstate commerce, the rates received and facilities furnished therefor should be made the subject of investigation by the Commission to the end that it may be fully informed in respect thereof, and to the further end that it may be ascertained whether such consolidations, combinations, relations, community of interests, practices, or methods result in violations of said act or tend to defeat its purposes;

"It is ordered that a proceeding of investigation and inquiry into and concerning the matters above stated be, and the same is hereby, instituted, and that the same be set for hearing at United States court rooms in the city of New York, N. Y., on the 28th day of December, 1906, at 11 o'clock a. m., the further hearing to be continued at such times and places as may be required."

That pursuant to said order the said hearing was adjourned from the 28th day of December, 1906, at 11 o'clock a. m., till the 4th day of January, 1907, when said Commission met in the city — New York, in room 66, Federal Building, at 10 o'clock a. m., and that said Commission duly commenced the said inquiry and pursued the said inquiry during the 4th and 5th days of January in the said city of New York; during the 8th, 9th, and 10th days of January at the Federal Building in the city of Chicago, State of Illinois; during the 21st day of January at Seattle, in the State of Washington; the 24th and 25th days of January at Portland, in the State of Oregon; the 29th, 30th, and 31st days of January at San Francisco, in the State of California; the 7th and 8th days of February at Los Angeles, in the State of California; and that thereafter the said Commission duly adjourned the said hearing to and the same was continued in the city of New York, in room 70 of the Federal Building aforesaid, on the 25th, 26th, 27th, and 28th days of February, 1907.

6 That hereto attached and made a part of this petition to this honorable court is a printed copy of the testimony and exhibits, so far as your petitioner deems the same material to this proceeding, taken before said Interstate Commerce Commission at said various hearings, which said testimony and exhibits is contained in eight volumes, marked, respectively, as follows:

"Testimony taken in New York, January 4th and 5th."

"Testimony taken in Chicago, January 8th, 9th, and 10th."

"Testimony taken in Seattle, January 21st."

"Testimony taken in Portland, January 24th and 25th."

"Testimony taken in San Francisco, January 29th, 30th, and 31st."

"Testimony taken in Los Angeles, February 7th and 8th."

"Testimony taken in New York, February 25th, 26th, 27th, and 28th."

"Exhibits."

which said testimony and exhibits are hereby made a part of this petition as fully as though recited herein at length.

That it appeared by the testimony taken at said hearing that the Union Pacific Railroad Company was organized under the laws of the State of Utah, and since about July, 1897, has owned a line of railway from Council Bluffs, Iowa, to Ogden, Utah, including the line from Julesburg to Denver and from Denver to Cheyenne, and also the line of railway from Kansas City to Denver, commonly known as the Kansas Pacific; and also that since about said time it has owned substantially all the stock of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation
7 Company, and controls said lines; that the lines are operated as one property with the lines of the Union Pacific Railroad Company; that the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company owns a line of railroad extending in a general way from Granger, Wyoming, westward to Huntington, Oregon, with a line from Salt Lake City, Utah, to Silver Bow, Montana; that the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company's lines extend from Huntington, Oregon, to Portland, Oregon, with a line to Spokane, Washington, and into northern Idaho; all of which lines constitute and did constitute a through line of railway prior to the acquisition of the stock of the Southern Pacific Company as hereinafter alleged.

That the Southern Pacific Company was created under the laws of Kentucky by special charter in about the year 1884; that said company owns the stock of and controls a system of railroad extending from Ogden, Utah, to San Francisco, California, from San Francisco, California, to Portland, Oregon, and from San Francisco, California, through California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and Louisiana, to New Orleans, Louisiana, and a steamship line from New Orleans to New York, Habana, and other places. Of some of these lines the Southern Pacific Company has a lease; other lines it controls by stock ownership.

That said Southern Pacific Company also owns and controls a line of steamships from Galveston, Texas, and New Orleans, Louisiana, to New York and Habana and a controlling interest in a line of steamships known as the Pacific Mail Steamship Line running from San Francisco to Honolulu and Oriental ports.

8 That the said Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company also owns a line of steamships extending from Portland to San Francisco and to Oriental ports.

That it appears by the said testimony that shortly after the reorganization of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Mr. Edward H. Harriman and Mr. Otto H. Kahn, the defendants herein, became connected with said Union Pacific Railroad Company, as directors, and that Mr. Harriman has been a director of said company from the said time until the present time; that for many years last past the said Harriman has been the president of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company.

That in or about the year 1901 the said Union Pacific Railroad Company purchased about 45 48/100 per cent. of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company; that the stock of said Southern Pacific Company was thereafter increased, and that the Union Pacific Company acquired its proportion of said capital stock thereafter issued, so that at all times the said Union Pacific Company has maintained its ownership of stock of the Southern Pacific Company at said percentage.

That, since about the year 1901, the said Union Pacific Company has, through the said ownership of stock, dominated and controlled the management of the Southern Pacific Company and all its allied lines, including the said steamship lines.

That said ownership of stock of the Southern Pacific Company has been at times in the Union Pacific Railroad Company and at other times in the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, controlled by the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

9 That the said Union Pacific Railroad Company has elected the board of directors of the Southern Pacific Company, appointed its officers, agents, and servants.

That Edward H. Harriman has been the president of the Southern Pacific Company substantially all the time since about the year 1902.

That said companies have common traffic officials, the majority of their boards of directors are common, and the said companies are principally dominated by the said Edward H. Harriman.

That it appeared at said hearing that the said Union Pacific Railroad Company, either in the name of the said Union Pacific Railroad Company or through the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, had purchased at various times large amounts of stock in other railway companies, and had at times sold some of said stocks; that schedules of said purchases of stock so made, and sales of stock so made, appear in the volume of exhibits hereto attached marked "Harriman Exhibit No. 2," and "Harriman Exhibit No. 3," on pages 143 to 151 of said volume of exhibits hereto attached.

That the list in said exhibits states the prices paid for said stock, the dates of purchase, the prices for which any of said stocks were sold, and the dates of sale thereof.

That it appeared also by the said testimony of said Edward H. Harriman and other witnesses that the Union Pacific Railroad Company had issued, for the purchase and acquisition of stocks in other railways, $100,000,000 of convertible bonds of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, which had been converted into common stock of the said Union Pacific Railroad Company.

10 That the said Union Pacific Railroad Company had caused the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company to issue $100,000,000 of participating bonds, which were afterwards retired by $100,000,000 of refunding bonds of the said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, secured by a mortgage on all the property of the said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company; of which said refunding bonds $45,000,000 are outstanding and were used for the purchase and acquisition of stocks, and the remaining $55,000,000 are owned by the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

That the Union Pacific Railroad Company also has outstanding notes for the purchase of capital stock of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company amounting to $36,393,432, making a total of $181,393,432 of obligations of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and Oregon Short Line Railroad Company outstanding in the hands of the public, used by said companies for the purchase of railroad stocks.

That it also appeared by said testimony of said Edward H. Harriman that the said Union Pacific Railroad Company and its subcompanies have expended in the purchase of stocks, in addition to all sums received from the sale of stocks, $182,588,648.98.

That in and pursuant to its power, said Commission was investigating the said purchase and sale of stocks by the Union Pacific Railroad Company and Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, the prices paid therefor, the parties from whom the said stocks 11 were purchased, the value thereof, and the use which had been made of said stocks in the control of other lines of railway.

That on February 25, 1907, when said Harriman was under examination before said petitioner Interstate Commerce Commission (Commissioners Knapp, Clements, Prouty, Harlan, and Lane being present), the said witness stated that the Union Pacific Railroad Company purchased 103,431 shares of stock of the Chicago and Alton Railway Company, and, in connection with said purchase, was further interrogated and testified as follows (p. 23 et seq., testimony, N. Y., Feb. 25):

"Mr. KELLOGG: That stock seems to have been bought about October and November, 1904; is that correct?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I think that is so.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Who sold that stock to the Union Pacific Company?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Was there a circular sent out asking for a deposit of stock of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company for the purpose of selling it?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: My recollection is that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. issued a circular asking for a deposit of Chicago & Alton preferred, to be left in their hands to be sold under the control—I believe it was under the control or under conference with a committee.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Who was the committee?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Myself—I beg pardon for putting myself first—I should have said Mr. Stewart.

"Mr. KELLOGG: We do it.

"Mr. HARRIMAN: And Mr.—you have it there—I think it was Mr. Mitchell and myself—John A. Stewart, John J. Mitchell, and myself, was it not?

"Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, sir.

12 "Mr. KELLOGG: I offer in evidence an agreement dated December 23, 1903, for the deposit of Chicago & Alton stock."

(Received in evidence, and marked "Exhibit 5 to Mr. Harriman's testimony.")

"Mr. KELLOGG: Under this agreement the preferred-stock owners of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, I believe in a general way, are assumed to deposit their stock with the bankers, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., subject to sale?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: That is right.

"Mr. KELLOGG: The price to be fixed by John A. Stewart, Edward H. Harriman, and John J. Mitchell?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: That is right.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Did you fix the price at which that stock was sold to the Union Pacific Company?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I joined in it.

"Mr. KELLOGG: You joined in it?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Yes, sir.

"Mr. KELLOGG: What was the price fixed—86½, was it?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: That is right.

"Mr. KELLOGG: 2½ per cent. commission?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Well, we didn't pay 2½ per cent. commission.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Well, taken out of that; 86½ was the gross sum paid?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Net price to the Union Pacific.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Net price to the Union Pacific; yes, sir. How much did the owners of the stock get?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Eighty-four.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Have you the list of stockholders who deposited their stock with Kuhn, Loeb & Co.?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I have not.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know any of them?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: In a general way.

Mr. KELLOGG: Can you give the names of them?

13 "Mr. HARRIMAN: I don't think I could from recollection; there are a great many.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Who has the list?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: There are a great many; there may have been 100.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Who has the list?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: That I don't know; that I had nothing to do with.

"Mr. KELLOGG: You fixed the price?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I didn't fix the price.

"Mr. KELLOGG: I mean you and the committee?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: The committee fixed the price."

That the Exhibit 5 offered in evidence in connection with the testimony of said Harriman is the deposit agreement under which owners of preferred stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company deposited with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. their shares; and the said stock deposited under said agreement was the stock which was so sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company by said Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the price of which was fixed by John A. Stewart, Edward H. Harriman, and John J. Mitchell, as stated by said Harriman.

That at the time of the purchase of said Chicago & Alton stock by said Union Pacific Railroad Company in the manner described in the testimony of said Harriman, he, the said Harriman, was a director, the president, and the chairman of the executive committee of said Union Pacific Railroad Company.

That after giving the testimony concerning said purchase hereinbefore recited, said Harriman was asked by counsel for your petitioner the following question:

"Did you own any that was so deposited?"

14 which said question referred to the stock concerning which the witness had been interrogated and had testified. Thereupon objection was made by Mr. Milburn, one of the counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and who was in attendance upon said hearing as such, and the propriety of requiring an answer to the said question from the witness was argued by counsel and between counsel and the Commission in the language following, to wit (p. 25 et seq., testimony, N. Y., Feb. 25):

"Mr. MILBURN: Now, if your honor please, that raises a question which I desire to present to the Commission. It is one which may arise in various forms, and I may as well present the matter, which I shall do very briefly now, so that the Commission can have before it exactly what is in our minds on the subject.

"We appreciate the range of this investigation. It is defined in the order which underlies it.

"Looking at the matter from our point of view, we have from the beginning endeavored to guide ourselves by a policy of providing for the use of counsel all the information within our possession bearing on the subject. We have extended every facility that was within our power, every document, paper, entry, or minute bearing on any transaction of the Union Pacific and its allied lines.

"We have appreciated that this was an inquiry to ascertain what interest it had acquired in other companies, what interest it held in other companies, what relations it held and bore through these acquisitions to other railroad companies, with a view to determining the effect of such ownership or control upon interstate commerce—upon rates, upon facilities, but, fundamentally, upon interstate commerce, which is the great subject that is confided to the jurisdiction and care of this Commission. And, therefore, I repeat, all

15 the information bearing on the stocks which have been acquired, the various reasons for the acquisition, some for the control of properties like the Southern Pacific, to become a permanent part of the system; some as investment of funds, as Mr. Harriman has explained. We say those have all been presented here—the price that was paid, the parties with whom the purchase was made by the company. There might be a question as to whether we haven't gone beyond really the scope of the investigation—gone into some matters that do not and can not bear at all upon interstate commerce, which is the polestar of this and every investigation. But for these reasons, which the Commission will appreciate, our attitude has been one of—if I may say it—the most liberal view, and not of a contracted view; because it has been the desire, from the beginning, of Mr. Harriman, as the highest official of these railroads, to lay—to have the transactions of the railroads, their operations in acquiring these properties, known to the public as they were, and that thereby the vast mass of scandal and gossip might be buried forever.

"Now we come into another range, and that is not the price that was paid for these stocks by the company, not who was the vendor, who sold these stocks to the company—that is, the party from whom it was acquired—but what individuals had sold to the vendor.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the real question now.

"Mr. MILBURN: We will see when I get to that point. Now, may it please the Commission, it is right there that I want to ask the Commission whether any matter is raised which bears upon the function of this Commission, on the scope of this investigation, or upon the question of interstate commerce? I can not see that it does—I can not see that it does, from whom the stock was acquired.

The fact that stock has been acquired, is held, and is owned,
16 may be regarded as taking the view of this investigation, the liberal view which I have expressed, as a pertinent matter, because it shows that the Union Pacific system owns these stocks, and such power as that ownership gives.

"On the question whether the price that was paid for it would come within the scope of the investigation, because that is not a matter of interstate commerce, that is not a transaction of this company, what it pays for property is not a transaction which is involved in any way in interstate commerce, or constitutes interstate commerce, that I can see. Who the individuals were who sold to the company is not, that I can see, a pertinent matter with reference to interstate commerce, for the scope of this investigation, the scope of this inquiry, that this Commission is conducting. In other words, I say that there is a line; on the one side of that are matters which are related to part of what transactions of interstate commerce that are within the jurisdiction of this Commission. I say on the other side of this line are the private affairs of individuals. Now, I say, for instance, if any matter—if I individually have sold to a railroad corporation, directly or indirectly, that is not a transaction of interstate commerce in any sense whatever. That is a matter of my private business, no matter what my relations in life may be, and that is not a power which has been or could be conferred upon this Commission. It has a power to go into those transactions which are spoken of as the private transactions of individuals when they are not transactions of interstate commerce.

"Now, I avail myself of this opportunity to raise this question for the consideration of the Commission. I need not say that I know the Commission is desirous of confining itself to the investigations within the powers and limits of the Commission; I know that is its desire, and that is why this question is raised. I need not say to the Commission that there are a lot of matters pertaining 17 to railroad affairs, pertaining to railroad matters, pertaining to railroad transactions, the transactions of railroad companies, that are not interstate commerce, and that the Commission has work enough on its hands in dealing with interstate commerce matters not to deal with those matters that are not in any sense and can not be interstate commerce or interstate-commerce transactions.

"Therefore, I say here, in regard to this particular matter, the only pertinent proposition, the only pertinent fact, is that the Union Pacific Railroad acquired so many shares—preferred shares—of the Alton Railroad, at a certain price, and there is the only transaction that can remotely bear upon interstate commerce. But, as I say, that question I am willing—I don't argue. We will pass it. We will assume that it did. But not more than that can bear upon interstate commerce. Bearing upon interstate commerce, that may be an interstate-commerce transaction, that the Union Pacific did acquire those shares of stock, and it has them. Now, then, the thing is, what is the bearing of that on interstate commerce—that it bought those shares of stock, that it holds those shares of stock, and that it paid for them? Whom it bought them from, whether from A, B, C, D, or E, whether from one man or another, whether from one man to another, is not a matter within the domain of interstate commerce, and I respectfully ask the Commission to consider this question and to limit this investigation to matters of interstate commerce, and not to extend them into matters irrelevant to interstate commerce and that are really private affairs of individuals.

"The CHAIRMAN: Your suggestion, Mr. Milburn, seems to have drawn the distinction between corporate transactions of Union Pacific in this case and what you choose to call the transactions of private individuals. But can it be said that these are the 18 transactions of private individuals? May the executive officers of the railroad company purchase this stock of another railroad company and then sell that stock to the company through the executive officers and preclude inquiry into the transaction because they are private individuals?

"Mr. MILBURN: Just take the very question put by the chairman. May an executive officer of a corporation acquire stock and sell it to the corporation? That is the question which the chairman puts. Well, I say that is not interstate commerce. That is not interstate commerce from any conceivable point of view. I say that under the law of the land he can, and can legally, do it, under certain circumstances. I say, under the law of the land, that whether he can or not depends upon the facts of the particular transactions, as they may be raised by a party entitled to do it. The books are full of transactions between officers of corporations and corporations.

"The CHAIRMAN: It is not a question of the legality of the transaction, but of his right to conceal it.

"Mr. MILBURN: To conceal it?

"The CHAIRMAN: Yes; to refuse to disclose its terms.

"Mr. MILBURN: Let me put that in another way. I am called before this body, and I am asked some questions about my affairs which I deem to be my private affairs. I raise the objection. You would not express that I was seeking to conceal anything. The question is not whether I am making an argument of concealment, but whether that is a subject about which this Commission, within its legal powers, will inquire. There is a vast mass of subjects—I must be right in that position—connected with railroads, and connected with a railroad of State creation and State regulation, and of State powers, as to what it can do, that can not possibly come within the domain of this Commission.

"The CHAIRMAN: The Chairman did not intend to use the 19 term in any offensive sense or as implying any criticism, but only to suggest whether a transaction of that kind is one of which disclosure may be properly refused.

"Mr. MILBURN: I think the test of that is this, is it a Federal question? A matter of interstate commerce? Is there any remedy?

"Commissioner PROUTY: Before this Commission can fix a reasonable rate on the Union Pacific Railroad, it must know how much money it earns and what it does with it, must it not?

"Mr. MILBURN: Well, that is one of the factors.

"Commissioner PROUTY: That is one of the things it should know. Can not it ascertain whether that money has been spent in a legitimate way or whether it has been given to the executive officers of the company?

"Mr. MILBURN: Not that I see, sir, that that is a matter that has anything to do with transportation with a view of fixing a rate. If you were fixing a rate, can we come in and show that we have hundreds of millions of securities out?

"Commissioner PROUTY: That is what you always do; it is what every railroad does.

"Mr. MILBURN: But would you take it into account, I mean, if it does not represent value? Of course, it can be shown.

"Commissioner PROUTY: That is what we are trying to find out, whether it represents value or not.

"Mr. MILBURN: Well, you know what you have got.

"Commissioner PROUTY: If the money of the company has been given away to its president and its officers, the securities do not represent value. That is why it is a proper question to ask.

"Mr. MILBURN: I think that is determined. You know what you have got. You know you have got those shares of Alton stock. Whether or not they were worth what was paid for them does not depend at all upon whether A, B, or C sold it to the Union 20 Pacific. If the Union Pacific makes a purchase, there is the market price of the article. Did it pay more or did it pay less? Now, it is utterly immaterial as bearing upon that proposition whether I sold it to the Union Pacific or anybody else sold it to the Union Pacific. If the transaction is within your jurisdiction, you have got it. Now, if this Commission has the jurisdiction to inquire into every transaction of every railroad in the United States, that is another proposition.

"Commissioner PROUTY: That depends a little bit on who fixes the market price. If you can manipulate this market and fix the market price in that way, and then the man who fixes the market price sells his own stock for that price, that is one transaction.

"Mr. MILBURN: I think, may it please the Commission, that perhaps there is a good deal of thought about manipulating price which does not exist.

"Commissioner PROUTY: And there is a good deal of thought about it that does exist.

"Mr. MILBURN: That may be suspected or may be charged. There is a whole world of rumor and accusations, and a whole world of statements very far from the real state of facts. God help us from being judged by what is represented here as being the things that are done.

"The CHAIRMAN: If I understand it, Mr. Harriman, he stated that he or his associates of the committee fixed the price at which the stocks should be purchased, and you say that we may not inquire as to whether he was one of the persons who were selling that stock.

"Mr. MILBURN: I say so, sir, because if the chairman will bear my distinction in mind, you are going to hold that you have a right to inquire into every transaction of every railroad. That is one thing. If you are limited to interstate commerce, if your investigations concern interstate commerce, that is another thing.

21 Now, there is where I draw my line. I do not see—I submit that no one can intelligently, after reflection and considering the matter, put such matters as that within the domain of interstate commerce. Now, if you were here exercising a visitorial power, and then if you had the power to call upon individuals in such a matter, it would be different; but I beg to draw the deep and fundamental distinction between that relation to transactions and the subject which is confided to the care of this Commission. I say this inquiry is not an inquiry pertaining to interstate commerce, and I would like the Commission not to decide this—it is a serious question—not to decide it without consideration.

"Commissioner HARLAN: On whose behalf do you make this objection? On behalf of the persons who sold the stock, or on behalf of the company who bought the stock?

"Mr. MILBURN: Well, I don't know that I have quite analyzed—my retainer here is for the Union Pacific Railway and its allied lines. If it were necessary to say that I appear for Mr. Harriman in this matter, I will appear for him, you know. I had not considered myself as appearing here personally for Mr. Harriman. I take it that I appear here for the Union Pacific railroads. Now, then, in that appearance I draw the attention of the Commission to the fact that the question put is one which does not concern interstate commerce and should not be put. That is a question that I raise. It is a very important one.

"Commissioner CLEMENTS: If the individual, by reason of his official connection with the railroad company, is able to sell stocks for more than their market value—and that is reflected in the capitalization of any road in the shape of stocks or bonds which must be made good, if good at all, by earnings—does not that come directly into bearing with the interstate question, with the rights of shippers?

22 "Mr. MILBURN: Does it make any difference who the individual is who sells at an overvaluation?

"Commissioner CLEMENTS: If the individual's relations were such to the railroads that he was enabled by his official relations to effect a higher capitalization than that which would be represented by actual value, then is it not a material matter as to whether it was done by an individual who was also an official and whose official position enabled him to do the thing which he could not or might not be able to do otherwise?

"Mr. MILBURN: I think that is a very proper and material matter, if you are investigating into this corporation, under the exercise of a visitorial power, or under the exercise of the power of the creator or the corporation. But it makes no odds, so far as interstate commerce is concerned, whether it was an officer who sold, if you assume such a condition as that, or another individual. We are not here investigating the practices of railroad management separate and distinct from interstate commerce. That is the point of my objection.

"Commissioner CLEMENTS: One of the express purposes of the law included in its authority to the Commission to investigate and keep itself informed in regard to all these matters, with reference not only to existing laws and existing remedies, but additional laws for the better direction and remedying of bad practices. Now, might that not make it material and within the scope of the Commission's authority?

"Mr. MILBURN: Every practice of anything bearing on interstate commerce. There is the ineradicable line. Now, if this was to investigate with reference to enacting some law with reference to the corporation of the State of its creation, we might have another question.

"Commissioner CLEMENTS: Does not the capitalization of roads engaged in interstate commerce have a direct bearing on interstate questions of a reasonable rate?

23 "Mr. MILBURN: I suppose it does, to some extent. That is another question from the one we are discussing, of capitalization. I suppose it has some bearing. I imagine very much less than a great many people think.

"Commissioner CLEMENTS: Do not all these transactions bear upon capitalizations?

"Mr. MILBURN: I do not see so, not the one I am discussing. I am not objecting here to the ascertainment by the Commission of the fact that the Union Pacific has acquired so much Chicago & Alton stock, and that it paid for it so much money. Now, I have not objected to that. There is the fact. If that is overcapitalization, why, then, it speaks for itself. It is here. If the market value of Alton stock is known, if that was more than it was worth, then I suppose there may be some what you would call overcapitalization, to the extent of that margin, although the facts that you have there, if it bears on interstate commerce, you have those facts. But when you come to go behind that fact, to ascertain whether A, B, C, D, or E sold that stock, whether A, B, C, D, or E was an officer, then, I say, you are entering a domain which is not the domain of interstate commerce.

"Commissioner CLEMENTS: If it was conceded to be an evil overcapitalization and it was brought about by methods like this, and you were going to suggest a method to cure it and prevent it, would you not be better able to do it if you knew all about it, whether it was done through officials or individuals?

"Mr. MILBURN: I can not trace any connection, even a remote one; any logical connection between those facts. If you are going to legislate about overcapitalization, why, we had years ago all and vastly more than the information needed for legislating on that subject. If you are going to legislate on the relations of officers to corporations, still the limits of the Federal Constitution taken, 24 and there could be nothing there—no legislation that would be outside of this power to regulate commerce. I am aware how extensive the power to regulate commerce has become; but still I think we have to pause now and then to determine whether there are not some limits to interstate commerce, and that interstate commerce does not as yet comprehend the whole domain of human conduct. I want the Commission—it is a question of principle that I am raising here; I am raising it after careful thought, raising it after serious consideration, and raising it with a full belief and full conviction, so far as I am concerned, that I am absolutely right about it; of course, I would not raise it here—my personal opinion I am not tendering to the Commission as having any more weight than that of a lawyer practicing before you, but I state these things for the reason that I believe you have a very grave question before you, and one that has got to be determined.

"The CHAIRMAN: Do you make any difference, Mr. Milburn, between the question addressed to Mr. Harriman, the president of the Union Pacific, and a member of the committee which fixed the price at which the Alton stock was purchased, and a similar question addressed to John Doe, who had no other interest in the transaction than to accept the offer which might be made for his stock?

"Mr. MILBURN: I draw no distinction; first, in principle, if your honor please, and next in regard to the main question which I raised. Now, corporations have to deal with their officers. There is no legal prohibition on any such matter as that, but the legal propositions involved in a transaction of that kind are not propositions of interstate commerce. That is what I want to bring home to the Commission. Why, such transactions are going on, and such transactions have been before our courts and sustained over and over again, as your honors know. In dealings corporations often enough have to deal with their officers. The State of creation might com-25 plain, and stockholders might raise a question, but that is not a question that makes the transaction a question of interstate commerce.

"The CHAIRMAN: It is not the question of the legality of such a transaction—of the right of such gentlemen to sell their own stock to a corporation of which they are executive officers—but whether they shall be excused from stating the facts in this inquiry. That is the question.

"Mr. MILBURN: The point that I raise is whether they have any power to go into it. Supposing you—as I say, I can conceive conditions, I can conceive a court or a body in cases in which in a multitude of actions that is a proper inquiry; but this is an administrative body. It is a body of the most extraordinary powers of any body, I believe, existing in this or any other country. You can reach out your arm and bring anybody before you. You can go into anybody's office and take hold of his papers. Not outside the Orient do such extraordinary powers exist. Now, then, you bring this man, and that man, and the other man before you, and go right into his affairs, and you can go into his papers, and your officers can go into his office and open his books and demand to see everything that is most private. I say, exercising such extraordinary powers, this Commission will be careful in laying down the lines of this inquiry, those which are on the right side of its powers and which are not. Now, you have all those powers with respect to interstate commerce, but I submit you have not those powers with respect to matters and transactions which are not interstate commerce, and I submit that the question which is asked here is not a matter of interstate commerce.

"The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Kellogg, what have you or Mr. Severance to say to the objections raised by Mr. Milburn?

"Mr. KELLOGG: As to the last statement of the counsel, that such powers as this honorable Commission exercises are not known 26 to any country outside of the Orient, I disagree with him. The Commission are exercising no greater powers than are exercised by the English commission, and not as great. The Commission are exercising powers of inquiry not exceeding the powers of any court to send for papers and individuals. They are exercising no powers beyond the strict limits of the Constitution.

"Mr. MILBURN: I did not say they were.

"Mr. KELLOGG: You stated they were exercising powers not known to any country outside of the Orient.

"Mr. MILBURN: Extraordinary powers.

"Mr. KELLOGG: The powers they are exercising are powers known to every civilized country.

"Mr. MILBURN: I have not heard of them.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I am not to blame because you have not heard of them.

"That is mere talk. The question is whether the Commission, under its power of inquiry, under the interstate commerce act, into the management, as he says, of interstate railways, or railways engaged in interstate commerce, and over interstate commerce, has a right to inquire into capitalization, or watered stock, as it is commonly known, excessive bond issues, prices paid, reasons governing those prices, speculation in stocks,—as Mr. Harriman called it; I did not,—purchase and sale of stocks, anything bearing upon the general management of interstate railroads for two purposes: First, the control over rates of such railroads, arriving at a reasonable rate, what the railroad ought to earn, involving its issue of stocks, bonds, securities of all kinds, and its management, whether that management has been frugal, proper or improper, for the purpose not only of fixing rates, and regulating rates, protecting the stockholders as well as the public; but that you may be informed, and that Congress may be informed, and that you may report, and for corrective legislation, and for other purposes.

27 "Those seem to me to be the plain, simple powers of the Commission, as fixed by the law, and as construed by the Supreme Court of the United States.

"Now then take the question at issue. It can not be possible that the power of the Commission in inquiry is confined to the fact as to whether the Union Pacific paid the market price in Wall Street of Alton stock, whether it used its surplus for that purpose, or whether it did not. We intend to show that the Alton road was inflated beyond all reason, a most conspicuous example of the days of inflation, and we believe its stock is not worth a dollar. We wish to know under what circumstances the stock was bought by the Union Pacific in this most remarkable transaction of the purchase of $130,000,000 or $140,000,000 of stock. That is what this inquiry is for.

"It seems to us we are not going into the private affairs of private individuals. It seems to us when a committee is given the absolute power to fix the price of stock, ten millions of par value which the Union Pacific is about to purchase, and its president is one of those persons—absolutely fix the price as appears by this contract—that whether he was interested also as a seller as well as a purchaser, becomes material as bearing upon the reasonableness of the price paid by the Union Pacific Company, so that your honors may be informed as to the management of that road, and it bears upon interstate commerce as much as State commerce.

"Why, the position of counsel would be this: Congress has a right, and only the right, to correct abuses of interstate commerce. Its jurisdiction is exclusive of the power of the States. The States can not legislate upon the subject at all. What is a reasonable rate for interstate commerce, what is a reasonable earning upon the capitalization of roads in interstate commerce is exclusively in the 28 power of Congress, and not of the States. If the position of the gentleman is correct, the States are limited to this inquiry as to the management of their railroads so far only as it affects State commerce. And there is no power under heaven that can inquire whether interstate railroads have a reasonable capitalization, acquired and put out in a reasonable and proper manner, as one of the elements for fixing rates. Why, Congress may limit the rate a railroad may earn. Congress may prohibit an interstate railroad from acquiring stock in the Chicago & Alton road, or in any other road; from acquiring a parallel or competing road, or any interest therein. These are things Congress may do. And you wish to know, I take it, what the Union Pacific has been doing—the most gigantic system of stock purchases ever known in American railroads.

"Mr. MILBURN: May I, before the Commission reaches a decision, mention one fact which I did not perhaps dwell upon or did not state as it might have been stated? That is in regard to the question of the rates. The value of the properties, everything that enters into transportation, of course, is a great factor in determining what are rates; but if a State which creates a railroad corporation sees fit, within such powers as are left to the States, to authorize one of its own railroad corporations to acquire stock in other corporations, and the railroad corporation does acquire stocks in other railroad corporatins, the rise and fall of values of the investments, or in the action of that power, is not a matter that would enter into rate making whatsoever. If the State creating the Union Pacific saw fit to authorize it to hold stocks in vessels on the Atlantic and on the Pacific, the rates on the Union Pacific Railroad would not be affected by anything connected with the stocks in those steamship companies. The rates of the Union Pacific can not possibly be affected one way or the other. The fixing of rates by this Commission would not be 29 affected by what happens to the investments in New York Central or Baltimore and Ohio. Those are stocks acquired under a power granted by the State to acquire stocks in other railroad corporations. They are a branch of this business, or a branch, you might say, of those operations by themselves. The fortunes of those stocks do not enter into what is a rate for the transportation of freight on the Union Pacific Railroad by the employment of the property of that railroad and the facilities which constitute the rate.

"The CHAIRMAN: How about the rates on the Chicago & Alton?

"Mr. MILBURN: It is precisely the same way with the Chicago & Alton. The rates on the Chicago & Alton are dependent, so far as this factor is concerned, upon the physical properties, facilities, and everything entering into the appliance or machine which does the work for which the rate is remuneration. I do not see how the ratemaking power can be involved in the slightest degree.

"Now, only one more observation. I appeal to a matter that is more known to your honors than to me. My knowledge of it is such experience as I have had before you, and also what I have read of your proceedings and deliberations, and I know of no line of inquiry like this ever having been engaged in by this Commission in its existence.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: May I say a word, Mr. Chairman, in view of your invitation?

"The CHAIRMAN: Yes.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: I do not think we should be concluded from any investigation, by reason of the suggestion just made by my friend, Mr. Milburn, that the Commission has not heretofore gone into such a field. I do not think such a situation has been heretofore presented. Until this investigation began, it has been the conception, I think, of the lawmakers of this country and of the 30 country generally that railroad corporations were organized to run railroads and not for general financial purposes.

"Now, the Union Pacific, having seen fit to depart from the ordinary line of business, if I may use that expression, for which railroad corporations are organized, we have here presented this situation: Upon the credit of the Union Pacific Railroad, which credit is given to it by its line of road and the earnings of that line, they have been able to float $100,000,000 of common stock, which is outstanding in the hands of the public, upon which, presumably, dividends will have to be paid; and $45,000,000 of bonds of the Oregon Short Line. Those are outstanding, and have been used, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say, the proceeds or an equal amount of money have been used in the acquisition of stocks of various kinds, including these stocks.

"These roads have but one treasury, into which all funds go, and out of which all dividends come. All classes of business they transact are necessarily interlaced, one class with the other. In the reports which you require to be made to the Commission, you require a list of stocks owned, prices paid, dividends received, stocks sold, and everything of that sort; and the Union Pacific has complied with the provisions of the law and with the rules of your honors, and has made such reports.

"Now, is it not a fact that any transaction in which this road engages through its officers—and it can only act through its officers—which weakens or lessens its capacity for future usefulness as a railroad corporation, its ability to float additional securities, if necessary, to double track its road, and all that sort of thing, is a proper subject of investigation?

"In the case of Smyth v. Ames, your honors will recall that the Supreme Court laid down the rule as to what things should be taken into account in fixing rates. Capitalization was one of the 31 things, and bonds outstanding. Is it not proper, and is it not essential, that you should trace the purposes for which these stocks and bonds were used, and see whether they represent the proper securities, or whether they represent wind, or nothing? Of course I do not make the suggestion that this has been done in this case, but suppose, for instance, Mr. Harriman had deliberately looted the treasury of a lot of money, and taken it out without putting anything in place of it; is it possible that, when this road is bankrupted by such proceedings as that, and when the question of rates comes up, this Commission can not go into all the transactions of the road, into the condition of the treasury, into what occasioned that condition, in order to fix——

"Commissioner PROUTY: Would it make any difference whether Mr. Harriman did it, or whether anybody else did it? In other words, if you show the fact, is not that all you are entitled to show?

"Mr. SEVERANCE: I think it makes a little difference, because, if it is related to the property, he is acting for the property in doing it.

"Mr. MILBURN: I desire to say just one word. Mr. Severance took the extreme case that Mr. Harriman had looted the treasury. Could you find an indictment in a Federal court on that showing? Would any Federal court have the power to try him for that offense? It is not a Federal question.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, no.

"Mr. MILBURN: That is just the question that is here.

"The CHAIRMAN: We appreciate the importance of the question raised, and we desire to confer among ourselves with reference to it. The decision of the Commission will be postponed until after recess."

That thereafter, on the same day, at said hearing, the said Harriman was fully examined with reference to the character of said preferred stock in the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, so 32 purchased by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and testified that there were bond issues, collateral trust notes, and joint equipment notes of said Chicago & Alton Railway Company which were incumbrances upon its property ahead of and underlying said preferred stock, amounting to $68,280,756, and, in addition thereto, $2,354,000 of current liabilities ahead of said preferred stock. Thereupon the following questions, answers, objections, statements, and rulings took place, to wit (p. 112 et seq., testimony, N. Y., Feb. 25):

"Mr. KELLOGG: * * * Now it is that preferred stock which is behind all of those obligations which the Union Pacific Railroad Company bought for eighty-six and a half, is it not?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Yes; and some other people bought it.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Then, if that stock is worth eighty-six and a half, limited to four per cent., what would you consider the bonds worth ahead of that—the first-mortgage bonds?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: The three per cent. first-mortgage bonds?

"Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, sir.

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Whatever they would bring in the market.

"Mr. KELLOGG: All right. I guess that is a pretty good answer. Now, that stock which was sold to the Union Pacific Company, that preferred stock, is the stock which was deposited with Kuhn, Loeb & Company pursuant to this agreement, Exhibit No. 5, to be valued by Mr. Stewart, Mr. Harriman, and Mr. Mitchell, is it not?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Not on the same ownership. It may have changed ownership fifty times or a hundred times from the time it was issued.

"Mr. KELLOGG: It is the same stock?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: It is the same stock, undoubtedly.

33 "Mr. KELLOGG: I now renew the question, if you owned any of that stock which was so deposited and sold to the Union Pacific?

"Mr. MILBURN: I renew my objection.

"The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Harriman, just a preliminary question. About what is the mileage of the railroad?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I think altogether about 1,200 miles, between 1,150 and 1,200 miles—that is, counting the second track.

"The CHAIRMAN: I mean the length of line.

"Mr. HARRIMAN: It is about 900 miles.

"The CHAIRMAN: Do you recall about what its gross earnings were during the last fiscal year?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: About eleven million and a half.

"The CHAIRMAN: Do you remember its net earnings?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: About $3,700,000.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Chairman, I can give you these figures if you want them.

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I can give them to him. You need not check me up.

"Mr. KELLOGG: You have not given them correctly, that is all.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: We have the annual report.

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I have it in my mind just as good as that.

"The CHAIRMAN: It would seem that a property which earned net—how much?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: $3,700,000.

"The CHAIRMAN: Or less than $4,000,000 last year, is charged with obligations amounting to about $68,000,000, which are ahead of the rights of the preferred stockholders?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Yes; but those obligations are at a low rate of interest.

"The CHAIRMAN: I understand.

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Those obligations are what they would bring in the market really.

34 "The CHAIRMAN: Without pretending to make a ruling which goes beyond the facts developed in this proceeding, we are of the opinion that, upon the facts appearing, we are entitled to know whether Mr. Harriman himself sold any of this stock; and if so, how much.

"Mr. MILBURN: May it please the Commission, appreciating what has been held as to the function of the Commission, and as counsel have serious, real conviction as to the testimony being proper, the court being accessible to determine the question, and fully conscious that the Commission has given its conviction that the testimony is admissible, still we feel that we must advise Mr. Harriman to decline to answer that question, on the ground that it is an inquiry into the private affairs of the witness, in no way connected with the interstate commerce, and therefore beyond the power and jurisdiction of the Commission; because it is not within the scope of this investigation, as defined by the order under which it is proceeding; and because such an inquiry is an invasion of the right of the witness under the Federal Constitution. I request it to be noted that that question Mr. Harriman declines to answer.

"The CHAIRMAN: It is perhaps hardly worth while to state our reasons for the ruling already made; but fundamentally it should be noted that we take the position that a railroad company, subject to the provisions of the Federal statute, is not entitled to have any secrets, and that the officers of such companies may, under such circumstances as are here already disclosed, be required to make known their transaction in respect of the operations of such companies, financial or otherwise.

"Mr. MILBURN: I would not have the Commission think for one moment that we are withholding any information that the company has.

"The CHAIRMAN: We quite understand that.

"Mr. MILBURN: I would not for a moment contend that 35 we have not to furnish you all the information that the company has. Where I am drawing the line is the private transactions of an individual.

"The CHAIRMAN: Upon the facts appearing here, which are thoroughly understood, Mr. Harriman, who was the president of the Union Pacific at the time, who was a member of the committee which determined at what price this stock would be paid for; and, under the circumstances that appear, is asked whether he owned any of that stock which the Union Pacific thus purchased. He declines to answer; objection being made, although it does not appear yet that the objection is made in his own interest. The Commission overrules that objection and directs him to answer. He takes the responsibility of declining to do so.

"Mr. MILBURN: It may be entered, then, that the witness declines to answer on the grounds assigned by counsel, to avoid repetition. I suppose the question will come up in various forms, and we would be very glad at any time to present the matter in the way that the statute provides. We do not wish to delay, and if we are wrong, Mr. Harriman can answer these questions. If we are right, then we feel that we should stand for that principle.

"Mr. KELLOGG: We will go on with the inquiry. You decline, Mr. Harriman, to answer for that reason, do you?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: As requested by counsel, yes."

That after the said witness, Harriman, had declined to answer the question so put, he was upon said day at said hearing asked by counsel for the Commission, said counsel still referring to the said preferred stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, this question (p. 117, testimony N. Y. Feb. 25):

"How much, if any, of the preferred stock which was sold to the Union Pacific Company and valued by your judgment did you own?"

36 To which question counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Mr. Milburn, interposed the same objection as to the preceding question, and the said objection was overruled by said Commission; the witness was directed to answer, but declined to answer for the reasons stated by his counsel with reference to the preceding question.

That thereafter during said hearing and investigation, and on the 26th day of February, 1907, while said Harriman was still on the witness stand and under examination by the counsel for the Commission, and after the said Harriman had testified that Mr. Henry C. Frick, Mr. H. H. Rogers, and himself had acquired large interests in the stock of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company prior to the year 1906, the following questions were asked, and the same were answered by the said Harriman, as follows (p. 164, et seq., testimony, N. Y., Feb. 26):

"Mr. KELLOGG: Well, had these parties acquired from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I don't know that you can inquire into that."

"Mr. KELLOGG: Since that time, and until June 10, 1906, the Union Pacific itself as a company, or the Short Line (meaning the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company) has acquired $10,000,000 of this stock?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: That was an investment pure and simple in the preferred stock.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Was that a part of the stock which had been previously acquired by you, Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Frick?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: I think not——

"Mr. MILBURN: No——

"Mr. KELLOGG: Well, do you know it was not?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Well, I received a shock; I don't think I can answer.

"Mr. KELLOGG: I suggest you gentlemen let Mr. Harriman go ahead and he will clean this whole thing up. Do you know that it was not, Mr. Harriman?"

37 Thereupon Mr. Milburn, counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad Company and said Harriman, stated:

"Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Harriman, I am going to draw, as far as you will allow me, the lines I drew yesterday. I think this question is within the objections I made at that time, and I would like the same proceedings taken in reference to this question as were taken to the other.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you want to withdraw the answer?

"Mr. MILBURN: We will let stay what is in, but I do not think it is proper to pursue it further.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Of whom did the Union Pacific buy that $10,000,000 of stock?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

"Mr. KELLOGG: Was it, or any part of it, at that time owned by any of you three gentlemen

"Mr. MILBURN: That I object to.

"The CHAIRMAN: You object to his answering the question on the same grounds as stated in the similar question asked yesterday?

"Mr. MILBURN: Yes; and could we have the record contain the same proceedings without going over it?"

The Commission then overruled the objection and directed the witness to answer the question.

Mr. Milburn, counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the witness, then stated:

"Yes, and the witness declines to answer on the grounds assigned to a similar question, yesterday, as repeating what is on the record.

"The CHAIRMAN: Precisely.

"Mr. MILBURN: That is understood."

Thereupon counsel for the Commission asked the witness the following question:

"Is that your position, Mr. Harriman?"

38 And said Harriman thereupon responded:

"Absolutely."

It appeared by the testimony that at the time said stock was acquired Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick were also directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company (p. 167).

That it was further disclosed by the testimony of said Harriman and other evidence that on the 19th of July, 1906, the Union Pacific Railroad purchased an aggregate of 90,000 shares of stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company from Henry H. Rogers, James Stillman, and the witness, Edward H. Harriman—30,000 shares from each; and that said Rogers, Stillman, and Harriman were at that time directors of the said Union Pacific Railroad Company. Thereupon counsel for the Commission asked the said Harriman the following question with reference to the said 90,000 shares of stock (p. 193, testimony, N. Y. Feb. 26):

"Mr. Harriman, was that stock acquired by a pool of you three gentlemen?"

Thereupon Mr. Milburn, the counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad Company and said Harriman, objected to the question on the same ground as to the questions hereinbefore mentioned. Thereupon the said petitioner, through its chairman, ruled that said witness should answer the said question. Thereupon the following proceedings were had (pp. 194–195):

Mr. Milburn stated:

"The record will take the same course."

Your petitioner, through its chairman, stated:

"It appears your objections were renewed without repeating 39 them. They are overruled, and the Commission directs the witness to answer. He refuses to do so for the reasons stated."

Mr. Harriman stated:

"I take the same position."

Then, after refusing to answer the said question when directed so to do by the Commission, the following was asked of said witness Harriman with reference to the said stock:

"Was it acquired with a view of selling it to the Union Pacific?"

Thereupon the said Harriman declined to answer the said question. The Commission thereupon directed Mr. Harriman to answer, and he again declined to make reply, on the same grounds upon which he had refused to answer previous questions.

After the said Harriman had declined to answer said last question so put to him he was asked the following question by the counsel for the Commission:

"Was that stock purchased by you, or any part of it, at a much lower price than $175 a share, with the intention of turning it over to the Union Pacific?"

Objection was made by the counsel for the said Harriman, and your petitioner, the Commission, through its chairman, again directed him to answer, and he again refused.

That it had previously appeared by the testimony taken upon said hearing that the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who were the fiscal agents of the said Union Pacific Railroad Company, had on 40 the same date, July 19, 1906, sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company 105,000 shares of the stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company; and the said Harriman was asked the following question:

"Did you have any interest in the 105,000 shares (referring to said Illinois Central stock) which were sold at the same time by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to the Union Pacific?"

And thereupon the said Harriman declined to answer the said question; and he was again directed to answer the same, and thereupon refused.

That immediately after the refusal to answer the said question last quoted, the following question was put to the said Harriman by the counsel of the Commission:

"Was that (referring to the said 105,000 shares of stock) acquired by a syndicate or pool for the purpose of selling it to the Union Pacific?"

Thereupon the witness declined to answer, and the said Commission through its chairman directed him to answer the said question, and the witness again refused.

It having been brought out in the testimony that on the 15th day of August, 1906, the board of directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company voted to increase the dividend upon said stock from

6 per cent. per annum, the rate that said stock had borne for sometime, to 10 per cent. per annum, and, instead of publishing a notice of the fact the succeeding morning after the voting of said increased dividend, as had been customary in the case of other dividends theretofore voted, had referred the announcement of said divi-
41 dend to the executive committee of which said Harriman was chairman, and that said committee had met the afternoon of the day following the vote of said dividend by the board of directors of said company and decided to announce the same immediately before the opening of the stock exchange on the following morning, which was two days after the same had been voted;

And the testimony having further shown that on the same day that said dividend of the Union Pacific Railroad Company was increased to 10 per cent. per annum a dividend at the rate of 5 per ceunt. per annum was voted upon the stock of the Southern Pacific Company, at a meeting of the board of directors of said Southern Pacific Company held on the same day, at which meeting said Harriman was present and presided, and that a similar resolution had been passed providing for the announcement of said dividend at such time as might be determined by the executive committee of said Southern Pacific Company, of which said Harriman was then the chairman, which said committee had met on the day following the voting of said dividend, and had directed the announcement of said dividend to be made immediately before the opening of the stock exchange upon the day following such meeting of the executive committee, and the said Harriman had been present and presided at the meeting of the executive committee authorizing such announcement; the following proceedings took place (pp. 248, 249, 250, testimony, N. Y., Feb. 26):

"Commissioner LANE: Do you remember that the stock appreciated very rapidly after that?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: After July?

42 "Commissioner LANE: After August 17th.

"Mr. HARRIMAN: After August 17th it appreciated because of the payment of this dividend and the publication of the statement.

"Commissioner LANE: Were you directly or indirectly interested in any stocks that were bought between the 19th of July and the 17th of August that appreciated?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: We——

"Mr. MILBURN: Just a moment, please. I do not know enough about the fact, but I think, to be consistent in my position, that that is obviously an improper question.

"Commissioner LANE: It certainly is not obviously improper under our ruling.

"Mr. MILBURN: I do not mean under your ruling but from my position—that is what I mean.

"Commissioner LANE: Yes. I do not understand that he declines at all to answer this line of question.

* * * * * * *

"Commissioner LANE: And you decline to answer that on the direction of counsel?

"Mr. HARRIMAN: Yes."

The following question was asked of said Harriman at said hearing, by counsel for the Commission (p. 252):

"Did you or any director buy any Union and Southern Pacific stock in anticipation of that dividend?"

Said Harriman thereupon replied:

"Mr. Kellogg, I bought Union Pacific stock in 1898 at $25 a share, in anticipation of that dividend, and I kept it up. When I bought that stock for $25, one of my associates dubbed me as a desperate speculator who had more nerve than any man he knew. That was in anticipation of this dividend. I bought it in 43 the panic that was produced by the Northern Pacific corner, and I bought it after the San Francisco fire, and it was bought in anticipation of that dividend."

Thereupon Commissioner Clements stated:

"Now, having told what you did in that year——"

Whereupon he was interrupted by the said witness Harriman, who stated:

"I could not tell you when I bought it. There is no use of cross-questioning me. I am not going to answer anything I am advised by counsel not to."

Whereupon Commissioner Clements said (p. 253):

"I want to ask you, having told what occurred in that year at that time——"

When he was again interrupted by the said Harriman, who said:

"This was in 1906."

Thereupon Commissioner Clements asked the following question:

"Let me ask you a question: What is your own personal objection to telling what you bought and what you paid for it during this intervening time?"

Thereupon the witness answered:

"A matter of principle that is involved.

"Commissioner CLEMENTS: A matter of what?

"The WITNESS: A matter of principle absolutely.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: What is the question of principle involved by which you personally refuse to disclose these facts?

"The WITNESS: I am going to refer to Mr. Milburn to express just what he has before."

Thereupon Mr. Milburn said:

"I have stated it."

44 Commissioner Clements then said:

"I want him to give his personal reason why he objects to answering the question."

Mr. Milburn then stated:

"He has adopted my reasons."

And the witness Harriman further stated:

"I have no reason whatever."

And after certain discussion between the witness, his counsel, and the members of the Commission, the said Commission, through its chairman, directed the witness to answer the questions, and he refused to make answer.

That on February 27, 1907, while said hearing and examination was still in progress, and after it had been made to appear that said Union Pacific Railroad Company had purchased stock of the St. Joseph & Grand Island Railroad Company since July, 1906, from said Harriman (about $2,242,540), the said Harriman was asked by counsel for the Commission (page 275):

"When did you acquire those stocks?"

Objection was thereupon made by counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad Company and for said Harriman to the said question, and the witness declined to answer the same. He was thereupon directed to answer the said question by the Commission through its chairman, and still refused and declined to answer.

He was thereupon asked the following question, referring to the said stocks of the St. Joseph & Grand Island Railroad Company (p. 276):

"What did you pay for those stocks?"

45 And although directed to answer the said question by the Commission through its chairman, declined to answer the same.

And on the same day during the said hearing and examination, and after it had been shown that the Union Pacific Railroad Company had since July, 1906, purchased a large amount of stock of the New York Central Railroad Company, said Harriman was asked by the counsel for the Commission the following question with reference to the same (p. 277):

"Were any of the directors of the Union Pacific interested directly or indirectly in the New York Central stocks at the time they were sold?"

Which said question was objected to by the attorney for the Union Pacific Railroad Company and said Harriman, the objection was overruled, the witness directed to answer, and he declined to reply to the said question.

That at the said hearing and investigation on February 27, 1907, Otto H. Kahn was duly called and sworn as a witness and testified that he was a member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., which was at that time composed of Jacob H. Schiff, Felix M. Warburg, Paul M. Warburg, Mortimer Schiff, Louis A. Heinsheimer, and said Kahn; that at the time of the reorganization of the Union Pacific Railroad Company the said firm was composed of the said Jacob H. Schiff, Abraham Wolf, Felix M. Warburg, Louis A. Heinsheimer, and said Kahn; and that at the time of the said reorganization said firm was quite largely interested in the Union Pacific Railroad Company; that said Jacob H. Schiff was a member of the committee of reorganization; that said Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were the bankers

46 to the committee; that after the said reorganization and up to the year 1906 the said Jacob H. Schiff and the said Kahn were members of the board of directors of said Union Pacific Railroad Company, and the said Kahn was a member of the executive committee of said company; that said firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were at all times and up to the date of the said hearing the fiscal agents of said Union Pacific Railroad Company; that ordinarily and usually when said Union Pacific Railroad Company had securities to sell they were sold through said banking firm, and when said Union Pacific Railroad Company desired to purchase securities they were purchased through the said firm.

And the testimony also disclosed that at the request and instance of said Harriman, the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. had invited a deposit of the preferred stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, hereinbefore referred to, and that an amount in excess of $10,000,000 par value of said stock had been deposited with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. under an agreement, hereinbefore mentioned; and the said witness Kahn testified that he had in his possession a list of the stockholders of the said Chicago & Alton Railway Company who so deposited their stock with said Kuhn, Loeb & Company, which stock was sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company by said Kuhn, Loeb & Co. as hereinbefore set forth. The said Kahn was thereupon asked the following question by counsel for the Commission (p. 342, testimony, N. Y., Feb. 27):

"Now, will you state whether the directors of the Union
47 Pacific Railroad Company were the real owners of the shares so deposited with you and sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company?"

To which question an objection was made by Mr. Cravath, who appeared at said hearing as the attorney for said Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and the witness Kahn; the objection was overruled by the said Commission through its chairman, and the witness was directed to answer; but the said Kahn thereupon declined to obey the directions of the Commission and refused to answer the question.

Thereupon the witness was interrogated as follows (p. 343):

"Commissioner LANE: You were also a director in the Union Pacific at that time?

"Mr. KAHN: I was also a director in the Union Pacific at that time.

"Commissioner LANE: The question I asked you was whether any of your fellow directors were owners of any of that stock (referring to the stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company so sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company)?"

Thereupon Mr. Cravath, counsel for said witness, stated:

"The Commission will understand that the same objection applies."

Thereupon the objection was overruled, the witness was directed to answer, and he declined to reply to the question of Commissioner Lane.

That it had been shown upon said hearing that on the 9th of August, 1906, the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company 105,000 shares of stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company; and during the said hearing and investigation, after the said fact had been disclosed, counsel for the Com-
48 mission asked the said Kuhn the following question (p. 358):

"Then I will ask you the direct question, Mr. Kahn: Of the 105,000 shares of stock which you sold—of Illinois Central stock which you sold on the 9th of August, 1906, to the Union Pacific Rail road Company, and for which you were paid $175 a share—will you please state how much, if any, of that stock was held by you in the interest of or for the benefit of any or all of the directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?"

Thereupon the witness replied:

"I do not believe I ought to answer that question also. I would be perfectly willing to answer if it were not that it involved relationship as to which I ought not to be asked."

Thereupon Mr. Cravath, the counsel for said witness, interposed the following objection:

"May it please the Commission, I should like the same objections entered on the record as to similar questions. In this connection I want to point out that at that time Kuhn, Loeb & Company—Mr Schiff and Mr. Kahn had both retired from the Union Pacific board. They had no official connection of any kind with the Union Pacific board; and we very respectfully submit that they not only had the right to make that transaction, but it is entirely immaterial what clients of their office might or might not have been associated with them in that transaction; and Mr. Kahn pursued his policy of declining to give information regarding the business of their clients. The clients will answer that question."

The chairman of the Commission then stated:

"You observe Mr. Kahn is not now asked who the persons were, but the fact that they did own it all or any part of it."

49 The following proceedings then took place (pp. 358-360):

"Mr. SEVERANCE: The question I have asked now, Mr. Chairman, is as to whether any of that stock, or all of that stock, they offered was held by them for, or for the benefit of, any or all of the directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the buyers. That is my question.

"Mr. CRAVATH: And my proposition is, first, whether they owned all of that stock or not is their own business concern. And, secondly, if they did not own all that stock, that is a fair business secret of those gentlemen as to who did share with them the ownership of that stock, and they ought not to be compelled by this interstate commerce investigation to disclose their own purely private affairs and the private business affairs of their clients.

"Commissioner HARLAN: Does your objection cover the preceding question which the witness declined to answer?

"Mr. CRAVATH: It covers that series of questions, Mr. Commissioner.

"Commissioner HARLAN: The last two questions?

"Mr. CRAVATH: Yes.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: May I call the attention of the Commission to one fact: This question does not involve the disclosure of confidential relations between Mr. Kahn and his numerous clients, except as to the question whether or not Kuhn, Loeb & Company were merely the agents of the directors of the Union Pacific buying stock for themselves. I do not care how many other people they represented. That has nothing to do with it. My question is confined solely to the inquiry as to whether in whole or in part in this transaction they represented all or any of the directors of the Union Pacific. I do not want any misunderstanding about it."

50 "The CHAIRMAN: In order that the record may show distinctly, a preliminary question occurs to me to ask Mr. Kahn whether he objects to stating whether all that stock was owned by his firm, or whether part of it was owned by other parties?

"Mr. SEVERANCE: He has already declined to answer that.

"Mr. CRAVATH: The objection may apply to that question and all questions of that character. The witness refuses to answer all questions of that character.

"Mr. KAHN: We will gladly disclose our transactions in every detail.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: You decline, I understand?

"Mr. KAHN: I decline to answer as to the transactions of my clients."

The witness thereupon testified as follows in answer to questions by counsel for the Commission (p. 360):

"Mr. SEVERANCE: You decline to state in whose interest you held that stock, or who owned the stock which you offered to sell?

"Mr. KAHN: I decline to answer any questions bearing on our relations with our clients.

"Mr. SEVERANCE: And you decline to state whether that 105,000 shares of stock, or any part of that stock which you sold to the Union Pacific for $175 a share, really equitably belonged to or was held by you for any person or any number of persons who were at that time directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

"Mr. KAHN: As a matter of principle I decline to answer."

Thereupon the witness was directed by the Commission, through its chairman, to answer the said question, and he declined so to do.

Thereafter, at the said hearing, the said Kahn testified that he had commenced buying the block of 105,000 shares of Illinois

51 Central stock, so sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, about a year before the date of said sale. He was thereupon asked by counsel for the Commission the following question (p. 369):

"Did you also buy at the same time for Messrs. Harriman, Rogers, and Stillman the stocks they sold at the same time you sold yours?"

He declined to answer the said question, and was directed to answer by the Commission, through its chairman, and persisted in refusing to reply to the same.

He was thereupon asked the following question by the counsel for the Commission (p. 369):

"Was this 105,000 shares of Illinois Central stock and the 90,000 shares turned in by Stillman, Rogers, and Harriman all of it bought through your instrumentality for a pool of which these gentlemen and yourself were members, who were operating in Illinois Central stocks during the period of several months at least prior to July 1, 1906?"

He refused to answer the said question, was directed by the Commission through its Chairman to make answer to the same, and persisted in his refusal.

Your petitioner, the Interstate Commerce Commission, further represents and avers that at the time each and every of the questions hereinbefore set forth were asked of the said Harriman and the said Kahn, the hearing then being carried on by your petitioner was to investigate the earnings of the said Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company, the reasonableness of the rates and tariffs in force upon said roads, the capitalization of said respective lines, the property of all kinds that had been 52 acquired by the said companies, the prices paid for such property, the dividends that had been declared upon the stock of said corporations, and the question as to whether said dividends were justified or not by the earnings of the said companies. They were also investigating into the financial condition and business of the said corporations, for the purpose of determining the state thereof, including an examination into the securities issued, the purposes for which the same had been issued and were sold, and the propriety or impropriety of the investment of the proceeds thereof.

That certain securities that had been issued by the Union Pacific Railroad Co[illegible]ny and the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company (which, as hereinbefore stated, is owned by the said Union Pacific Railroad C[illegible]mpany) consisted of bonds secured by the mortgage upon the proper[illegible]es and line of railway of the said Oregon Short Line Railroad Comp[illegible]y, which said mortgage was in the case of default subject to foreclosure; that such foreclosure would seriously interfere with the performance of the duties of said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the transportation of interstate commerce; that, it having been made to appear that large sums of money, as hereinbefore set forth, had been raised upon the securities of both the said Union Pacific Railroad Company and Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and invested in stocks of different corporations, it was the duty of your petitioner to inquire into said investments, the nature and character of the same, the amount paid, or which 53 should have been paid, if such investments were made for the stocks so purchased.

That in the pursuance of its duty under the law it was incumbent upon your petitioner, to enable it to perform the functions for which it was created, to procure the information sought by each and every of the questions so put to said Witness Harriman and said witness Kahn, and which said parties so declined to answer.

Your petitioner is of the opinion that the said questions and each of them are not only relevant and material to the matter under investigation, but answers thereto are necessary in order to enable your petitioner to discharge its duty and execute and enforce the provisions of said act to regulate commerce, and to inform your petitioner as to the manner and method in which the business of the said common carriers is conducted, and to enable your petitioner to obtain full and complete information necessary to enable your petitioner to perform the duties and carry out the objects for which it was created.

That subsequent to said proceedings, and prior to the verification of this petition, the Attorney-General of the United States, at the request of your petitioner, instructed the United States district attorney for the southern district of New York, as your petitioner is informed and believes, to present this petition and institute before the proper court and to prosecute all necessary proceedings for the enforcement of the provisions of the act to regulate commerce as amended, and to invoke the aid of the court in requiring the attendance and testimony of said recalcitrant witnesses and the 54 answers to each and every of the questions hereinbefore detailed which said witnesses declined to answer, pursuant to the provisions of said act to regulate commerce as amended.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that an order or orders be made requiring the attendance and testimony before your petitioner of each of the aforesaid witnesses and the making by each of said witnesses of a full answer to each of the questions respectively refused to be answered by said witnesses; and for such other and further relief as may be just and proper in the premises.

And your petitioner will ever pray.

against
EDWARD H. HARRIMAN and OTTO H. KAHN.

In the Matter of the Petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission for an Order Requiring Edward H. Harriman and Otto H. Kahn to Answer Certain Questions Propounded by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Upon the annexed petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission, sufficient reason appearing therefor,

On Motion of Henry L. Stimson, United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, it is Ordered, that Edward H. Harriman and Otto H. Kahn be and each of them is hereby commanded to appear before the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, at a session of the said Court to be held before me or any other Judge holding a Stated Term of this Court, in Room No. 100 of the Post Office Building in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 21st day of October, 1907, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, and to show cause, if any there be, why said petition 54*b* of the Interstate Commerce Commission should not be in all respects granted, and why an order or orders should not be made requiring each of said persons to appear before said Commission and make full answer to each of the questions respectively refused to be answered by said persons as in said petition set forth.

Dated New York, August 10th, 1907.

C. M. HOUGH,
U. S. Judge.

No. —.

vs.
EDWARD H. HARRIMAN and OTTO H. KAHN.

The Separate Answer of Edward H. Harriman to the Petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission Herein.

The respondent, Edward H. Harriman, answering the petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission herein, says:

He admits that the Interstate Commerce Commission was created and organized as alleged in said petition.

He does not admit that the said Commission has the powers or authority, or is subject to the duties, enumerated and alleged in said petition, and refers to the Act to Regulate Commerce, approved February 4th, 1887, and the Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, as the only source of its authority, powers and duties.

He admits that on or about the fifteenth day of November, 1906, the said Commission made the order set forth in said petition; but he avers that it was never served upon, nor was notice of it
56 ever given to, him, or any of the corporations mentioned in said petition, of which he is, or has been, a director or an officer; and he further avers that it was adopted by the said Commission at its own instance, and without any application therefor, or complaint made, on behalf of any person, firm, corporation, association, society, body politic, municipal organization, Railroad Commissioner or Railroad Commission of any State or Territory, and without any petition, complaint or statement of charges being made or filed, or served upon this respondent or the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, the Southern Pacific Company, or any other person or corporation.

He admits that, assuming to act under said order, the said Commission summoned and examined under oath many witnesses and took other testimony in the cities of New York, Chicago, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles upon the dates alleged in said petition; and he admits that the eight printed volumes filed with the said petition, marked as therein alleged, contain a correct report and transcript of all the testimony so taken, except that the volume marked "Exhibits" does not contain copies of all the documentary evidence received by said Commission and marked as exhibits at said hearings.

He does not admit that the petition correctly sets forth the purport and effect of said testimony and exhibits as to all the matters with respect to which their purport and effect are therein alleged.

He admits that the Union Pacific Railroad Company and Oregon

Short Line Railroad Company were incorporated under the general laws of the State of Utah. A copy of the Articles of Incorporation of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and of the several amendments thereof is filed herewith, marked "Exhibit A" and made a part hereof; and a copy of the articles of incorporation of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and of the several amendments thereof is filed herewith, marked "Exhibit B" and made a part hereof.

57 He avers that, in addition to the rights, powers and privileges set forth in said Articles of Incorporation, the said Union Pacific Railroad Company and said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company each possesses, and is entitled to exercise and enjoy, all the rights, powers and privileges granted to and conferred upon railroad corporations incorporated under the general laws of the State of Utah by the general laws of that State, and particularly by the following Acts of the Legislature of that State, viz.:

An Act entitled

"An Act to provide for the formation of railroad corporations for the purpose of purchasing, owning, maintaining, operating and extending railroad lines, franchises, properties and appurtenances; authorizing the issue of bonds, making deeds of trust and mortgages and defining the rights and powers of such corporations," approved January 22, 1897, and published as Chapter 1 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Second Regular Session of the Legislature in 1897.

The Revised Statutes of Utah, as revised, annotated and published by authority of the Legislature in 1898 and particularly Title XI., Chapters 1 and 7.

An Act entitled

"An Act to amend Section 433, Chapter 7, Title XI., of the Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, providing for the formation and powers of railroad corporations," approved January 17, 1899, and published as Chapter 1 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Third Regular Session of the Legislature in 1899.

An act entitled

"An Act to codify and revise certain laws of this state providing for the formation of corporations for the purpose of purchasing, constructing, acquiring, owning, maintaining, operating or extending railroad lines, franchises, properties, and appurtenances, authorizing the issue by such corporations of stocks and bonds and other securities, and the making of deeds of trust, mortgages, and 58 defining certain rights and powers of such corporations; and to repeal the following named acts and parts of acts, namely: Chapter 1, Laws of Utah, 1899; chapter 17, Laws of Utah, 1899; Chapter 2, Laws of Utah, 1901; Chapter 3, Laws of Utah, 1901; sections 431, 432, 433 and 442 of the Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898," approved March 7, 1901, and published as Chapter 26 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Fourth Regular Session of the Legislature in 1901.

An Act entitled:

"An Act to amend section 433, chapter 7, title 11, of Revised Statutes of Utah of 1898, as amended by an act approved January 17, 1899, Chapter 1 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the third regular session of the Legislature, 1899; and sections 435 and 442 of said chapter 7, title 11 of the Revised Statutes of Utah of 1898, providing for formation and powers of railroad corporations," approved January 18, 1901, published as Chapter 2 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Fourth Regular Session of the Legislature in 1901.

An act entitled:

"An Act to amend An Act entitled 'An Act to provide for the formation of railroad corporations for the purpose of purchasing, owning, maintaining, operating and extending railroad lines, franchises, properties and appurtenances; authorizing the issue of bonds, making deeds of trust and mortgages, and defining the rights and powers of such corporations,' approved January 22nd, 1897, to re-enact the same as so amended, and to confirm all acts and things done and performed as under said act," approved February 4, 1901, published as Chapter 3 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Fourth Regular Session of the Legislature in 1901.

An Act entitled

"An Act to amend sections 322, 324, 327, 330, 338, 339 and 368 of the Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, relating to corpora-59 tions, their powers, power of board of directors and their place of meeting, the removal of officers thereof, the transfer of stock, amendments to the articles of incorporation and evidence thereof, effect of sale of stock to the corporation for delinquent assessment, and providing for the disposition of stock so purchased as well as all other stock held by the corporation," approved March 12, 1903, and published as Chapter 94 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Fifth Regular Session of the Legislature in 1903.

An Act entitled

"An Act to amend section 443 Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, relating to the creation of preferred and special stock and income certificates," approved March 3, 1905, and published as Chapter 29 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Sixth Regular Session of the Legislature in 1905.

An Act entitled

"An Act to amend section 338 Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, as amended by Chapter 94 Laws of Utah, 1893, relating to the manner of making amendments to articles of incorporation," approved March 3, 1905, and published as Chapter 30 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Sixth Regular Session of the Legislature in 1905.

An act entitled

"An Act to amend section 322 Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, and section 338, Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, as amended by chapter 94, laws of Utah, 1903, and as amended by an act approved March 3, 1905, and sections 340 and 444, Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, relating to the powers of corporations, the manner of making amendments to articles of incorporations; the manner of forming consolidated corporations; authorizing railroad companies to issue bonds and secure the same by execution of trust deeds or mortgages; and defining what shall be deemed railroad companies; and approving and validating amendments made to articles of in-60 corporations and the organization of consolidated corporations, as well as acts done thereunder," approved March 17, 1905, published as Chapter 131 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Sixth Regular Session of the Legislature in 1905.

An Act entitled

"An Act to codify and revise certain laws of this State providing for the formation and power of railroad corporations and defining certain rights and powers of such corporations, including the power to acquire, hold, guarantee and dispose of corporate stock, bonds and other securities as herein authorized, and to acquire lands, water and water rights, as herein authorized, and to operate steamships, sailing-vessels and boats of every description. And to repeal the following named acts and parts of acts, namely: Chapter 26, Laws of Utah, 1901, and Section 436 of th Revised Statute of Utah, 1898, as amended by Chapter 108, Laws of Utah, 1903; Section 443 of the Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, as amended by Chapter 29, Laws of Utah, 1905; and Section 444 of the Revised Statutes of Utah, 1898, as amended by Chapter 131, Laws of Utah, 1905," approved March 14, 1907, and published as Chapter 93 of the Laws of the State of Utah, passed at the Seventh Regular Session of the Legislature in 1907.

He begs leave to refer to these various Acts as if fully set forth herein.

He admits that the Southern Pacific Company was incorporated under the laws of the State of Kentucky, having been incorporated by An Act of the Legislature of the State of Kentucky, entitled

"An Act to incorporate the Southern Pacific Company" approved March 17, 1884, which Act was amended by an act entitled

"An Act to amend an act to incorporate the Southern Pacific Company, approved March 17, 1884," which was approved March 21, 1888. Copies of said Acts are filed herewith, marked "Exhibit C" and "Exhibit D" respectively, and made a part hereof.

61 He admits that the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company was incorporated under the general laws of the State of Oregon. A copy of its Articles of Incorporation and of the several amendments thereof is filed herewith, marked "Exhibit E," and is made a part hereof.

He admits that the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company each owns lines of railroad, as alleged in said petition; that the Union Pacific Railroad Company owns substantially all the stock of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company; and that the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company owns substantially all the stock of The Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company.

He admits that the Southern Pacific Company owns substantially all of the stock of corporations of the States of California, Utah, Louisiana and Texas and of the Territories of Arizona and New Mexico, which separately own lines of railroad together forming continuous lines from Ogden, Utah, to San Francisco, California; from San Francisco to Portland, Oregon; and from San Francisco, through California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and Louisiana, to New Orleans; and that said lines are operated harmoniously, and so far as rates of transportation and service to the traveling and shipping public are concerned constitute practically one system of railroads.

He admits that the Southern Pacific Company owns, controls and operates lines of steamships plying between New York and New Orleans, New York and Galveston, and New Orleans and Havana, Cuba; that the Southern Pacific Company owns $10,010,000 par value of the $20,000,000 par value of the capital stock of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company issued and outstanding; and that the last named company operates steamships between San Francisco and Honolulu and various ports in Japan and China.

He denies that The Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company owns a line of steamships operating from Portland to San Francisco and to Asiatic ports, but avers that certain steamships
62 operating between Portland and San Francisco are owned by the San Francisco and Portland Steamship Company, all, or practically all, of the stock of which is owned by The Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company; and that the Portland and Asiatic Steamship Company, a corporation of the State of Oregon the capital stock of which is owned by The Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, sometimes operates freight steamships between Portland and Asiatic ports under charter; but he avers that neither said Portland and Asiatic Steamship Company nor The Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company owns or has ever owned any steamships that operate between American and Asiatic ports.

He admits that he became a director of the Union Pacific Railroad Company on the 6th day of December, 1897, and has been a director of said company since that date; and that he became President of the Union Pacific Railroad Company on the 7th day of January, 1904, and has been since that date and still is such President; that he became a director of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company on the 12th day of October, 1898, and has been such director of said company since that date; and that he became President of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company on the 15th day of November, 1899, and has been since that date and still is such President; that he became a director of The Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company on the 1st day of September, 1898, and has been such director of said company since that date; and that he became President of The Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company on the 13th day of October, 1904, and has been since that date and still is such President.

He admits that during the year 1901, the Union Pacific Railroad Company acquired 900,000 shares of the common capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, out of a total of 1,978,399 shares issued and outstanding, and soon thereafter during the year 1901 sold and transferred the same to the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, which has ever since owned the same; and that 63 upon an increase of the capital stock of said Southern Pacific Company by an issue of preferred stock the said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, then owning 900,000 shares of said common capital stock, subscribed for and now owns its pro rata share of such increased capital stock.

He denies that either said Union Pacific Railroad Company or said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, has, through said ownership of stock, dominated and controlled the management of the Southern Pacific Company and its allied lines since the year 1901; but avers that the said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and various other firms, corporations and individuals owning stock of said Southern Pacific Company have elected without any opposition the directors of said Southern Pacific Company at each election of directors held since 1901, and the directors so elected have managed and controlled the properties of the Southern Pacific Company and appointed its officers, and appointed, or authorized subordinate officers to appoint, the agents and servants engaged in the operation of said properties.

He admits that he became a director of the Southern Pacific Company on the 3rd day of April, 1901, and since that date has been and still is such director, and that he became President of that company on the 26th day of September, 1901, and ever since that date has been and still is such President. He admits that several of the directors of the Southern Pacific Company are also directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and that many of the traffic officers or agents and other officers and agents of one of said companies hold similar offices or positions with the other.

He admits that the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company have from time to time purchased large amounts of stock of other railroad companies, but denies that they have sold any such stocks, except stock of the Great Northern Railway Company and Northern Pacific Railway Company. He admits the accuracy of "Harriman Exhibit No. 2" and 64 "Harriman Exhibit No. 3" set forth in the book of Exhibits filed with the petition herein. He admits that in 1901 the Union Pacific Railroad Company created an issue of its convertible bonds for the principal sum of $100,000,000, but denies that it was for the purchase and acquisition of stocks in other railways, or that it so appears by the testimony taken by the Commission as aforesaid, although he believes most of the proceeds of such issue were used to pay for such stocks, or to discharge debts incurred in connection with the purchase thereof. He admits that the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company created in 1902 an issue of $100,000,000 of Four

Per Cent. and Participating Twenty-five Year Gold Bonds which were redeemed and retired in the year 1905; and that on or about December 1st, 1904, said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company created an issue of $100,000,000 of its Twenty Year Four Per Cent. Refunding Gold Bonds, of which $45,000,000 par value are now outstanding and $55,000,000 par value are owned by the Union Pacific Railroad Company; but he denies that said Refunding Bonds or their proceeds were used for the purchase and acquisition of stocks or that any such fact appears by the testimony taken by the Commission as aforesaid. He denies that the Union Pacific Railroad Company has outstanding notes for the purchase of the capital stock of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, amounting to $36,393,432, making a total of $181,393,432 of obligations used for the purchase of railroad stocks; but avers that the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company executed its note for $36,393,432 to purchase, or for money used to purchase, stock of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, which note has been paid and discharged. He denies that it appeared by his testimony that the Union Pacific Railroad Company and its so-called "subcompanies" have expended in the purchase of stocks, in addition to all sums received from the sale of stocks, $182,588,648.98 as alleged in said petition.

65 He admits that on February 25, 1907, when he was under examination as a witness before the petitioner he stated that the Union Pacific Railroad Company has purchased 103,431 shares of the preferred stock of the Chicago and Alton Railway Company, and that he was asked the questions and made the answers in regard thereto set forth in the petition herein. He admits that at the time of the purchase of such stock by the Union Pacific Railroad Company he was a director, the President, and Chairman of the Executive Committee of said Union Pacific Railroad Company. He admits that he refused to answer the following question, viz.: "Did you own any that was so deposited?" and that said question referred to stock concerning which he had been interrogated and had testified as set forth in said petition; and that on said occasion the same question was repeated by counsel for the Commission and this respondent again refused to answer the same, as alleged in said petition. But this respondent avers that the purchase of said 103,431 shares of the preferred stock of the Chicago and Alton Railway Company by the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the price paid therefor by the said Union Pacific Railroad Company had been shown and established by the evidence of the books of said Union Pacific Railroad Company as well as by the testimony of this respondent and other witnesses, and then fully appeared.

He admits that during said hearing and inquiry on the 26th day of February, 1907, while he was still under examination as a witness by counsel for the Commission he was asked the questions and made the answers set forth in said petition with reference to preferred stock of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company, and that he refused to answer the following question, put him by counsel for the Commission, viz: "Was it, or any part of it, at that time owned by any of you three gentlemen?" which question referred to stock of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company theretofore acquired and then owned by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company. He avers that the purchase of such stock 66 of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the price paid therefor by it had been shown and established by the books of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company as well as by the testimony of this respondent and other witnesses, and then fully appeared.

He admits that about July, 1906, the Union Pacific Railroad Company purchased 30,000 shares of the Illinois Central Railroad Company from Henry H. Rogers, 30,000 shares from James Stillman and 30,000 shares from this respondent; and that the said Rogers, Stillman and this respondent were at that time directors of the said Union Pacific Railroad Company. He admits that counsel for the Commission, while this respondent was under examination as a witness as aforesaid, asked him the following question, with reference to said 90,000 shares, viz.: "Mr. Harriman, was that stock acquired by a pool of you three gentlemen," and that this respondent refused to answer said question; that thereupon counsel for the Commission asked this respondent the following question, viz.: "Was it acquired with a view of selling it to the Union Pacific," which he refused to answer, and that thereupon counsel for the Commission asked this respondent the following question, viz.: "Was that stock purchased by you, or any part of it, at a much lower price than $175 a share, with the intention of turning it over to the Union Pacific" which he also refused to answer; that he was thereupon asked the following question by counsel for the Commission, viz.: "Did you have any interest in the 105,000 shares (referring to said Illinois Central stock) which were sold at the same time by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to the Union Pacific," which he also refused to answer; and that he was thereupon asked the following question by counsel for the Commission, viz.: "Was that (referring to the said 105,000 shares of stock) acquired by a syndicate or pool for the purpose of selling it to the Union Pacific," which he also refused to answer.

But he avers that the purchase of such stock of the Illinois
67 Central Railroad Company by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, including said 90,000 shares bought from said Rogers, Stillman and this respondent, and said 105,000 shares bought from Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and the price paid therefor by it had been shown and established by the books of the Union Pacific Railroad Company as well as by the testimony of this respondent and other witnesses, and then fully appeared.

He admits that on August 15th, 1906, the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company voted to increase the dividend upon the common stock of said company from 6 per cent. per annum to the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, and that the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Company, on the same day, declared a semi-annual dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum upon the common stock of said company; that this respondent was present at such meetings of the Board of Directors of each of said Companies and was at the time the Chairman of the Executive Committee of each of said companies, and that public notice of the declaration of said dividends was not given for the reasons stated by him in his testimony before the petitioner herein (book of testimony taken in New York February 26, 1907, filed as exhibit to the petition, page 239 et seq.) until the morning of August 17, 1906, when notice was sent to the Secretary of the New York Stock Exchange before 10 o'clock A. M. He admits that he was asked the questions by Commissioner Lane with respect to that subject and made the answers thereto as set forth in said petition. He admits that he refused to answer the following question asked by Commissioner Lane, viz: "Were you directly or indirectly interested in any stocks that were bought between the 19th of July and the 17th of August that appreciated?"; that he was asked by counsel for the Commission the following question, viz: "Did you or any director buy any Union and Southern Pacific stock in anticipation of that dividend?" and made the answer to said question set forth in said petition; and that he was asked 68 the question by Commissioner Clements and made the answers thereto as set forth in said petition.

He admits that with reference to stock of the St. Joseph and Grand Island Railroad Company acquired by the Union Pacific Railroad Company he was asked by counsel for the Commission the following question, viz: "When did you acquire those stocks?" and the following question, viz.: "What did you pay for those stocks?", which questions he declined to answer.

He admits that he was asked the following question by counsel for the Commission, viz.: "Were any of the directors of the Union Pacific interested directly or indirectly in the New York Central stocks at the time they were sold?", which question referred to stock of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company bought by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, and which question this respondent also refused to answer.

He avers, however, that it fully appeared by the testimony and evidence at the time said questions were asked with respect to purchases of stock of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Southern Pacific Company in July and August, 1906, that the said dividend of each company had been declared by the action of its Board of Directors out of the profits of the Company then on hand, and public notice thereof given in accordance with its directions; and that it fully appeared by the testimony and evidence when said questions were asked with respect to the purchases of the stock of the St. Joseph and Grand Island Railroad Company and of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company when the same were purchased by the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the price paid therefor.

This respondent has no knowledge or information of the purpose and scope of the hearing being carried on by the Commission when said questions were asked of him other than the order set forth in the petition made by the Commission on the 15th day of November, 1906, as there was no petition, complaint, or statement of charges filed or pending before the Commission with respect thereto 69 or the subject-matter of such hearing or investigation; but he avers that the questions asked of him which he refused to answer as aforesaid were not material or pertinent with respect to the matters set forth in said order, or any of them, or with respect to any matter which the Commission was authorized or empowered to inquire into under the said Act to Regulate Commerce or the Acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto.

He further avers that the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Company, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company had at all times prior to the institution of the hearing or inquiry referred to in said petition made and filed the annual reports required by Section 20 of said Act to Regulate Commerce, and the Acts amendatory thereof, and had at all times made, and were at all times ready to make, in compliance therewith, specific answers to any and all questions upon which the Commission needed, or might need, information.

He denies that any bonds issued by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company for the purpose of buying securities of other companies were secured by mortgage upon the railroad of said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company. He admits that a portion of the proceeds of the First Lien Convertible Bonds of the Union Pacific Railroad Company were used for the purchase of securities of other companies and that such bonds were secured by a mortgage upon a portion of the railroads of said Union Pacific Railroad Company, but he avers that said bonds had been prior to said hearing before the Commission either converted into common stock of said company or redeemed, and he denies that the issue of such bonds or of any other securities of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company interfered with the performance of the duty of either of said companies in the transportation of interstate commerce. He avers that the petitioner 70 is without any power or jurisdiction to inquire into, regulate, or in any manner whatever interfere with the powers to purchase and invest in the stocks and bonds of other corporations conferred upon the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company by the States which created them, or the purchases of stocks and bonds of other corporations made by said Companies in the exercise of such powers.

He denies that to enable it to perform the duties or functions for which it was created it was incumbent upon the petitioner as alleged in said petition to procure the information sought by the questions put to this respondent which he declined to answer as aforesaid; and he denies that the said questions were necessary to enable the petitioner to discharge any duty imposed upon it by law, or to execute and enforce the provisions of the said Act to Regulate Commerce, or to inform it as to the manner and method in which the business of the common carriers mentioned in the petition is conducted, or to obtain full and complete information to enable it to perform the duties and carry out the objects for which it was created.

This respondent avers that he was and is justified in refusing to answer said questions which he declined to answer, and submits that no order should be made compelling him to answer them, or any of them, for the following reasons:

First. Said questions did not relate to commerce with foreign nations or among the several states or with the Indian tribes, or to any transactions in such commerce; nor, however answered, would they tend to show any violation of the provisions of the said Act to Regulate Commerce or any other law of the United States, or any law which Congress could constitutionally enact and make operative upon any corporation created by and deriving its franchises and powers from a state; but said questions did relate to the business and affairs of this respondent having no relation to such commerce, and were designed to compel a disclosure by this respondent to a purely administrative body of transactions for which, had they 71 taken place, neither the said Commission nor the Congress of the United States could afford a constitutional remedy.

Second. If the Act entitled "An Act to Regulate Commerce," approved February 24th, 1887, or any Act amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, be construed to authorize or empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to inquire into the business and affairs of this respondent having no relation to commerce with foreign nations or among the several states or with the Indian tribes or to compel a disclosure by this respondent to a purely administrative body of such transactions, such Act is to that extent unauthorized by, and in violation of, the Constitution of the United States, and void.

Third. The subject matter of said questions is judicial in its nature and the interrogation under oath of this respondent in respect thereof, save in a case brought by a proper party in a court of competent jurisdiction and conducted according to the forms of law, would deprive this respondent of liberty without due process of law contrary to Article Five of the amendments of the Constitution of the United States.

Fourth. The said questions were not pertinent or relevant to any inquiry or investigation that the said Commission was authorized and empowered to institute and conduct under the said Act to Regulate Commerce and the Acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, in the absence of any petition, complaint or statement of charges presented, made, filed, or served upon any corporation or person, for the reason that they did not relate to the business of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Company, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, or any of them, as common carriers, or to the interstate carriage or transportation of goods or persons by said companies as such common carriers, or any of them.

Fifth. The said inquiry or hearing was not based upon any complaint made by any person, firm, corporation or association, or any mercantile, agricultural or manufacturing society, or any 72 body politic or municipal organization, of anything done or omitted to be done by the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Company, the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, or any of them, in contravention of the provisions of said Act to Regulate Commerce and the Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, or upon any petition of any such person or body setting forth any such complaint, or upon any statement of charges contained in any such petition or complaint forwarded by the said Commission to such Companies, or any of them, with any request to satisfy the complaint or answer the same in writing within a reasonable time or otherwise, or upon any complaint forwarded to the said Commission by the Railroad Commissioner or Railroad Commission of any State or Territory with the request that the same should be investigated, or upon any complaint or statement of charges served upon said Companies, or any of them, by the said Commission on its own motion, and was not, therefore, authorized by section 13 of the said Act to Regulate Commerce or an investigation thereunder, or an exercise of the powers thereby conferred, or an exercise of the powers conferred upon the said Commission by said Act and the Acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto with respect to investigations authorized by said section 13.

Sixth. If the said Act to Regulate Commerce or any Act amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto be construed as authorizing and empowering the said Commission in the conduct of an inquiry or investigation, without any complaint having been made to it, or any statement of charges contained in any such complaint having been presented to or served upon, any such common carrier or this respondent, to put the said questions to this respondent and require him to answer the same, such Act is to that extent in violation of the provision of Article Five of the amendments of the Constitution of the United States which provides that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

73 Seventh. The said order made by the said Commission on the 15th day of November, 1906, is so general, vague and indefinite in its terms as to fail to define any matter as being under investigation either with respect to the Union Pacific Railroad Company or any other person or corporation, and the said questions were not pertinent or relevant to any inquiry alleged or claimed to have been authorized thereby.

Wherefore this respondent, having fully answered the said petition, prays that the same be dismissed.

v.
EDWARD H. HARRIMAN and OTTO H. KAHN.

The Separate Response of Otto H. Kahn to the Petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and to the Rule to Show Cause Herein.

The respondent, Otto H. Kahn, responding to the petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission herein, and to the order of this Honorable Court to show cause why said petition should not be granted, says:

He admits that the Interstate Commerce Commission was created and organized, as alleged in said petition.

He does not admit that said Commission has the powers or is subject to the duties enumerated and alleged in said petition, and refers to the act to regulate commerce approved February 4, 1887, and the acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, as the only sources of said Commission's authority, powers and duties.

He admits that the Commission on or about the 15th day of November, 1906, made the order set forth in the petition; but he avers that neither said order nor any notice thereof was served upon any of the corporations mentioned in the petition; and he further avers that said order was adopted by the said Commission at its own instance, and without any application therefor, or complaint made, on behalf of any person, firm, corporation, association, so-75 ciety, body politic, municipal organization, railroad commissioner or railroad commission of any state or territory, and without any petition, complaint or statement of charges being made or filed or served upon this respondent, or the Union Pacific Railroad Company, or any other person or corporation.

He admits that the Commission, assuming to act under said order, conducted a hearing in the City of New York upon the 4th day of January, 1907, and other hearings at the times and places set forth in the petition, and that the eight printed volumes filed with the said petition marked as therein alleged contain a correct transcript of all the testimony taken at said hearings, and that the volume thereof marked "Exhibits" contains a correct transcript of a portion of the documentary evidence received by said Commission and marked as "Exhibits" at said hearings. He does not admit that the petition correctly sets forth what appeared by the testimony taken at said hearings, but instead, he refers to said volumes for the ascertainment of the purport and effect of said testimony and exhibits.

Respondent is and for many years has been a member of the firm or copartnership of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and for many years last past said firm has been actively engaged in the private banking business in the City of New York, and as part of its business has executed for numerous clients or customers purchases and sales of stocks of railroad companies and other corporations, and also as a part of such business has bought and sold on its own account stocks of railroad companies and other corporations.

Prior to February 25, 1907, there was served upon this respondent a subpœna reading as follows:

Interstate Commerce Commission.

To Otto H. Kahn, New York City:

You are hereby required to appear before the Interstate 76 Commerce Commission as a witness in the proceeding entitled, In the Matter of Consolidations and Combinations of Carriers, Relations Between such Carriers and Community of Interests therein, Their rates, facilities and practices, at United States Court Rooms 66, Post-office Building, New York, N. Y., on the 25th day of February, 1907, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated January 10, 1907.

JUDSON C. CLEMENTS,
[L. S.] Commissioner.

FRANK B. KELLOGG,
C. A. SEVERANCE,
Attorneys for the Commission.

The so-called proceeding referred to in said subpœna was sought to be inaugurated by the Commission by means of the order set forth in the petition, and here again set forth for convenience, as follows:

"Whereas the act to regulate commerce provides that the Commission 'shall have authority to inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, and shall keep itself informed as to the manner and method in which the same is conducted,' and also requires the Commission 'to execute and enforce the provisions' of this act;

"And whereas it appears to the Commission that consolidations and combinations of carriers subject to the act, and the relations now and heretofore existing between such carriers, including community of interests therein, and the practices and methods of such carriers affecting the movement of interstate commerce, the rates received and facilities furnished therefor should be made the subject of investigation by the Commission to the end that it may be fully informed in respect thereof, and to the further end that it may be ascertained whether such consolidations, combinations, relations, community of interests, practices or methods result in viola-
77 tions of said act or tend to defeat its purposes;

"It is ordered that a proceeding of investigation and inquiry into and concerning the matters above stated be, and the same is hereby instituted, and that the same be set for hearing at United States Court rooms in the city of New York, N. Y., on the 28th day of December, 1906, at 11 o'clock A. M., the further hearing to be continued at such times and places as may be required."

In compliance with said subpœna, respondent appeared before the Commission, and, among other things, testified that he was a director and a member of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company up to 1906. Respondent says that he ceased to be a director of said Company and a member of said Executive Committee on the tenth day of April, 1906.

Respondent further testified that both before and after he ceased to be director of said Company, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were the bankers or fiscal agents of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, in the sense that said Company bought and sold securities through Kuhn, Loeb & Co., provided they offered satisfactory terms, and that a large percentage of the securities bought and sold by said Company were bought and sold through Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and that this was in accordance with the usual practice in the case of a large railroad company to have its principal dealings with one particular banker. Respondent says, however, that the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. never sustained any official relationship as bankers or fiscal agents to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, but that each transaction wherein said firm acted as such banker or fiscal agent was the result of a separate and independent arrangement for that occasion only.

Respondent further testified that while he was a director of said Company he always disclosed any personal interest which he 78 or his firm might have, as private banker or otherwise, in any transactions passed upon by the Board of Directors or Executive Committee of said Company, and refused to vote thereon.

In answer to questions by the members of the Commission and questions by their counsel, and without regard to the legality of any such questions, respondent answered fully as to transactions of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. with the Union Pacific Railroad Company, so far as the personal interest of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. or of its members therein was concerned, and offered to give any further information which the Commission might wish regarding the interest of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., or its members, in any such transactions.

Respondent further testified that in December, 1903, the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., by public advertisement, invited deposits of the preferred stock of the Chicago and Alton Railway Company under a written agreement whereby the depositors of such stock authorized said Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to sell said stock to any person or corporation, and at such price and upon such terms as should be approved by a committee consisting of John A. Stewart, Edward H. Harriman and John J. Mitchell, and that, under said agreement, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., on behalf of said depositors, many months afterwards sold said stock to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, but that the price of said stock was fixed by Messrs. Stewart and Mitchell, Mr. Harriman declining to participate in fixing said price. The testimony further showed that said stock was sold by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. to said Union Pacific Railroad Company at $86.50 per share, out of which price Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in accordance with said agreement, retained for their services a commission of $2.50 per share.

Notwithstanding the fact that respondent answered all questions concerning said transaction which related to the personal interest therein of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and notwithstanding the fact that the testimony showed the cost of said stock to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, the following additional questions concerning said transaction were propounded to this respondent:

79 Question: "Now, will you state whether the directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company were the real owners of the shares deposited with you and sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company?"

Question: "The question I asked you was whether any of your fellow directors were owners of any of that stock (referring to the stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company so sold to the Union Pacific Railroad Company)."

Respondent declined to answer each of said questions, and by way of explanation respondent then stated to the Commission:

"I will answer every question relating to our own dealings with the Union Pacific, but I cannot answer questions relating to the dealings of our clients with us. Every banker considers his client's affairs as confidential as a lawyer considers the affairs of his clients or a doctor considers the affairs of his patients, and I cannot be instrumental in disclosing them."

The testimony also showed that in July, 1906 (no member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. then being a director of the Union Pacific Railroad Company) the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company decided to purchase, at the price of $175.00 per share, 105,000 shares of the stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company which was owned or controlled by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., 30,000 shares of such stock held by E. H. Harriman, 30,000 shares of such stock held by James Stillman, and 30,000 shares of such stock held by H. H. Rogers; and that such purchases were made by the Union Pacific Railroad Company accordingly; that the purchase of said stock at said price was recommended to the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company by a committee of said Board appointed to investigate the subject; and that directors

80 Harriman, Stillman and Rogers declined on account of their personal interest which was disclosed to the Board of Directors to vote upon any of the questions connected with the purchase of said stock or price to be paid therefor.

Notwithstanding the fact that respondent testified as to said sale by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of 105,000 shares of stock, and notwithstanding the fact the testimony showed the cost to the Union Pacific Railroad Company of said stock and also of such stock sold to said Company by Messrs. Harriman, Rogers and Stillman, the following additional questions were propounded to respondent with respect to said transactions:

Question: "Then I will ask you the direct question, Mr. Kahn: Of the 105,000 shares of stock which you sold—of Illinois Central stock which you sold on the 9th day of August, 1906, to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, and for which you were paid $175 a share—will you please state how much, if any, of that stock was held by you in the interest of or for the benefit of any or all of the directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?"

Respondent declined to answer said question, and stated:

"I do not believe I ought to answer that question also. I would be perfectly willing to answer if it were not that it involved relationship as to which I ought not to be asked."

"We will gladly disclose our transactions in every detail."

"I decline to answer as to the transactions of my clients.."

Question: "And you decline to state whether that 105,000 shares of stock or any part of that stock which you sold to the Union Pacific for $175 a share really equitably belonged to or was held by you for any person or any number of persons who were at that time directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?"

81 Respondent declined to answer said question and stated: "As a matter of principle I decline to answer."

Question: "Did you also buy at the same time for Messrs. Harriman, Rogers and Stillman the stocks they sold at the same time you sold yours?"

Respondent declined to answer said question.

Question: "Was this 105,000 shares of Illinois Central stock and the 90,000 shares turned in by Stillman, Rogers and Harriman all of it bought through your instrumentality for a pool of which these gentlemen and yourself were members, who were operating in Illinois Central stocks during the period of several months at least prior to July 1, 1906?"

Respondent declined to answer said question.

Each of the questions above set forth which respondent declined to answer was designed exclusively to relate to transactions between Kuhn, Loeb & Co., as private bankers, and their individual clients or customers, and to obtain information affecting the rights and interests of such clients or customers, which information if within the knowledge of the respondent at all was within his knowledge by reason of the confidential relations of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., as private bankers, to such clients or customers. In all banking and business circles such information has always been and must be regarded as strictly confidential so far as the bankers are concerned. Respondent is advised and believes that he is not compelled by law to answer the said questions or any of them, but on the contrary believes that it was and is his duty to decline to answer questions designed to make public through him confidential information possessed by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., concerning the affairs of their clients and customers.

82 Respondent has no knowledge or information as to the scope or purpose of the hearing which the Commission was conducting because there was no petition, complaint or statement of charges filed or pending before the Commission with respect thereto, or with respect to the subject-matter of such hearing or investigation, and because the said order adopted by the Commission on the 15th day of November, 1906, was so general in terms as to fail to define any matter as being under investigation either with respect to the Union Pacific Railroad Company or with respect to any other person or corporation.

Respondent does not admit the averments of the petition with respect to the terms or effect of any bonds or other securities issued by the Union Pacific Railroad Company or by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, or as to the money received upon any such securities or as to the investment thereof, but as to all such matters respondent refers for the ascertainment of the facts to the tesimony heretofore taken as aforesaid, before the Commission.

Respondent denies that it was incumbent upon the petitioner to procure the information sought by any of said questions which this respondent refused to answer, or that any information sought by any of said questions would have tended to enable the petitioner to perform the functions for which it was created, and denies that said questions or any of them were or are relevant or material to the matters under investigation, or that answers thereto or to any of them were or are necessary to enable the Commission to discharge its duties or to execute or enforce the provisions of said act to regulate commerce, or to inform the petitioner as to the manner or method in which the business of any of the common carriers mentioned in the petition was or is conducted or to enable the petitioner to obtain full or complete information necessary to enable the petitioner to perform the duties or carry out the objects for which it was created.

Respondent says that none of said questions was relevant to 83 any matter under investigation by the Commission, and that at the time said questions were asked, no matter was legally under investigation by the Commission, and that none of said questions was relevant to any matter concerning which the Commission had the right to conduct an investigation. Answers to said questions could not have aided the Commission in the execution or enforcement of the act to regulate commerce, or of any of the acts amending or supplementing the same, and would have had no connection with the subject-matter of any of said acts. If any of said acts should be construed as authorizing the Commission, or the Court at the instance of the Commission, to compel the disclosure by respondent of any such information as is sought by said questions, such act so construed would be unconstitutional and void because in excess of the powers conferred upon Congress by the Constitution of the United States, and because in violation of the constitutional rights of this respondent and of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and of their clients and customers.

Wherefore, this respondent, having fully answered, prays that the said petition be dismissed and that he be not required to answer the said questions.

85 In the Matter of The Consolidation and Combination of Carriers, Relations Between Such Carriers, and Communion of Interest Therein, Their Rates, Facilities and Practices.

Before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Present: Hon. Martin A. Knapp, Chairman, Hon. Franklin B. Lane, and Hon. James C. Harlan, Commissioners.

Appearances.

Frank B. Kellogg, Esq., and C. A. Severance, Esq., Attorneys for the Interstate Commerce Commission.
John G. Milburn, Esq., and R. S. Lovett, Esq., for the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., Jan. 4, 1907—10 o'clock A. M.

Present: Commissioners Martin A. Knapp, Franklin K. Lane, James C. Harlan.

The CHAIRMAN: Gentlemen, please give us your attention. The Commission has assigned for hearing at this time and place a matter entitled in the matter of Consolidations and Combinations of Carriers, Relations between such Carriers, Community of Inter-
86 ests therein, their rates, facilities and practices. The purpose of the present hearing is to investigate the relations between the two systems of railway commonly known as the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, together with the question as to the control of those companies or either of them, of other systems of railroads, and the ownership, of stock by them or their officers, or otherwise. For the purpose of aiding the Commission to prosecute this inquiry, Mr. Frank B. Kellog and Mr. C .A. Severance have been retained, and will be entrusted with the duty of arranging for the attendance of witnesses and determining the order in which they will be called. We assume they are ready to proceed.

Mr. KELLOGG: We are ready.

The CHAIRMAN: Who desires to be noted as appearing for any party interested in this proceeding?

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. John G. Milburn, if the Commission please, of this city, and myself, R. S. Lovett appear for the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

The CHAIRMAN: Are there any other appearances to be noted?

(No response)

The CHAIRMAN: If not, we are ready to proceed.

Mr. MILBURN: If your Honors please, Mr. Harriman is under subpœna to appear here this morning at this time. Just two weeks ago he was compelled to undergo a minor surgical operation and it has been expected all along that he would be entirely able to be out at this time so as to give his testimony. We continued to expect that until within a day or two. Mr. Harriman is not we regret to say in a condition that he can leave his house. He is not disabled from testifying. It is simply a disability of a kind which makes it, not only imprudent, but practically out of the question for him to leave his own house. As far as I can suggest, with all due and proper regard to the dignity of the Commission, I would say that Mr. Harriman's testimony can be taken today or tomorrow at his own house; that is, he is able to give it there and under conditions of just as much publicity as it would be given here. While I can ap-
87 preciate objections to that, none the less I feel it proper to say that he can give his testimony now under those conditions and is quite willing to do so, and he regrets himself personally very much that he cannot be present in this building today. Now, that is the situation so far as Mr. Harriman is concerned. Of course, Mr. Harriman must necessarily be an important witness on this subject. He has been connected with the various matters to which the inquiries will be directed. There is no doubt that he is a man who can furnish the fullest and most connected information on these subjects. I regret that he is not here at this time, because, no doubt, in the evolution of this case he would be one of the first men called, apart from the testimony concerning entries in the books, etc.

I make this statement with a view to suggesting to the court that there should be a postponement of that branch of the matter for some days. It is useless to expect that Mr. Harriman will be out or can come downtown within the next two or three days, but any time after that—that is, there is no expectation of prolonging the matter—any time after that, he is at the command of this Commission or Court here or in Washington, or wherever it may appoint.

Com'r LANE: Could he be in Chicago on Wednesday?

Mr. MILBURN: No.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Milburn, the Commission deems it manifestly unsuitable to hold this inquiry at a private place for Mr. Harriman or any other interested party. Of course, if Mr. Harriman is in such physical condition that it is unsafe for him to be here today in obedience to the subpœna, that is sufficient ground for a postponement of his examination. We assume, subject to objection to the contrary, that the statement of his counsel as to his condition will be accepted as altogether according to the fact.

Mr. MILBURN: I trust it will be accepted.

The CHAIRMAN: Are you able to state with any high degree of probability when he is likely to be able to attend?

88 Mr. MILBURN: It is an uncertain matter—a week or ten days. I just name that time. We fully expected he would be here today. Four or five days ago, when I saw Mr. Harriman, at that time, I fully expected he would be here, but there has not been a recovery.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Milburn, is there any probability that he would be able to attend here next Monday?

Mr. MILBURN: I do not think so on the minute. I do not think it is worth while, your Honors, trying to plan with reference to that.

The CHAIRMAN: Nor in Chicago on Wednesday?

Mr. MILBURN: No, I would not want him to take that trip. I know that trip to Chicago would not be advisable for him in his condition.

The CHAIRMAN: Nor at any time next week?

Mr. MILBURN: I will not say that.

The CHAIRMAN: I mean in Chicago.

Mr. MILBURN: No, not in Chicago.

The CHAIRMAN: Very well. We will not undertake to determine at this time when there will be a further hearing in this matter after the one in Chicago on Wednesday. All we want to say is that we regard the statement as a sufficient excuse for Mr. Harriman's failure to attend here this morning in response to the subpœna. Mr. Kellogg.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Millar; Aleck Millar.

ALEXANDER MILLAR, called as a witness, having been duly sworn testified as follows:

Mr. KELLOGG: Your name is Aleck Millar?

Mr. MILLAR: Alexander Millar.

Mr. KELLOGG: Usually called Aleck?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are the Secretary of the Union Pacific Railroad are you not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And of the Oregon Short Line Railroad?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Co.?

89 Mr. MILLER: Assistant Secretary of that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Assistant Secretary of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co.?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And of the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You have the minutes of the meetings of all those companies?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Are you also an officer of the Steamship lines belonging to the Union Pacific, the Short Line, or the Navigation Company?

Mr. MILLER: The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company is the owner of steamships; and other companies do not so far as I know, operate steamships.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Oregon Navigation Company is the owner of steamships?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. But no separate company.

Mr. KELLOGG: No separate company?

Mr. MILLAR: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Does the Union Pacific own any steamship lines?

Mr. MILLER: No, not to my knowledge.

Mr. KELLOGG: Does it own any stock in any steamship line?

Mr. MILLAR: Not to my knowledge; no sir; except so far as the Navigation, is a steamship company.

Mr. KELLOGG: Isn't it a stockholder in the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Co.?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir; it is.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where do the steamers of the Navigation Company—from what ports do the steamers of the Navigation Company run?

Mr. MILLAR: From Portland, Oregon, to points on the Columbia and the Willamette Rivers, and also the San Francisco.

Mr. KELLOGG: Does the Navigation Company have steamers engaged in eastern trade with China & Japan?

Mr. MILLAR: I think not; not to my knowledge.

90 Mr. KELLOGG: Have they any stock in any companies engaged—does the Navigation Company have any stock in any company engaged in traffic between this country and the Orient?

Mr. MILLAR: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where do the steamers of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company ply?

Mr. MILLAR: I cannot tell you that.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: How much stock does the Union Pacific Company own in the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Line?

Mr. MILLAR: I cannot give that from recollection. The books of those companies are not in my charge.

Mr. KELLOGG: They are not in your charge?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Are you Secretary of that Company?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; I am not an officer of that Company.

Mr. KELOGG: You are not an officer of that Company?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who is the Secretary of that Company?

Mr. MILLAR: I cannot give you his name. He is in San Francisco.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know whether the Union Pacific Company controls that company by stock ownership?

Mr. MILLAR: It is a joint ownership so far as I know.

Mr. KELLOGG: Equal ownership?

Mr. MILLAR: Equal with what? I don't get the idea.

Mr. KELLOGG: With any other company?

Mr. MILLAR: I think there are—I think in the minority holders, there are individuals as well as corporations owning the stock.

Mr. KELLOGG: What corporations own stock in the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Line?

91 Mr. MILLER: I can only talk from a general impression. I think the Southern Pacific is a part owner.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are also the Secretary of the Southern Pacific, you say?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And of many of its subsidiary corporations?

Mr. MILLER: A very few; very few.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific owns and controls a line of railway extending from Portland, Oregon, through San Francisco, California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, and Louisiana to New Orleans, does it not?

Mr. MILLER: I was not aware of the fact, sir. No.

Mr. KELLOGG: What?

Mr. MILLER: I am not aware of that, no sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Doesn't the Southern Pacific control that line of railway?

Mr. MILLER: I understood you to say "own and control."

Mr. KELLOGG: No, no. Own through stock ownership, and control?

Mr. MILLER: I understand it to be a leasing and owning company of the corporations that do operate between those points.

Mr. MILLER: Yes, it owns through stock ownership the companies operating the railroads between those points.

The CHAIRMAN: Or by lease.

Mr. KELLOGG: Or by lease?

Mr. MILLER: There are distinctions there that I think the question hardly covers.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, explain it, explain the whole thing.

Mr. MILLER: The Southern Pacific Company is a stock owner and lessee of the lines operating between the points named.

Mr. KELLOGG: And controls them?

Mr. MILLER: I should think possibly.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you are the secretary of the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky?

92 Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where is the general office of the Southern Pacific Company; I mean its corporate office, under the laws of Kentucky?

Mr. MILLAR: We have an office in Louisville, Kentucky, and also in New York; the general offices are in San Francisco and Oakland at the present time.

Mr. KELLOGG: Under your articles of incorporation, they provide for a general office in Kentucky, do they not?

Mr. MILLAR: Beachmont, Kentucky.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where is Beachmont?

Mr. MILLAR: In the suburbs of Louisville.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is your corporate headquarters under the laws of Kentucky?

Mr. MILLAR: I so understand; yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Are you an officer of the Texas-Louisiana & Morgan Steamship & Railway Company?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who is the secretary of that company; do you know?

Mr. MILLAR: I couldn't give you his name off hand. If you will permit me to refer to a book I have here, I can give you that.

Mr. KELLOGG: All right. (Witness refers to book.)

Mr. MILLAR: Have you got the name of that road right, Mr. Kellogg?

Mr. KELLOGG: Perhaps not. I mean the steamship line which runs steamers from New Orleans to New York.

Mr. MILLAR: Then, for the sake of the record, Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Co.

Mr. KELLOGG: We will call that the Morgan Steamship Line for convenience.

Mr. MILLAR: M. B. Bergerner, is secretary of the company and I am assistant secretary.

Mr. KELLOGG: Assistant Secretary?

Mr. MILLAR: I want to correct my testimony to that extent.

93 Mr. KELLOGG: Where is the principal office of that company?

Mr. MILLER: In New Orleans.

Mr. KELLOGG: In New Orleans?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific Company owns all the stock of that company, does it not?

Mr. MILLER: I am not able to testify to that. I don't know the facts.

Mr. KELLOGG: It votes it, does it not, at meetings?

Mr. MILLER: It votes the stock it owns, but what proportion I am unable to tell.

Mr. KELLOGG: It votes the control, does it not, Mr. Miller?

Mr. MILLER: I think substantially yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And it owns a line of steamships, you know, in a general way, running in connection with the Southern Pacific system from New Orleans to New York?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLER: Excuse me. That is hardly correct. The Southern Pacific does not connect at New Orleans with the steamship line.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where does it connect?

Mr. MILLAR: The Southern Pacific Company as an operating company connects at El Paso, but still it is not the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, well. The Southern Pacific owns the stock of and controls the line of railway, clear from Portland to New Orleans, does it not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir; by stock control and lease.

Mr. KELLOGG: And speaking of the companies which own the physical property from El Paso to New York as belonging to the Southern Pacific Company. By stock ownership, the steamships connect with the Southern Pacific system at New Orleans, don't they?

Mr. MILLAR: Well, in a loose way of talking, yes. Not as we—as I look at it.

Mr. KELLOGG: State why.

94 Mr. MILLAR: Because the Southern Pacific Company have no line in Texas or Louisiana.

Mr. KELLOGG: What company owns the lines through Texas and Louisiana?

Mr. MILLAR: Beginning at New Orleans, the Morgans, Louisiana & Texas Line goes to the Sabine River.

Mr. KELLOGG: Goes from New Orleans to the Sabine River?

Mr. MILLAR: In connection with one other company, the Louisiana Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Louisiana Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who owns the stock of these companies? Does the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. MILLAR: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: You know it, don't you, from your books?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir. I don't keep the books.

Mr. KELLOGG: You know the Southern Pacific Company votes the stock, don't you?

Mr. MILLAR: No, I don't know that, no.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, the steamship line connects with that railway at New Orleans, doesn't it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that, by steamship and rail, the Southern Pacific Co. controls lines of transportation from Portland, Oregon, through San Francisco, California, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, and Louisiana, and New York City?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Southern Pacific also owns the stock of and controls and operates by lease the Central Pacific Railway, does it not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Which line extends from San Francisco to Ogden?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Union Pacific owns the line of railway from Council Bluffs and from Kansas City to Denver and to Ogden and Salt Lake?

Mr. MILLAR: The stockholders do.

95 Mr. KELLOGG: Well, the Union Pacific Company.

Mr. MILLAR: The stockholders.

Mr. KELLOGG: I say, the Union Pacific Railroad Company owns that line, does it not—I am only just getting in a general way the layout of those two properties.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir, that is the Union Pacific Railway Co.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Union Pacific Co. owns all the stock of the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. MILLAR: Substantially, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And of the Railway & Navigation Company?

Mr. MILLAR: I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, the Oregon Short Line owns it, doesn't it?

Mr. MILLAR: Part owner, I think.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Union Pacific Company owns part and the Short Line owns part?

Mr. MILLAR: I am not sure about the Navigation Company. I am not keeping the books of that Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Union Pacific controls the lines by ownership of stock from Council Bluffs and Kansas City to Portland?

Mr. MILLAR: I think so, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: All of these companies known as the Pacific Companies, the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, the Short Line and the Navigation Company, have the same president have they not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. E. H. Harriman?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the same vice president, Mr. W. D. Cornish?

Mr. MILLAR: Judge Cornish is vice president of all of these companies, but there are other vice presidents.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, he is vice president of all these companies; isn't he?

Mr. MILLAR: I should say he is one of the Vice Presidents of some of them.

96 Mr. MILLAR (referring to book): Yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you are secretary or assistant secretary of all of them?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are secretary of all of them?

Mr. MILLAR: Except the Navigation Co.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are assistant secretary of that company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: They have the same Traffic Director?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. J. C. Stubbs?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The same assistant Traffic Managers?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The same comptroller?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The same auditor?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is not Mr. Young Auditor of the Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: Oh, General Auditor.

Mr. KELLOGG: General Auditor?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the same Directors of Maintenance and Operation?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The same Director of Purchases?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the same attorneys and counsel—general counsel, I mean?

Mr. MILLAR: Hardly.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is Mr. Lovett the General Counsel of all four companies?

Mr. MILLAR: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is he General Counsel of the Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is he general counsel of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: Not by that title.

97 Mr. KELLOGG: What is the title?

Mr. MILLAR (Referring to book): Beginning with the Union Pacific, Judge Lovett is counsel.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILLAR: Union Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: He has general charge of the legal department, hasn't he?

Mr. MILLAR: In which road?

Mr. KELLOGG: General charge of the legal department?

Mr. MILLAR: Which company?

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILLAR: I think not.

Com'r HARLAN: The witness is speaking of the Union Pacific.

Mr. MILLAR: My first answer was to the Union Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: He is general counsel of the Union Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And in charge of the legal department?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And general counsel of the Short Line and the Navigation Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: I think his relations with the Southern Pacific is different. I would like to refresh my memory on that (Referring to book). Judge Lovett is counsel in New York for the Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: And has general charge of the legal department hasn't he?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, I show you a list of the directors of the Union and Southern Pacific for the year- 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1906, Mr. Millar? I don't know whether you have checked that up, but, subject to corrections, we will take it.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: If there are any corrections, you can make them in it afterwards, Mr. Millar.

98 Mr. MILLAR: I have examined for the years 1905 and 1906, and I think they are correct, but would like to identify the others subject to verification.

Mr. KELLOGG: They are taken from Poor's Railroad Manual.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of course, you furnish that information to Poor's Manual, don't you?

Mr. MILLAR: We do.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, subject to any corrections which you may make in this, I will ask you if this is a correct list of the directors of the company during those years?

Mr. MILLAR (Subject to verification): I have not seen the papers, I should like to put them in in that way.

Mr. MILBURN: He may say yes.

Mr. MILLAR: I have only seen them this morning for the first time.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, were you connected with the Union Pacific in any capacity prior to 1900?

Mr. MILLER: Oh, yes; yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You were secretary from the time of the organization of the present company in 1897, were you not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of the Union Pacific Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir, December of 1897.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to that you were with the Receivers.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And prior to that with the old Union Pacific Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer this list in evidence.

Chairman KNAPP: That is a list of the directors of the various companies?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir; of the Union and Southern Pacific.

(Paper marked Exhibit No. 1, to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

99 Mr. KELLOGG: I show you a list of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Co. for the years 1900, 1901, 1903, 1905, and 1906; and I think 1904, I am not sure.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And 1904. Also, a list of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific during the same time, the Oregon Short Line Railroad and the Oregon Navigation Company, was that made by you?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Or under your direction?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is this correct?

Mr. MILLAR: I would like to say that it was made yesterday on very short notice and in a very great hurry and has not been verified personally by me.

Mr. KELLOGG: I understand all these documents are subject to any corrections, and your testimony may be so understood.

Mr. MILLAR: I believe it to be substantially correct.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer the paper in evidence.

(Paper received and marked Exhibit No. 2 to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to the acquisition of Southern Pacific stock

by the Union Pacific Company or the Short Line Company, there were no directors in the Southern Pacific Company who were common directors in the Union Pacific Company, were there?

Mr. MILLAR: I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: That was acquired by the Union Pacific, or in its interest, in about March, 1901, was it not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. It was the Spring of 1901.

Mr. KELLOGG: Since that time either the Union Pacific or the Short Line, or parties in their interests, have voted that stock at the meetings of the stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company, have they not? Either the companies or persons in their interest by proxy, or persons holding the stock in their own names, for those companies?

100 Mr. MILLAR: I want to give you my best understanding of that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, certainly.

Mr. MILLAR: I think that is true with the exception of possibly one year, when the holdings of the—I put it this way, that such stock as has been owned by the Union Pacific or by the Oregon Short Line, has been voted by it or in its interest—other interests?

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you a paper purporting to show the date of the annual meeting of the Southern Pacific Company, the number of shares of stock voted at those meetings, both common and preferred, the number of shares of each class of stock owned by the Union Pacific, or the Short Line Companies. Is that a correct statement?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir; as shown by the books.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer the paper in evidence.

(Received in evidence and marked Exhibit 3, to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: According to this statement, the Union Pacific owned 750,000 shares in 1902?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir; March, 1902.

Mr. KELLOGG: At that meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: That stock had been acquired by March, 1901?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And at the next meeting on April 3d, 1903, 900,000 shores of the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. MILLAR: I would like to speak from the paper, if possible.

Mr. KELLOGG: All right. I will stand back here by you. I am not going into the details. I just want to get it generally.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. I would like to have that question.

The STENOGRAPHER (Reading): And at the next meeting on April 3d, 1903, 900,000 shares of the Oregon Short Line.

101 Mr. MILLAR: Well, what?

Mr. KELLOGG: Was voted by the Short Line Company.

Mr. MILLAR: I cannot testify to that, sir. I intended to say it was owned by the Short Line.

Mr. KELLOGG: Doesn't this paper purport to show the stock voted at those several meetings by the Union Pacific? and by the Short Line?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; it doesn't purport to show who voted the proxies.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I mean either voted by the Short Line and Union Pacific, or persons for them, by proxy.

Mr. MILLAR: I could not testify to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then we will have to find out. I supposed this paper showed.

Mr. MILLAR: I wasn't at the meeting and the record doesn't show. I would like to put on the record that I wasn't at those meetings, and the record doesn't show.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was handed to us by Judge Levett as a correct statement.

Mr. MILLAR: But it doesn't show the fact covered by the question.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, you are a little too technical on that.

Mr. MILLAR: Excuse me. I do not mean to be.

Mr. MILBURN: This paper, from our point of view, is intended to show the stock voted.

Mr. LOVETT: And the stock of the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line was voted with proxies there, except at the year when the election was not held.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, certainly. This paper shows the amount of the Southern Pacific stock voted by the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line, by proxy, at each annual meeting of the Southern Pacific Company, does it not? I don't care whether it is voted by persons or by proxy—It would have to be voted by proxy, being a corporation.

Mr. MILLAR: I understand this statement to show the total 102 amount owned by the certain holding companies at the dates stated, and how the stock was voted, but not by whom voted.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well——

Mr. MILLAR: It does not show what amount was voted by the Short Line or the Union Pacific, or their representatives.

Mr. KELLOGG: I will give you this paper, and I will take another one, and we will see. I think we won't disagree at all.

Mr. LANE: Isn't it possible for you to agree with counsel as to those facts?

Mr. KELLOGG: I think so, if counsel will admit them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They admitted them.

Mr. MILBURN: This statement shows the figures given there, as voted by proxy and include the stock of the Southern Pacific Railway Company owned by the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line. The record may so state.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This is admitted to be a correct transcript from the records?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer Exhibit No. 3 in evidence.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then the statement shows that at every meeting since and including April 8, 1903, the Oregon Short Line by proxy, or in person through its officers, voted the majority of the stock present at each meeting of the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. MILLAR: I have no knowledge as to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Don't your books show it?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then, we will see (referring to papers); the statement shows they do.

Com'r LANE: They admit that.

Mr. KELLOGG: They have not admitted it yet.

(Addressing Mr. Milburn): Do you admit that, Mr. Milburn?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Secretary keeps the books.

Mr. MILLAR: I beg pardon. I do not keep the books showing the facts asked.

103 Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Kellogg; our admission is that, based on that paper (referring to Exhibit), the majority of the stock voted at the election.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes. That is, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific—the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line voted at each meeting the majority of the stock which was voted at each of the Southern Pacific annual meetings for the election of directors?

Mr. MILBURN: That is right.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offered in evidence Exhibit No. 1, showing the common officers. I notice by that—I do not care to go into the details of it—that a majority—not the statement you have, but my Exhibit No. 1, that a majority of the directors of the Southern Pacific Company each year, except one, since the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line acquired the Southern Pacific Stock, are also directors in the Union Pacific Company. Is that correct, as you understand it?

(Mr. Millar examines Exhibit No. 1.)

Mr. KELLOGG: While the witness is checking that up, I would like to offer these by-laws. (Addressing the stenographer): Please mark them.

The same are marked Exhibits Nos. 4 to 10 inclusive, for identification to Mr. Millar's testimony.

Mr. MILLAR (after examination of Exhibit No. 1): Yes, except as to 1906.

Mr. KELLOGG: I will ask you to have the last question repeated.

Question repeated as follows:

"I notice by that, I do not care to go into the details of it—that a majority—not the statement you have, but by Exhibit No. 1, that a majority of the directors of the Southern Pacific Company, each year except one, since the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line acquired the Southern Pacific Stock are also directors in the Union Pacific Company. Is that correct, as you understand it?"

Is that correct?

Mr. MILLAR: I answered that—yes, except as to 1906.

104 Mr. KELLOGG: In the list of directors of 1906, I notice R. W. Goelet and Robert Goelet. Are they the same person?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; they are not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Relatives?

Mr. MILLAR: I understand they are cousins.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have an office together, do you know?

Mr. MILLAR: I believe they do.

Mr. KELLOGG: I also notice that W. V. S. Thorne, who is a director of the Southern Pacific is not a director of the Union Pacific. Is that correct (handing paper to witness)?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who is Mr. Thorne?

Mr. MILLAR: Officially, you mean?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, what official is he of the Union Pacific Road?

Mr. MILLAR: He is the director of purchases of all these four companies.

—. ——.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And he is a director in the Southern Pacific, but not in the Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: A. K. Vandeventer is a director in the Southern Pacific in 1906, but not in the Union Pacific. Who is A. K. Vandeventer?

Mr. MILLAR: He is Assistant Treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: Assistant Treasurer of the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is he an officer of any of the other companies?

Mr. MILLAR: Of the three other companies, no, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is not he assistant secretary of one of the companies?

Mr. MILLAR: Well, not to my recollection.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Maxwell Evarts I see is a director in the Southern Pacific in 1906, but not in the Union Pacific Company. Officially, what position does Mr. Evarts hold in the Union Pacific?

105 Mr. MILLAR: Attorney.

Mr. KELLOGG: He is attorney for the Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, the Board of Directors for 1906, elected in October, 1906, of the Union Pacific Company is the same Board elected in 1905 and shown on this list, is it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: So we have the complete Boards, if this is correct (referring to exhibit)?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: From and including 1900 and down to the present time?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I have simply had identified the by-laws of the four Pacific Companies and I mean by that, the Union Pacific, the Short Line, the Navigation and the Southern Pacific Companies as Exhibits from four to ten, inclusive. I offer them now in evidence.

(Same are marked Exhibits 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, inclusive to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you turn to the record book of the Executive Committee meetings of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Page 213, March 19, 1903, Mr. Millar? (Witness refers to book.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, never mind that, Mr. Millar. It does not seem to be the right resolution. Mr. Millar, the Southern Pacific Company's meeting is held in April every year, is it not?

Mr. MILLAR: The annual stockholders', yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Along about April 6th? What day? Do you remember?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Monday or Tuesday?

Mr. MILLAR (referring to book): The Wednesday following the first Monday in April.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Wednesday following the first Monday?

106 Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: About when are the books of the Southern Pacific Company closed for this annual meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: We have not had any fixed date. I think the effort has been to give sufficient time to make up the lists—about 30 days.

Mr. KELLOGG: About thirty days? That is, the Executive Committee or the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Company close the books on a certain day, about thirty days before the Annual Stockholders' Meeting, in order to allow you to make up the list of stockholders appearing of record as the stockholders of that company on that date?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: This is the usual custom in all railways, is it not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, I think so, with some exceptions.

Mr. KELLOGG: They close their books on a certain day?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the stockholders appearing on that day vote the stock?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, the books of the Southern Pacific Company showing its stockholders on the day are of course, and have been, under your control, since the Union Pacific acquired its stock, have you not?

Mr. MILLAR: The stock books, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And no one but you or the officials of that company have access to those books?

Mr. MILLAR: Nor ordinarily, no sir. There have been exceptions.

Mr. KELLOGG: Ordinarily not, you say?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: When the books have been closed, you, as Secretary, or under your direction, you have prepared a list of the stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company who are entitled to vote at its annual meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

107 Mr. KELLOGG: Those are the stockholders who show of record on the date the books are closed?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now as a matter of fact you then send out proxies?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: To each stockholder who appears of record on the books of the Southern Pacific on the day they are closed?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Those proxies are sent out with the names of certain persons which you have inserted to vote their stock, are they not?

Mr. MILLAR: I think generally, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Generally three names?

Mr. MILLAR: I am not aware that there is any rule about the number.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, you generally put in two or three, do you not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, more than one, usually.

Mr. KELLOGG: They are usually officials, or somebody connected with your organization?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And in every instance since the Union Pacific obtained the stock in the Southern Pacific Company, those proxies have been some persons in the employ of the Union Pacific Company, have they not?

Mr. MILLAR: I could not answer that offhand. I have never attended the meetings of that company.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, what is your recollection—either officers or somebody connected with the organization of the Union Pacific Railroad?

Mr. MILLAR: I should want to see those names before committing myself, because I am not familiar with those proxies.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I show you a Southern Pacific proxy (handing proxy to witness), which may be marked No. 11, which purports to be the proxy for the annual meeting of the Southern Pacific Company to be held at Beechmont, Jefferson County, Kentucky, Wednesday, the 4th of April, 1906. The names of the parties inserted as voting the Union Pacific or Short Line stock at that time are E. H. Harriman, Alex. P. Humphrey and W. D. Cornish. Mr. Harriman and Mr. Cornish are respectively the president and vice president of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, are they not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who is the other?

Mr. MILLAR: I think a lawyer in Louisville, not identified with the Union Pacific, according to my knowledge.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Harriman is the only president of the Union Pacific, isn't he?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You said, "among others" he is the only president of the Union Pacific, isn't he?

Mr. MILLAR: Among other companies, I mean?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you Exhibits 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19. Are those the proxies, form of proxies, sent out by you or under your direction to the stockholders of the Southern Pacific Co. at each annual meeting since 1900 for the election of directors?

It is admitted by Judge Lovett that they are; that is correct.

Mr. HARLAND: From what office are they sent out?

Mr. KELLOGG: I was just going to ask that. From what office are they sent out?

Mr. MILLAR: Southern Pacific Co.

Mr. KELLOGG: In New York?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Under your charge?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The same office the Union Pacific has down here?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: 120 Broadway, isn't it?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

109 Mr. KELLOGG: All these four companies, Pacific companies, have common offices here in New York, have they not?

Mr. MILLAR: Well, hardly.

Mr. KELLOGG: They are in the same building?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir, they are in the same building.

Mr. KELLOGG: The principal offices are — the same building?

Mr. MILLAR: Some of them yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The president and vice president, you have already told us?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. Some of the departments are entirely separate.

Mr. KELLOGG: Some of the departments are separate?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, but the secretary's office and the comptroller's office and the president's office and the vice president's office and the counsel's office are all common.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And I notice by looking at each of these proxies that a majority of the persons to vote the Southern Pacific stock were Union Pacific officials or employees, is that not true?

Mr. MILLAR: The majority, you say?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Those exhibits, from 11 to 19 are offered in evidence.

(The same are hereto annexed and marked Exhibits 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19 in Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, when you make up these stock lists for the annual meeting for the election of directors of the Southern Pacific, you usually preserve them, do you not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir; that is our intention.

110 Mr. KELLOGG: I wish you would (speaking to the reporter) mark these Exhibits 20, 21, 22 and 23.

(The same are hereto annexed and marked Exhibits 20, 21, 22 and 23 to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

I show you Exhibits 20 to 23, inclusive. Are those the stock lists for the annual meeting of the Southern Pacific Company for 1903, 1904, 1905 and 1906.

Mr. MILLAR: I would just like to see the signatures on those, Mr. Kellogg.

(Counsel shows signatures to witness.)

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: They are?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You have never obtained at a meeting of the Southern Pacific Company since you became its secretary a full vote of the stockholders, have you?

Mr. MILLAR: No sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: It is not usual, taking into consideration the number of stockholders of the company to have anywhere near a full vote of the stockholders, is it?

Mr. MILLAR: Do you want my opinion?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. MILLAR: Some of our companies had a full vote and some do not.

Mr. KELLOGG: The only companies you have which have a full vote are those where the Union Pacific owns all the stock, isn't it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Or the Southern Pacific owns all the stock?

Mr. MILLAR: The Union Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: I say whether the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific owns all the stock?

Mr. MILLAR: I limit my answer to the Union Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, limit it to the Union Pacific.

111 Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: A company whose stock is on the market like the Souther- Pacific Company's stock since the Union Pacific's control, or like the Union Pacific, never has a full vote, does it, at any meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: Not to my knowledge, no, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Rarely two-thirds of the stockholders vote, do they?

Mr. MILLAR: It varies, I think.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, in the Southern Pacific Co. out of $197,000,000 of common stock—(addressing reporter) will you give that exhibit? Out of $197,000,000 and a little over, of common stock, state about the average amount of stock represented at a meeting.

Mr. MILLAR: At the meeting of 1900, out of 1,884,000 shares, 1,859,000 shares were voted.

Mr. KELLOGG: That was before the Union Pacific's control wasn't it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. In 1901 out of 1,978,000 shares 1,736,000 were voted. At a second meeting of the same year 1,742,000 shares were voted. In 1902, 1,572,000 were voted, and up to 1904, about the same number of shares were voted. In 1905, after an increase of the capital stock, 1,974,000 shares were voted; and in 1906, 2,000,000; a little over 2,000,000 shares were voted.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Oregon Short Line owned and voted more than a majority, a large majority of the stock voted at the meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: I am not capable of testifying to that fact.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is admitted by your counsel. It appears in this paper, does it not?

Mr. MILLAR: I think not, sir, no.

Mr. KELLOGG: Doesn't it appear?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't acknowledge it in any way.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, a majority?

Mr. MILLAR: This statement does not show who voted, and I am not familiar with the facts.

Mr. KELLOGG: They owned a majority that was voted at that meeting, didn't they?

112 Mr. MILLAR: I have no means of knowing that, no, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is it admitted?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, sir, it is on the record.

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you page 151 and 152 of Volume 2 of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific, is that the original record?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of these Executive Committee meetings of the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you please read the resolution by which the Union Pacific designated the directors to be voted for in the Southern Pacific, with the names of the directors?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir, the record reads as follows:

Mr. MILLAR (Reading): "March 21st, 1901. Attention having been called to the approaching stockholders' meeting April 3rd, of the Southern Pacific Company, it was, on motion duly made and seconded, unanimously resolved that the stock held for and on behalf of this company be voted for the following list of directors:

T. J. Coolidge, Jr., George J. Gould, E. H. Harriman, Edwin Hawley, Charles M. Hayes, H. E. Huntington, James H. Hughitt, Otto Kahn, John W. Mackey, D. O. Mills, Winslow S. Pierce, James Schiff, James Speyer, James Stillman, Charles H. Tweed."

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Millar, who gave you the names of the persons to vote the Southern Pacific stock as proxies, to put in the printed proxies which you sent out?

Mr. MILLAR: Do you mean every year or in one particular year?

Mr. KELLOGG: Every year, who directed it.

Mr. MILLAR: I do not recall it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Harriman?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not recall it.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know?

113 Mr. MILLAR: I don't remember. We have so many proxies and so many meetings that I really don't remember that fact.

Mr. KELLOGG: Judge Cornish?

Mr. MILLAR: I might have discussed it with Judge Cornish?

Mr. KELLOGG: And discussed it with Mr. Harriman?

Mr. MILLAR: I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who gave you the list of directors to elect in the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't understand that question. I don't elect the directors.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, who names the list of directors, then, to be elected in the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't know.

Mr. KELLOGG: To be voted for, then.

Mr. MILLAR: I don't know.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, you know one year there the Oregon Short Line did it, don't you—or the Union Pacific, I mean.

Mr. MILLAR: The Committee ordered that list, yes, sir, that year.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do they usually do that?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't recall that they do.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know?

Mr. MILLAR: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know, then, who does select them?

Com'r LANE: Who is the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific?

Mr. KELLOGG: The Executive Committee of the Union Pacific is composed of how many directors?

Mr. MILLAR: There are five at the present time.

Mr. KELLOGG: By your By-laws they are given all the power of the Board, are they not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir, when the Board is not in session.

Mr. KELLOGG: And by the By-laws the chairman of the Executive Committee is given all the powers of the Executive Committee when it is not in session, is he not?

114 Mr. MILLAR: I think not; no, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Are you sure about that?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not feel sure about that; new By-laws have recently been adopted, and I am not so familiar with them as I might be.

Mr. KELLOGG: I will show you the By-Laws in a printed form; Section 12 of the By-Laws of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company——

Mr. SEVERANCE: You want the Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, the Southern Pacific; they are alike, are they not?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think so, practically.

Mr. KELLOGG: Article 7 of the By-Laws of the Southern Pacific provides——

Mr. MILLAR: Of the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes—well, I will take the Union Pacific; they are all the same, I see. Section 12 provides, "The Directors shall elect from their number an Executive Committee of five members. Such Committee shall hold office until the next annual election of directors, and shall, when the Board of Directors is not in session, have all the powers of the Board of Directors to manage and direct all the business and affairs of the company in such manner as such committee shall deem best for the company's interests in all cases in which specific directions shall not have been given by the Board. The Chairman of the Executive Committee shall be elected by the Board of Directors, and subject to the control and approval of the Executive Committee, shall represent it when it is not in session."

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that Mr. Harriman is chairman, isn't he?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of each executive Committee of all the companies?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the companies have uniform by-laws practically on that subject?

115 Mr. MILLAR: Practically. I have not compared them carefully.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They are in evidence anyway.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, who designated, from year to year, the names of the directors to be voted for by the Southern Pacific Stockholders?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't know, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who designated the Executive Committee to be elected?

Mr. MILLAR: The Board of Directors.

Mr. KELLOGG: You simply know they were elected?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who designated their names to be voted for?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't know, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know. All right.

Com'r LANE: Does the record show who introduced that resolution?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir. We do not in our records generally give the name of the party making the motions.

Com'r LANE: You don't know who introduced that resolution?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir—this particular resolution?

Com'r LANE: Yes.

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you a resolution of the Board of the Union Pacific adopted August 29, 1899, and certified by you. Is that a correct certified copy of the resolution of that date?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer the same in evidence.

(Paper marked Exhibit No. 24, to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: State generally what that resolution is. Isn't that the resolution for the acquisition of the securities of the Oregon Short Line and the Navigation Company by the Union Pacific?

116 Mr. MILLAR: It provided for the acquisition of the Income A bonds and the Income B bonds of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, and a part of the preferred and common stock of the Navigation Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, sir. The Union Pacific already owned the stock or most of it, of the Short Line, did it not—1899, if you recollect?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not recall the dates, Mr. Kellogg. I think that is probably the fact.

Mr. KELLOGG: I call the attention of the Commission to one recital in this resolution for the acquisition of stocks of the Navigation Company and certain income bonds: "Whereas the lines of railroad of the said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the said Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company constitute extensions of auxiliary lines of the railroad of this company, and they are not parallel or competitive therewith."

Please mark this paper.

(Paper marked Exhibits 25, to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you Exhibit 25. Is that a certified copy of a resolution?

Mr. MILLAR: This is a certified copy of a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company February 20, 1901.

Mr. KELLOGG: That was for the acquisition of the Southern Pacific stock, was it not?

Mr. MILLAR: It had in view the purchase of some shares of Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer the resolution in evidence.

(Paper marked Exhibit 25 to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. HARLAN: Is the amount given there?

Mr. KELLOGG: For its acquisition, 750,000 shares.

Mr. HARLAN: Does it also appropriate the funds of that company?

117 Mr. KELLOGG: Provides how they should be paid for.

Now, please mark this paper.

(Paper marked Exhibit 26.)

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you Exhibit 26. Is that a certified copy of a resolution of the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Company adopted January 21st, 1901, for financing the Union Pacific matters?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer that exhibit in evidence.

(Paper marked Exhibit 26 to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Com'r LANE: What does it purport to be?

Mr. KELLOGG: For financing the Union Pacific Company.

Com'r LANE: A transcript of the record?

Mr. KELLOGG: A transcript of the record of the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Company. I do not think it is important to take the time to read these to the Commission now. Most of them are formal matters, but we will call the attention of the Commission to those which we particularly wish to, later.

Com'r LANE: It should be specifically stated in each case that they are transcripts of the books.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, yes, I may ask the question.

Mr. LOVETT: They have been certified by the secretary.

Mr. KELLOGG: Kindly mark these papers.

(Papers marked Exhibits 27 to 37 inclusive.)

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you Exhibits 27 to 37; are those exhibits certified transcripts from the record books of the Board of Directors, stockholders and Executive Committee of the Union Pacific 118 and Short Line Companies, as they purport to be—certified by you?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer those in evidence.

(Papers marked Exhibits 27 to 37 respectively to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you volume 3 of the Executive Committee records of the Union Pacific Railroad Company (page 59) and ask you what the resolution is that appears on that page?

Mr. MILLAR: In brief, the resolution which was adopted September 29, 1904, page 59, showed that the president of the company stated to the meeting that he had purchased 102,000 shares preferred capital stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, and that such action on his part was approved and confirmed.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is that all?

Mr. MILLAR: Mr. Kahn, a member of the committee, being excused from voting on the resolution at his own request.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is that the only resolution there?

Mr. MILLAR: A following resolution requested Messrs. E. H. Harriman, James Stillman, Jacob H. Schiff and R. S. Lovett, for the account of the Union Pacific Company, to make and execute with Messrs. W. B. Leeds, W. H. Moore, D. G. Reid and J. H. Moore a contract substantially in the form submitted to the meeting, and to deposit with the trustees thereunder certain shares of preferred stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company owned by the Union Pacific Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: How many shares?

Mr. MILLAR: It is the same stock, presumably.

Mr. KELLOGG: 103,431 shares, wasn't it?

Mr. MILLAR: 103,431 shares preferred stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company and to take such action as was necessary to carry out the agreement.

119 Mr. KELLOGG: I offer the full resolution, containing a copy of the contract, in evidence, and ask the counsel to admit that the copy furnished us is a true copy of the contract and the supplemental contract.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, and that they were executed by the parties.

Mr. KELLOGG: And that they were executed by the parties.

Mr. KELLOGG: And that they were executed by the parties named.

Com'r LANE: What is the substance of that contract?

Mr. KELLOGG: I will state it in a moment.

(Paper marked Exhibit 38, to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. MILLAR: Have you the copy of the resolution Mr. Kellogg?

Mr. KELLOGG: I want a copy of the resolution and the contract, and a copy of the subsequent resolution modifying the contract, or for the supplemental contract and the supplemental contract.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had better state to Mr. Lane what the substance of that contract is——

Mr. KELLOGG: Just a moment.

Mr. LOVETT: How many shares was that?

Mr. KELLOGG: 103,431. The contract contained in that resolution—perhaps the easiest way is to read a section of it to the Commission so the Commission may know what it is as we go along:

Mr. KELLOGG (reading): "This agreement, made and entered into this 4th day of October, 1904, by and between E. H. Harriman, Jacob H. Schiff, James Stillman, and R. S. Lovett, all of the State of New York, parties of the first part; W. B. Leeds, W. H. Moore, D. G. Reid, all of the State of New York, and J. H. Moore, of the State of Illinois, parties of the second part; and Central Trust Company of New York, a corporation of the State of New York, hereinafter called the Trustee, party of the third part."

120 Generally speaking, this is a contract for the joint control by the election for the directors of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, between the Union Pacific and the Rock Island—is that the Rock Island?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Rock Island Company.

Mr. LOVETT: I suppose they were acting for the Rock Island.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, I know. We will try and prove that. Section I of the contract provides that "The parties of the first part have transferred, set over and assigned,"—that is, Mr. Harriman, Mr. Schiff, Mr. Stillman and Mr. Lovett—"and do hereby transfer, set over and assign to the Trustee certificates for 103,431 shares of the preferred stock of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Illinois, hereinafter called the Railway Company. The parties of the second part have transferred"—that is Mr. Leeds, Mr. W. H. Moore, Mr. D. G. Reid, and Mr. J. H. Moore—"set over and assigned, and do hereby transfer, set over and assign unto the Trustee certificates for 40,000 shares of the preferred stock and for 63,431 shares of the common stock of the Railway Company. All said shares of stock shall be held by the Trustee under the powers and subject to the terms and conditions of this agreement.

Second, the Board of Directors of the Railway Company is composed of the following named six persons, who are the nominees of the parties of the first part, to wit, Normal B. Ream, James B. Forgan, S. M. Felton, John J. Mitchell, James Stillman, E. H. Harriman; and the following named five persons who are the nominees of the parties of the second part, to wit, W. B. Leeds, James Hobart Moore, William H. Moore, Daniel G. Reid and Robert Mather.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Railway Company for the election of directors to be held in the year 1905, the Trustee shall vote or cause to be voted all the shares of stock deposited with the Trustee under this agreement in favor of the 121 election as directors of the Railway Company, of two persons to be nominated by the parties of the first part, and of two persons to be nominated by the parties of the second part. At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Railway Company for the election of directors to be held in the year 1906, the trustee shall vote or cause to be voted all the shares of stock deposited with the trustee under this agreement in favor of the election as director of the Railway Company of one person to be nominated by the parties of the first part and of three persons to be nominated by the parties of the second part. Thereafter at each annual meeting of the stockholders of the Railway Company, for the election of directors, the Trustee shall vote or cause to be voted all the shares of stock deposited with the Trustee under this agreement in favor of the election as directors of the Railway Company, or person to be nominated by the parties hereto respectively, in such manner that in each year the Board of Directors of the Railway Company shall be composed of six nominees of such party hereto as shall have been represented on said Board of Directors during the preceding year by five nominees; the purpose and intent of the agreement being to provide and to insure that during the continuance of this agreement the Board of Directors of the Railway Company shall until the usual election of directors in the year 1906, and during each alternate year thereafter, be composed of a majority nominated by the parties of the second part. To that end the parties of the first part and the parties of the second part covenant and agree to and with each other, for themselves as directors, of the Railway Company and for their nominees, that all vacancies occurring in the Board of Directors of the Railway Company shall be so filled as to effectuate and carry out the purpose and intent of this agreement; and that the Executive Committee of the Railway Company shall in each year be composed of a majority of Directors nominated by or representing the 122 parties whose nominees for the time being are entitled under this agreement to constitute a majority of the Board of Directors of the Railway Company.

There is no use reading any more. The effect of it is that one year the Rock Island has the control and one year the Union Pacific has the control of the election of a majority of the Board, and alternate. This continues for ten years—I think it is ten years.

Mr. LOVETT: And as to the purchase of stock——

Mr. KELLOGG: There was also a part of it giving to the party of the second part, the Rock Island interests, the right to buy the Union Pacific's 103,431 shares of stock. Has that been exercised?

Mr. LOVETT: It is conceded that it has not.

Mr. KELLOGG: It is conceded that it has not been and that the contract is in full force?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: The contract provides, as to the two classes of stock named, whether the Union Pacific and the Rock Island, constitute a majority of the stock of the Alton Company of both classes; is that not so?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: I think it is, yes.

The CHAIRMAN: Does it appear in what manner the funds are procured by the Union Pacific for the purchase of this stock of the Alton, or will that be developed later?

Mr. KELLOGG: That will be developed later.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know, or do you know how the funds were procured for this Rock Island stock by the Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: No, only out of the current assets of the company.
Mr. KELLOGG: Out of the current assets of the company?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Of the Union Pacific Company?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: The Union Pacific still owns this stock, does it?
123 Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And Mr. Harriman, Mr. Schiff, Mr. Stillman and Mr. Lovett are the representatives of the Union Pacific?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Who is Mr. W. B. Leeds?
Mr. MILLAR: I know Mr. Leeds by reputation, but I don't know him very well.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Leeds is out.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, W. H. Moore and Mr. D. G. Reid and Mr. J. H. Moore were at that time directors of the Rock Island Company, were they not?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, I know those gentlemen.
Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know whether they still are?
Mr. MILLAR: I believe they are, yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Do you understand that they represent the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company?
Mr. MILLAR: There are several Rock Island companies. I really don't know the connections between the one and the other.
Mr. KELLOGG: But one of the Rock Island Railroad Companies they represent?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And the Rock Island Company owns everything as designated as in the name of the party of the second part?
Mr. MILLAR: I have no knowledge of that.
Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know. Where are the books of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company?
Mr. MILLAR: The last I knew of them I turned them over to Mr. George T. Boggs, who succeeded me as secretary of the company. I refer to the books of record.
Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, I do, too.
Mr. MILLAR: 71 Broadway.
Mr. KELLOGG: About what time did you become the secretary of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company?
Mr. MILLAR: My recollection isn't clear as to that; some four or five years ago.
124 Mr. KELLOGG: Up to what time were you the secretary?
Mr. MILLAR: Up to October, 1906.
Mr. KELLOGG: October, 1906. During all of that time Mr. W. D. Cornish, who is vice-president, or was vice-president of the Union Pacific, was Vice-President of the Chicago & Alton?
Mr. MILLAR: In nearly all that time, yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And the same auditor, Mr. Young, was general auditor of the Alton, was he not?
Mr. MILLAR: Part of the time.

Mr. KELLOGG: Part of the time?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: During the later years?
Mr. MILLAR: The later years, yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And the same treasurer; they had the same treasurer?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And the same secretary?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes.
Mr. KELLOGG: And the same comptroller?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, part of the time the same comptroller.
Mr. KELLOGG: The same as the Union Pacific, I mean?
Mr. MILAR: Yes, sir; part of the time.
Mr. KELLOGG: Now, October 1st, 1906, you ceased to be secretary. Did these other officers resign?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And the road turned over to the company?
Mr. MILLAR: I am not aware there was any turning over.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, the management of it?
Mr. MILLAR: The same president remains president.
Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Felton?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Did the Vice President resign?
Mr. MILLAR: I don't know, sir. I wasn't at the meetings where this action was taken.
125 Mr. KELLOGG: To whom did you say you delivered the record book?
Mr. MILLAR: Mr. George T. Boggs, the secretary.
Mr. KELLOGG: Where is his office?
Mr. MILLAR: 71 Broadway.
Mr. KELLOGG: Is that the Rock Island office?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: To whom did the comptroller turn over the books, do you know?
Mr. MILLAR: I don't know.
Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know anything about it except the secretary's books. Did you say G. D. Boggs.
Mr. MILLAR: George T. Boggs.
Mr. KELLOGG: George T. Boggs.
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Have you in your possession any of the records or papers of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company or the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company, or of any of the companies connected therewith?
Mr. MILLAR: I think I have a few copies of pamphlets, and there were duplicates which they decided they would not take over until they were ready to take them over.
Mr. KELLOGG: You have no other papers?
Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: I show you a resolution, or rather a certified transcript of resolution of the stockholders of the Oregon Short Line

Railway Company, adopted Oct. 14, 1903, and headed "Approval of San Pedro Agreements, conveyances, etc."; is that a certified transcript of the record of the meetings of the stockholders of the company of that date?

Mr. MILLAR: It is.

Mr. KELLOGG: While Judge Lovett is checking up this document, I will read this resolution, which purports to be a resolution of the stockholders of the Short Line Co. adopted October 14, 1903:

126 "Approval of San Pedro Agreements, Conveyances, Etc.

Upon motion, duly made and seconded, it was unanimously

Resolved, That all and singular the action of the Board of Directors and executive committee, as set forth or referred to in their respective minutes be and they are hereby ratified, approved and confirmed.

Resolved further, That all the acts of E. H. Harriman, as trustee, and the acts of each of the officers of this company, in making the arrangements, contracts, and conveyances, between E. H. Harriman, trustee, and W. A. Clark, trustee, the said Harriman and Clark, as trustees, and the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake R. R. Co. and each of the other arrangements, contracts, and conveyances, made in connection with the settlement of controversies with said San Pedro, and to provide for acquiring and holding an interest in the capital stock of the said San Pedro Company, and to provide for certain traffic arrangements, all of which are set forth in full in the minutes of the Executive Committee; including the making, execution and delivery of conveyances by the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, the New East Tintic Railway Company, the Utah and Pacific Railroad, the Utah, Nevada & California Railroad Company, and by W. H. Bancroft, as Trustee, to the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company; and also including the making of assignments of the capital stock of the New East Tintic Railway Company, the Utah & Pacific Railroad Company, the Utah, Nevada & California Railroad Company, the Utah & Nevada & California Railroad Company in California, to the said San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company; and including also the execution and delivery of a certain agreement between W. A. Clark, trustee for himself and as trustee, as the party of the first part, and E. H. Harriman as trustee, as party of the second part, and 127 the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company as party of the third part, and the assignment and delivery to said Farmers' Loan & Trust Company of the stocks in said agreement specified; and also in executing a certain agreement between said W. A. Clark, and E. H. Harriman, as trustees, and the said San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company, dated June 3rd, 1903, providing for the loan of certain capital stock of the said San Pedro Company, to be pledged as therein provided, and all of the acts of the said E. H. Harriman, as Trustee, done or performed, and all of the acts of each and every officer of this company required or deemed necessary to be done to fully perform and execute the terms and conditions of each of said contracts and arrangements; including that certain contracts of July 9, 1902, made between W. A. Clark and E. H. Harriman and each and every one of them, be and the same are hereby ratified, approved and confirmed."

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you get me the contract of 1902, which Judge Cornish was having copied?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Leave a blank space there.

Mr. KELLOGG: You may state that Exhibit 52 was numbered and is to be produced this afternoon.

Mr. LOVETT: Just refer to it as if it was introduced in that connection.

Mr. KELLOGG: It is a contract made in 1902, between Mr. Harriman and Mr. Clark, and referred to in that resolution.

It is admitted that Exhibits Nos. 40 to 51 are as follows:

No. 40 is a contract between William A. Clark individually and as tristee, Edward H. Harriman as trustee, and the Farmers' Loan & Trist Co. for the deposit of all of the stock of the San Pedro Railroad—called San Pedro for short—with the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company.

No. 41 is a traffic agreement between the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Railroad Company, and Union Pacific Company, dated June 18th, 1903.

128 No. 42 is a Traffic Contract between the Southern Pacific Company and the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Company, dated the same date.

No. 43 is a contract between the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, and the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Co., dated June 18th, 1903.

No. 44 is a contract between the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, the San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake Company and the Union Pacific, being the guarantee of the Union Pacific Company to release the lien of present and future holdings of income A, or income B bonds.

No. 45 is a contract between the Southern Pacific Company and the San Pedro Company for trackage from Riverside to San Bernardino.

The other contracts are deeds of various railways from the Short Line or the companies owned and controlled by the Short Line to the San Pedro Company, which as I understand was about 512 miles. These facts I believe are admitted and the contracts are all duly execued between these companies.

I call the Commissioner's attention, simply for the convenience of the Commission when it comes to examine this record, to Article 2 and 3, of Exhibit No. 42, a contract between the Southern Pacific Co. and the San Pedro, Los Angeles, and Salt Lake Railroad Company dated June 18, 1903:

"Article 2. In partial consideration of the said covenants and agreements of the said Southern Company contained in Article 1 hereof, said San Pedro Company hereby covenants and agrees with said Southern Company, that it will, upon the execution of this agreement, adopt, print, publish and put in force at all points upon its lesed, owned or operated railroad, for the handling of local business thereon, the lawful rates, tariffs, classifications and charges used by said Southern Company for the handling of any local business which may be the subject of competition between them."

129 That is all of Article 2. Now, Article 3:

"Each party hereto mutually covenants and agrees to and with the other that after the adoption and putting in force of rates as provided by Article 2 hereof, neither of them shall or will change any such rates without the consent of the other party hereto unless such change may be made necessary in order to meet the rates, charges, classifications or tariffs of any other company or competing line of railroad or to conform to the final decree or judgment of some court of competent jurisdiction, or some lawful and valid requirement of State or National law."

Com'r LANE (Referring to Exhibit No. 42.): It says that this contract shall exist and be binding upon each of the parties hereto for the term of ninety-nine years from the date hereof, or so long as the said agreement between the said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company and the Union Pacific Railroad Company, bearing date the 18th day of June, 1903, shall be in force and observed by the parties thereto."

Mr. KELLOGG: That is a traffic agreement between the Oregon Short Line Railroad Co., and the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad Co., and the Union Pacific Company. That is a long time contract; the exact time I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: 99 years.

Com'r LANE (Addressing Mr. Kellogg): Will you let me see that one? (Indicating Exhibit No. 41.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, sir.

(Exhibit No. 41 handed to Com'r Lane.)

The CHAIRMAN: Do we understand, Mr. Kellogg, that that agreement, running ninety-nine years, contains a provision, among other things, by which each party agrees not to change its rates without the consent of the other?

Mr. KELLOGG: That is exactly what it is, and that one party to that contract is the Southern Pacific Company, which does not own, so far as I know, a share of stock in the San Pedro Company. In other words, the San Pedro road is tied up by contracts, be-

130 tween the Oregon Short Line and the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific and all its stock—the San Pedro's stock—deposited with the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company of New York—the Trust agreement is in evidence—to be voted by it under direction —by Clark and Harriman, and the letters giving those directions will be furnished us this afternoon by the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company and offered in evidence. Are they there now?

Mr. SEVERANCE: No.

Com'r LANE: It goes still further than that. (Referring to contract.) It goes this far: that this company, the San Pedro company, agrees to put in the Southern Pacific rates.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, that was Section 2.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Article 2.

Mr. KELLOGG: Article 2. Article 3 agrees not to change them.

The CHAIRMAN: So the construction of another Trans-Continental line did not have the effect of reducing the charges of the Trans-Continental carriers.

Mr. KELLOGG: I should say not, under that contract. That is all the questions I wish to ask Mr. Millar immediately, but I should like to recall him when I get the rest of the copies they are making for us.

The CHAIRMAN: Do counsel for the railroads desire to interrogate Mr. Millar?

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Millar is to be recalled, I understand.

The CHAIRMAN: You do not care to interrogate him at this time?

Mr. MILBURN: No.

The CHAIRMAN: Well, he will be excused for the time. Who will you call next?

Mr. KELLOGG: I will call Mr. Mahl.

WILLIAM MAHL, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Mahl, what official position do you occupy with the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

131 Mr. MAHL: That of comptroller.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What official position have you with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MAHL: Comptroller.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And with the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. MAHL: Comptroller, also.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co.?

Mr. MAHL: The same.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And with the various steamship companies that are controlled by those systems? I will name them. Have you any official connection with the Pacific Mail & Steamship Co.?

Mr. MAHL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is it?

Mr. MAHL: Controller.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any official connection with the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Co.?

Mr. MAHL: None, that I know of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any official connection with any steamship line that is affiliated or controlled by the Southern Pacific or Union Pacific interests?

Mr. MAHL: No sir; none that I now control.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, as controller of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, what, in general, are your duties?

Mr. MAHL: My jurisdiction extends over the matters in the New York office; the payment of moneys, the keeping of the accounts of moneys that are received and the disbursement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does that include the accounts of moneys received from sales of stocks and bonds?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does it include the accounts relating to the disbursements in the purchase of stocks and bonds?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And does that testimony apply as well to the other companies as to the Union Pacific?

Mr. MAHL: You mean with reference to the Short Line?

132 Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MAHL: All the companies of which I am controller?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I beg your pardon?

Mr. MAHL: All the companies of which I am controller?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is what I meant; all the companies of which you are controller.

Mr. MAHL: It does, so far as they are made in New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, it appears that Mr. Erastus Young, of Omaha, is general auditor of these companies. What relations have you with Mr. Young? Does he report to you?

Mr. MAHL: Only a summary of the operations.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What jurisdiction has Mr. Young in the accounting department?

Mr. MAHL: Entirely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Entire jurisdiction over——

Mr. MAHL (interrupting): The accounting departments of the lines of the railroads—out on the lines of the railroads and steamship companies.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, all the operating accounts are controlled by Mr. Young of all the companies I have named—these four companies I mean?

Mr. MAHL: Let me make—each of these companies have an auditor of their own.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand. But Mr. Young is the general auditor and they are all under his direction are they not?

Mr. MAHL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Mr. Young is, to a certain extent, I suppose, under your direction, isn't he?

Mr. MAHL: None.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. MAHL: None whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He merely reports to you a summary of the operations because you have charge of the accounts relating to the financiering of the company?

Mr. MAHL: In New York.

133 Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Well, the financiering is done in New York, isn't it?

Mr. MAHL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And your office is at 120 Broadway?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, you have in your office the accounts which show the properties owned by these various companies, haven't you?

Mr. MAHL: What do you mean by "properties"?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, by stocks and bonds and that sort of thing.

Mr. MAHL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have stated that you are an officer of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. Do you recall how many ships that company has?

Mr. MAHL: Not now, they are published in the last annual report.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Published in the last annual report of what company?

Mr. MAHL: The Pacific Mail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you make a report—you do not make a report to the Interstate Commerce Commission, do you?

Mr. MAHL: We publish an annual report.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you copies of that at your office?

Mr. MAHL: I can send to the office and get one.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you have it here after lunch? That will be just as well?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Between what ports do the boats of the Pacific Mail ply?

Mr. MAHL: Central America, China and Japan.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Honolulu?

Mr. MAHL: I believe so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: San Francisco is the home port of those ships?

Mr. MAHL: At present.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you recall, Mr. Mahl, what percentage of the capital stock of the Pacific Mail is owned by the Southern 134 Pacific Railroad Company, or the Southern Pacific Company, I mean?

Mr. MAHL: That is shown in the annual report. Have you one here?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Don't you remember, as a matter of fact that they control a very large majority of that stock, or at least a majority?

Mr. MAHL: No, the report gives it. Have you one here?

Mr. SEVERANCE: No; I don't seem to have it; yes, I have it (counsel hands report to witness).

Mr. MAHL: Out of $20,000,000 capital stock the Southern Pacific Company controls $10,010,000; a fraction over a half.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just a majority?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By "controls" you mean, do you not, that the Southern Pacific Company owns that stock?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What other ships outside the ships of the Pacific Mail does the Southern Pacific Company own, either by stock ownership or direct ownership?

Mr. MAHL: It owns directly a steamship line between New York, Galveston and New Orleans.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at Galveston and New Orleans this steamship line connects with the rail lines of the Southern Pacific or its subsidiary companies, does it not?

Mr. MAHL: I presume so. I don't know anything about what their traffic arrangements are.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have stated that the Southern Pacific Company owns the ships running from New York to Galveston and New Orleans?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What other steamships, if any does the Southern Pacific own?

Mr. MAHL: None that I now recall. They are all published in the annual report. It is all a matter—it is all there.

135 Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't recall any others than the ones yo have stated?

Mr. MAHL: Than what I have stated.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, you, as auditor of the Union Pacific—I mean, as controller of the Union Pacific, have information as to the ownership of any stock in any steamship lines, or any steamships direct by that company?

Mr. MAHL: Repeat that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Union Pacific——

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do they own any ships or any stock in steamship lines, steamship corporations?

Mr. MAHL: I think the annual report shows that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will let you see it, if you like.

Mr. MAHL: Sir?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I can show you the annual report if that will be of any assistance to you.

(Counsel hands report to witness.)

Mr. MAHL: I thin*d* we show in the table of assets here for the Union Pacific that they own the steamers Aragonia and Numantia.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They belong to the Union Pacific?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And between what ports do those ships ply? They run out of San Francisco to the Orient?

Mr. MAHL: I don't know as a fact where they run to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know that they go out of San Francisco?

Mr. MAHL: I have read it in the papers and have read it in the advertisements.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know anything about the steamship company called the Occidental & Oriental Company? Hasn't the Union Pacific stock in that company?

Mr. MAHL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that company?

136 Mr. MAHL: It is a company which I believe has gone into liquidation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When?

Mr. MAHL: Possibly within the last six, or seven or eight months.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, this year some time.

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They owned or chartered some ships, don't they? Running out of San Francisco?

Mr. MAHL: That I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know about that?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has it gone out of existence?

Mr. MAHL: I am not certain as to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your annual report shows that you——

Mr. MAHL: I heard that they were going into liquidation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your report shows that you own stock in that company?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, what steamships, if any, does the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company control or own?

Mr. MAHL: None that I know of. She is a river line. I think it is stated here in the annual report. She is a water line from Portland, Oregon, to Hwaco; about 258 miles of river line along the Columbia River to various points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they in 1905 have any ships; if so, what has become of them?

Mr. MAHL: I couldn't say now, unless I referred to the reports.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I call your attention to the fact that at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company held on the 13th of April, 1905, it appeared that "the chairman Mr. Harriman, stated that when the steamships 'Arabia' 'Aragonia' 'Nicomedia' and 'Numantia' were chartered by the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Co. (capital stock of which is owned by this company) it was understood that this company would 137 indemnify the Hamburg-American Line, the owners of such steamships, against loss and damage arising by reason of the arrest, detention, seizure or confiscation of any of said ships by the Russian and Japanese Governments, due to or caused by the carrying of said contraband of war."

Do you know anything about a corporation called the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company, the stock of which is owned by the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Between what ports do the ships of the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company ply?

Mr. MAHL: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. MAHL: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know?

Mr MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know how many ships they have?

Mr. MAHL: I couldn't say even that now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you records in your office to show?

Mr. MAHL: I might have some records.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know how much capital stock that company has which is owned by the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. MAHL: I could find out by going to the records.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You give us that at two o'clock?

Mr. MAHL: I don't know whether I can give it to you at two o'clock or not, but I will do the best I can.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you will try to get it?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That company is still in existence, is it not?

Mr. MAHL: So far as I know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And is in business still, is it not, so far as you know?

Mr. MAHL: I can only tell that from the statement I received in the office.

138 Mr. SEVERANCE: You will have to look that up at the office?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right. Now, is there a line of steamships running from Portland to San Francisco, that is owned directly, or through stock ownership by any of those four companies which I have asked you about?

Mr. MAHL: Not that I know of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What has become of the ships the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company used to run from Portland to San Francisco?

Mr. MAHL: I don't know anything of my own knowledge. I have only read in the papers that they are sunk.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That they are sunk?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do your records in your office show whether any ships are still owned?

Mr. MAHL: Their headquarters are out in Portland. I would not——

Mr. SEVERANCE (interrupting): That is what I want to find out. What office would I have to go to to get the facts with reference to that steamship line?

Mr. MAHL: To R. P. Schwerin.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At what place?

Mr. MAHL: San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is his title?

Mr. MAHL. Vice-President and general manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of what company?

Mr. MAHL: Of that steamship company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of it?

Mr. MAHL: San Francisco and Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The name is the San Francisco & Portland.

Mr. MAHL: It is either one or the other. It may be the Portland & San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are unable to give us any information about those boats?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

139 Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know whether they are still in operation or not?

Mr. MAHL: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would not be able to ascertain from the records in your office?

Mr. MAHL: No, I will see if I have any records when I return.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, I suppose you would not be able to state offhand, but will you kindly make up, or have made up in your office, unless you have already done so, a statement showing the original stocks and bonds of the Union Pacific?

Mr. MAHL: How is that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I say, will you kindly have made up in your office a statement showing the original stocks and bonds of the Union Pacific and the dates and amounts of increases, and the amounts received for such increased stock and bonds? I asked Judge Lovett the other day for that, but I understand you haven't yet made them up.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, I have it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, I beg your pardon. Judge Lovett has just handed me the statement.

Mr. KELLOGG: Counsel suggest that if it is a convenient place that we adjourn now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mark these.

(The same are hereto annexed and marked Exhibits 1 and 2 to Mr. Mahl's testimony.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: I show you Exhibits "1 and 2 Mahl" and will ask you if those papers were prepared under your direction in your office?

Mr. MAHL: They were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they are correct, are they—that is your belief?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I offer in evidence those two exhibits and propose to ask something more about them.

We are quite willing to stop here.

The CHAIRMAN: We will suspend and take a recess until two o'clock.

At 12:45 the Commission adjourned until 2:00 P. M.

140

After Recess.

2 O'CLOCK P. M.

The CHAIRMAN: Proceed, gentlemen.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We are waiting for Mr. Mahl.

Mr. KELLOGG: None of the witnesses seem to be here, that we want.

(After a pause.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Millar, do you know where Mr. Mahl is?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; we can telephone him.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I wish you would.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Mahl left just ahead of me. He had a few minutes and said he was coming right on.

(Mr. Mahl entered the room and resumed the stand.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Mahl, I was asking you this morning about the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company, and you said that that company was in liquidation. I find by examining the Official Railroad Guide—the Railroad and Steamship Guide—during the recess, that in the December issue of that publication, it appears that that company is still in operation with the steamers "Doric" and "Coptic" and their sailings are given from Hong Kong and other Asiatic ports.

Mr. MAHL: I guess that is more accurate than my information. My understanding was that the company was in liquidation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What has it done with the ships?

Mr. MAHL: I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any entries on your records that show any transfers made of the ships?

Mr. MAHL: Not here. The books of the company are in San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know nothing about that?

Mr. MAHL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, the annual report of the Union Pacific, which has been introduced here, shows that the Union Pacific
141 road owned certain stock in the Chicago & Alton Company at that time. Have you at our request made up a statement of stocks purchased by the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line since the last annual report? (Handing paper to witness.)

Com'r LANE: When was the last annual report made?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It runs up to June 30, 1906.

Mr. MAHL: (Referring to paper handed him by Mr. Severance). That is the statement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the correct statement from your books?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: That is a statement of stock in other railroads and steamship companies purchased by the Union Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Oregon Short line?

The CHAIRMAN: Since the 1st of July.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is right; since the last annual report.

Com'r LANE: What are they?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will read them. I will have this statement marked Exhibit No. 3, to Mr. Mahl's testimony.

(Same marked No. 3 to Mr. Mahl's testimony.)

(Reading from Exhibit No. 3.)

"The Union Pacific Railroad Company has purchased and owns $28,123,100 of Illinois Central Railroad Company stock"——

The CHAIRMAN (interrupting): Pardon me one moment. Does that statement show the date on which the purchases were made?

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, sir; it does not show the dates; I will inquire about that later. It is a statement of stocks purchased since the 1st of July, since the last annual report.

The CHAIRMAN: And the first item is what?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Illinois Central Railroad Company stock, $28,123,100, out of a total capitalization of $95,040,000, or 142 29.69 per cent. of the stock of the Illinois Central, that is, purchased and owned by the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

The CHAIRMAN: The Union Pacific as a corporation owns nearly 30% of the stock of the Illinois Central?

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is correct, 29.59 per cent. The second item is the St. Joseph & Grand Island common stock, of which they own

$2,900,000, out of a total issue of $4,600,000, or 63.04 per cent., and St. Joseph & Grand Island first preferred, $932,200, out of a total of $5,500,000, or 16.95 per cent.; and second preferred, stock of the St. Joe & Grand Island, $1,250,000 out of a total of $3,500,000, or 35.71 per cent.; or in all 37.37 per cent. of the capitalization of the St. Joe & Grand Island.

This table shows that the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company has purchased and owns $10,000,000 of preferred stock of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Company, out of a total outstanding preferred stock capitalization of $131,486,000, or 7.61 per cent. The Santa Fe also has $102,000,000 of common stock, of which the Oregon Short Line owns none; so that they have 4.28 per cent. of the total capitalization of the Santa Fe; also $32,334,200 common stock of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, out of a total common stock issue of $152,330,060.

The CHAIRMAN: That is held by the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir. That is 21.2[illegible] per cent. of the common stock of the Baltimore & Ohio. The Oregon Short Line also owns $7,206,400 of the preferred stock of the Baltimore & Ohio, out of a total issue of $60,000,000, or 12.01 per cent. or a total of 18.62 per cent. of the total capitalization of the Baltimore & Ohio; also $3,690,000 of the common stock of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company, out of a total common stock issue of that Company of $58,183,900, or 6.34 per cent. The St. Paul road also has $49,654,400 of preferred stock outstanding, of which the Short Line owns none; so that they have in all 3.42 per cent. of the 143 total capitalization of the St. Paul. Of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company, they have $2,572,000 of common stock, out of a total issue of $77,516,745.97, or 3.32 per cent. of the common stock issue of the Chicago & Northwestern. The Northwestern also has $22,398,954.56 outstanding of preferred stock, of which the Short Line owns none, so that their holdings amount to 2.58 per cent. of the entire capital stock of the Northwestern. Of New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, the Oregon Short Line owns $14,285,745, out of a total outstanding issue of $179,282,060, or 7.97 per cent.

Now, Mr. Mahl, do your books show the prices paid for these various stocks?

Mr. MAHL: They do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you a memorandum with you that shows that?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I asked Judge Lovett for a statement of that. He says it has not yet been prepared, could you have that ready tomorrow if not held here too long this afternoon?

Mr. MAHL: I will try.

Com'r LANE: Those stocks were bought since the last annual report, June 30?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir, that is right.

Com'r Lane: Is there any showing of the holdings of the Oregon Short Line or the Union Pacific prior to June 30?

Mr. SEVERANCE (addressing witness): You held none of these stocks of these issues prior to that time?

Mr. MAHL: There was none held then. The report shows everything held after June 30.

The CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, Mr. Severance. This statement shows that the Union Pacific owns about 30% of the Illinois Central. Was that all acquired at one time or at different times?

Mr. MAHL: I think at different times.

The CHAIRMAN: Can you tell at about what date?

Mr. MAHL: I could not.

144 The CHAIRMAN: Well, you have some recollection. Was it seen after the 1st of July, or recently?

Mr. MAHL: Some in July; possibly some in September and October.

The CHAIRMAN: When was the Atchison stock purchased?

Mr. MAHL: I believe in July.

The CHAIRMAN: And the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul?

Mr. MAHL: I think in the same month.

The CHAIRMAN: And the New York Central?

Mr. MAHL: It might be the same month, but I could not say.

The CHAIRMAN: Judge Lovett, will you be good enough to have prepared a statement of the prices paid and showing the dates of the several purchases?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, sir. While I am on my feet, if the Commission pleases, I would like to state that this memorandum that Mr. Mahl prepared, and which has been introduced in evidence, that this twenty-eight and a half million of Illinois Central stock, includes the holdings of a corporation known as the Railroad Securities Corporation, some $9,500,000.

The CHAIRMAN: What is that?

Mr. LOVETT: Nine and a half millions of the Illinois Central is owned by the Railroad Securities Company, the stock of which is owned by the Union Pacific the Union Pacific does not own directly the entire $28,000,000 but owns part of it through the Securities Company.

The CHAIRMAN: Perhaps you will be good enough to exhibit those details in the statement you prepare as to the dates of purchase and the prices paid?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: How about the funds with which these stocks were bought? Out of what funds of the Union Pacific were they bought?

Mr. MAHL: I think the report shows here that we had about $51,000,000 cash on hand.

Com'r LANE: Had $51,000,000 cash on hand the 30th of June?

145 Mr. MAHL: Yes; in June.

Com'r LANE: Was the same true of the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. MAHL: It is difficult to put a mark on the money. We only take the general assets.

Com'r LANE: Did the Oregon Short Line borrow any money to make those purchases?

Mr. MAHL: Not that I recollect now.

Com'r LANE: Did the Union Pacific borrow money?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. LANE: None?

Mr. MAHL: No, sir.

Com'r LANE: So the investments must have been made out of the funds of the Oregon Short Line and Union Pacific?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: I say the funds were furnished by the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line which bought these stocks?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In reference to that last question asked you by Mr. Lane, is it not a fact that the Oregon Short Line this fall declared a dividend of 50% on its stock held by the Union Pacific, which nearly exhausted its surplus?

Mr. MAHL: It declared a dividend of 50%, that accumulation for a number of years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I understand that, but did it not take $13,000,000 and more to pay that dividend and was not the entire accumulated surplus only $16,000,000 or something of that sort?

Mr. MAHL: That surplus is an operating surplus, a surplus from operation—transportation operation. It is not a surplus of money from the sale of securities.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, Mr. Mahl, are you certain that you are correct in that last statement? Was not that surplus of sixteen million and odd dollars made by adding together income from all sources, operation and income from securities and everything else?

Mr. MAHL: I could not tell you.

146 Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you make up a statement showing the amount of money that the Oregon Short Line had on hand at the time these various purchases were made, and deliver that to the Commission, in connection with the statement which Commissioner Knapp has requested?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: I would like to understand, if the Commission please, in these requests, just what we are expected to furnish?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Commission seem to desire the sources from which this money came, whether it was borrowed money or taken out of the treasury.

Mr. LOVETT: We can prepare a statement, which will exhibit the financial condition of the Oregon Short line from which this surplus may appear, or we can prepare a statement which will exhibit all of its assets.

Com'r LANE: It would appear from Mr. Mahl's statement that there might be two surplus funds; one a surplus from accumulated earnings upon investments, and another from operating receipts. Which one was it from which this dividend was paid, and which one was it from which these investments were made?

Mr. LOVETT: We can get that up so it will show, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, you have prepared, in response to our request exhibits one and two, which were presented to you just before the Recess, showing the capitalization of the Union Pacific and the purposes for which the stock was issued. It appears, from this statement that seventy-five million dollars of preferred stock was issued to the reorganization committee; fourteen million eight hundred and forty-one thousand dollars issued against, $14,-841,000 of Oregon Short Line Railroad Income Bonds, and $10,-159,000 against $10,159,000 of O. R. & N. Co. preferred stock; that accounts for the preferred capitalization, and the common stock which aggregates $195,479,900 was issued, as follows: $61,000,000 to the Reorganization Committee, $27,460,100 against $27,460,100 of shares of the capital stock of the Oregon Short Line; $7,718,600 against $7,718,600 shares of common stock of the Oregon 147 Railroad and Navigation Company; and $100,000,000 against a like amount of Union Pacific Railroad first lien convertible 4 per cent. bonds. Now, of that one hundred millions, $99,450,000 seems to have been converted, leaving outstanding only $550,000 of the $100,000,000 issue. Now, that shows what the stock was issued for, but do your books show what that $100,000,000 of first lien convertible bonds were issued for, that is, for what purpose the money from the sale of those bonds was used?

Mr. MAHL: I think they do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They do?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were those bonds issued in connection with the purchase of Northern Pacific stocks and Southern Pacific stocks.

Mr. MAHL: Mr. Severance, I was not connected with the Company at that time. I only came over towards the end of 1902, I believe, so I am not as familiar with those transactions as I should like to be.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You could make up a statement showing that, could you not?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You can make up a statement that will show the uses to which the company put that $100,000,000. from your books?

Mr. MAHL: It is rather difficult to say what you do with this money, because at the time the Company is engaged in all sorts of enterprises; she is building new lines and buying new securities; we cannot say that this particular money went to this purpose or this particular lot went for another purpose.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of course you would not have issued $100,000,000 of bonds for the sake of having $100,000,000. lying idle?

Mr. MAHL: No, if it is a general statement of what the company required at that time, or what it used at that time——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is what I require.

Mr. LOVETT: I think circulars were issued at the time those bonds were offered to the stockholders for subscription. I suppose 148 they have something to say about the immediate purpose, and I will see if we can get copies and furnish them. I was not connected with the company at that time, but I imagine that will show.

Com'r LANE: Your account will show what you received for the bonds and what is charged against that money?

Mr. LOVETT: I suppose the books will show that.

Com'r LANE: I understood that was the request which Mr. Severance made of Mr. Mahl, and Mr. Mahl said he would prepare it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This is in addition to your capital account.

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now presumably you do not increase your capital to pay operating expenses or ordinary disbursements; it naturally would be increased for the purpose of adding something to the tangible property of the corporation; that is what we want to know.

Mr. MAHL: If you want a statement of the assets which were added to the company or with regard to the money put into new lines or equipment or stocks, that is a different matter.

Com'r LANE: And showing that which was taken out of this one hundred millions.

Mr. MAHL: No, I cannot do that. We might have other money.

Mr. LOVETT: The books will show what was received for these bonds, so much money. Unless they were issued against other securities that money went into the treasury. Of course it shows various payments from the treasury for various purposes afterwards, but I do not imagine that the receipt of money is connected with any particular payment. It went into the treasury of the company, and then these purposes for which the bonds were issued were met out of any funds in the treasury. We cannot trace the particular fund, I imagine.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I know money has no particular earmark, but what I want to get at is, you issued new bonds and that added 149 to your capital account, and something must be charged against that capital account to make up the other side of the books.

Mr. LOVETT: It went into the treasury.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The amount received, one hundred million dollars, from the sale of bonds, that adds to your fixed charges. That $100,000,000 as Mr. Mahl says is not used to defray operating expenses; it is used to pay for stocks or equipment or railroads, or what-not.

Com'r LANE: Either that $100,000,000 is in the treasury, or you have bought something with it; and if you have bought something with it, what have you bought. That is what we want to know?

Mr. LOVETT: It went into the treasury, and we will have Mr. Mahl furnish whatever his books show on it. I imagine it went into the treasury, and whether it can be traced beyond that to any particular investment, I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then Mr. Mahl can be examined further after we get that statement. Now Mr. Mahl I will ask you in general whether outside of these summaries, by Mr. Young that are sent to you, you have any persons along the line that send you any reports?

Mr. MAHL: Send me a report?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, outside of the summaries you get from Mr. Young?

Mr. MAHL: I receive a report for instance, from the officers of the Texas & New Orleans Railroad, not from Mr. Young.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From the Pacific Mail?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, that is a separate and distinct corporation, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you have an auditor of the Pacific Mail in San Francisco have you?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he reports to you?

Mr. MAHL: No, he reports to Mr. Young.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. MAHL: He reports to Mr. Young.

150 Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you get any reports at all from the Pacific Mail?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom?

Mr. MAHL: From the auditor in San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I asked you a moment ago. You said he reported to Mr. Young. Doesn't he send you reports too?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is his name?

Mr. MAHL: Mr. Railton, I think it is. It is given in the last report of the company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that he sends a report to Mr. Young and also to you?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Mr. Young has his office at Omaha, doesn't he?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he is the general auditor of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. MAHL: I believe so; the reports will show it. (Referring to paper) Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is the auditor who has immediate jurisdiction over the accounts of the line of steamers running from New York to Galveston and New Orleans?

Mr. MAHL: In New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is his name?

Mr. MAHL: Parker.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know his first name?

Mr. MAHL: I don't recall it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: W. C.?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To whom does he make reports?

Mr. MAHL: He makes reports to myself and I think also to Mr. Young.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Young and yourself?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now as long as the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company was in operation, were any reports 151 of any sort of their operation sent to you.

Mr. MAHL: Yes, a financial statement at the end of the month.
Mr. SEVERANCE: You still get that, don't you?
Mr. MAHL: I cannot say that I do now.
Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know?
Mr. MAHL: I would have to ascertain.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the auditor of the O. R. & N. Where is his office?
Mr. MAHL: Portland. I think his name is Mr. Sterling, I think Mr. Sterling was auditor.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, Mr. Sterling, and does he send reports to you?
Mr. MAHL: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How often?
Mr. MAHL: Once a month.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And where is the office of the auditor of the Short Line?
Mr. MAHL: Salt Lake City.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And who is the auditor?
Mr. MAHL: C. J. McNitt.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Does he report to you?
Mr. MAHL: He send- his statements to me.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Sends statements to you?
Mr. MAHL: He reports directly to Mr. Young.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Therefore you get from them—well you also get a report from Mr. Young or somebody at Omaha, don't you, in connection with the Union Pacific?
Mr. MAHL: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: So that each branch of this system, the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Short Line, the O. R. & N. and the steamship lines both on the Atlantic and Pacific in some form make a report to you once a month of their financial operations so that you keep in touch with all of them?
Mr. MAHL: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is sent to you here in New York?
152 Mr. MAHL: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Does Mr. Young, the General Auditor make that report to you?
Mr. MAHL: The papers are signed by him as General Auditor or by someone for him.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, a report to you from his office, I mean?
Mr. MAHL: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you tell who has charge of the division of joint office expenses where the same offices are used by the different parts of the system?
Mr. MAHL: For the offices out on the line I think that is done in the General Auditor's office.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Well I will just give you an instance as a concrete example; it appears by the manuals that the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific have the same General Agent at Chicago—the Commercial Agent—as well as other officers, but I am speaking about the agent who looks out for the traffic, gets traffic—gets business. Now, how are his expenses divided, or the expenses of that office?

Mr. MAHL: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That don't come under your jurisdiction?

Mr. MAHL: That does not come under my jurisdiction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know about that?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you could not state in connection with any of that sort of thing?

Mr. MAHL: No, sir, nothing.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who could tell us that—Mr. Young?

Mr. MAHL: I should think so, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you don't know, I suppose, who makes the division; that is, who fixes the amount that shall be charged to each company?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know that?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, how are the expenses of maintaining the offices of Traffic Director, Director of Maintenance and Op-
153 eration, Director of Purchases, Secretary, General Auditor, Comptroller and so forth divided? I show you a memorandum that I think was prepared by you?

Mr. MAHL: Yes. The Director of Maintenance and Operation is paid in Chicago and I don't know who could furnish that information. The Traffic Director, the Director of Purchases, the Secretary, and the Comptroller are paid in New York, and the apportionment is made in New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On what basis?

Mr. MAHL: On the basis—I think in nearly all instances the expenses of the office of director of purchases, allotted in proportion to the number of locomotives and cars owned by the respective companies.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, by respective offices you mean the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right, go ahead.

Mr. MAHL: Expenses of the transfer office allotted actually to the various companies as near as those can be ascertained. That is the stock transfer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The stock transfer is allotted to the various companies?

Mr. MAHL: Yes. And all salaries and expenses in New York, including salaries of Mr. J. C. Stubbs, Mr. E. O. McCormick, Mr. P. C. Stohr and Mr. H. B. Thrall, allotted on the basis of gross transportation receipts.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is to say, Mr. Stubbs is the director of traffic at Chicago for all the lines, isn't he?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Mr. Stubb's salary and the expenses of his office are divided between the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, the O. R. & N. and the Oregon Short Line on the basis of the gross transportation receipts of those respectively?

Mr. MAHL: No, let me correct this.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right.

154 Mr. MAHL: Not the expenses. I don't know anything about the expenses of those.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know about the expenses?

Mr. MAHL: No. I don't know anything about the salaries of his office. This merely has reference to his own salary.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, by your testimony then, you mean that the salaries of Mr. Stubbs, the director of traffic, Mr. E. O. McCormick, Mr. P. C. Stohr, assistant to Mr. Stubbs, and Mr. H. B. Thrall, who is the railway agent of all the lines, are divided on the basis of the gross transportation receipts, of the respective lines; that is correct, is it?

Mr. MAHL: That is correct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And those amounts are paid from here?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As far as their expenses are concerned and the expenses of maintaining their offices from what source can you ascertain the information as to that division?

Mr. MAHL: I should think you would have to obtain that at Chicago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom?

Mr. MAHL: I suppose from the offices.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Young wouldn't have that?

Mr. MAHL: He might and might not.

Com'r KNAPP: Do the gross receipts which you referred to there, which are the basis of division of salaries of the officials named, include receipts from passenger traffic as well as freight traffic?

Mr. MAHL: Yes; receipts from all sources, rents and so forth.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you tell what person or what committee or party decides how the salaries paid to these gentlemen who are acting for all the companies are to be divided, or apportioned among the lines?

Mr. MAHL: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, your own salary for instance, is apportioned to the four lines, isn't it?

155 Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who employed you or appointed you?

Mr. MAHL: The chairman of the Committee.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Harrison?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who directed you as to the method in which you should apportion your salary?

Mr. MAHL: I don't think there was any particular direction given about that. Mr. Young—I believe we followed what was established out on the line of the road, and it is customary by railroads, by all railroads to allow salaries of traffic officers along certain lines or divisions, for instance by transportation receipts. I think in the companies just followed what is customary elsewhere.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Mahl; you did not assume, did you, without direction from some person to charge to the Southern Pacific a certain amount per month or per year, and the Union Pacific a certain amount and so on, to make up your salary? You were instructed by some one, were you not?

Mr. MAHL: I cannot recall now how that division was made. I can go back upon the papers and find out and see.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You merely know that it was made?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you know you were employed by Mr. Harriman, but as to whether he directed that kind of a division you do not know?

Mr. MAHL: I do not recall now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who directed you as to the method of dividing the salaries of other officials than yourself, where the officials were common all over the system; or did you do that of your own motion?

Mr. MAHL: No, I think it was done—I think it was done through Mr. Young, or rather upon conference with him or following the practice which was followed out on the line of the road in similar instances.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who had this conference with Mr. Young? Did you have it?

156 Mr. MAHL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So you think that Mr. Young made this division without authority from the Board, or Boards of Directors, or Executive Committees, or the chairman?

Mr. MAHL: No, that might have been originally agreed upon, and I think we simply followed in that manner what was established.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you came there?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, in making these divisions, you do not separately charge the steamship lines, do you, with their proportion; or do you make a separate charge against the steamship lines?

Mr. MAHL: We make a separate charge against them; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Against the Pacific Mail you make a specific charge because you only own a part of the stock, but do you make any division of that charge as between the rail lines of the Southern Pacific and the steamship lines that are directly owned by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MAHL: I do not think so. I don't know. Those divisions are made in the general auditor's office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know, Mr. Mahl, of anything that is in your office, as to who has charge of the distribution of purchases, such as cars and locomotives, between the different lines; or would you have to get that from Mr. Thorne?

Mr. MAHL: We would have to get that from Mr. Thorne.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Judge Lovett suggests this to refresh your recollection, that one or the other of the companies in the first instance pays these various salaries, and then a charge is made against the other companies for their respective proportions.

Mr. MAHL: That is correct, with the exception——

Mr. SEVERANCE (interrupting): That is the way it is done?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It amounts to the same thing?

157 Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you made up a statement, Mr. Mahl, of the persons in whose names the 900,000 and the 180,000 shares of Southern Pacific stock appear of record?

Mr. MAHL: I haven't anything to do with that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lovett neglected to ask you that.

Mr. LOVETT: We will furnish that. I didn't ask Mr. Mahl about that. We will furnish them—a list of the names of the individuals who hold the stock. I neglected to ask Mr. Mahl for them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Mahl, you can, I assume, without great difficulty, make up for us a statement of the aggregate tonnage hauled by the various lines of the system, can't you? That is reported in your office?

Mr. MAHL: The annual report shows the entire tonnage hauled.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We can find that ourselves by looking at the reports?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation kept separate from the Union Pacific?

Mr. MAHL: They are; and it is reported in the reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Separately?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It appears by the minutes of a meeting of the 22nd of August, or rather of the 23rd of August, 1906, that there was produced a statement of certain securities purchased on the 22nd of August, 1906. Can you make up or give us a copy of that statement? Perhaps that would be covered by this general statement which you are to make in response to the Chairman's request?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir; I think that is covered by that.

Com'r LANE: Were any resolutions passed by the Board of Directors authorizing the purchase of these stocks?

158 Mr. MAHL: There must have been.

Com'r LANE: Mr. Severance, did you refer to the purchase of stocks that you read out some time ago?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: Were any resolutions passed by the Board of Directors authorizing the purchase of those stocks?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir; there are entries, which we will introduce. We have copies of those.

Com'r LANE: Who has those?

Mr. SEVERANCE: We have them. I will call attention to that.

Now, Mr. Mahl, do you make up the statistics that go into the annual reports of your companies?

Mr. MAHL: Yes. Rather, I should amend that by saying that I aggregate them and compile them from those reports which come in from along the roads.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you make up the items or compile the items, showing the total mileage, the revenue per ton per mile, and the ratio of net to gross earnings, operating expenses, cost of conducting transportation, gross earnings per mile, and the net earnings per mile.

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And those statements as submitted are, to the best of your belief, correct?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will state to the Commission that we have prepared from the reports on file, a rather large statement here which, first, shows the average statistics of all the roads in the United States, beginning with 1896 and running down to 1906, showing the total mileage operated, the average revenue per ton per mile, the percentage that the operating expenses bear to gross earnings, gross earnings per mile in dollars, and the net earnings per mile in dollars per mile of road. I will offer that in evidence, subject to correction by my friends if it is not correct. (The same is hereto annexed and marked Exhibit No. 4, to Mr. Mahl's testimony.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: In connection, we have statements based on the annual reports for the same years of the same items on the 159 Canadian Pacific and the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Northern Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, and the Great Northern.

Now, this statement shows, without going into any detail, except to give the Commission an idea of what it is, that in 1906 the average revenue per ton per mile of all railroads in the United States — 0.766 of a cent, and that in 1896 it was a little over .8 of a cent, 0.806 of a cent. On the Union Pacific in 1896 it was 0.957. And in 1906, ten years later, it was 0.924. While the average for the United States had dropped from 0.806 to 0.766, the Union Pacific had dropped from 0.924; and the Southern Pacific average in 1896 was 1.122, and that had only come down to 1.101 in 1906. While the Northern Pacific had come down from 1.135 to .828. The Oregon Short Line from 1.55 to .767. The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company from 1.680 to 1.130. The Santa Fe from 1.028 to .899. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy from .876 to .804. The Rock Island from 1.017 to .930 of a cent. And the Great Northern from 1.019 to .778.

Mr. LOVETT: Have you a copy of that?

Mr. KELLOGG: I think we have another copy.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This, of course, I offer in evidence for the information of the Commission, subject to correction if my friends find any errors in it, but I do not think there are, because it was made by the statistician in your department.

Mr. MAHL: Does that show what the Canadian Pacific is paying for section labor and material?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It doesn't show anything about that. It merely shows the mileage, the revenue per ton mile, and the other items that I called attention to.

Mr. MAHL: It doesn't show that they are paying $1.15 a day, while the Southern Pacific is paying $1.75 and $2.00 a day.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It doesn't show what the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern or any of those other lines are paying that 160 have rates much lower than yours.

From your knowledge of railroads in this country, isn't it a fact that the Southern Pacific has a larger percentage of long haul business than, say, the Union Pacific or the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific?

Mr. MAHL: I wouldn't say that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It has less local business, I mean, in proportion to the through business.

Mr. MAHL: No, I don't think so. Those figures are not clear in my mind.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This is a fact, is it not, that the revenue per ton per mile—I mean the cost, the charge, per ton per mile, decreases as the distance increases. That is the rule, isn't it?

Mr. MAHL: I don't think it would hold good now, with the present increased price of material and labor.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But I say—you don't understand me. That increase in labor, in the cost of labor and materials, would apply to the short haul as well as to the long haul business. Now, the revenue per ton per mile is less, isn't it, always in the case of the long haul than in the case of the short haul? In the adjustment of rates, that is always so?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that if it should happen that the Southern Pacific has a large percentage of through business, as compared with these other lines, you would naturally expect, would you not, other things being equal, to show the rate per ton per mile was less?

Mr. MAHL: Well, there might be conditions there——

Mr. SEVERANCE (interrupting): I say, other things being equal.

Mr. MAHL: If you are referring to general conditions, of course that might follow; but there may be exceptional conditions that have always existed on the Pacific system lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you prepare the figures upon which, or do you prepare figures upon which the board of directors or ex-161 ecutive committee men act in determining the rate of dividend to be paid?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir; but let me qualify that. I prepare the statements for them that they want, the purpose for which they do not always tell me. I am not asked about them. I submit statements to them of the operations of the companies from time to time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, the Union Pacific at present is paying dividends at the rate of 5% each half year, isn't it? It was put on a 10% basis last summer; that is true, isn't it?

Mr. MAHL: There wasn't anything at all about the basis it was put on. We declared a dividend of 5%.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Wasn't that stated in the resolution of the Board, that it was a 5% semi-annual dividend?

Mr. MAHL: That would not be for me to answer. I don't know anything about that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As a matter of fact, in railroad accounting, you would expect a 5% dividend unless it was stated to be a special dividend at the rate of 10% a year, wouldn't you?

Mr. MAHL: I never expect anything.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You wouldn't know anything about that.

Mr. MAHL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you say you make up statements and submit them to the boards upon which they act in voting dividends?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, let me ask you when you make up this statement for the consideration of the Union Pacific Board, before they declared that dividend, did you include among the net earnings applicable to the payment of dividends any profits in the handling of stocks or securities, or did you simply take the profits that were earned in the operation of a railroad?

Mr. MAHL: The operations of the railroad as well as the income from investments.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As well as the income from investments?

162 Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By "Income from investments" do you mean the interest or dividends received upon stocks or bonds owned by the company?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all you mean?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't mean money that might be made by buying stocks or bonds at a certain figure and selling them afterwards at a higher figure?

Mr. MAHL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you, Mr. Mahl, where you can readily lay your hand on it in your office, the statement which you prepared for the use of the directors at that meeting?

Mr. MAHL: I think I could—I might find it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We would like to have that produced.

Mr. MAHL: The statements that are submitted there are submitted every week.

Com'r LANE: Mr. Severance, I understood Mr. Mahl a moment ago to answer to the effect that if the profit was made in a stock transaction that it did not go into the fund from which dividends were paid?

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what he stated.

Com'r LANE: Well, now, is that so?

Mr. MILBURN: I misunderstood the question, if that was it. That is, if there was a profit realized on an actual transaction, I don't know what the witness would answer, but the question put was, as I understood it, whether on realized profits, that is, stock had gone up——

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, I said, Mr. Milburn—I asked whether if stock or bonds were purchased at a certain figure and were thereafter sold at a profit, at a higher figure, whether the profit so made went into the gross profits which he submitted to the directors and was applicable to the payment of dividends, and he said they did not; but only dividends upon stocks held by the company, or the bonds held by the company.

Mr. MAHL: There might have been some few minor in-163 stances; possibly not more than $50,000 or $100,000 that might have gone into it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That would be contrary to your custom?

Mr. MAHL: No. The annual report shows exactly what has gone into the profits.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You can produce this statement? I am not speaking of the annual report. We do not want to have you make any mistake.

Mr. LOVETT: I think that statement which was referred to can be produced. I think it was filed with the secretary; and that, of course, would be the best evidence of what it shows. We have no objection to informing you as to how that statement was made up. We will produce it.

Com'r LANE: You will produce it?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, sir; we will produce it. I think it was filed with the secretary.

Com'r LANE: I don't know that I understood the question, or that the witness understood the question.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think he understood it.

You will produce that, Mr. Mahl, for use at a subsequent examination, then; tomorrow, perhaps?

Mr. MAHL: What statement is that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Statement which you submitted to the directors at the time they voted this 10%, or the 5% dividend; last August.

Com'r LANE: This statement, Mr. Severance, won't show whether when they bought a block of stock and that stock went up and money was made on it, whether that money made on it went into the fund out of which dividends were paid, will it?

Mr. MILBURN: Judge Lovett says it will.

Mr. LOVETT: As a matter of fact, it only shows the income from the transportation business, and the income from the investments, which Mr. Mahl has stated. I understand it, as Mr. Mahl does. We will get the statement and that will show; if any profits of that sort were included they will appear from the statement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you show me on this annual report
164 the item showing the surplus, the increase in the surplus during the year represented by that report, covered by that report?

Com'r HARLAN: What report is that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Union Pacific annual report for the year ended June 30, 1906.

Mr. MAHL: This (indicating).

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the surplus of the Union Pacific on the 30th day of June, 1905, was $34,943,194.42, and on the 30th day of June, 1906, the profit and loss surplus was $42,796,026.39, or an increase of a little over $8,000,000?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: To guard against a misapprehension there, I would like to call your attention to the fact that that it is a combined statement of the Oregon Short Line, the Union Pacific, and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and not the Union Pacific Railroad Company alone. These income accounts and balance sheets are shown separately in the annual reports of each of these companies filed with the Commission. Mr. Mahl then combines these figures in a report for the information of stockholders; that is a consolidated statement of the three companies.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Would those various items, the three items, make up this total shown in the annual report made to the Commission?

Mr. Lovett: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of course, Mr. Mahl, whatever profits are made by the Oregon Short Line, or by the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, go into the treasury of the Union Pacific, do they not, directly or eventually?

Mr. MAHL: All in the net dividends.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; certainly in the net dividends, and from time to time dividends are voted on those stocks which are held by the Union Pacific, and the money goes into the treasury in that way.

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And out of those dividends, and out of the surplus from operations, the Union Pacific makes its dividends 165 as well as its income from other stocks or bonds it may hold?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You treat them all in the same way, do you not?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is the annual report of the Union Pacific here?

Mr. LOVETT: You have it in your hand.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean the report made to the Commission.

Prof. MEYER: It is not here.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who makes up these reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission; do you make those or does Mr. Young?

Mr. MAHL: No, I think they are mostly made up in my office. The operating details are filled out on the line of the road, and we add the financial details.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you keep an account, Mr. Mahl, which shows the profits realized by the Union Pacific Railroad Company in its stock and bond operations arising from the purchase and sale of stocks?

Mr. MAHL: Not always exactly. On those lines we do not always. When we sell a stock we do not always make a division; sometimes we do, and sometimes we don't. We don't always write up and make a division as to the profit, and again in some cases we do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, now, take for instance, Mr. Mahl—I think it was the Oregon Short Line that bought a large amount of stock of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, did it not?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that stock was converted into Northern Securities stock, was it not?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Exchanged for it, I mean?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then afterwards the Northern Securities stock was exchanged for Great Northern and Northern Pa-
163 cific stock, in certain proportions; that is, such of it that you did not sell in the meantime?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had sold some of your Northern Securities stock as such, hadn't you?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you afterwards sold a considerable amount at least of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you sold it all yet?

Mr. MAHL: I cannot recall now. I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Don't you keep a kind of summary which shows the profits that the Oregon Short Line made on that transaction?

Mr. MAHL: No, I don't think I did in that case. If you will give me the annual report, I will state just what has been done.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You may go ahead. You were going to read something from the report.

Mr. MAHL: In the annual report for the year ending June 30, 1906——

Mr. SEVERANCE (interrupting): That is the report to your stockholders?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir; of the Union Pacific, there is this statement under assets and liabilities. There were sold during the year stock of the Northern Securities Company to the amount of $2,850,000 par value; preferred stock of the Great Northern Ry. Co. to the amount of $9,960,089.49 par value; common stock of the Northern Pacific Ry. Co. to the amount of $14,830,082.15 par value; and stubs of the Northern Securities Company to the amount of $18.71 par value. The amounts realized from the sale of these stocks were credited against the cost of the stocks owned.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, now, let us understand what that means. You buy—we will say you buy Northern Pacific Stock as you did in this case and you charge that into your account, so much paid for Northern Pacific stock. Now, when you sell that Northern 167 Pacific stock what kind of entry do you make?

Mr. MAHL: Simply credit Northern Pacific stock that amount received on sale.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When the Northern Pacific is all liquidated you strike a balance between what it cost and what you got and credit that to profit and loss?

Mr. MAHL: I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is not that your custom?

Mr. MAHL: I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let me ask you this: you did buy a large amount of Northern Pacific stock which took about the course I stated in my former question. You sold most of that. Your accounts show the amount of money you paid for this stock, and also show the amount you have received up to date by sale of that stock. By taking those two amounts together you could easily make a statement showing the profits you had realized out of the Northern Pacific venture, could you not?

Mr. MAHL: So far as it has been sold, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, will you be kind enough to make up such a statement and also give the number of shares you still have on hand of the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern and the Northern Securities Company?

Mr. LOVETT: Before that statement is passed I would like to state that I do not understand that there would be any entry in the books as the basis of a statement of that sort. Mr. Mahl, as I understand, you testified that there has been no credit to profit and loss on that account yet. Of course, they might lose money on the rest—I do not know—but there is no basis in the books, as I understand, for a statement of that sort.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, Judge, I hope you sold enough to pay you out and are not going to come out in a hole?

Com'r LANE: Have you had any stock transactions with this company? (Addressing Mr. Severance.) Find out what has 168 been done as to such transactions—if a profit was made and to what account the credit was given?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let me ask you this: From your own recollection—you remember, don't you—you have already sold more than enough Northern Securities, Great Northern and Northern Pacific to pay back all you paid for all the Northern Pacific stock you bought?

Mr. MAHL: I do not remember about that, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you make up a statement showing the total amount that the Union Pacific or the Oregon Short Line paid for this Northern Pacific stock, and also a statement of the receipts from the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Northern Securities stocks, and also the amount you have on hand. Make it in that way.

The CHAIRMAN: The books will show those items.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, he can pick it out and make it it into a statement.

Com'r LANE: Have you made a profit on any of the stocks which you have bought and sold?

Mr. MAHL: We do not know until the transaction is closed.

Com'r LANE: Has any transaction been closed?

Mr. MAHL: None of these, they are all open yet.

Com'r LANE: Has any stock transaction been closed?

Mr. MAHL: You mean of these three stocks?

Com'r LANE: No, I mean any stocks you have bought and sold?

Mr. MAHL: Possibly there has.

Com'r LANE: Don't you recall that you have had some transactions by which you have bought stocks and sold them again and a profit has been realized?

Mr. MAHL: I do not recall now. If there has, it has been a small amount?

Com'r LANE: You do not recall that there has been any transaction of that kind.

Mr. MAHL: I do not.

169 Com'r LANE: And the basis for the answer, as I understand it, is that some of the stock is still held?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir

Com'r LANE: And when any of the stock is still held you do not credit anything to profit?

Mr. MAHL: That varies.

Com'r LANE: How does it vary?

Mr. MAHL: It depends on what stock they are. We might have a small amount of stock and it would be closed at a profit, but as in cases like the Northern Pacific Stock and the Great Northern the transaction is not complete.

Com'r LANE: Is there a separate rule in the corporation as to where profits of such kind shall be credited, or is that subject to direction?

Mr. MAHL: I think that is always subject to the order of the Board of Directors.

Com'r LANE: Subject to the order of the Board of Directors?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: That is the thing I was getting at some time ago. When you take the money of the Union Pacific and you buy stock with it, and you make a profit with it upon the stock transaction, then you regard the profit as subject to the direction of the Board of Directors and you cannot recall that you have had a transaction of that kind this year?

Mr. MAHL: Not that I have any knowledge of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, so that we may know exactly what we are getting here, I will ask you to prepare a statement which will show first the Northern Pacific stocks purchased. They were bought, were they not, by the Union Pacific and afterwards turned over to the Short Line—you know the purchase I mean, the large block of stock in 1901? Put that down on one side of the sheet. On the other put down the total receipts from the sale of Northern Securities, Great Northern and Northern Pacific stocks; then put on that sheet the amounts of Great Northern and Northern Pacific stock you still hold, and perhaps we will be able to work it out 170 from the market values of those stocks how you have come out, or approximately so.

Mr. MAHL: Bear in mind that many of these transactions occurred before my time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it all on your books?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, but I am not familiar with them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am not asking out of your own head but from your books. Bring it down to today.

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, is it not true that from funds you have realized from the sale of Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Northern Securities stocks among other funds, you have bought these stocks that have been mentioned, such as Alton, Illinois Central and others?

Mr. MAHL: From those and other funds, possibly. I I cannot tell what particular funds.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have no entries on your books that will show that?

Mr. MAHL: The books will only show that we received so much cash.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I believe you said earlier in your testimony that there would probably be some entires to capital account to offset the one hundred millions stock issue. After we get all these statements we can tell better where we are at.

Mr. MAHL: You said, I believe, that for some time you were comptroller of the Alton, did you not, or else Mr. Millar said you had been comptroller of the Alton?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, I believe I was for a time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who succeeded you in that office?

Mr. MAHL: How is that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who succeeded you in that office?

Mr. MAHL: I think Mr. Hilliard.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are his initials?

Mr. MAHL: C. W.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is his office?

Mr. MAHL: I think at 71 Broadway.

Mr. SEVERANCE: 71 Broadway?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir

171 Mr. SEVERANCE: The Empire Building?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you turn over to Mr. Hilliard all books of account of the Alton in your possession?

Mr. MAHL: I did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did he succeed you as comptroller?

Mr. MAHL: Some time in October.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was at the same time that the Rock Island interests took charge of the road and everybody at your office went out?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, when they elected another set of officers and left us out.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think that is all we care to ask Mr. Mahl until we get those statements which he is to prepare. I will have those requests written off so that you can come back.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Lovett do you desire to interrogate Mr. Mahl?

Mr. LOVETT: Not at this time.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Milburn?

Mr. MILBURN: Not at this time.

The CHAIRMAN: Then you are excused, Mr. Mahl.

Witness excused.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Millar, will you take the stand again, please.

ALEX. MILLAR recalled:

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you please give the President and general officers of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co.?

Mr. MILLAR: The following officers were elected June 22nd, 1905, which appears to be the latest I have at hand.

Mr. KELLOGG: All right.

Mr. MILLAR: When any change occurred I will state it.

E. H. Harriman, President.

172 R. P. Schwerin, Vice-President and General Manager.

William Mahl, Comptroller.

H. S. Bradt, Assistant Comptroller.

Alex. Millar, Secretary.

Joseph Hellen, Assistant Secretary.

Do you care to go through the list?

Mr. KELLOGG: Who was general auditor?

Mr. MILLAR: Erastus Young, general auditor.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you any other vice president?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is sufficient, unless you have the Board of Directors there.

Mr. MILLAR: I have the Board elected May, 1905.

Mr. KELLOGG: All right, give us the Board of Directors.

Mr. MILLAR: Maxwell Evarts, George J. Gould, E. H. Harriman, George H. Macey, Ogden Mills, Russell Sage, R. P. Schwerin, James Speyer and Paul M. Warburg.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have there been any changes in that Board since that time?

Mr. MILLAR: My recollection is that Mr. Speyer and Mr. Warburg have resigned, but I think the vacancies have not been filled.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Sage is dead.

Mr. MILLAR: Mr. Sage has died in the meantime.

Mr. KELLOGG: Has that vacancy been filled?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific Company controls the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, does it not?

Mr. MILLAR: It owns a small amount over half of the stock, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: It elects the officers and elects the Board of Directors?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not know how that is; I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, the general officers, President, and auditor and comptroller are the same as the Union Pacific?

173 Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the accounts are kept in the Union Pacific offices?

Mr. MILLAR: Oh, no.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, at 120 Broadway?

Mr. MILLAR: Oh, yes, the financial transactions are under the charge of Mr. Mahl.

Mr. KELLOGG: And Erastus Young at Omaha is the general auditor?

Mr. MILLAR: The general auditor, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Stubbs has jurisdiction over the steamships as traffic director?

Mr. MILLAR: I hardly think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: You do not know?

Mr. MILLAR: I think not. I do not think he is an officer of that company at all.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Excuse me. Could I have my answer read to that question?

Mr. KELLOGG: Certainly.

(The answer was repeated by the stenographer as follows: "I think not, I do not think he is an officer of that company at all.")

Mr. MILLAR: That is right.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know the officers of the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Please give them.

Mr. MILLAR (referring to book):

E. H. Harriman, Chairman of Board and president;

William D. Cornish, vice president;

R. P. Schwerin, vice president and general manager;

W. R. Litzenberg, secretary;

F. V. S. Crosby, treasurer;

Erastus Young, general auditor;

H. E. A. Railton, auditor.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, Mr. Crosby is what?

Mr. MILLAR: Treasurer.

Mr. KELLOGG: He lives in Portland?

Mr. MILLAR: No, he is a New York man.

174 Mr. KELLOGG: He is in New York?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: What connection does he have with the other Pacific companies?

Mr. MILLAR: He is treasurer of the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is he also treasurer of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: No, he has no connection with it.

Mr. KELLOGG: This man Schwerin, what position does he hold with any of the Pacific companies?

Mr. MILLAR: With which?

Mr. KELLOGG: The Pacific companies?

Mr. MILLAR: He is vice president and general manager of the Pacific Mail and the Portland & Asiatic.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: What company owns the stock of the Portland and Asiatic?

Mr. MILLAR: I really do not know.
Mr. KELLOGG: Don't you know who votes it?
Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; I do not.
Mr. KELLOGG: Who gives the proxies for it?
Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: You do not know anything about that?
Mr. MILLAR: I know very little about that company?
Mr. LOVETT: We will get that information for you.
Mr. MILLAR: It is a Portland company.
Mr. KELLOGG: I do not know now who owns the stock of the Portland and Asiatic Company.
Mr. LOVETT: We will get that up.
Mr. KELLOGG: All right. Now, the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company, I notice the stock of that company in the annual reports of the Union Pacific Railroad Company from time to time, together with dividends declared thereon, one year $25,000, another year $50,000. Do you know whether the Union Pacific owns the stock of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company?
Mr. MILLAR: It does.
175 Mr. KELLOGG: It does?
Mr. MILLAR: Oh, well, I mean only a part of the stock. It does not own all.
Mr KELLOGG: Does not own all of it?
Mr. MILLAR: Just one-half as I understand.
Mr. KELLOGG: Who owns the other half?
Mr. MILLAR: The various shareholders on the Pacific Coast.
Mr. KELLOGG: Individuals?
Mr. MILLAR: Partly individuals and partly as I testified before, the Southern Pacific Company.
Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific jointly own control of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company?
Mr. MILLAR: That is my understanding, yes sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know the officials of that company?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, give them.
Mr. MILLAR: R. P. Schwerin is president; W. F. Herrin, vice president; David D. Stubbs, secretary and general manager.
I think you asked about the secretary before and I was unable to answer; could not recall. I think there have been changes, but I see Mr. Stubbs is still secretary.
Mr. KELLOGG: Now, who are the directors of that steamship company—just a moment before I ask that question. Mr. Herrin is counsel for the Southern Pacific Road, living at San Francisco, is he not?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Does he also represent the Union Pacific Road at San Francisco?
Mr. MILLAR: Not to my knowledge.
Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Schwerin is general manager of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, isn't he?
Mr. MILLAR: He is.

Mr. KELLOGG: And also general manager of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

176 Mr. KELLOGG: And Mr. Stubbs is a brother of J. C. Stubbs, is he?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not know that.

Mr. KELLOGG: What connection does he have with any of the other Pacific companies?

Mr. MILLAR: None to my knowledge.

Mr. KELLOGG: He is the only man outside of the family. What individuals own stock in the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company that you know of?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not know as to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has the stock books?

Mr. MILLAR: Of the Occidental?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. MILLAR: I think they are kept by D. D. Stubbs.

Mr. KELLOGG: In San Francisco?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, if they were not burned in the fire.

Mr. LOVETT: We will get that information for you also.

Mr. KELLOGG: Very well, sir; the stockholders of the Occidental & Oriental, the stockholders of the Portland & Asiatic, and the stockholders of the Pacific Mail. You do not know who owns the other half interest or not quite half—the minority stock in the Pacific Mail, do you?

Mr. MILLAR: I know it is very widely scattered, Mr. Kellogg.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then, the situation is that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific control the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Line?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific controls the Pacific Mail Steamship Line?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, do you think, controls the Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not know who owns the stock in that company.

Mr. KELLOGG: All these steamship lines run between Pa-

177 cific ports, Portland and San Francisco, and points in the Orient, do they not?

Mr. MILLAR: They do.

Mr. KELLOGG: And they are in the transportation of freight and traffic to and from those ports?

Mr. Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: In connection with the various Pacific Railroad Lines?

Mr MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now I do not think it was made entirely clear this morning. Does the Southern Pacific Company own all of the stock, except perhaps a share each for the directors, in the Morgan Steamship Line?

Mr. MILLAR: I am not informed as to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are not informed as to that?

Mr. MILLAR: No.

Mr. LOVETT: The annual report of the Southern Pacific Company shows every share it owns.

Mr. KELLOGG: Does it show whether any is outstanding?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, it shows the total amount outstanding, and the number of shares it owns in every case, I think.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you happen to know the amount of stock of the Morgan Line owned by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. LOVETT: I think the Southern Pacific owns practically all. There may be a few shares——

Mr. KELLOGG: Judge Lovett says he thinks the Southern Pacific owns practically all of the stock of the Morgan Line, but there may be a few shares outstanding.

Com'r LANE: The Morgan Line runs from New York to New Orleans?

Mr. KELLOGG: It is the Southern Pacific Steamship Line running from New Orleans to Galveston——

Mr. LOVETT: No, the Morgan Company is a Louisiana Company which formerly owned the steamship line between New Orleans and New York, and owns a railroad extending from New Orleans to Lafayette, Louisiana, a part of the main Trans-Continental 178 Line. It does not now own any steamships plying between New York and New Orleans. They are owned by the Southern Pacific Company. The Morgan Line owns only railroads and a few small river boats perhaps.

Mr. KELLOGG: I ask that question, Judge Lovett, because in the Annual Reports of the Southern Pacific Company prior to about 1903, the Morgan Line, so called, or what is the technical name of it?

Mr. LOVETT: Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad & Steamship Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes. That company operate and own the steamship line running from New Orleans and Galveston to New York and Havana. After that date these steamships are not mentioned in the reports of the Southern Pacific, that I can find, and since that time the Southern Pacific, you say, itself owns the steamship line.

Mr LOVETT: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Very well. So that the Southern Pacific has since about—you cannot give me the date.

Mr. LOVETT: No. The facts are that as these old ships which the Morgan Company owned at the time the Southern Pacific bought its stock many years ago, passed out of service and were replaced by new ships, the new ships were owned by the Southern Pacific Company and all of the old boats, I believe, are out of service, and it was still known as the Morgan Line of steamers, but they are owned by the Southern Pacific Company.

Com'r LANE: Are those the only boats on the Atlantic that are owned by the Southern Pacific? Are there any boats that run down to Panama?

Mr. LOVETT: No, there are some boats plying between New Orleans and Havana. I don't recollect whether they are owned by the Southern Pacific or the Morgan Company. I rather think probably they were owned by the Morgan Company——

Mr. KELLOGG: I think they are owned by the Morgan Company.

Mr. LOVETT: But I am not sure whether they were taken over or not.

179 Mr. KELLOGG: Then as I understand it, Judge Lovett, if you will make the admission, for many years, at least since 1897, the Southern Pacific has, either through the Morgan Company or directly, owned and operated a line of steamships extending from New Orleans to New York and from New Orleans to Havana in connection with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. LOVETT: I cannot say as to Havana.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then strike out Havana. From New Orleans to New York in connection with the Southern Pacific.

Mr. LOVETT: In connection with the lines of which the stock was owned by the Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, I mean in connection with the Southern Pacific System.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes. While that subject has been mentioned, it has been suggested that probably it would be a good time to correct the impression that Mr. Miller perhaps inadvertently made this morning about the operation of those lines. The Southern Pacific Company does not, as I understood Mr. Millar to state, itself operate any lines in Louisiana or Texas or east of El Paso. The lines west of El Paso are operated by the Southern Pacific under a lease. The Lines in Louisiana and Texas known as Southern Pacific Lines are not operated by that company, but practically all of the stock of the corporations owning the railroads is owned by the Southern Pacific Company, but the business is conducted by those corporations in their own names, the Southern Pacific, of course, owning the stock.

Mr. KELLOGG: I so understand that.

Com'r LANE: In speaking of the steamboat lines, you include a line running down the coast to Panama?

Mr. KELLOGG: No.

Mr. LOVETT: We have not any line——

Com'r LANE: Haven't you any stock in any company running down to Panama?

Mr. KELLOGG: Except the Pacific Mail on the west coast, I understand.

Mr. LOVETT: I do not know enough about the conditions
180 out there to make any admission. The Pacific Mail operates steamers out there, but I am not sufficiently familiar with it to state the facts. That can be obtained. I am not familiar with it enough to make any admission.

Mr. KELLOGG: I do not want to make any statement of that, of course, but I understand the Pacific Mail runs or did run in connection with the Panama Railroad. Perhaps they do not now.

Mr. LOVETT: There was something of that sort.

Mr. Kellogg: Will you please mark this paper.

(Paper marked Exhibit 53.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, Mr. Millar, turn to the record of the Oregon Short Line Executive meetings, page 250.

Mr. MILLAR: Have you the date of that, Mr. Kellogg?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, the date of the resolution is August 11, 1902, approving the preliminary contract between William A. Clark, Trustee and Edward H. Harriman, Trustee of July 9, 1902, in relation to the San Pedro Road.

Mr. MILLAR: I think I misunderstood you. I thought you said Oregon Navigation Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: No, the Oregon Short Line Company.

Mr. MILLAR: I do not find it here.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, perhaps it is the Board of Directors. All I know about it is that (handing paper). Look at page 250.

Mr. MILLAR: Oh, yes, here it is.

Mr. KELLOGG: I ask you to read in evidence—it is very short and we have not had time to have it copied—the resolution approving the contract which I have referred to, the preliminary contract with the San Pedro Line.

Mr. MILLAR: Meeting of the Executive Committee of the Oregon Short Line——

The CHAIRMAN: Give the date in that connection. It is a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Oregon Short Line——

Mr. MILLAR: Railroad Company. August 11, 1902. The following preamble and resolution were adopted. There was submitted a contract between William A. Clark, in trust for himself and 181 his associates, and Edward H. Harriman, as Trustee, as in said instrument recited, dated 9th day of July, 1902, the execution whereof by the terms of said contract was subject to the ratification and approval of the Executive Committee of this company. After consideration and upon motion duly made and seconded, it was resolved, that the execution of the contract now submitted to the Committee, between William A. Clark as trustee for himself, and his associates, and Edward H. Harriman, as Trustee as in said instrument recited, dated July ninth, 1902, be and the same is hereby ratified and approved."

Com'r LANE: That is the contract referred to this morning which runs for ninety-nine years?

Mr. KELLOGG: No, that is the preliminary contract which ultimately resulted in the contracts referred to this morning for ninety-nine years. I will not stop at this moment to call the attention of the Commission to it, but will offer it in evidence as Exhibit 53.

The CHAIRMAN: Are you now offering the contract to which reference is made in the minutes just read?

Mr. KELLOGG: I am.

The CHAIRMAN: That is a different contract and a prior one to those produced this morning.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes. The contracts offered this morning were made in June, 1903. This contract was made pending the construction of the San Pedro Line, as I understand from Judge Cornish, I think, and it has been superseded by the other contracts.

The CHAIRMAN: You have that contract, and you offer it on the record?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, I have offered it.

Papers marked Exhibit No. 53, to Mr. Millar's testimony.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What book is that you have there?

Mr. MILLAR: This is the Executive Committee Volume, Oregon Short Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, turn to pages 396 and 397.

182 Mr. MILLAR: 396?

Mr. SEVERANCE: 396.

Mr. KELLOGG: Pages 396 and 397, have you got it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you please read in evidence the resolution authorizing the subscription to the Southern Pacific stock, at the meeting held August 18, 1904.

Mr. LOVETT: Put that in, subject to correction. (Referring to a paper held in Mr. Kellogg's hand.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I have no objection to offering this, subject to correction.

Mr. MILLAR: Shall I read it?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It will save time to put it in as it is. It is just a resolution——

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer this in evidence. It has not been compared, has not been certified by him and I don't know whether it is correct or not.

(Marked Exhibit 54, to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: Turn to Page 421.

Mr. KELLOGG: 421. Oh, wait a minute. Yes, it is Page 421.

Mr. MILLAR: March 9, 1905.

(Marked Exhibit 55 to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer in evidence this paper, the resolution of Executive Committee of the Short Line purchasing 239,793 shares of the common stock of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company at a price not exceeding $125. per share, and 108,623 shares of the preferred stock of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Railroad Company at a price not exceeding $125. per share: "And the President of this company be and he hereby is authorized and in his discretion to pay for said stock in the four per cent. refunding twenty-five year gold bonds of this company at par and accrued interest, or to execute a note of this company to said Union Pacific Company 183 for the amount necessary to pay for said stock."

Mr. KELLOGG: That stock previous to that time, then, had belonged to the Union Pacific Company, had it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And that purchase was carried out, was it?

Mr. MILLAR: That is my impression. I couldn't say positively about it, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know?

Mr. MILLAR: I have no reason to doubt it.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know the price that was paid for it?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: In the bonds of the Short Line Company?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; I don't.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you turn to the Union Pacific Stockholders and Directors, Vol. 2, Page 163.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have that, have you?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: May I be permitted to ask the questions for a while? It is a little irregular to have two lawyers asking questions! But if you have no objections, I will ask them. We offer in evidence the rules of the pension system of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, which may be marked as an exhibit.

(Papers marked Exhibit 56 to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Com'r LANE: Why do you offer those?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will state really what it is. This is a pension system which is applicable to the employés of the Union System, and Rule 6 of the Rules as they were originally formulated and which has been furnished to us, provided that the term of "service" or "in the service" will refer to employment upon or in connection with any of the railroads forming the Union Railroad System at present, comprising the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and the service of any employé with this company will be considered as continuous 184 from the date upon which he has been continuously employed upon such railroads, whether prior to or subsequent to their acquisition by the Union Pacific Railroad or the Oregon Short Line or the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now when was that dated?

Mr. MILLAR: April 10, 1906.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On the 10th of April, 1906, there was an amendment made by which service on the Southern Pacific was treated the same as though upon the others. We offer that as showing in every way they treat this as part of a single system of roads. That resolution may be copied and put in. We will offer in evidence the resolution amending the Rule 6 of the Pension Rules, which was passed at the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, held on the 10th of April, 1906, which put Southern Pacific employés in the same category as those of the roads actually owned by the Union Pacific or the original system.

(Papers marked Exhibit 57 to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you please turn to pages 169 and 170 of the directors' meetings of the Union Pacific Road, July 19, 1906, to the statement and resolution in reference to the purchase of the Illinois Central stock and the report of the Special Committee, on Page 171 in reference to the purchase of the same, and read the two in evidence, as we have not got a copy.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Read the statement of Mr. Harriman.

Mr. MILLAR: I think I furnished that, Mr. Kellogg.

Mr. KELLOGG: I couldn't find it this morning.

Mr. MILLAR: It is marked No. 21 of my papers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Marked what?

Mr. MILLAR: 21. No; that is not right. This mark does not agree; it is a different matter.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It has not been furnished.

185 Mr. KELLOGG: I will say there has not been time to prepare everything. The time was short and it was impossible to get everything by now.

Mr. MILLER (Reading): A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, held July 19, 1906. "Director Harriman called Vice-President Cornish to the Chair and then stated to the meeting in substance that he believed it to be to the interest of the Union Pacific Railroad Company to purchase stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company. That while the Union Pacific Line served a large grain producing territory, it had no line from that territory to the Gulf or to Chicago and into the southeast; that the export of corn by the Gulf ports is likely to increase steadily, that the value and importance of the system of railroads extending from the Missouri River out and above Omaha and as far north as Minnesota and Wisconsin, and from Chicago and St. Louis on a low grade to New Orleans, as does the Illinois Central, will be enhanced by the construction of the Panama Canal, and the importance and value of such connections to the Union Pacific will be very great; that, while the Illinois Central was generally recognized as an important and valuable system of railroads, yet he believes its strategic value and importance was but little understood and appreciated even by some of those most active in its management; and that, while its stock appeared to be a good investment at prevailing prices, he believes it could be made, and in time, was bound to become, very much more valuable. For these and many other, legitimate reasons which might be stated, he believed the Union Pacific ought to purchase stock of the Illinois Central R. R. Co. now to be had at a fair price. He said, however, that he was interested in the ownership of the stock of the Illinois Central, which he thought the Union Pacific should buy, and because of such interest, could not act for the Union Pacific. He said he sought to procure the attendance at this meeting of the largest number of directors possible, so that the 186 question might receive of the Board the consideration its importance deserves; and that such action should be taken as the Board might think the interests of the Union Pacific R. R. Co. require.

"After extended discussion of the subject, and upon motion duly made and seconded, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that directors Frick, Willcox and Valentine be and they are hereby appointed a special committee to inquire into and consider the expediency of purchasing stock of the Illinois Central R. R. Co., with power to contract for the purchase, or for the option to purchase such stock, if they deem such purchase advisable, and report their actions or conclusions to the Board.

"Directors Harriman, Rogers and Stillman announce that they were interested in the subject matter and upon request were excused from voting.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific Rail-Road Co., held July 31st, 1906, the following action was passed:

"The Special Committee appointed July 19, 1906, to inquire into and consider the expediency of purchasing stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Co. submitted the following report:

"New York, July 25, 1906. To the Board of Directors, Union Pacific Railroad Co. Pursuant to the resolution adopted at your meeting on the 19th inst., as follows:

"Resolved, that the directors Frick, Willcox and Valentine be and they are hereby appointed the Special Committee to inquire into and consider the expediency of purchasing stock of the Illinois Central R. R. Co. with power to contract for the purchase, or for the option to purchase such stock, if they deem such purchase advisable, and report their action or conclusions to the Board.

"The undersigned, Special Committee thereby appointed, beg leave to report as follows:

"We have inquired into and considered the expediency of the purchase by this company of capital stock of the Illinois Central 187 R. R. Co. and are of the opinion that closer relations by this company and the Illinois Central Railroad Co. will be to the interest of both, and that the purchase by this company of the capital stock of the Illinois Central R. R. Co. hereinafter mentioned, at the price hereinafter stated, will be greatly to the interest of this company,—assuming such purchase to be within the corporate powers of this company and otherwise lawful.

"Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. hold or control one hundred and five — shares and Mr. E. H. Harriman, Mr. H. H. Rogers and Mr. James Stillman, members of this Board, each hold 30,000 shares of the capital stock of the said Illinois Central R. R. Co., and, after negotiation with these gentlemen, they have offered to sell to this company, the said stock so held by them, aggregating 195,000 shares out of a total 950,400 shares, issued and outstanding, at $175. per share, as of Aug. 1st, 1906, namely, Ex. dividend.

"The Committee regard this price as fair and reasonable. The Committee is satisfied that the stock is so closely held that no considerable amounts could be purchased upon the market without materially advancing the present market price. We believe the stock is -trinsically worth more than the price at which it is offered. The Illinois Central R. R. Co. during the fifty four and one-half years of its existence has paid 101 dividends, and is now paying dividends at the rate of 7% per annum and is earning considerably more. A copy of the last published Annual Report of the Company (being for the fiscal year ending July 30, 1905), is submitted herewith, and its earnings have largely increased and its financial condition has substantially improved during the fiscal year just closed.

"Entertaining these views, your Committee recommends the acceptance of the offer above mentioned, provided the purchase be within the corporate powers of this company and is otherwise lawful, and to afford counsel an opportunity to examine into and advise respecting the legality of the purchase, and for you to deter-
188 mine what shall be done in the light of such advice, and of this report, your Committee have made an agreement with Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Messrs. E. H. Harriman, H. H.

Rogers, and James Stillman, whereby your company is given an option of fifteen days to purchase the above mentioned stock of the Illinois Central R. R. Co. held by the said Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Messrs. E. H. Harriman, H. H. Rogers, James Stillman at the price named, with interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum from August 1, 1906, to date of payment.

"Your committee has been informed by Mr. Harriman that he owns a majority of the stock of the Railroad Securities Company which owns (as its only asset, other than cash) 95,000 shares of Illinois Central R. R. Co. stock, subject to the pledge of 80,000 shares to secure $8,000,000,000 par value of four per cent. certificates redeemable at 105 and interest. Mr. Harriman has further stated to the Committee that in case the company purchases the Illinois Central R. R. Co.'s stock, offered by Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Mr. Harriman and the other gentleman above named, he thought that the company should have an opportunity to purchase his stock in the Railroad Securities Company at a price based upon the price at which Illinois Central R. R. Co. stock has been offered to the company by Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Mr. Harriman and the other gentleman above named, and we have taken from him an option to that effect for fifteen days.

"All of which is respectfully submitted. H. S. Frick, David Willcox, P. A. Valentine.

"There was also submitted to the Board with said Committee's Report, the opinion of counsel, which is on file with the secretary, to the effect that, in the opinion of counsel, the purchase of said stock of the Illinois Central R. R. Co. is within the corporate powers of this company and is otherwise lawful.

"Thereupon and upon consideration of said report and opinion, it was on motion, duly made and seconded, resolved, that the report of the Special Committee composed of Directors Frick, Willcox and Valentine, as above set forth, be and such report is hereby adopted, and the action and recommendation of the said Committee was ratified and approved; and the proper officers of this company are hereby authorized and empowered to take over the said stock, and pay for the same, and to take all such action as may be necessary or proper in the premises.

"Directors Harriman, Rogers and Stillman, being interested in the subject matter, were excused and did not vote upon the said resolution."

Com'r LANE: Who were present at that meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: Directors Ames, Earlng, Frick, Goelet, Harriman, Hughitt, Lovett, Peabody, Rockefeller, Rogers, Stillman and Willcox.

Com'r LANE: How many directors had the company at that time?

Mr. MILLAR: Fifteen.

Com'r LANE: How many were present?

Mr. MILLAR: Twelve.

Com'r LANE: How many were excused—four?

Mr. MILLAR: Three.

Com'r KNAPP: Have you any knowledge of the circumstances under which Kuhn, Loeb & Co. at that time had such a large amount of Illinois Central stock?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir, I have no knowledge as to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Turn to page 229, Vol. 3, of the Executive Committee meetings of the Union Pacific. Is there a resolution there relative to the purchase of the Railroad Securities stock.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Here is a copy of it. It isn't much. It is a copy we made; whether it is correct or not, I don't know; I guess it is.

Mr. KELLOGG: You may read that resolution.

Mr. MILLAR (reading): "At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific R. R. Co. held Oct. 25, 1906, the following action was taken:

"The Chairman reported that he had an opportunity on the 13th instant, to purchase all the shares of the Railroad Securities 190 Company, consisting of 6,625 shares of the preferred stock, and 11,925 shares of the common stock of the Railroad Securities Company, owned by Stuyvesant Fish, at par for the preferred, and $201.78 for the common; one-half of the price to be paid in stocks of the Illinois Central R. R. Co. at $175 per share; and that, as he believed it was for the interest of this company to purchase such stock, upon said terms, and as it was necessary to conclude the agreement at once if at all, he had effected the purchase upon the terms stated, and, for the stock so purchased, he had surrendered 8,769 shares of Illinois Central R. R. Co. owned by this company, which, at $175 per share, amounted to $1,536,449.81, and had paid the balance of the purchase price, amounting to $1,537,020.49 in cash, and had received from Mr. Fish and turned over to the Treasurer of this company certificates of the stock of the Railroad Securities Company, so purchased, and that, as a result, this company now owned 18,984 shares of the preferred and 34,154 shares of the common stock outstanding.

"Upon motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously resolved that the action of the president of this company in purchasing 6,625 shares of the preferred and 11,925 shares of the common stock of the Railroad Securities Company as above stated, be, and his actions in the premises, is hereby ratified and approved."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Look at a meeting on the date of October 4, 1906, Page 224, same book. Do you find a resolution there relative to the purchase of Baltimore & Ohio stock?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you read that please, for the record?

Mr. MILLAR (reading):

"At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific R. R. Co. held October 4, 1906, appears the following:

"The agreement made by the president of the Oregon Short Line R. R. Co., Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for the purchase of 191 323,342 shares of the common stock, and 72,064 shares of the preferred stock, of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. and the resolution adopted by the Executive Committee of said Oregon

Short Line R. R. Co. approving such agreement, were submitted to this meeting. And thereupon, upon consideration of the same, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, namely:

Resolved that the Union Pacific R. R. Co. as owner of the capital stock of the Oregon Short Line R. R. Co. hereby approves the agreement made by the President of said Oregon Short Line R. R. Co. with Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and submitted to this meeting for the purchase of 323,342 shares of the common stock and 72,064 shares of the preferred stock of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you in your possession, as Secretary of the company, that agreement? I mean, as secretary of the Oregon Short Line, or as secretary of the Union Pacific or of any other company.

Mr. MILLAR: I think so, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you kindly have that here tomorrow morning—make a memorandum of that.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, a copy for filing.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, a copy. Will you turn to page 206 of that book, meeting of July 26, 1906.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you see a resolution there, empowering Mr. Harriman to borrow money at his discretion for the use of the company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you read that into the record?

Mr. MILLAR (reading): "Meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific R. R. Co., July 26, 1906. On motion duly made and seconded it was unanimously resolved that the resolution adopted by this Committee on the 31st day of December, 1902, authorizing E. H. Harriman, Chairman of this Committee, to borrow such sums of money as may be required for the uses of this company, be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Resolved, that E. H. Harriman, Chairman of the Execu-192 tive Committee, be and is hereby authorized to borrow such sums of money as may be required for the uses of this company; to execute in the name and on behalf of this company a note or notes for the amounts so borrowed; and the securities of this company as collateral to such notes. In the absence of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, authority is hereby given to the Treasurer of the Company and to W. D. Cornish, one of the Vice Presidents of the Company or to the Treasurer and Comptroller of the company, to sign jointly, on behalf of his company, notes for the amounts so borrowed, and to pledge such securities as collateral thereto."

Com'r KNAPP: Do we understand that that gave Mr. Harriman unlimited authority to borrow any sum of money he chose and pledge all the assets of the companies as security for the payment.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what it says.

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir. The object of this resolution was to comply with the rules of certain banking institutions in the city which required not only the making and execution of a note but the pledging of collateral with the note; that was the simple object of passing this resolution.

Com'r LANE: Does your record show just what use Mr. Harriman made of the opportunity that was given him there?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir, no. This simply gave him the power when a note was called for, that he could pledge the securities as well as execute the note. This did not refer to any special borrowing of money.

Com'r LANE: At what time was that passed?

Mr. MILLAR: This was July 26, 1906.

Com'r LANE: What money was borrowed under that resolution?

Mr. MILLAR: I have no knowledge as to that whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I might say that this was an amendatory resolution. A resolution was passed on Dec. 31st, 1902, giving this power to Mr. Harriman and then on the 26th of July it was 193 amended by re-enacting that part of the resolution and inserting also the provision that Mr. Cornish, one of the Vice-Presidents, or the Treasurer might sign notes and pledge securities in the absence of Mr. Harriman.

Com'r LANE: As I understood Mr. Mahl, he said no money had been borrowed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, he so stated.

Mr. MILLAR: If I may explain, I know personally that this vote was not taken for the purpose of borrowing money, but for the purpose of enabling the Chairman to pledge securities at the same time he executed notes.

Com'r LANE: What would he execute notes for if not to borrow money?

Mr. LOVETT: I cannot answer as to whether he was borrowing money or not. That does not come in my department. I rather think the gentlemen misunderstood. I did not understand him to say the Oregon Short Line had borrowed any money.

Com'r LANE: I understood that neither the Short Line nor the Southern Pacific had borrowed any money for the purchase of these stocks since June 30th.

Mr. LOVETT: Oh, well, that may be. He might borrow money for other purposes.

Com'r LANE: Does that go into that common fund in which one hundred million dollars was lost?

Mr. LOVETT: I haven't heard of the loss.

Com'r LANE: It was not discovered. We could not find out just what became of that one hundred million dollars because its identity was more or less lost.

Mr. LOVETT: I didn't know it was lost. I thought we had agreed to furnish the Commission this information from the books as to what was received for those bonds. I undertook to state that the proceeds of the bonds had gone into the treasury of the company.

Com'r LANE: We understood that was so, but you could not say just what happened with that one hundred million dollars, with that particular money; that is to say that became a part of your assets and part of your money, and then you could show us just 194 what all of your money has brought and what has been done with it.

Mr. LOVETT: I don't know, but the books may show as to the particular purpose of that bond issue, but whatever they say here, I offered this forenoon to get up, and furnish to the Commission.

Com'r LANE: Was your suggestion to me that perhaps my question was too narrow to Mr. Mahl, and that the Oregon Short Line may have borrowed some money?

Mr. LOVETT: My suggestion is that I did not understand Mr. Mahl testified the Oregon Short Line had not borrowed any money. He may have testified it did not borrow money for some particular purpose, as a corporation, but I did not understand him to state generally that it had not borrowed any money.

Com'r LANE: In other words, they might use the money that the Oregon Short Line had for the purchase of stocks and borrow money to replace that money which had been used in the purchase of stocks.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes. If the Commission please, as I understand, this resolution is merely a formal matter passed away back in 1902, and that the matter that has been read here is an amendment of that resolution, some formal matter, required in banking, and I understood that to be the object of that resolution, as explained by the Secretary—the amendment of that resolution passed in 1902.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Suppose Mr. Millar turns to the original resolution. Let us put that in, adopted the 31st of December, 1902, by the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific. The 31st of December, 1902, Page 324, do you find that resolution authorizing Mr. Harriman to borrow money?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. At the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific, held on Dec. 31, 1902, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that E. H. Harriman, Chairman of the Executive Committee, be and he is hereby authorized to borrow such sums of money as may be required for the uses of this company, and to ex-
195 ecute it in the name and on behalf of this company, a note or notes for the amounts so borrowed. In the absence of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, authority is hereby given to the Treasurer of the Company and to the Vice-President of the Company to sign jointly on behalf of this Company notes for the amount so borrowed."

Com'r KNAPP: It was simply amended last year so as to allow them to pledge security?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir; as required by one or two banks.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, as a matter of fact, pursuant to that authority, Mr. Harriman had borrowed money for the use of the company and given the company's notes a great many times, hadn't he, from 1902 down to 1906?

Mr. MILLAR: I am not very familiar with the financial transactions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know about that?

Mr. MILLAR: No, I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, will you please turn to Page 170 of Vol. 2 of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific, under date of May 8th, 1901.

Mr. MILLAR: May 8, 1901.

Mr. SEVERANCE: A resolution as to purchasing securities from Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you find a resolution adopted on that day by the Executive Committee with reference to the purchase of certain securities from Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you read that, please?

Mr. MILLAR: Meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific R. R. Co., May 8, 1901;

"The Chairman reported that, pursuant to authority he had purchased for the company from Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. certain securities, specified in detail in the statement submitted to the Executive Committee, upon the terms set forth in the correspondence 196 evidencing the transaction, and submitted to the Executive Committee, which correspondence is on file with the Secretary. And, on motion duly made and seconded, it was resolved that the action of the Chairman in making the purchases from Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of the securities mentioned and such detailed statement and correspondence be in all things ratified and approved.

"Mr. Kahn did not vote upon the foregoing resolution, because personally interested as a member of the firm of Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you still in your possession that statement which specifies those securities in detail, and also the correspondence?

Mr. MILLAR: I think so. Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Kindly produce them to-morrow.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you turn to the meeting of June 6, 1901; page 182 of that same volume?

Mr. MILLAR: Just a moment, please. Page 182?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Page 182. I think you will find there something under the head of Traffic headquarters at Chicago.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you read that entry?

Mr. MILLAR (reading): At a meeting of the Union Pacific Railroad Company dated June 6, 1901, the following action was had: The Chairman reported to the committee that he had made arrangements for the establishment of the traffic headquarters of the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific and Oregon Short Line, and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company in the City of Chicago, fully explaining the advantages of such an arrangement. Whereupon, upon motion, duly seconded, the action taken by the Chairman in the premises was ratified and approved."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you present at that meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. I was the Secretary.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say in your minutes that Mr. Harriman fully explained the advantages of such an arrangement. Do 197 you happen to recall what the explanation was he made of the advantages of a common traffic office for these four companies?

Mr. MILLAR: No, I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't remember that?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you turn to pages 306 and 307 of that same volume? Do you find there a resolution concerning the agreement with the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you kindly read that?

Mr. MILLAR (reading): "Meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Company, October 23, 1902. The Chairman submitted a memorandum of agreement between the Union Pacific Railroad Company the Southern Pacific Company, the Oregon Short Line Company and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company of the first part, and the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad Company of the second part, dated October 22, 1902, covering the formation of through lines of transportation between the companies named by way of Omaha, Nebraska. Whereupon, upon motion duly seconded, the agreement was approved, and the action of the Chairman in executing the same was ratified and confirmed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you a copy of that agreement in your office?

Mr. MILLAR: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Kindly produce it; give us a copy of it.

Mr. MILLER: I don't keep all the agreements, but I probably have that one.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just let us have a copy of it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you turn to page——

Mr. LOVETT (interrupting): We will get you a copy if he hasn't it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right. Will you please turn to page 355; Meeting of March 19, 1903. You will find a reference there to certain loans, amounts borrowed and loaned?

198 Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you kindly read that entry?

Mr. MILLAR (reading): "A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, March 19, 1903. The following action was had. The Chairman submitted a memorandum showing the amounts borrowed by the company, and also the amounts loaned by the company to the Southern Pacific Company, the Chicago & Alton Railway Company, the Kansas City & Southern Railway Company, and the Union Depot & Railway Company of Denver. Whereupon, upon motion duly seconded, the amounts borrowed and also the loans made by the company were approved, and the action of the Chairman in arranging for the same was ratified and affirmed."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you in your office that memorandum that was submitted by Mr. Harriman at that meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: I couldn't say positively.

Com'r LANE: Have you any record in the minutes of the amounts of these loans?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It says that he submitted a memorandum showing the amounts that had been borrowed and also the amounts loaned to the Southern Pacific Company and the Alton Company, the Kansas City Southern and the Union Depot and Railway Company at Denver, and his connection in making those loans and in borrowing those sums of money which was approved. It is only a report of a memorandum that was incorporated in the minutes.

Com'r LANE: Was that reported to the Board of Directors?

Mr. SEVERANCE: This is the Executive Committee.

Com'r LANE: Was that reported to the Board of Directors in detail?

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, I think not. Under the by-laws they have all the powers.

Mr. MILBURN: An account of the proceedings was reported to the Directors at their meeting.

199 Com'r LANE: Was the amount given in the report that was made to the directors' meeting of the loan?

Mr. MILLAR: That I wouldn't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The only minute that that they have at the Directors' Meeting is about this, that the minutes of such and such meetings of the Executive Committee were presented and upon motion approved; so that I assume that nothing is here presented to the Board of Directors that was not presented to the executive Committee; and as far as all these details of the management is concerned, the Executive Committee attends to them without any extra report. That is correct, Mr. Lovett, isn't it?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Turn to page 20, of Volume 3, of the Executive Committee.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you find any statement there with reference to the appointment of Mr. Lovett as counsel?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, will you please read that, omitting the amount of the compensation, which is immaterial to this question.

Mr. MILBURN: I might be interested in that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We will let you find that out for yourself.

Mr. MILLAR: At a meeting——

Mr. SEVERANCE: You understand you need not read the amount of the compensation.

Mr. MILLAR: At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Ry. Co., held February 18, 1904, the chairman reported that he had appointed Hon. R. S. Lovett counsel of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific companies, and the allied lines, with headquarters at 120 Broadway, New York City.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, right after that, "whereupon on motion"—don't you find that?

Mr. MILLAR: Whereupon on motion, duly seconded, it was resolved that the action of the chairman in appointing the Hon. R.

S. Lovett, as stated above, be and the same is hereby ratified and approved.

200 Mr. SEVERANCE: Turn to page 39 of that same volume, June 9, 1904. Do you find a memorandum with reference to a lease of offices for the Director of Maintenance and Operation?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you read that entry?

Mr. MILLAR: Meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Ry. Co., held June 9th, 1904. The Chairman submitted a lease for floor space in the Merchants Loan and Trust Bildg., Chicago, for the offices of Mr. Kruttschnitt, Director of Maintenance and Operation, for use jointly by the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Oregon Short Line, and Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, for a term of three years, at an annual rental of $11,400, payable monthly in advance. Whereupon on motion, duly seconded, it was resolved that the above lease, now submitted, be and same is hereby approved and confirmed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, turn to page 59 of that same book, meeting of September 29, 1904.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you find an entry with reference to the purchase of Chicago & Alton Ry. stock?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Read that please?

Mr. MILLAR: At a meeting of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Co. held September 29, 1904, the president announced to the meeting that he had purchased from Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co., on behalf of the Union Pacific Railroad Co., subject to the approval of its Board of Directors, 102,000 shares of the preferred capital stock of the Chicago & Alton Ry. Co., at $84.00 per share, plus a commission of 2½% upon the par value of said stock; the stock to be delivered and paid for on October 3, next. Whereupon, on motion, it was unanimously resolved that the action of Mr. E. H. Harriman President of this company, in purchasing from Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. on behalf of this company, 102,000 shares of the preferred capital stock of the Chicago & Alton 201 Railway Company at $84.00 per share, plus a commission of 2½% on the par value of said stock, the stock to be delivered and paid for on October 3, next, be and such action is hereby ratified, and such purchase confirmed.

Mr. Kahn was, of his own request, excused from voting on the foregoing resolution."

Com'r LANE: Do you know why Mr. Kahn was excused?

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is a member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Mr. MILLAR: The record does not state. I have no special recollection of it.

Com'r HARLAN: The stock was bought from his bank, wasn't it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Com'r LANE: What time was it that the agreement was entered into between the Rock Island and the Union Pacific regarding the Chicago & Alton?

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was 1904?

Com'r LANE: This was September, 1904?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, this must have been about the same time.

Mr. MILBURN: What was the last which was read?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It was in regard to the purchase of the Alton stock. I think that agreement was made right after that.

Mr. MILLAR: Which agreement do you refer to?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you turn to the meeting of April 7, 1905, Page 82, of Vol. 3, and read a letter from Mr. Harriman submitted before that meeting, the letter addressed to Mr. Gould?

Mr. MILLAR: At the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Co. held April 7th, 1905.

"The Chairman submitted for the information of the Committee a copy of his letter to Mr. George J. Gould, dated April 26, 1905, as follows:

202 "George J. Gould, Esq., 195 Broadway, New York City.

DEAR MR. GOULD: I am in receipt of yours of the 25th instant, as follows: 'You doubtless know that I have determined to support the Western Pacific construction. This I regard as necessary for the protection of the system in which my interests are greatest. If you think this involves reasons why we should reciprocally withdraw from the Boards of which we are the respective heads, I would be glad to meet your view. I prefer that you should reach your own conclusion as to whether, remaining as we are, or withdrawing as above suggested, would be better for the interests we represent.'

It seems to me that you settled the question of your own withdrawal from the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific Boards on March 8, last, when, after the Western Union Board meeting, you, Mr. Schiff, and myself had a talk regarding your connection with the Western Pacific. You then stated that you had no interest whatever in the construction of the line and were not committed in any way thereto, but that you did not mean to convey the impression that you might not in the future, but, if you did, you said you did not think it would be right for you to be in the counsels of our allied line, and also you would give us due notice of intention on your part, to promote the construction of the Western Pacific. On March 9, the Union Pacific Executive Committee was elected, and you included therein. I am not conscious of any act on my part which might be considered as detrimental to any of the properties of which I am or have been a director. I have not taken part in any proceeding of the Denver & Rio Grande for a long time, and had presumed that I had not been re-elected to that Board. I also declined to qualify as director after my election to the Rio Grande Western, as I did not want to be in any way responsible for 203 the attitude to be assumed by that company toward the Western Pacific. The era of prosperity through which we are now passing has been marked by less construction or destructive, competitive and non-producing lines of transportation than any former one; but there has been great expenditure in providing for improvements and additional facilities to the already existing lines; thereby better conserving the interests of the public and the shareholders as well. For myself, I shall regard the loss of your advices, which I have valued in our affairs, as well as the personal pleasure of having you included in them. If there has been any misunderstanding of my directorship in the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western, will you please advise the Boards of those companies of my withdrawal from or declination to qualify as one of their body.

Believe me,

Yours truly,

(Sgd.) E. H. HARRIMAN."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Turn to page 104 of that volume, meeting of July 20, 1905, do you find a reference there to a letter from Mr. Stubbs about advertising?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you read that entry?

Mr. MILLAR: At a meeting of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Railroad Co. held July 20, 1905, the following action was taken.

The Chairman submitted a letter from Mr. J. C. Stubbs, traffic director, dated July 6th, 1905, enclosing a memorandum showing estimated advertising expenses for system lines for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1905, of which this company's proportion is $209,227.49, and stated that he had authorized the same. Whereupon on motion duly seconded, the expenditure was approved, and the action of the Chairman in authorizing the same was ratified and confirmed."

Mr. SEVERANCE: I show you a paper which may be marked 204 Exhibit 57, and I will ask you if that is a copy of the letter from Mr. Stubbs, mentioned in that resolution.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will offer this letter in evidence merely calling attention to the fact that it is a letter dated July 6th, 1905, written by Mr. Stubbs to Mr. E. H. Harriman, President of the Union Pacific, in which he says that attached to the letter is a table showing the amounts required for advertising purposes for the related lines for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906.

Then in a footnote he says, "U. P. requisition also includes $12,500, necessary to advertise opening of the San Pedro line—with expectation that the San Pedro Co. will appropriate a like sum."

In the table which is annexed he gives a statement of the amount expended for advertising for each year, 1905, 1906,—that is the amount expended in 1905, and the amount proposed to be expended for 1906. First, the Union Pacific Railroad Company, next the Oregon Short Line, the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, then the Pacific system, Southern Pacific Company, and the Atlantic system of the Southern Pacific Co. separately.

(The paper was marked in evidence Exhibit No. 57 to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

Mr. KELLOGG: Judge Lovett, this morning we introduced the trust agreement between Mr. Harriman, Trustee, and Mr. Clark, trustee, for the deposit of all of the San Pedro Company stock with the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, and the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company were to furnish us the request signed jointly by Mr. Clark and Mr. Harriman, requesting the trust company to vote the stock for the election of the Board of Directors each year at the annual meeting. Copies of those letters with a letter from the attorney of the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company have been 205 furnished us and Judge Lovett consents that the letter and copies may be offered in evidence with the same force and effect as the originals.

(Papers marked Exhibits Nos. 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64 and 65, to Mr. Millar's testimony.)

The CHAIRMAN: Are there any further questions to be asked of Mr. Millar?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Millar, have you got in your office the printed plan of re-organization of the Union Pacific Railway?

Mr. MILLAR: Those have always been very scarce in our office.

Mr. KELLOGG: The old Union Pacific Railway: have you got it, Judge Lovett?

Mr. LOVETT: Railroad, isn't it?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. MILLAR: Those have been very scarce in our office, because they were issued before the company was formed, but I could probably get a copy. Do you wish me to?

Mr. KELLOGG: I have a copy; it is printed in a record of another case, in a big volume, with hundreds of other documents. If you have a separate copy I should like to see it.

Mr. MILLAR: As a fact, I believe I have no separate copies in my office. I have one bound up, as you probably have.

Mr. KELLOGG: I know they are very scarce. If you have not one to spare me I will introduce the one I have. I have it somewhere and will produce it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, with regard to the Southern Pacific, will you look at the records of the directors of the Southern Pacific, volume 5, page—I have not got the page, but it is the meeting of June 9, 1904.

Mr. MILLAR: What is the subject?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is the appointment of Mr. Stubbs and Mr. Kruttschnitt.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes sir.

206 Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you read that entry or resolution?

Mr. MILLAR: This was a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Company held June 8, 1904. The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, that J. C. Stubbs be and he is hereby appointed a vice president of this company with headquarters at Chicago, Illinois; that J. Kruttschnitt be and he is hereby appointed a vice president of this company, with headquarters at Chicago, Illinois; and that C. H. Markham be and he is hereby appointed a vice president of this company with headquarters in San Francisco, Cal. Each of said vice presidents shall have such powers and perform such duties as shall from time to time be conferred and prescribed by the Board of Directors, or executive committee, or the chairman of the executive committee."

Do you want the other officers?

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, that is all. It is now five o'clock.

The CHAIRMAN: You will not be able to conclude Mr. Millar's examination tonight?

Mr. SEVERANCE: He can bring some papers in tomorrow.

Mr. KELLOGG: I think Mr. Millar had better come back as the other side may want to ask some questions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And we may find something we have overlooked.

The CHAIRMAN: The Commission will now stand adjourned until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

Adjourned to January 5th, 1907, at 10:00 A. M.

207 NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.,
Jan. 5, 1907—10 o'clock a. m.

The Commission met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Commissioners Knapp (chairman), Lane and Harlan.

The CHAIRMAN: You may proceed, gentlemen.

E. T. JEFFERY, called as a witness, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Jeffery, where do you live?

Mr. JEFFERY: In New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business, Mr. Jeffery?

Mr. JEFFERY: Railroad business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With what corporation are you connected?

Mr. JEFFERY: I am President of the Denver & Rio Grande Railway Company, the Rio Grande Western Railroad Company, the Rio Grande Southern and other affiliated lines of the Rio Grande, and of the Western Pacific Railway Company, and chairman of the Board of Directors of the Wabash Railway Company, and a director in two or three other railroad companies.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in the railroad business?

Mr. JEFFERY: Fifty years last September.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And with what different roads have you been connected, in a general way? I do not want to go into great detail.

Mr. JEFFERY: In active management with the Illinois Central and Denver & Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was your position on the Illinois Central?

Mr. JEFFERY: I held various positions, from apprentice boy in the machine shop to that of general manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And when you quit the service of the Illinois Central you were general manager of the system?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

208 Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you go from that road to the Denver & Rio Grande?

Mr. JEFFERY: No, I refrained from railroading for two years, during which time I devoted myself to the work of securing the World's Fair for Chicago in 1893 and the planning of that enterprise.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, that is outside. Now, you are familiar in a general way with the railroad situation in the West are you not, Mr. Jeffery?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, in a general way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And have been for a good many years?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, the Southern Pacific road runs from—that is, the road controlled by the Southern Pacific Company runs from New Orleans in the East to Portland in the Northwest?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Union Pacific and its allied lines from Omaha to Portland?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Union Pacific to Ogden or Granger and then over the Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company to Portland?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Illinois Central line, of which you were formerly general manager, has a line from Chicago to Omaha, has it not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also a line from Chicago to New Orleans?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that the Illinois Central forms a connecting link between the Southern Pacific at New Orleans and the Union Pacific at Omaha?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, where does the Denver & Rio Grande road and the Rio Grande Western run?

Mr. JEFFERY: From Denver via Colorado Springs and Pueblo to Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah.

209 Mr. SEVERANCE: With what lines of road does the Denver & Rio Grande connect at Denver?

Mr. JEFFERY: Its friendly connections that it interchanges business with on equal terms are the Burlington and the Rock Island. I might add at Colorado Springs the Rock Island and also at Pueblo the Rock Island and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and the Missouri Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at Salt Lake City and Ogden with what roads does the Denver & Rio Grande connect.

Mr. JEFFERY: The Oregon Short Line and the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the San Pedro?

Mr. JEFFERY: The San Pedro.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were connected with the Rio Grande system during the receivership of the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line, were you not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the situation at Ogden so far as your line was concerned at that time with reference to the interchange of traffic between your line and the Central Pacific, that is, the Southern Pacific from Ogden to San Francisco and the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. JEFFERY: We had a free interchange—free and unrestricted interchange on equal terms with the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Equal terms with the Union Pacific. What situation grew up after the acquisition of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: There was a gradual shrinkage in our business to and from Oregon Short Line and Oregon Navigation, and to and from the Southern Pacific, due doubtless to the control the Union Pacific had of those properties.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you stated that you are the president of the Western Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That company has a line of road under construction, has it not?

210 Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From what point to what point?

Mr. JEFFERY: From Salt Lake City to San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Some letters passing between Mr. Harriman and Mr. Gould were introduced in evidence yesterday, they being part of the records of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific. Is Mr. Gould interested in the Western Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of which you are president?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He referred to that in his correspondence which was read in evidence here, and he stated that he deemed it necessary to further the construction of the Western Pacific because of the roads with which he was chiefly interested. Is he interested in the Rio Grande?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; he is interested in the Rio Grande system and the Rio Grande Western through interest in the Denver & Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, now, what interests of the Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western was it necessary to protect by building the Western Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: The proportion of the trans-continental business that the two Rio Grande roads enjoyed, both passenger and freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Both passenger and freight, and which, as you stated, you are gradually losing since the acquisition of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir. I might add there that the Denver & Rio Grande Board in its report to its stockholders on June 30, 1905, gave its reasons, and with your permission I will submit that. (Producing annual report.) It is marked with lead pencil.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have marked the part that is material here to this matter?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir. (Handing annual report to Mr. Severance.)

211 Mr. SEVERANCE (referring to the report): This is a report made to the stockholders of the Rio Grande by yourself?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir, with the approval of the Denver & Rio Grande Board of Directors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With the approval of the Denver & Rio Grande Board of Directors. Wait until Mr. Lane comes back, and I will ask you to read that into the record.

(After a pause).

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Chairman, shall I wait for Commissioner Lane to come in?

The CHAIRMAN: You may proceed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Jeffery, will you read from the report you made to the stockholders what you had to say?

Mr. JEFFERY (Referring to annual report): I submit that this is the official published report of the company, in reply to the questions you asked.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir.

Mr. JEFFERY: The report is for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1905:

(Reading from report)

"For many years, while the line of railway between Ogden and San Francisco was uncontrolled by interests competitive with your system, your company enjoyed a satisfactory share of the traffic to and from California, and one of the reasons moving the management——

Mr. SEVERANCE (interrupting): Will you speak a little louder. I am sorry to interrupt you.

Mr. JEFFERY: I will commence again:

(Reading)

"For many years, while the line of railway between Ogden and San Francisco was uncontrolled by interests competitive with your System, your company enjoyed a satisfactory share of the traffic to and from California, and one of the reasons moving the management, between four and five years ago, to acquire the Rio Grande Western, was the closer relationship that would be established
212 with the San Francisco line of the Southern Pacific Company and the freer interchange that it seemed probable would result therefrom. Subsequent events were in a measure disappointing. The control of Southern Pacific by Union Pacific interests has led to unexpected restrictions on interchange, and, more especially, unlooked for impediments in the way of securing traffic in territory reached by the Southern Pacific line.

These considerations, in connection with the rapid development of the commercial, agricultural and industrial interests on the Pacific coast, and the increase of commerce with the Philippines, China, and Japan, led the management, reluctantly, to investigate the feasibility of an independent line, in your interest, from either Salt Lake City or Ogden, to San Francisco, with such branches and laterals as might from time to time be desirable for the development of natural resources within reasonable distance of the main stem."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Jeffery, have not the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific lines been at all times prior to the acquisition of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific competing lines for a coast business coming from the Mississippi Valley?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, within certain territorial limits.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What were the territorial limits?

Mr. JEFFERY: The Union Pacific with its eastern connections would compete with lines in Chicago and vicinity for business to and from Pacific coast, and the Illinois Central would compete, and other lines reaching the South would compete in that territory for business to and from the Pacific coast via New Orleans.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, as a matter of fact, the business principally originating—both passenger and freight—originating on the Illinois Central was competitive business, was it not, between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: No, I would not say all business, Mr. Severance. I would say that the great bulk of the Illinois Central business
213 was non-competitive with Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I know. That is the local business. I mean business from Illinois Central points to the coast?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, that would be more or less competitive.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I mean. That is so, both as to passengers and freight?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact that large amounts of freight have moved to the Pacific coast from Chicago via the Illinois Central and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: I could not answer that question of my own knowledge, because I have not been familiar with that traffic of the Illinois Central for a number of years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I am speaking of a number of year- ago.

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, some years ago, when I was connected with the Illinois Central, there was a fair share of the business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lovett would like to know when you ceased to be in the service of that company?

Mr. JEFFERY: The latter part of 1889.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At that time the Southern Pacific was getting a fair share, you say, of the business from the Illinois Central to the coast?

Mr. JEFFERY: They interchanged considerable business, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: A large amount went by Omaha and the Union Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: At that time the Illinois Central did not reach Omaha. Its Iowa line rested at Sioux City as the western terminus.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Other lines did reach Omaha that took traffic out of Chicago to the coast?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over the Union Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

214 Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact that business originating in the East partly moved over the Southern Pacific by New Orleans to the Pacific coast and partly over connecting lines and the Union Pacific to the Pacific coast?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That has always been so?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By "the east" I mean Atlantic coast business.

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, I took it that you meant Atlantic coast States —North Atlantic coast States and what are called the Central States.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: I would like to have that last question read.

(The question was repeated by the stenographer, as follows: "Is it not a fact that business originating in the east partly moved over the Southern Pacific by New Orleans to the Pacific Coast and partly over connecting lines and the Union Pacific to the Pacific Coast?"

Mr. JEFFERY: "Yes, sir."

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Jeffery, for many years the rates from all Atlantic—practically all Atlantic coast States and as far west as Western Pennsylvania—Pittsburg, at least—via the Morgan line of steamships and the Southern Pacific to the Pacific coast terminal points and via the Union Pacific and rail, with its eastern connections, have been the same, have they not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, substantially the same, and it was once carried as far west as Indianapolis, and afterwards the rates withdrawn from that territory.

Mr. KELLOGG: So for many years prior to the acquisition of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific, which took place March, 1901, the rates from practically all eastern Atlantic coast points and as far west as Pittsburg, and sometimes farther west, were the same by the Southern Pacific as they were by the Union Pacific?

215 Mr. JEFFERY: Substantially. You mean the rail and water?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, I mean rail and water.

Mr. JEFFERY: Rail and water via the Morgan Line and Southern Pacific and all rail the other way,—substantially the same.

Mr. KELLOGG: Those two lines were competitive lines for that Pacific Coast business from competitive points, were they not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, on all business from the Orient via steamship to Pacific coast terminal points and to the east, those lines were competitive lines, were they not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is all I wish to ask.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Milburn, do you desire to interrogate Mr. Jeffery?

Mr. MILBURN: Just a moment. (After a pause.) Mr. Jeffery, you were speaking of the competition between the Atlantic Seaboard and say San Francisco, between the line made up of the Morgan line of steamers and the Southern Pacific and the trans-continental railroad lines, at the end of your direct testimony. For that business originating on the Atlantic seaboard, all the trunk lines going west are competitors, are they not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: So that the New York Central, the Erie, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, the Pennsylvania, and the Baltimore & Ohio are all seeking that business to carry it over their lines and with the western connections transport it to San Francisco as against this steamship line and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; within the territorial limits, you know,— the different systems were mentioned and the territorial limits of their immediate connections.

Mr. MILBURN: Precisely. Now, then, taking the lines running from the seaboard to Chicago and St. Louis, and the lines
216 running from Chicago and St. Louis to Ogden or farther west, they connect with the Union Pacific where? At Omaha?

Mr. JEFFERY: I do not think I have got the question. Read it please.

Mr. MILBURN: The lines made up of these trunk lines I have mentioned, and then the lines going west from Chicago and St. Louis, where do they connect?

Mr. JEFFERY: That is, through the St. Louis and Chicago gateways?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, sir.

Mr. JEFFERY: At Missouri River points like Omaha and Kansas City, and to an extent, at St. Joe.

Mr. MILBURN: That is where they connect with the——

Mr. JEFFERY (interrupting): Lines leading west of Missouri River points, and they can connect ultimately with the Union Pacific and I might say, the Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe also.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, this competition, or this effort of the lines between the Atlantic seaboard and the west for this California business is just the same today, is it not, as it was before the Union Pacific had any control or ownership of the Southern Pacific and the Morgan line?

Mr. JEFFERY: Well, I would hesitate to speak positively on that point, but my information is that they compete as actively as before.

Mr. MILBURN: They do do it?

Mr. JEFFERY: Except, of course, now the competition is to maintain rates, whereas in former years it was not.

Mr. MILBURN: I am not directing your attention to the question of rates, so much as I am to the question of ownership of the properties. There is nothing that you can see in the ownership, say, by the Southern Pacific, of the Morgan Line, and in the ownership by the Southern Pacific of the Oregon Short Line or the Union Pacific interests that affects the relations of roads like the Pennsylvania and the Lackawanna and the New York Central and Erie, and the business between the Atlantic Seaboard and San Francisco?

217 Mr. JEFFERY: I would hesitate to answer that question.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, can you conceive of any practical reasons why those trunk lines that I have mentioned should be deterred from seeking business over other lines destined for the Pacific Coast because of the ownership of the Morgan Line?

Mr. JEFFERY: Why, no, I don't see why they should be any more than they were twenty years ago, when the Morgan Line was still operating. But, of course, I have no personal knowledge of their affairs, you know. I have not been connected with those Trunk Lines.

Mr. MILBURN: I am simply asking you as to how the situation would impress your mind as a railroad man. The statement, Mr.

Jeffery, that you read here is from the report of the Board of Directors to the stockholders of the Denver and Rio Grande System?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And as I gather from that, the control of the Central Pacific by the Union Pacific interests has led to the construction of the new Trans-continental Line?

Mr. JEFFERY: Substantially, yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Then you would not consider it an unmitigated evil?

Mr. JEFFERY: No, sir. In fact, for that great western country out there it is a very good thing, and I was very happy to be able to undertake to build it.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Jeffery, you know that it is the Southern Pacific which owns the Central Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes; I understood that from the reports that I have seen from year to year.

Mr. MILBURN: The Central Pacific is the line from Ogden to the West, to San Francisco?

Mr. JEFFERY: That is my understanding.

Mr. MILBURN: So that, of the Union Pacific's Line from Omaha to Missouri River points and the coast, the Central Pacific is the link between Ogden and the coast?

218 Mr. JEFFERY: That is my understanding.

Mr. MILBURN: Ogden and San Francisco?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: You take freight originating on the Illinois Central and destined for Pacific Coast points, and whether it went via New Orleans over the Southern Pacific System to, say, to San Francisco, or via the Union Pacific to Ogden would have to go, or would go over the Southern Pacific System, would it not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; part way.

Mr. MILBURN: Part way. From Ogden?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes. From Ogden in one case and New Orleans in the other, assuming San Francisco is the point of destination.

Mr. MILBURN: So that if you would tear away the Southern Pacific from the Union Pacific, the Illinois Central, in taking these routes to the coast, would go over portions of the Southern Pacific under both conditions?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Are you aware of there having been any change whatsoever in the flow of the business from Illinois Central points to the coast, to connections made either way, by Ogden or by New Orleans, since any change in the ownership of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: I have no personal knowledge at all of those business matters in recent years.

Mr. MILBURN: Taking the natural situation, Mr. Jeffery, it would always be to the interest of the Southern Pacific to get the business, within territorial limits, from the Illinois Central, for the longer haul from New Orleans?

Mr. JEFFERY: It depends entirely on the divisions of rates at New Orleans and Ogden. I do not know which would give it the most revenue.

Mr. MILBURN: What is the haul between—what is the distance between New Orleans to San Francisco?

Mr. JEFFERY: I think it is about 2300 miles, as I remember it.

Mr. MILBURN: 2300 miles?

219 Mr. JEFFERY: That is my recollection. I may be wrong about it.

Mr. MILBURN: And what is the haul from Ogden?

Mr. JEFFERY: I think it is about 850 miles; I may be a few miles out on that.

Mr. MILBURN: So that getting the freight from Illinois Central points at New Orleans, the Southern Pacific has a haul of 2300 miles?

Mr. JEFFERY: Assuming that distance to be correct, yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And getting it at Ogden the Southern Pacific would have a haul of 800 miles?

Mr. JEFFERY: 850 miles, assuming that distance to be correct.

Mr. MILBURN: 850 miles, and it would be naturally always to the advantage of the Southern Pacific to get the haul at New Orleans rather than at Ogden, unless under conditions where the division of the rate was such that it would get as much for hauling it from Ogden, or nearly as much, as for hauling it from New Orleans?

Mr. JEFFERY: There would be other conditions, but that would influence, of course. For instance, perishable freight would naturally take the short haul by the rail route; it probably would not be able to stand transportation by the long haul. And heavy freight, slow moving freight, would probably take the long haul, because of more revenue that way.

Mr. MILBURN: May I not say, Mr. Jeffery, that under normal conditions, and as to normal freight, a road with a haul of 2300 miles and a haul of 800 miles, would work hardest for the freight to go over its long haul?

Mr. JEFFERY: Why, I should be inclined to do it if I were managing that railroad; yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I have two or three questions that I should like to ask. You have stated that it would be to the interest of the road to get the long haul of 2300 miles, as against the 800 mile 220 haul to get it where it connected with another line: that is true, isn't it? That is what you stated?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It would likewise be true that it would be for the interest of the road connecting with the 800 mile road to lessen the activity of that competition for the 2300 mile haul, wouldn't it if you, on the other hand, instead of managing the Southern Pacific, were managing the Union Pacific, anything you could do to lessen the activity of the Southern Pacific, to obtain the 2300 mile haul, you would naturally do, wouldn't you?

Mr. JEFFERY: I would, under those circumstances, I think, endeavor to throw time freight, perishable freights, and first-class passenger travel by the short haul, because otherwise it would be impossible to control the business. The heavy freights, those that time made but little difference to in the matter of transportation, and tourist travel, I should endeavor to direct to the long haul.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, if you owned both?

Mr. JEFFERY: If I owned both.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But I am putting you in another position now. Counsel asked you if you were managing the Southern Pacific, which had a line 800 miles from Ogden to the coast, and another line 2300 miles from New Orleans to the coast, whether, as such manager, you would not try to get the 2300 mile haul and you said yes. Now I ask you, suppose you were the manager of the Union Pacific—and they were separate corporations; that is that the Union Pacific did not control the Southern Pacific at all; then, of course, your activity would be confined to getting all the business you could over the Union Pacific, and throwing it for the short distance over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; it would be my duty to the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Speaking of business originating here in the East, Mr. Jeffery, you have said that Eastern Trunk Lines
221 are still competing actively for west bound business. Of course, that is true, isn't it?

Mr. JEFFERY: I made a qualified answer on that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To the best of your belief, they are?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, isn't it a fact that through business to the coast is quite largely secured by the Eastern Agents,—what are called general freight agents, located at large centers like Pittsburg of the Western Lines?

Mr. JEFFERY: It is, very largely. They are what we call Commercial Agents.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They are the men, as a rule, who make the contracts with the shippers, that control the handling of the freight after it gets to the Missouri River or the Mississippi Gateways?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; quite generally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, if it should appear, and I think it won't be disputed by my friends here, that the Commercial Agent or the General Agent of the Southern Pacific, and the General Agent of the Union Pacific at Pittsburg, which probably originates more tonnage than any other town in the East happens to be the same person, would you think there was an active and energetic competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for the business out of Pittsburg, as there used to be when those agents were separate?

Mr. JEFFERY: I think it would be difficult for a man to compete with himself.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I think myself. It appears here by the testimony—

Mr. MILBURN (interrupting): That would seem to be a proposition concerning which we — not take a great deal of testimony.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I want to bring it out that these are the men who route the traffic.

Mr. MILBURN: I don't think you will route the traffic away from the Eastern Traffic Agents.

222 Mr. SEVERANCE: Some of us live in the western country. Was there not formerly a line of steamers running from Portland to San Francisco that took freight into San Francisco from Portland?

Mr. JEFFERY: So I understood.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. And the Union Pacific reached Portland over the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Line.

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Jeffery, I want you to take this situation. Take the Illinois Central, which I think you have described as running from New Orleans to Chicago and from New Orleans to Omaha?

Mr. JEFFERY: Chicago to Omaha.

Mr. MILBURN: From Chicago to Omaha. That is right. Now, freight originates somewhere on this line between New Orleans and Chicago; we will say it is in the Chicago territory, that is, nearer Chicago than New Orleans; and that could be taken to Chicago and then west over intermediate lines to a connection with the Union Pacific—that is true?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: There are intermediate lines there, over which it has to go, between Chicago and the connection with the Union Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Not if the freight originates on the Illinois Central in Chicago; it would go through over the Illinois Central to Omaha. The Illinois Central has a line from Chicago to Omaha?

Mr. MILBURN: Well, originating on the other line, or either of those lines, it would go over the Illinois Central, as it does to-day, to Omaha?

Mr. JEFFERY: I don't think I quite get the question, and I want to answer it understandingly.

Mr. MILBURN: Freight originating on the Illinois Central, on the line between New Orleans and Chicago, destined for, say, we will take San Francisco, would go over the Illinois Central to Chicago and thence to Omaha?

223 Mr. JEFFERY: Not necessarily.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean some point below Chicago?

Mr. JEFFERY: It would not necessarily go that way. We will take, for instance, as an example, Centralia, Illinois, which is the junction of the Chicago Line of the Illinois Central and the Dubuque Line of the Illinois Central. Anything originating there—but probably there would not be any originating there, because it is a very small place; but anything originating there would go via Decatur, Bloomington, Freeport and Dubuque?

Mr. MILBURN: Over other lines?

Mr. JEFFERY: That went to the Union Pacific?

Mr. MILBURN: Over other lines?

Mr. JEFFERY: No. Over the Illinois Central all the way. If, on the other hand, it was destined for the Southern Pacific by New Orleans, it would go directly south via Cairo and be delivered at New Orleans by the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILBURN: I am assuming now a separation of the Southern and Union Pacific Systems. Taking freight originating on the Illinois Central, it would get, somehow or other, to Omaha, either over the Illinois Central Lines or some other lines.

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, you may say it would go over the Illinois Central, if it originated on that line.

Mr. MILBURN: Then it would go from Omaha to Ogden on the Union Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And then it would go from Ogden to San Francisco on the Central Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Which is the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That is one line?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: The other route would be to New Orleans and over the Southern Pacific to San Francisco?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

224 Mr. MILBURN: So, under those circumstances, as a competing element, the Union Pacific would only stand with a line from Omaha to Ogden?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That is, having——

Mr. JEFFERY: The Union Pacific would only stand as a line, as having——

Mr. MILBURN (interrupting): At Ogden connecting with the Southern Pacific.

Mr. JEFFERY: The Union Pacific would stand as having a line from Omaha to Ogden.

Mr. MILBURN: From Omaha to Ogden, and having at Ogden to make a through line with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: So the Southern Pacific there is on both lines, isn't it?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, to New Orleans on the one hand and to Ogden on the other.

Mr. MILBURN: It is a common element in the situation.

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; in that instance.

Mr. MILBURN: And that competition is affected by the fact of that common element; it is present there, whether the Southern Pacific is owned by the Union Pacific or is not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; physically that is the situation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One or two more questions.

Com'r LANE: Let me see if I understand your last answer. You say that competition of the Union Pacific was present there. Now from Ogden up to Portland there runs the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, that makes one line from Ogden to the Pacific Coast by way of Portland, and then from Ogden to San Francisco runs the Central Pacific, the old Central Pacific Line, and from Ogden to Los Angeles runs the Clark Line, which has a traffic arrangement with the Southern Pacific. Those three lines, tapping the three ports of California and Oregon, what element of 225 competition is there if the Union Pacific controls those three lines?

Mr. JEFFERY: As between Salt Lake City and Ogden on the East and the coast points on the West?

Mr. LANE: Yes.

Mr. JEFFERY: There is no competition between those lines, Mr. Lane.

Com'r LANE: What element of competition——

Mr. JEFFERY (interrupting): If they are under a common control.

Com'r LANE: If they are under a common control. If they are under the control of the Union Pacific, say, then it is practically a through route from Omaha to Los Angeles and San Francisco and Portland, under the same control?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir. But it is well to bear in mind that the rates at Portland, you know, would be made by other lines not under that control, and the rates to Los Angeles might be made by other lines.

Com'r LANE: By the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, at Los Angeles?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, and its connections.

Com'r LANE: And by the Northern Pacific, we will say, in Portland?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes; which would fix all Pacific coast rates practically.

Com'r LANE: Then they affect the San Francisco rates as well?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: Even though the lines of the Northern Pacific do not reach into San Francisco?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: Now, if there is a unity of control of the Union Pacific and the three lines running to Portland and San Francisco and Los Angeles, what chance would a railroad have to get business at Ogden, running East from Ogden?

Mr. JEFFERY: Well, the chances are not very excellent, as we have demonstrated, you know, in operating the Denver and Rio Grande System.

226 Com'r LANE: How have you demonstrated it?

Mr. JEFFERY: As I have already testified, since the Receivership our business has diminished, our transcontinental business has diminished in proportion to the other business.

Mr. MILBURN: May I ask the Commissioner to ask the witness if that resulted naturally from the Union Pacific then becoming a preferred connection through its ownership of the Central Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, unquestionably. The proprietary interests they had, and that led, of course, to endeavoring to secure all the business possible for the Union Pacific.

Mr. MILBURN: They continued to interchange, but not to the extent that they had interchanged?

Mr. JEFFERY: They continued to interchange but not to the extent.

Mr. MILBURN: As it made them the preferred connection?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: It might be that the preference was due to something else besides the incorporate relations.

Mr. JEFFERY: Of that I have no knowledge, Mr. Lane.

Com'r LANE: Did you have a traffic agreement with the Southern Pacific before the Union and the Southern Pacific became consolidated?

Mr. JEFFERY: No, sir. We exchanged business on the published divisions, that was generally understood; published divisions of the rates.

Com'r LANE: There was no severance of any relation between you and the Southern Pacific by reason of the consolidation of the U. P. and the S. P.

Mr. JEFFERY: No formal severance. We continued to do our best, and are doing our best now to get all the transcontinental business we can, on agreed rates and agreed divisions of rates.

Com'r LANE: Would it be a statement of the fact, that the Western Pacific was being built because of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes; that is the fact in the case, as we 227 virtually advised our stockholders in the report I read an extract from a short time ago.

Com'r LANE: Even if the Union Pacific had not combined with the Southern Pacific, it would be advantageous to the Denver and Rio Grande to have the Western Pacific from Ogden to San Francisco?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes; I think it would. It is a low grade line, and it would be profitable in itself, we think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I want to ask you one or two questions. Now, prior to the acquisition of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific, as you have already stated, there was a line of steamers coming down to San Francisco to Portland?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes; so I understood.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, freight could move to San Francisco, then, from Missouri River Gateways or the Mississippi Valley over the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, which it owns, the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Line, and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Steamers to San Francisco?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, it could do that, but it would be a circuitous route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It would be a circuitous route, I understand, but it was a route over which freight was actually moved.

Mr. JEFFERY: Oh, in those days, yes, but I doubt if it could be done again.

Mr. MILBURN: Would you call it a practical route as a railroad man?

Mr. JEFFERY: A railroad man does not like a water route. They prefer a rail route.

Mr. MILBURN: But eliminating that, would you call that practical route to take freight gotten in Portland and then bring it by steamer to San Francisco under modern conditions?

Mr. JEFFERY: Let me say, it is not a preferential route.

Com'r HARLAN: Do you recall any war in rates between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific before consolidation, any disturbance of rates before consolidation?

228 Mr. JEFFERY: Not specifically, Mr. Harlan. There were in those days constant ebullitions on the part of railroad managers and traffic officers, you know, but I could not recall any special instance. Doubtless the traffic managers of those systems when they were separate were concerned in disturbances and rate wars, and sometimes nearly all of the traffic officers where on other roads, sometimes a tide would sweep—a disturbance would sweep from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico and from the Lakes to the Pacific Coast.

Com'r HARLAN: And would involve those two roads?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, they could not help themselves.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Jeffery, if I understand you, this is the situation. There was a transcontinental line made up of the Morgan Steamship Company and the Southern Pacific, operating by way of New Orleans?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: There was an all-rail line, made up of various roads leading up to Omaha, and then the Union Pacific to Ogden, and then the Central Pacific to San Francisco?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: And those two lines were in active competition?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Then there was also a third line, was there not, of the lines leading up to and across the Missouri River, to Denver, and going by the road of which you were president to Ogden and Salt Lake City, and so seeking the coast?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: And was a third and independent competing route?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir.

The Chairman: And was a third and independent competing route?

Mr. Jeffery: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Now, I understand it, that since the 229 consolidation of the Southern route and the one to the north of you, your route has been able to get a less share of the competitive business for the Pacific coast?

Mr. JEFFERY: Since the consolidation, Mr. Chairman, and the control of the consolidated company by Union Pacific interests, together with the control of Oregon Navigation and Oregon Short Line by that interest.

The CHAIRMAN: So it has not only to an extent eliminated the competition between the routes to the north and south of you, but has also operated to diminish the ability of your route to compete for the same traffic?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; diminished the ability of our route to compete with the traffic; that is the reason we built the Western Pacific.

Com'r LANE: When did you determine on building the Western Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: We reached a definite conclusion about that something over two years ago. I had favored it individually for several years before.

Com'r LANE: Mr. Harriman was a member of your directorate at that time?

Mr. JEFFERY: Not when—yes, up to the time we reached the formal conclusion or decision to proceed.

Com'r LANE: At the time that Mr. Harriman was a director of the Denver & Rio Grande, there was more or less intimacy between the Union Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande, although they were competing lines territorially?

Mr. JEFFERY: No, I don't think that made any difference one way or the other. I think when Mr. Harriman was in the Denver Board he voted for Denver & Rio Grande interests; and I have no doubt when he was in Union Pacific meetings, he voted for Union Pacific interests. I never could detect any leaning on his part against Denver & Rio Grande especially; he seemed to give fair consideration to its interest when he was in a Board meeting.

230 Com'r LANE: And Mr. Gould was a member of the directorate of Union Pacific at the same time, was he not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; and he followed the same policy with Union Pacific interests when he was in their Board meeting.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is what you used to call "community of interest"?

Mr. JEFFERY: That was a situation it was hoped to bring about.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is what Mr. Harriman called community of interest?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, we were on the verge of millen-ium then but did not get quite in.

The CHAIRMAN: You are building your own road to it?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, sir; we hoped the streets would be paved with gold.

Mr. MILBURN: The competition of your line as a link in a transcontinental route is with the Union Pacific, not with the Southern Pacific? The Southern Pacific would be your connection in any event, would it not?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, if we could have it so.

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, as I say, but your competition is with the Union Pacific—I mean your territorial competition, you go through the same region that they go; your links are through the same general territory?

Mr. JEFFERY: Let me answer this way: The Southern Pacific is of course a connection of the Denver & Rio Grande system at Ogden, but not to the extent we would like to have it.

Mr. MILBURN: And your struggle for the business west is with the Rio Grande at your eastern connection?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes, our eastern connections like Burlington, Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe gather up the business and bring it through the gateway of Denver & Colorado Springs and Pueblo, and we take it on to Ogden.

Mr. MILBURN: You are at that gateway for that business?

231 Mr. JEFFERY: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: And so is the Union Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: You want to haul it to the connection at Ogden or wherever it is with the Southern Pacific, and the Union Pacific wants to haul it there?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: And you both want to get there and deliver it to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JEFFERY: Nobody else could take it just now, that is, to San Francisco? We are speaking of San Francisco business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, as to business, however, that originates back in the Mississippi Valley, you are competitive with the Southern Pacific via New Orleans—that is your line is one of the links in the system: That is true, isn't it?

Mr. JEFFERY: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: You stated in answer to questions of Mr. Severance some time ago with reference to Pittsburg that you would not expect a line to compete against itself. Now, does not that proposition apply to the Southern Pacific? Would you expect the Southern Pacific to use its Ogden-San Francisco line to compete with its New Orleans line?

Mr. JEFFERY: I think what I said Judge Lovett, was that the commercial agent in Pittsburg, if he represented both lines, as stated in the question put by Mr. Severance, would find some difficulty in competing with himself.

Mr. LOVETT: Now, did you mean to convey the impression by the answer to Mr. Severance just now, that that line would compete with the New Orleans line of the Southern Pacific by carrying to Ogden and there turning over to the Southern Pacific line traffic to California?

Mr. JEFFERY: I would mean to have it understood that the eastern connections of Denver & Rio Grande, or portions of the Mississippi territory, might gather up business and deliver it to the Denver & Rio Grande for carriage to Ogden, in competition with 232 lines from the same territory that might take it from New Orleans.

Mr. LOVETT: But they could not deliver that business in San Francisco, except at rates satisfactory to the Southern Pacific Company, could they?

Mr. JEFFERY: No.

DAVID WILLCOX, being sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. KELLOGG: I notice you were elected a director in the Southern Pacific Company in 1905; is that correct?

Mr. WILLCOX: I think so. I don't remember the date exactly.

Mr. KELLOGG: You were also elected a director the same year in the Union Pacific Company; is that correct?

Mr. WILLCOX: I don't remember the dates, Mr. Kellogg. Probably you have them correctly, yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: About 1905, I think it was?

Mr. WILLCOX: About then, yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: In both companies?

Mr. WILLCOX: I was in the Southern Pacific for some time before I was in Union Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: You were elected, according to the——

Mr. WILLCOX: No, I don't think I was elected in Union Pacific—yes, it may have been 1905, but it was quite an interval of time.

Mr. KELLOGG: It appears, according to the minutes of the Board of Directors' meeting, that you were elected in April, 1905, in the Southern Pacific Board, and that in October of the same year you were elected in the Union Pacific Board.

Mr. WILLCOX: No doubt those minutes are correct.

Mr. KELLOGG: I do not expect you to recollect exactly.

Mr. WILLCOX: No, I can't remember.

Mr. KELLOGG: Substantially that.

Mr. WILLCOX: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you have since been a director in both companies?

Mr. WILLCOX: Yes.

233 Mr. KELLOGG: At whose request did you take a position on the Boards of those two companies?

Mr. WILLCOX: Well, I think in the Southern Pacific Mr. Harriman spoke to me about it; I don't remember that any one spoke to me about it in Union Pacific until I received notice of my election.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who notified you—Mr. Harriman?

Mr. WILLCOX: No, I mean from the secretary. I might say in explanation, I have known Mr. Harriman for perhaps thirty-five years, and it was natural enough for him to ask me to go into his Board.

Mr. KELLOGG: Quite so; and you understood that that was the reason you were invited into the Board, because of your acquaintance with Mr. Harriman?

Mr. WILLCOX: No, I don't understand that altogether.

Mr. KELLOGG: I do not mean that that was your qualification at all.

Mr. WILLCOX: I understood the fact that Mr. Harriman had known me a great many years led him to suggest to the Board that possibly I might be of some use as a director; that is all.

Mr. KELLOGG: I have no doubt of that.

Mr. WILLCOX: Thank you.

Mr. KELLOGG: Were you at that time financially interested in either one of those companies?

Mr. WILLCOX: Not at the time I was elected, no.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you since been to any extent?

Mr. WILLCOX: Yes, I have some stock in both of them.

Mr. KELLOGG: What amount?

Mr. WILLCOX: Is that exactly competent?

Mr. MILBURN: Is it necessary?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It appears by the record that he declines to answer.

Mr. WILLCOX: I don't decline to answer, but I simply raise the point it is perhaps not competent.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I won't ask him. That is all.

234 WILLIAM D. CORNISH, being sworn, testifies as follows:

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Cornish, you are vice-president of the Union Pacific Company, are you not?

Mr. CORNISH: I am.

Mr. KELLOGG: And of the Oregon Short Line Company?

Mr CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Railroad & Navigation Company and of the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Are you a director or an officer of the San Pedro Company?

Mr. CORNISH: I am a director.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are a director in the San Pedro Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Member of the Executive Committee.

Mr. KELLOGG: And on the Executive Committee of the San Pedro Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are a director in each one of those railways I mentioned?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are familiar in a general way with the Pacific system, including the Union Pacific, the Short Line, the Navigation Company and the Southern Pacific and its subsidiary Lines, are you not?

Mr. CORNISH: I am.

Mr. KELLOGG: You were a Master in Chancery of the court during the receivership of the Union Pacific?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And was familiar with the acquisition of the Union Pacific and its subsidiary lines by the Union Pacific?

Mr. CORNISH: I was and am.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to the acquisition of the stock of the Southern Pacific Company in March, 1901, the Union Pacific con-
235 trolled, by stock ownership, directly or indirectly, both the Short Line and the Navigation Company's lines, did it not?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is, it controlled by the ownership of a majority of stock the Short Line Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: In a general way, the lines of the Short Lines extend from Green River, is it, on the east,——

Mr. CORNISH: No, from Granger.

Mr. KELLOGG: Granger on the east, to Huntington on the west, and from Ogden on the south—no, from Salt Lake at least on the south north to Butte?

Mr. CORNISH: To Silver Bowl.

Mr. KELLOGG: And it also at that time—the Short Line owned and controlled the various lines south of Salt Lake and southwest?

Mr. CORNISH: They were part of the property.

Mr. KELLOGG: They were part of the Short Line Company. The Navigation Company—either the Short Line or the Union Pacific, prior to the acquisition of the Southern Pacific stock in 1901, controlled the Navigation Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, I think they both had stock; I am not clear.

Mr. KELLOGG: Since that time, or at about that time, the Union Pacific got all of the stock, substantially, of both companies, didn't it?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that the Union Pacific operates now under joint operation the entire line from Council Bluffs and Kansas City on the east to Portland on the west?

Mr. CORNISH: I don't regard it so, Mr. Kellogg. The separate companies operate their own property.

Mr. KELLOGG: You make a joint report in the annual report?

Mr. CORNISH: That is the financial report made in New York.

Mr. KELLOGG: You consolidate the earnings?

Mr. CORNISH: For that purpose.

236 Mr. KELLOGG: The operating officials lap over from one onto the other.

Mr. CORNISH: They do in part; not the managing officials, no.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Bancroft operates a part of the Short Line?

Mr. CORNISH: Operates all of the Short Line.

Mr. KELLOGG: And part of the Union Pacific?

Mr. CORNISH: At present part of the Union Pacific west of Green River.

Mr. KELLOGG: The manager of the Oregon Railway and Navigation operates the Oregon Railway and Navigation and the lines of the Central Pacific in Oregon, does he not?

Mr. CORNISH: The lines of the Southern Pacific as far south as Ashland?

Mr. KELLOGG: The lines of the Southern Pacific as far south as Ashland, which is about the south line of the State of Oregon?

Mr. CORNISH: State of Oregon.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that it is a fact that both the operating and traffic officials operate the entire system as far as Portland, do they not?

Mr. CORNISH: Well, each road has its own traffic officials, I think distinctively confined to the line.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, but they have common traffic officials?

Mr. CORNISH: You are referring to Mr. Stubbs and his relation?

Mr. KELLOGG: And common operating officers?

Mr. CORNISH: To the extent that you have stated, yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: The general freight agent in Portland is the general freight agent of the O. R. & N., is he not, the general freight agent of the Southern Pacific is general freight agent of the O. R. & N., is he not?

Mr. CORNISH: I don't remember.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't remember?

Mr. CORNISH: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, the Southern Pacific's line—the ownership of the various sub-companies of the Southern Pacific 237 are accurately stated in the annual reports, are they not?

Mr. CORNISH: I believe so, yes, but I have not been over them.

Mr. KELLOGG: In a general way, the Southern Pacific Company, which is a corporation in Kentucky, operates under lease and owns substantially all the stock of the lines from Ogden to San Francisco and from Portland to the Texas line?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And controls by stock ownership all of the Texas and Louisiana lines as far as New Orleans?

Mr. CORNISH: Controls and owns a majority of stock of those lines.

Mr. KELLOGG: I say controls by stock ownership?

Mr. CORNISH: Those lines are operated by the——

Mr. KELLOGG: I am not speaking of operation, but control.

Mr. CORNISH: They control the company through the stock.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, what steamship line does the Southern Pacific control by stock ownership?

Mr. CORNISH: The line from New York—line of steamers which is running from New York to New Orleans, belongs to the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: The line of steamers which is running from New York to New Orleans belongs to the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. CORNISH: The Pacific Mail is controlled through a slight majority of the stock by the Southern Pacific Company. The Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company——

Mr. KELLOGG: A little louder, Cornish; they can't hear you.

Mr. CORNISH: I can't remember—it owns, however,—the Occidental & Oriental is owned by the Union Pacific, but I have forgotten just how that stands. It used to be held partly in public and partly by the Union Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: You think the Union Pacific owns the 238 control of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship lines now?

Mr. CORNISH: I can't just remember how it stands; I have not looked.

Mr. KELLOGG: Does the Southern Pacific own any of the stock of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company?

Mr. CORNISH: I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Can you find out exactly the stock ownership?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you do so, make a memorandum, Judge Cornish, to find out the exact stock ownership of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company. Now, the Pacific Mail operates lines of steamers from San Francisco to Japan and China?

Judge CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Sandwich Islands?

Mr. CORNISH: They stop there on some trips.

Mr. KELLOGG: And to the Philippines?

Mr. CORNISH: I am not sure.

Mr. KELLOGG: They also operate a line of steamers from San Francisco to Panama, do they not, or to the connections with the Panama Railroad?

Mr. CORNISH: I believe they do. There was some question about that a while ago, and yet there was so little to it I don't know.

Mr. KELLOGG: What line of steamships—no, what company owns by stock ownership the Portland and Asiatic steamship line?

Mr. CORNISH: My recollection is that the stock belonged to the Navigation Company, but looking in the report this morning I cannot find it; I don't know what the explanation is; I have not been able to get an explanation from Mr. Mahl as to why that is not in the report.

Mr. KELLOGG: You understood it did belong to the Navigation Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where do those ships run from?

239 Mr. CORNISH: Those ships run from Portland to the Orient.

Mr. KELLOGG: If that company belongs to the Short Line Company—I mean to the Navigation Company—then the Union Pacific Company has a through line of railway and steamships through its stock ownership, from Council Bluffs and Kansas City to ports in the Orient via Portland, does it not?

Mr. CORNISH: It would amount to that, yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Southern Pacific has a through line of transportation from New York via Southern Pacific and San Francisco to the Orient, by steamship and rail?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, through their control of the Pacific Mail.

Mr. KELLOGG: Through their control of the Pacific Mail and the eastern steamship lines. Judge Cornish, prior to the construction of the San Pedro road, the Oregon Short Line, you say, owned or controlled by stock ownership various lines of road south of Salt Lake City and southwest?

Mr. CORNISH: As far south as Milford and Frisco in Utah—yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: About what time was it that Senator Clarke undertook the construction of that road?

Mr. CORNISH: I think it was in 1901.

Mr. KELLOGG: In 1901, yes. After that time there was a contest in the courts between the San Pedro Company and the Short Line Company, was there not, as to some right of way which each company was claiming?

Mr. CORNISH: The San Pedro Company under its present organization was operating a small piece of road in California, had no road east or towards Salt Lake, from about Los Angeles. There was another company, another corporation, of which I don't remember the name, which started a controversy in regard to a grade.

Mr. KELLOGG: In regard to what?

Mr. CORNISH: In regard to a grade in Nevada.

240 Mr. KELLOGG: In Nevada?

Mr. CORNISH: With the Short Line. It was not the San Pedro Company, but it was a company which I assume it controlled, because it disappeared afterwards, and that controversy went into the courts, and there was an injunction issued, the effect of which was that the Short Line retained the existing grade—the then existing grade which had been graded some ten or fifteen years before—twelve years before, and built its line down to Calientes, on that grade, having bought the intervening section between Milford and the State line.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is some years before the Short Line Company had projected a road substantially along the same line through Nevada that the San Pedro road afterwards constructed on?

Mr. CORNISH: As far as Calientes?

Mr. KELLOGG: As far as Calientes?

Mr. CORNISH: But in an entirely different route, but towards the same section of California.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, toward the same section of California, and the Short Line Company had constructed a grade part of the distance?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Through a cañon?

Mr. CORNISH: Partly—about forty miles through a controlled, because it disappeared afterwards, and that controversy went into the courts, and there was an injunction issued, the effect of which was that the Short Line retained the existing grade—the then existing grade which has been graded some ten or fifteen years before—twelve years before, and before, and built its line down to Calientes, on that grade, having bought the intervening section between Milford and the State line.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is some years before the Short Line Company had projected a road substantially along the same line through Nevada that the San Pedro road afterwards constructed on?

Mr. CORNISH: As far as Calientes?

Mr. KELLOGG: As far as Calientes?

241 Mr. CORNISH: But in an entirely different route, but toward the same section of California.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, toward the same section of California, and the Short Line Company had constructed a grade part of the distance?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Through a cañon?

Mr. CORNISH: Partly—about forty miles through a cañon.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, that grade came—the protection of that grade and the Short Line came under the Act of Congress for the possession of cañons on Government lands, did it not?

Mr. CORNISH: That question did not arise. I don't know whether it is under it or not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Wasn't that question in that case?

Mr. CORNISH: No, not as to that portion.

Mr. KELLOGG: There was not room for two railroads through that cañon, was there?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Still, both companies——

Mr. CORNISH: Not 200 feet right of way each, but there was room.

Mr. KELLOGG: Both companies were struggling for that right of way?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir, particularly, because it had been constructed and the grade was nearly perfect, and there were five tunnels there, and it was worth something. There was another route over the hills.

Mr. KELLOGG: After the Short Line got or retained possession by permanent injunction, there was a settlement, was there, between Mr. Harriman and Mr. Clarke, of this difficulty?

Mr. CORNISH: The contract that has been offered in evidence, dated in 1902, was the result of about a year's negotiations that were had.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to that contract, there was about a year's negotiation between Mr. Harriman, representing the Short Line, and yourself, representing the Short Line, and Mr. Clarke, was there not?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

242 Mr. KELLOGG: You finally reached a settlement with Mr. Clarke?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: That settlement contemplated the conveyance to the San Pedro Company of 512 miles of the railway of the Short Line Company, did it not?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, about that.

Mr. KELLOGG: West, south and southwest from Salt Lake City towards California?

Mr. CORNISH: From the neighborhood of Salt Lake City, yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And those lines were conveyed by the deeds that you have furnished?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: That settlement also contemplated the construction of the San Pedro Line to California—to Los Angeles?

Mr. CORNISH: Except as to such trackage as it might obtain that was contemplated in the contract.

Mr. KELLOGG: I mean it contemplated the construction of the line to about San Bernardino and leasing certain track rights into Los Angeles?

Mr. CORNISH: I have forgotten the terms of the contract. They were building a line down to Riverside and completed it, and contemplated trackage over the Southern Pacific to San Bernardino and over to Daggett.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, that contract contemplated the construction of a line of railway and the acquisition of trackage rights so the San Pedro would have and control a complete line from Salt Lake to Los Angeles.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, and to San Pedro and Pasadena.

Mr. KELLOGG: Pasadena and where?

Mr. CORNISH: San Pedro and Pasadena.

Mr. KELLOGG: San Pedro is the seaport beyond Los Angeles, is it not?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Over what tracks does the San Pedro run from Los Angeles to San Pedro, the seaport?

Mr. CORNISH: It runs over its own tracks.

243 Mr. KELLOGG: At what place does the Southern Pacific reach the coast?

Mr. CORNISH: At San Pedro; that is, in that vicinity and other points nearby.

Mr. KELLOGG: And Santa Monica, does it not?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is, near Los Angeles, I mean.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. W. A. Clark is President of the San Pedro Line, is he not?

Mr. CORNISH: He is.

Mr. KELLOGG: W. H. Bancroft is First Vice President?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Bancroft is the manager of the Union Pacific Lines and the Short Line—the Union Pacific Lines west of Green River and east of Huntington, is he not?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Living at Salt Lake?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: He has direct control of the operation of the San Pedro Line, has he not?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who is J. Ross Clark?

Mr. CORNISH: A brother of Senator Clark.

Mr. KELLOGG: He is Second Vice President.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who is R. E. Wells?

Mr. CORNISH: General Manager of the San Pedro Line.

Mr. KELLOGG: From what Line of road did Mr. Wells come to the San Pedro?

Mr. CORNISH: From the Santa Fe or one of its subsidiary lines.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who are the directors of the San Pedro Line?

Mr. CORNISH: Senator W. A. Clark, J. Ross Clark—I cannot give the initials of all of them.

Mr. KELLOGG: E. H. Harriman?

244 Mr. CORNISH: Yes. I will try to give them all to you. (Referring to book handed to witness.) Did not you have a letter with the lists?

Mr. KELLOGG (after examining papers on his table): Oh, yes, I think we did—yes, I think they are in. They are the directors elected pursuant to these letters signed by Mr. Clark and Mr. Harriman.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir; February——

Mr. KELLOGG: 1906?

Mr. CORNISH: No——

Mr. KELLOGG: The directors elected in 1906 were W. H. Bancroft, whom you have just described.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: H. I. Bettis (referring to paper), who is he?

Mr. CORNISH: The auditor of the company.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is he also an officer of the Short Line?
Mr. CORNISH: No, that is his sole duty.
Mr. KELLOGG: Was he ever in the employ of the Union Pacific?
Mr. CORNISH: He was.
Mr. KELLOGG: When?
Mr. CORNISH: Well, until about 1903 he was chief clerk in the Omaha office.
Mr. KELLOGG: Chief Clerk in the auditor's office?
Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: He went from the Union Pacific to the San Pedro Line about 1903?
Mr. CORNISH: I think so.
Mr. KELLOGG (referring to paper): W. D. Cornish and E. H. Harriman, I see, are also directors.
Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG (referring to paper): W. R. Kelly at that time was general solicitor of the Union Pacific?
Mr. CORNISH: Mr. Kelley has just gone into the Board this Fall. He was formerly general solicitor of the Union Pacific but left a year ago on account of his health, but having recovered, he took up this work.
Mr. KELLOGG: He is now solicitor for the San Pedro Line?
245 Mr. CORNISH: General counsel, yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Did not you get Mr. Kelly elected or suggest his election to the Board and his appointment as attorney?
Mr. CORNISH: I think I am a very good friend of Judge Kelly. I tried to get him something to do, yes, when he recovered his health, but I did not have control of it.
Mr. KELLOGG: Who did, Mr. Harriman?
Mr. CORNISH: Mutual suggestions—suggestions came to me really from W. A. Clarke.
Mr. KELLOGG: Agreed to by both parties?
Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG (referring to paper): Who is W. G. Kerckhoff?
Mr. CORNISH: A citizen of Los Angeles, not connected with the Southern Pacific or Union Pacific, so far as I know.
Mr. KELLOGG: What is his business, do you know?
Mr. CORNISH: He is a business man. I have forgotten what his business is.
Mr. KELLOGG: R. C. Kerens is of St. Louis, is he not?
Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And Thomas Kerens?
Mr. CORNISH: Of Salt Lake.
Mr. KELLOGG: T. F. Miller?
Mr. CORNISH: He is a citizen of Los Angeles. I do not know his business.
Mr. KELLOGG: W. H. Comstock?
Mr. CORNISH: He is Secretary of the Company.
Mr. KELLOGG: Where did he come from—what company? Do you know?
Mr. CORNISH: No, I do not. He was with the company before I knew anything about him.

Mr. KELLOGG: Judge Cornish, the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific organized an express company within the last few years, have they not?

Mr. CORNISH: What companies?

Mr. KELLOGG: The Union Pacific and Southern Pacific—the Union Express?

246 Mr. CORNISH: No, sir; that company existed before the receivership.

Mr. KELLOGG: Before the receivership?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: What is the Pacific Express Company?

Mr. CORNISH: It is a commercial express company operating over the so-called Gould system and over the Union Pacific system.

Mr. KELLOGG: What company owns it?

Mr. CORNISH: The Union Pacific owns 40%, the Wabash 20%, and the Missouri Pacific 40%.

Mr. KELLOGG: Does the Southern Pacific own any of that?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir; not to my knowledge.

Mr. KELLOGG: Look at Page 242, of Vol. 3, Executive minutes—I mean the Pacific Fruit Express.

Mr. CORNISH: I do not know anything about that.

Mr. KELLOGG: You do not know anything about that?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you recollect such a company having been organized?

Mr. CORNISH: I think I remember it. Judge Lovett spoke of having such a matter on his desk, but I did know it was organized.

Mr. KELLOGG: It appears that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific organized a Fruit Express. Who is there in the Union Pacific that would know about that?

Mr. CORNISH: Counsel, I guess.

Mr. LOVETT: I expect I know more about that than anybody here, Mr. Kellogg.

Mr. KELLOGG: I do not want to make you a witness, Judge Lovett.

Mr. LOVETT: I will give you the papers in reference to it.

Mr. KELLOGG (addressing witness): Well, do you know the Los Angeles Street Railway Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I will offer in evidence Page 107, Vol. 2, of the Executive Committee meeting records of the Southern Pacific

247 meeting of July 23, 1906, so much of it as bears on the acquisition of the stock of the Los Angeles Street Railway, which reads as follows:

"Purchase of Los Angeles Street Railway Company stock. The Chairman submitted telegraphic correspondence between William F. Herrin and himself, on file with the Secretary in reference to the purchase of 45% of the capital stock of the Los Angeles Street Railway Company, from which it appears that in order to acquire the stock and prevent its purchase by other interests, it was necessary to close it on the 19th instant, and Mr. Harriman stated that he had on that day authorized Mr. Herrin to purchase it for $4,750,000, to be paid as follows: $375,000 cash; $1,125,000 payable August 18, 1906; $500,000, January 20, 1907; $500,000, July 20, 1907; $500,000 Jan. 20, 1908; $590,000, July 20, 1898; $500,000, January 20, 1909; $750,000, July 20, 1909; all deferred payments to bear interest at the rate of 4% from July 23, 1906."

It was unanimously resolved "that the action of the Chairman in purchasing 45,000 shares of shares of the Los Angeles Street Railway under the terms and conditions above set forth, be and the same is hereby ratified and approved."

What property did the Los Angeles Street Railway Company own?

Mr. CORNISH: I cannot give you an accurate and intelligent description of the property. It is the Street Railway Company in Los Angeles. I do not know whether I am on that Company Line or on the Interurban.

Com'r LANE: These are the Lines owned by H. E. Huntington, are they not?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is this Mr. Huntington's interest, do you know?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not know.

Mr. KELLOGG: Did this company own a line of railway from Los Angeles to the Seaport?

Mr. CORNISH: I cannot tell you.

Mr. KELLOGG: You do not know about that?

248 Mr. CORNISH: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who would know about this—anybody but Mr. Harriman?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not know. I cannot think of anyone here that is familiar with physical situation at Los Angeles. He would have to use a map. Perhaps Mr. Kirker could tell.

Com'r LANE: Do they own a line of railroad to the coast?

Mr. KELLOGG: They own a line, a commercial line to the coast, I understand. Can you tell? (addressing Judge Lovett.)

Mr. LOVETT: I do not know of their owning a commercial line, unless a street railway line is a commercial line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They do an express business?

Mr. LOVETT: Not that I have heard of.

Com'r HARLAN: Does it appear that line was bought by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific, to prevent it falling into the hands of other interests,—to prevent its purchase by other interests.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If they have a line running to the coast, it might be useful in bringing passengers to Los Angeles to the railroad.

Mr. CORNISH: What is the date of that meeting?

Mr. KELLOGG: July 23, 1906.

Mr. LOVETT: I suppose the members of the Executive Committee know about it. I am fairly familiar with it and have no objection to giving the Commission the information.

Mr. CHAIRMAN: I beg pardon?

Mr. LOVETT: I am a member of the Executive Committee and was present when that action was taken.

Mr. KELLOGG: I would be very glad to have Judge Lovett make a statement.

Mr. CORNISH: I wish to explain here my inability to discuss this resolution. I was in the West at the time and was not a member of that Committee. I did not know anything about it until after I returned and it was an accomplished fact.

249 Mr. KELLOGG (referring to book): I offer in evidence also a resolution of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific, Vol. 2, Page 125, of October 11, 1906, as follows:

"Purchase of Utah Light & Railway Company stock. The Chairman submitted an agreement, dated September 28, 1906, made in his name, but for and on behalf of this company, with Le Grand Young, for the purchase of three-fifths or more of the common and preferred stock of the Utah Light & Railway Company, and in consideration of same it was unanimously resolved, that the agreement dated September 28, 1906, between E. H. Harriman and Le Grand Young for the purchase by said Harriman for the account of this company of three-fifths of the common and preferred stock of the Utah Light & Railway Company at the price and on the conditions set forth in said agreement, be and the same is hereby ratified and approved."

What property did the Utah Light & Railway Company own, do you know, Mr. Cornish?

Mr. CORNISH: A general railway street system in Salt Lake and an electric power plant and a line of service from Ogden to Salt Lake; perhaps other properties.

Com'r HARLAN: What is the distance?

Mr. CORNISH: 37½ miles.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is that a street railway?

Mr. CORNISH: I think it is a power line. There is no street railway between Salt Lake and Ogden.

Mr. KELLOGG: It is a line of electric wires?

Mr. CORNISH: Conveying power to Salt Lake.

Com'r HARLAN: Do you know what policy the road was trying to work out in making that purchase?

Mr. CORNISH: I had nothing personally to do with the purchase, but my understanding is that it was known in a general way that this property was for sale, and we were very much interested as a railroad in Salt Lake with the Union Pacific and the Short Line, and it was deemed an advantageous purchase for the com-

250 pany to make, whichever company made it. I do not remember now which company made that.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Well, they all get into Salt Lake by the Oregon Short Line.

Com'r LANE: Was it for the same reason that you bought the Los Angeles Street Railway stock?

Mr. CORNISH: That I have no reason for knowing. I do not know the reason.

Com'r LANE: Do you know whether that purchase was made in pursuit of a policy to get control of street railways and Interurban Roads in Southern California?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not know.

Com'r LANE: Do they own any other street railway lines in Southern California?

Mr. CORNISH: As I remember, some three years ago, I think, the Southern Pacific bought an interest in the Interurban Line in Southern California that operates outside of California, and it was controlled by Mr. Huntington.

Com'r LANE: Do you understand that Mr. Huntington no longer has an interest in the Los Angeles Street Railway?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not know how that is.

Com'r LANE: It was not Mr. Huntington's interest that this corporation bought?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not know anything about that.

Mr. LOVETT: Probably I better make a statement.

Mr. KELLOGG: I am perfectly willing, if the gentleman desires to.

Mr. LOVETT: I have no desire to make a statement, but if the Commission want the information, I shall be glad to give it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is familiar with it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Let us go on. You say that some time ago the Southern Pacific also bought an interest in the Interurban Line?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where are those Lines?

Mr. CORNISH: They run from Los Angeles through and 251 out of the town into the surrounding country. Just where, I do not know.

Mr. KELLOGG: Just how many miles of railway are there, do you know?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do they run to Santa Monica and San Pedro?

Mr. CORNISH: There are lines running there but I do not know what lines.

Mr. KELLOGG: What interest has the Southern Pacific in the Interurban Line?

Mr. CORNISH: I cannot recall it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know whether it has a controlling interest or a minority interest?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir; I do not.

Mr. KELLOGG: You do not know?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Can you find out about that between now and two o'clock?

Mr. CORNISH: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then I will ask you now about another matter. What interest had the Southern Pacific in buying a street railway line in Salt Lake? Its lines of railway do not run into Salt Lake.

Mr. CORNISH: No, but it does business in and out of Salt Lake, and this property is in Ogden as well as Salt Lake, and the Southern Pacific takes care of that country west—takes care of the Salt Lake Basin, the Salt Lake Valley.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is through the Central Pacific Line and the San Pedro Line.

Mr. CORNISH: No, through the Central Pacific. I say the property is partly in Ogden and partly in Salt Lake.

Mr. KELLOGG: It has no line of railway—the Central Pacific or Southern Pacific—from Ogden to Salt Lake City?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is 38 miles?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

252 Mr. KELLOGG: That line belongs to the Short Line Company?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: But the Southern Pacific thought it should acquire a street railway in Salt Lake City?

Mr. CORNISH: It seems so.

Mr. KELLOGG: You do not know the reason for that?

Mr. CORNISH: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, about March 23, 1901, I notice that the Union Pacific was authorized to issue one hundred millions of common stock—I will show you the statement. (Handing paper to witness.) That was authorized about March, 1901.

Mr. CORNISH: I believe so.

Mr. KELLOGG: About that time one hundred million dollars of convertible bonds were issued by the Union Pacific, were they not?

Mr. CORNISH: I believe so.

Mr. KELLOGG: These bonds were convertible into that common stock, were they not, at par?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And those bonds were sold?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And about one hundred million dollars was realized?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not remember the amount. I do not keep the books.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know whether they were sold at less than par?

Mr. CORNISH: I presume so. I do not remember now.

Mr. KELLOGG: Sold through Kuhn, Loeb & Co.?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not remember.

Mr. KELLOGG: Those bonds have been converted into the common stock of the Union Pacific Company, have they not, with the exception of about $500,000?

Mr. CORNISH: So I understand.

Mr. KELLOGG: So, about $99,450.00 of those bonds have been converted into $99,450.00 of common stock of the Union Pacific Railway.

253 Mr. CORNISH: Something like that; I cannot verify your figures.

Mr. KELLOGG: Which we will practically call $100,000,000. That $100,000,000, which is represented by the issued and outstanding common stock of the Union Pacific is the money the Union Pacific has used in speculating in stocks, is it not?

Mr. MILBURN: I do not think that is a proper question.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Why not?
Mr. MILBURN: Ask what it was used for.
Mr. KELLOGG: I want to know that generally.
Mr. MILBURN: I do not think it is up to the dignity of the examination as it has been conducted. It is a question with animus.
Mr. KELLOGG: Not a bit.
Mr. MILBURN: Yes, it is.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, to buy and sell stocks.
Mr. CORNISH: What is the question?
Mr. KELLOGG: That $100,000,000, realized from the issue of the Union Pacific common stock is the money that has been used for acquiring stocks of various railway lines, is it not?
Mr. MILBURN: We sold them.
Mr. CORNISH: I do not know how I could trace that. The money came into the treasury and property has been bought and Lines have been constructed and grades changed and improvements of every kind made and money paid out of the treasury, and at the same time stocks have been bought and sold—and I do not know.
Mr. KELLOGG: About 1901, about the time that stock issue was authorized, the Union Pacific Company bought over $80,000,000, par value, of the stock of the Northern Pacific Railroad, did it not?
Mr. CORNISH: I cannot remember.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, you remember that in 1901, it bought over 400,000 shares of the preferred stock and over 370,000 shares of the common stock, don't you?
Mr. CORNISH: If I say "Yes," Mr. Kellogg, I would verify
254 the figures. I have not thought of that for years.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, you know there was $155,000,000 of Northern Pacific stock, don't you?
Mr. CORNISH: I know there was a large quantity of it, yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: About $155,000,000 was it not?
Mr. CORNISH: About that, yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And you know that the Union Pacific acquired about the time that stock was issued, the majority of the stock, preferred and common, together.
Mr. CORNISH: I so understood; yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, now, the Union Pacific did not have the money in the Treasury from operation of its lines to buy any such amount of stock.
Mr. CORNISH: I assume not.
Mr. KELLOGG: And that issue of convertible bonds and that issue of stock of $100,000,000 was primarily made to enable the Union Pacific to buy such stocks, was it not?
Mr. CORNISH: I think not. I did not understand it so.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, was not that the real purpose?
Mr. CORNISH: I think not.
Mr. KELLOGG: That is what it was used for, was it not?
Mr. CORNISH: As I have explained, money must have gone into the Treasury and money must have been used out of the Treasury, but my recollection is the contrary as to that, that that was the purpose of it.

Mr. KELLOGG: There was not money enough in the Treasury to buy it but for that bond issue, was there?

Mr. CORNISH: No, but my recollection, Mr. Kellogg, is, that the Northern Pacific purchase had nothing to do with the issue of the bonds or the purpose of issuing the bonds at the time the bonds were issued. It was something that came a little later.

Mr. KELLOGG: Let us see about that. The Northern Pacific purchase was made about March, 1901, was it not?

Mr. CORNISH: I cannot remember the dates.

255 Mr. KELLOGG: Between March 1st and the 8th of May, 1901, the Union Pacific bought that stock, did it not?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not remember the dates.

Mr. KELLOGG: What?

Mr. CORNISH: I do not remember the dates. It was along in that spring.

Mr. KELLOGG: They did not buy anything after the day of the panic, did they?

Mr. CORNISH: I did not buy any, and had nothing to do with the purchase. I do not know what they did.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who did that?

Mr. CORNISH: It must have been done under Mr. Harriman's direction, I suppose, or the Executive Committee. I had nothing to do with it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you had anything to do with the purchase and sale of these various stocks?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Kellogg, here is the resolution under which the convertible bonds were issued by the Southern Pacific (presenting book to Mr. Kellogg), and here is a copy of the circular (presenting paper).

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean the Union Pacific?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, sir. This is a copy of the circular I referred to yesterday as probably explaining somewhat the purpose. It refers only to forty millions applied to the purchase of the Southern Pacific stock.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The resolution was put in yesterday.

Mr. LOVETT: That goes on in that connection, that at the same meeting when the issue of a hundred millions of convertible bonds was authorized, it was found necessary to increase the authorized capital stock of the company to a like amount, so that as the bonds were offered for conversion, stock could be issued. That proceeding is explained in the resolution. As to the details—as to what was done with the rest of the money, I have not got that information yet. I suppose the resolution states it in a general way.

The CHAIRMAN: Judge Lovett, do the minutes of the 256 Board of Directors or the Executive Committee, authorizing the issue of those securities, and the circular issued at that time, purport to show the purpose of their issue?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, Mr. Chairman. Of course, you understand that in the form of resolution authorizing the issue of bonds of that sort, general terms are used.

The CHAIRMAN: Of course.

Mr. LOVETT: Quite general terms are used in the resolution. The circular then states that the proceeds of forty millions of bonds are to be applied to the purchase of Southern Pacific stock or to the paying for Southern Pacific stock that has been bought.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is forty millions.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, forty millions. As to what appropriation was made of the rest of it I do not know. That will appear from the books.

The CHAIRMAN: Does a circular or other announcement issued at that time purport to show for what purpose the other sixty millions of securities were issued.

Mr. LOVETT: Only the resolution. It may have been to replenish the treasury for expenditures already made in the improvement of the road and purchase of equipment. We will get that up, but cannot do it overnight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You can have that made up?

Mr. LOVETT: If the books show it. As Mr. Mahl explained yesterday, the money is not ear marked in any way. Just what the books show I do not know. It will take some time to get that up, but we will furnish the information.

Mr. KELLOGG: In a general way, Mr. Cornish, it was not necessary to borrow one hundred millions on convertible bonds and issue one hundred millions of stock at that time to finance the road unless it was going to buy or did buy some stock, was it?

Mr. CORNISH: My recollection is that the company was quite heavily in debt on account of purchases of road and betterments. Extraordinary betterments had accumulated and they had not been financed, as the phrase is, and the purchase of the Southern 257 Pacific being in contemplation, the subject of financing for the advances, as they call them, and the purchase of the Southern Pacific was considered, and they made up this form of bond, providing for one hundred million dollars of bonds, and I think it states there (referring to circular) that bonds not required in that purchase be used for corporate purposes, or left it open to the Board of Directors to make disposition of the bonds as occasion might arise. I cannot recall the items, but I remember such items as the purchase of the Julesburg Cut-off, and other large sums had not been taken care of.

Mr. KELLOGG: The first circular issued in reference to the one hundred million dollars of bonds states that forty millions are now offered for subscription for the purpose of buying the Southern Pacific stock?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG (referring to circular): That is the first circular?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I will have that marked. (Same is marked Exhibit 1, Cornish.) Is there anything said there about financing the road and paying for improvements?

(Handing circular to witness.)

Mr. CORNISH: No, I think not, in this (referring to circular).

Mr. LOVETT: I can furnish a copy of the mortgage also.

Mr. CORNISH: I think it will be found in the mortgage.

Com'r LANE: Did you state that the Union Pacific was in debt at that time a large sum, approximating forty million dollars?

Mr. CORNISH: That is my recollection—no, not approximating forty millions, but a large sum.

Com'r LANE: How much?

Mr. CORNISH: I cannot recall.

Com'r LANE: It had no surplus of any kind?

258 Mr. CORNISH: Technically, and by the books it might have an operating surplus, but a treasury surplus, no.

Com'r LANE: State the distinction, please.

Mr. CORNISH: They keep accounts of operation by themselves for Interstate Commerce Commission purposes and general purposes of keeping check on the operation of the road. From that, is derived the account of the earnings from operation. It works out finally to a question of profit or loss. The other accounts, the general accounts of the company, the general expenses outside of operation and purchases and sales go into the general account, and they are only handled in connection with the operation account and state a final balance of the condition of the company.

Com'r LANE: You mean by that the purchase and sale of property, or the purchase and sale of stock or securities?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: Might it be that you might not have a treasury surplus owing to your investments outside of your railroad, and yet be entitled to an operating surplus?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: From the income of the road?

Mr. CORNISH: We might not have the cash in the treasury on account of it being paid out for corporate purposes.

Com'r LANE: Do you recollect just what the condition of the operating surplus was at the time of the issue of this circular?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir; I have not had my attention called to it and do not recollect.

Com'r LANE: Could you incorporate that in the statement you make, please, just what the condition of your operating surplus was—whether you had, as a railroad, a surplus or not?

Mr. LOVETT: We can furnish, of course, and will furnish, if the Commission desires it, a copy of the general balance sheet at that time, exhibiting the condition of the company. I under-

259 stand from what Mr. Cornish says of the operating surplus, that what may appear from the books as a surplus does not necessarily mean a surplus in cash; it may be investments and other property. We will furnish a copy of the balance sheet which I suppose is what you want, at that time.

Com'r LANE: I want to be clear about it. As I understand the statement, it is this: that in operating Union Pacific Railroad, you might have made a profit, which profit would appear as an operating surplus, but that that profit might be transferred to another account, which would be an investment account—that you could take the money that ordinarily would be credited to the surplus account, and invest it in stocks and outside investments so that there would be an actual deficit in the treasury, and yet a real operating surplus. Is that right?

Mr. MILBURN: You might buy ten millions of rolling stock with five millions of surplus, and go in debt five million dollars.

Com'r LANE: I do not understand that that would be an investment outside of the railroad.

Mr. MILBURN: But it could be used that way.

Mr. CORNISH: My understanding is that the operating surplus was not being carried into any other account and disposed of that way. You say an account is carried into profit and loss and disappears. The fact might be that the company would by its operation be making money, and yet be a borrower of cash for other purposes, and in the summary of accounts altogether, it would appear that it had a floating debt.

Com'r LANE: That is what I meant.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then Mr. Cornish, if you will have made up a statement showing the time of issue and the amount realized from the one hundred millions of convertible bonds and the dates they were severally issued and converted into common stock——

Mr. LOVETT (interrupting): Mr. Kellogg, if you will allow me right there, you are asking a good deal. You are asking the date when these bonds were converted. Every day, Mr. Chairman—I suppose there was not a business day for the last four or five 260 years, or three or four years, that some of these bonds were not converted into stock.

Com'r LANE: Let it be by years—the total amount in years.

Mr. KELLOGG: This will satisfy us; when the bonds were sold, I understand they commenced converting them at a certain time. Were they convertible all the time?

Mr. LOVETT: A few were converted at first after the stock increased in market value to par or above. They then began converting the bonds into stock. Of course, the one hundred millions was not issued at one time, but only as the bonds were converted at the option of the holder. That right to convert expired May 1st, last. It was extended a few months and practically all the one hundred millions had been converted at that time. Those that were not converted, five hundred and odd thousand dollars, I think, were subsequently called for the redemption of the mortgage.

Mr. KELLOGG: I will start over again. The amount and dates of the sale of the bonds, the amount received, and to whom sold; a general statement of about how many were converted each year, if conveniently made; the purchase and date of purchase and amount paid for all stocks after the date of that circular, which is in February, 1901, and the sale of all stocks thereafter and the date and the amount received and from whom stocks were purchased and to whom they were sold, if you can show it. That will show about the transaction under the convertible bonds, will it not, Judge Cornish?

Mr. CORNISH: It will show what occurred.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes. Well, that is all we want. Now there are one or two other questions I may want to ask Judge Cornish after lunch, but he wants to consult records and so forth. That is all now.

Mr. LOVETT: Do you expect to recall him?

Mr. KELLOGG: I may want to recall him, but I may not recall him to-day, so if you want to ask him any questions, you may do so.

261 Mr. LOVETT: I have no questions now. I may have some later.

The CHAIRMAN: Have you concluded your examination?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

The CHAIRMAN: I want to ask you one or two questions myself to clear up a matter. When did this new line from Salt Lake City to Los Angeles go into operation?

Mr. CORNISH: The line was completed about May, 1905.

The CHAIRMAN: It has been in operation for a year or more?

Mr. CORNISH: The through line, yes, sir; the line operated as a road in California and in Utah and Nevada; and the delay was in connecting the two ends. That was concluded, so that the line was put into full operations about May, 1905.

The CHAIRMAN: When did it become available in connection with the Union Pacific as a through line for freight and passenger travel to Southern California?

Mr. CORNISH: They commenced shipping freight in a very small way about May, 1905, and the business has grown up from that time, both passenger and freight.

The CHAIRMAN: When were through passenger trains first operated, or about when?

Mr. CORNISH: I think about the time I stated; I should say about the 1st of June, 1905.

The CHAIRMAN: About what is the distance from Salt Lake City to Los Angeles?

Mr. CORNISH: About 780 miles.

The CHAIRMAN: Less than from Salt Lake City to San Francisco.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: And about what is the distance from Salt Lake City to Ogden to Portland, Oregon?

Mr. CORNISH: I don't remember just off hand; I will furnish that for the record; I don't remember.

262 The CHAIRMAN: Probably about the same as from San Francisco?

Mr. CORNISH: About; I should think about 800 miles.

The CHAIRMAN: If there are no further questions to be asked Judge Cornish at this time he may be excused.

Mr. MILBURN: I would like to ask one question. Judge Cornish, in a contract or traffic agreement that was referred to yesterday, a provision was called attention to which referred to the rates, tariffs, and charges of this San Pedro Road for any local business which might be the subject of competition between it and the Southern Pacific Railway Company. What is the territorial region of any such possible competition in local business?

Mr. CORNISH: It is all in Southern California below Mojave, practically confined to the lines from San Pedro, Los Angeles and Pasadena and then from there over to San Bernardino.

Mr. MILBURN: All confined to traffic in that region which you have mentioned, of Southern California?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: And that is the practical interpretation which you have given to that clause?

Mr. CORNISH: Always, yes, sir, that is our understanding of the contract.

Mr. MILBURN: It says local business in the agreement, which may be the subject of competition between these two roads.

Com'r LANE: Yes. I suppose the word local is a word of various meanings, as applied to railroads?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, but it would be confined to that region.

Com'r LANE: It might be a narrow region or more extensive. What is the difference between your rates on the Southern Pacific to Ogden and over the Clark line.

Mr. CORNISH: Really, sir, I cannot answer that.

Com'r LANE: Do you know if there is any difference or not?

263 Mr. CORNISH: I don't know anything about the rates.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Stubbs will answer all that.

Com'r LANE: Well, the witness does not know?

Mr. CORNISH: No.

Com'r LANE: I was wondering if this word local might not extend through Nevada?

Mr. CORNISH: I always understood not.

Mr. MILBURN: A large construction of local.

The CHAIRMAN: Is that all?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: You know nothing about the traffic end of it?

Mr. CORNISH: No, I don't know anything about the rates, but I hear a good deal of discussion and have a good deal to do at times about traffic matters.

Mr. KELLOGG: Local business is a matter of business which might be entirely done on the rails of the San Pedro Company, is it not?

Mr. CORNISH: Not in that case with reference to that contract, no.

Com'r LANE: It is any business which you choose to call local, is it not?

Mr. CORNISH: I think I would always have a reason and the reason in this case with reference to this contract, Mr. Commissioner, is that there was an effort here to harmonize the handling of the territory of Southern California in the Los Angeles district, and the San Pedro Company wanted to get in on the Southern Pacific lines so as to handle business in and out, and it only went as far north as Los Angeles, and it was conceded in this contract by the Southern Pacific that it should do business as far as the parallel of Mojave, giving it a right into the Southern Pacific territory below that; and as a concession on the part of the—not a concession but a part of the understanding and consideration of that, the San Pedro undertook as far as this territory and this business was concerned to not interfere unduly with the Southern Pacific's own business on its own lines, or in competitive territory.

264 Com'r LANE: Does the Santa Fe run over Southern Pacific Lines in Southern California?

Mr. CORNISH: From Mojave to Needles, yes sir.

Com'r LANE: In consideration, or for the same considerations, did you enter into a similar arrangement with the Santa Fe?

Mr. CORNISH: Who entered it, the Southern Pacific?

Com'r LANE: Yes, the Southern Pacific.

Mr. CORNISH: It is so long since I have read the contract I don't remember.

Com'r LANE: You have a contract, however.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, there is a contract; it is very old.

Com'r LANE: You do not recall now whether in that contract you agreed that local rates shall be the same between the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe?

Mr. CORNISH: No, sir; I don't recall the terms of the contract at all.

Mr. LOVETT: We will furnish a copy of the contract.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has that contract?

Com'r LANE: I suppose that is filed with the Commission, isn't it?

Mr. LOVETT: I think not.

Com'r LANE: It is a contract relating to traffic, is it not?

Mr. LOVETT: No, it is a contract by which the Southern Pacific leases until 1979 to the Atchison that portion of its line between Mojave and Needles. It involves no traffic at all. We would have sold them the lines, if it had not been for several mortgages. We have leased it to them. It is an old document.

Com'r LANE: Do I understand, Judge, in that contract, relating to that piece of road there is nothing whatever said as to any kind of agreement between the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe as to local rates in Southern California?

Mr. LOVETT: I am quite sure of that; we have printed copies of that, and I will furnish you copies this afternoon. It is very old.

Com'r LANE: Is there any other contract between yourself and the Santa Fe?

265 Mr. LOVETT: Not so far as I know.

Com'r LANE: Referring to rates in Southern California?

Mr. LOVETT: Not so far as I know. I never heard of it.

Com'r LANE: If there is such a contract, would you kindly produce it?

Mr. CORNISH: I will try to find it. I know of none.

Mr. KELLOGG: I see the San Pedro leases some trackage from the Santa Fe also.

Mr. CORNISH: From a point between Colton and San Bernardino over to Daggett, or over the hill.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is there a contract between the San Pedro and Santa Fe under which they shall maintain rates?

Mr. CORNISH: Not that I know of.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to the construction of the San Pedro line the only way from Southern California to Ogden or Salt Lake was via Sacramento, was it not?

Mr. CORNISH: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And now there are two lines, one via Sacramento and one via the San Pedro line.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And business going from Southern California to Salt Lake entirely over the lines of the San Pedro is local business, is it not, ordinarily local business?

Mr. CORNISH: No, I should call that through business.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, it is local to their line, is it not?

Mr. CORNISH: It is their line of business, yes sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: It is local to that line, isn't it?

Mr. CORNISH: I should not use that phrase, no.

Mr. KELLOGG: It does not go on any other line?

Mr. CORNISH: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Ordinarily in railroading local business is business that is local to the particular line, isn't it?

Mr. MILBURN: It says local business which is competitive.

266 Mr. CORNISH: I do not understand it so.

Mr. KELLOGG: It is business from Salt Lake, and is competitive.

Mr. CORNISH: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: It is local business that is competitive that they agree to maintain under that contract?

Mr. CORNISH: No, the Southern Pacific has no business to Salt Lake.

The CHAIRMAN: Does that finish the examination of Judge Cornish?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

The CHAIRMAN: Then he is excused?

Mr. KELLOGG: Until two o'clock.

The CHAIRMAN: Are you going to call another witness before lunch?

Mr. MILBURN: I would like very much if the recess could be taken at this moment instead of at one o'clock to enable me to do something I have to do in the meantime.

At 12:40 P. M. recess was taken until 2:00 P. M.

After Recess.

2 P. M.

The CHAIRMAN: Gentlemen, you may proceed.

W. V. S. THORNE, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live, Mr. Thorne?

Mr. THORNE: New York City.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. THORNE: I am director of purchases of the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you kindly state what your functions and duties are as director of purchases of these various lines?

267 Mr. THORNE: Well, they are to purchase locomotives, cars, rails, bridges or any other material which the railroad companies use in large quantities and where it is advantageous to make an agreement direct with the manufacturer where he can concentrate our business with one manufacturer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, now, do you have on the various lines of the system purchasing agents, also?

Mr. THORNE: We have local purchasing agents.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And where are these local purchasing agents located, and who are they?

Mr. THORNE: Mr. J. W. Griffith is local purchasing agent of the Union Pacific at Omaha. Mr. Hutchinson is purchasing agent of the Oregon Short Line at Salt Lake City. Mr. Koehler is purchasing agent of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company. Mr. I. O. Rhoades is purchasing agent of the Southern Pacific Company at San Francisco; and Mr. N. P. Randolph is purchasing agent of the Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad and Steamship Company at New Orleans.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is the Pacific Mail Steamship Company under your jurisdiction?

Mr. THORNE: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't have anything to do with the purchases for the ships?

Mr. THORNE: In some of the contracts which I make, which cover material used by the Pacific Mail & Steamship Company, I add a clause, if I think it desirable, whereby the manufacturer agrees to furnish the material covered by the agreement to the Pacific Mail Company, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, at the price that they quote to the railroad companies, if the steamship company desires to buy it, and then I send a copy of that agreement to the general manager of the steamship company, and he can make use of it or not, as he pleases. In some cases he does, and in some cases he does not. I do not make any agreement that will bind the steamship company; and I am not an officer of that company.

268 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Thorne, you named these various gentlemen who are purchasing agents of the different lines of roads, do they make reports to you of their action?

Mr. THORNE: Not unless I ask them particularly about something.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They do not?

Mr. THORNE: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you do call on them for information?

Mr. THORNE: Oh, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is sent to you?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, do you make contracts with manufacturers in which you act for more than one of these lines at the same time?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, I suppose you buy a lot of cars or locomotives, do you sign, as director of purchases, say, the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, or the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. THORNE: Well, in buying locomotives we generally buy them in large lots; say 250 at a time. And the contract would then be made in the name of the Union Pacific Company, and later when the locomotive builders get these locomotives under construction the information is then sent to them as to which part of the different lines they are to be assigned to, and at that time, after they have that information, they make their bills against whatever railroads the locomotives are assigned to. At the time the locomotives are originally ordered we don't know where they are going, and we don't furnish that information to the locomotive builders sometimes until six months after the locomotives are ordered.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that in the first instance you make a contract for an entire assignment of locomotives in the name of the Union Pacific Railroad?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

269 Mr. SEVERANCE: And then afterwards distribute them as may be determined?

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the invoices are made against the particular line to which they are assigned?

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is it with cars, freight cars?

Mr. THORNE: The same way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And with passenger cars?

Mr. THORNE: The same way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The same way? What official of the allied lines determines what number of these locomotives or cars shall go to one system or the other?

Mr. THORNE: Well, Mr. Kruttschnitt, the director of maintenance and operation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He distributes them?

Mr. THORNE: He gives me information as to what is wanted, and then that request goes to the Executive Committee for approval, and then comes to me.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say, "Goes to the executive committee": you mean the executive committee of the Union Pacific?

Mr. THORNE: Well, the executive committee of the Company concerned, I suppose. I don't know where Mr. Kruttschnitt gets authority from.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, now, Judge Lovett suggests how this is done; see if that is your understanding. That you will, for instance, give an order for 250 locomotives. Now, when these locomotives are completed, or a substantial number of them completed, Mr. Kruttschnitt determines how many he will send up to one line, or another line, and then he makes up, signing on behalf of the Southern Pacific, we will say, or the Union Pacific, as the case may be, a requisition for so many locomotives.

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He sends these requisitions into Mr. Harriman, who is the chairman of the executive committee of all the lines, and Mr. Kruttschnitt's requisitions are voted by the executive committee of the particular line to which Mr. Harriman refers these requisitions—is that right?

270

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the modus operandi of distributing these locomotive-.

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So you don't remember of any case, do you, where Mr. Kruttschnitt's recommendations or requests were disapproved?

Mr. THORNE: I have no means of knowing whether they are disapproved or not, until approved and come to me approved.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You haven't known of any such case where he has made a distribution which has been disapproved?

Mr. THORNE: I do not get the distribution until after it is approved.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You get the distribution after it has gone through the Executive Committee?

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say that is the same method employed in the case of cars, both freight and passenger?

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, do you buy other supplies, aside from locomotives and cars?

Mr. THORNE: I make contracts covering various other supplies, copies of which are sent to the local purchasing agents, and they buy under those agreements direct from the manufacturers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That means then doesn't it—take the case of steel rails?

Mr. THORNE: I buy rails direct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You buy rails from the manufacturer?

Mr. THORNE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You buy them on requisition for them, or do you buy a certain number that seems to you advisable to contract for?

Mr. THORNE: That is handled about the same way that locomotives are. There is a requisition made out early in the summer as to what the requirements will be for the following calendar year.

271

Mr. SEVERANCE: For each line?

Mr. THORNE: No, the aggregate requirements.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who makes that out?

Mr. THORNE: Mr. Kruttschnitt.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Kruttschnitt makes that out and in that requisition he does not state for which line those rails are needed?

Mr. THORNE: No sir; he don't know at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He don't know?

Mr. THORNE: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But he estimates as best he can the number of tons of rails that will be needed by the different lines during the year?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he notifies you of that aggregate?

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then you make a contract?

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then, how are these rails distributed, on requisitions the same as the cars and locomotives?

Mr. THORNE: The same way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You spoke a moment ago of certain material you would contract for, and of which contracts you notified the local purchasing agent—what class of materials are those?

Mr. THORNE: Those are kinds of materials which they are constantly ordering from time to time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Lumber?

Mr. THORNE: For which they have requisitions every week or every month.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Lumber, you mean?

Mr. THORNE: No, not lumber, but things like car wheels, car couplers, brake-beams, axles, springs, or any other parts of cars, and locomotives or supplies for general use.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, in the case of such articles you make a contract with the manufacturer or dealer?

272 Mr. THORNE: I make it with the manufacturers direct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Manufacturers direct?

Mr. THORNE: I make it with the manufacturers direct in almost every case.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you make a contract for all that may be needed for the lines, or do you make a contract for a specific number?

Mr. THORNE: All that may be needed, as a rule, if it is advantageous to do so. It varies. Some manufacturers could not supply all we need, and other manufacturers, on account of location, would not be in position to take care of the requirements on all parts of the system. Some manufacturers agreed to furnish all we used for all lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is to say as to these very small articles, you make contracts in the case of a manufacturer who is able to supply all you may need for all of the articles of that type that may be needed by any part of the system, and then you notify your local purchasing agents, and they may call on them for the deliveries when they are needed?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the case with a great deal of your purchasing?

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir, that covers a large part of our purchases.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they fix a price—you fix the price by contract with the manufacturer?

Mr. THORNE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the amount that will be taken up under that contract will be determined from time to time as the needs of the line demands?

Mr. THORNE: In some agreements a maximum and a minimum amount is stated, but in most of them they furnish whatever we will require in that line; they agree to furnish whatever we will require in that line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is it with lumber?

Mr. THORNE: Purchasers of lumber are made entirely by 273 the local purchasing agent. They come from local sources. There is no one central point from which we could buy lumber to advantage.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have more than one purchasing agent on any one of the several lines making up your system, take the Southern Pacific, for instance, running from Portland to New Orleans, do you have more than one purchasing agent?

Mr. THORNE: The purchasing agent at Portland purchases for the lines in Oregon of the Southern Pacific Company. The purchasing agent at Salt Lake of the Oregon Short Line, also purchases for the Southern Pacific line east of Sparks, Nevada.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By whom were you appointed, Mr. Thorne, as purchasing agent of these lines?

Mr. THORNE: By Mr. Harriman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you appointed for the various lines at the same time?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As director of purchases?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your position was created, was it not, after the acquisition of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Judge Lovett suggests when was your position created?

Mr. THORNE: I think about three years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have your office in New York?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And your salary is distributed over the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. THORNE: I don't know how it is distributed. The accounting department does that, and I have no knowledge how it is distributed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All you are interested in is to get the money?

The CHAIRMAN: From whom do you get the money?

Mr. THORNE: I get the money by check from the treasurer.
274 The CHAIRMAN: Treasurer of what?

Mr. THORNE: Treasurer of the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It comes to you from the Union Pacific?

Mr. THORNE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Any questions, Mr. Milburn?

Mr. MILBURN: No sir.

The CHAIRMAN: That seems to be all, Mr. Thorne. You may be excused.

Witness excused.

ALEXANDER MILLAR recalled:

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you please turn to page 288 of the meeting of March 31st, 1903, of the Short Line Company?

Mr. MILLAR: Board or committee?

Mr. KELLOGG: I think it is the executive committee.

Mr. MILLAR: Give me the page again.

Mr. KELLOGG: 288, March 31st, 1903.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that about three hundred thousand shares of Southern Pacific stock for sale?

Mr. MILLAR: No. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is right, that is the resolution.

Mr. MILLAR: That is it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, will you please—that is a resolution of the executive committee of the Oregon Short Line Railway, is it?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you please read that resolution?

The CHAIRMAN: Adopted on what day?

Mr. MILLAR: March 31, 1903.

Mr. KELLOGG: March what?

Mr. MILLAR: 31, 1903.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. MILLAR (reading): "The chairman said that pursuant to authority conferred upon him by the executive committee he had sold three hundred thousand shares of Southern Pacific stock at 57½ payable $6,000,000 in cash and the balance, 275 $11,250,000, on or at the option of the purchaser at any time before April 30, 1904, with interest at the rate of 6% per annum; the deferred payment to be secured by the deposit of satisfactory collateral, the market value of which shall be maintained at $1,000,000 in excess of such deferred payment. Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, the action of the chairman was ratified and confirmed."

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, there was no previous resolution of the board, stockholders, or executive committee or the Short Line for the sale of that stock, that you know of, was there?

Mr. MILLAR: I would hardly answer that one way or the other without examination. I haven't looked for that for the purpose of ascertaining.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, you don't know of any such resolution do you?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't remember it, no sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: March 31, 1903. It says "Pursuant to authority." Will you look at the index and see if you see any other resolution, or if he refers to his general authority as chairman of the executive committee?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have an index there, haven't you?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not find any reference in the index, Mr. Kellogg, but I do not want to be understood that that is conclusive, because the vote which I have just read is not indexed.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know of any such resolution, do you?
Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Of course, your answer in relation to that is subject to correction.
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: If you find any such resolution?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Now, that resolution was authorizing the sale of 300,000 shares of Southern Pacific stock owned by the Oregon Short Line, passed March 31, 1903, wasn't it?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
276 Mr. KELLOGG: Now, it appears by Exhibit No. 3 offered in evidence, that on April 8, 1903, nine days later—eight days later, the Oregon Short Line still owned 900,000 shares of the common stock, does it not?
Mr. MILLAR: The statement shows that, sir. I did not prepare that statement, however; I cannot testify to it.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, so far as you know, you don't know it to be incorrect?
Mr. MILLAR: I don't know it to be correct.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, you don't know it to be incorrect either, do you?
Mr. MILLAR: I don't know, no, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, it is admitted that it is correct.
Mr. MILLAR: By whom?
Mr. KELLOGG: By Mr. Lovett.
Mr. MILLAR: Well——
Mr. KELLOGG: It is admitted on April 8, 1903, the Oregon Short Line owned 900,000 shares Southern Pacific common stock. Assuming that is correct, where did the Short Line get that 300,000 shares? Do you know anything about it?
Mr. MILLAR: No, sir, I do not.
Mr. KELLOGG: Well, now, that stock was bought back again on the 12th day of November, 1903, as appears from the stockholders' and directors' records of the Short Line Company, of November 12, 1903. It was bought back from William Rockefeller, wasn't it?
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: Will you please turn to that resolution?
Mr. MILLAR: Just the date again, please?
Mr. KELLOGG: November 12, 1903.
Mr. MILLAR: Yes, we have it, Mr. Kellogg.
Mr. KELLOGG: Please read that resolution in evidence.
Mr. MILLAR: "A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, November 12, 1903. The chairman reported that in pursuance of a letter received from Mr.
277 William Rockefeller, dated November 5, 1903, and submitted to the Board, he had closed the transaction in respect of the 300,000 shares of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, and that the officers of the company had paid the principal amount involved, together with interest and commissions; and whereupon, on due consideration and discussion, and on motion duly made and seconded, it was resolved that the action of the chairman in the transactions with Mr. Rockefeller relating to said stock of the Southern Pacific Company, be in all things adopted, ratified and approved."

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you the letter referred to therein from Mr. Rockefeller?

Mr. MILLAR: Beg your pardon?

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you the letter referred to therein from Mr. Rockefeller?

Mr. MILLAR: I have.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you let me see it?

Mr. MILLAR: I have a copy in my possession.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, a copy.

Letter marked Exhibit 82, to Mr. Millar's testimony.

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you the letter, Exhibit 82, and ask you if that is a correct copy of the letter from William Rockefeller referred to in the resolution you have read?

Mr. MILLAR: It is.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer this in evidence and desire to read it:

(Copy)

Standard Oil Co., 26 Broadway, New York.

Nov. 5, 1903.

E. H. Harriman, Esq., Chairman Executive Committee, Oregon Short Line R. R. Co.

DEAR SIR: Referring to the agreement entered into between you and me on March 30, 1903, in respect to the 300,000 shares of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, I beg to state that I should be glad to have you to take over the stock now, instead of waiting until the 1st of May, 1904, as originally contemplated. If you are prepared to do this, I am willing to reduce the commission agreed upon to five-eighths of one per cent., viz., $187,500, and shall be ready to close the matter upon receipt of your check for the principal amount involved, with interest at 6%, together with the amount of said commission.

Yours very truly,

(Sgn.) WM. ROCKEFELLER.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know what commission was agreed upon?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not, no, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Were you present at the Board of Directors when that meeting—or the Executive Committee meeting when that agreement was made between Mr. Harriman and Mr. Rockefeller, for the sale of that stock?

Mr. MILLAR: The first resolution to which I have testified?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes; were you present?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you remember any agreement between Mr. Harriman and Mr. Rockefeller as to the sale of that stock?

279 Mr. MILLAR: I do not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Or any discussion?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't remember.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you tell me any reason why, in March, 1903, the Short Line Company would sell Mr. Rockefeller 300,000 shares of that stock, amounting to $30,000,000, and buy it back the following November under an agreement, and pay him $187,500 commission for it?

Mr. MILLAR: I never knew the reason, no, sir.

Mr KELLOGG: You never knew the reason?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You know nothing more about it than what appears there?

Mr. MILLAR: I know the transaction was carried out.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is, you know that this stock was sold to Mr. William Rockefeller in March, 1903, under an agreement that they would take it back within a year?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't recall the terms of the agreement, but I remember the transaction.

Mr. KELLOGG: What do you remember about the transaction? Tell us all you remember about it?

Mr. MILLAR: I remember distinctly delivering the stock and getting the check.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you remember what happened at the meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; I do not recall any of the particulars of that meeting whatever.

Mr. KELLOGG: Did you get the stock back?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not recall whether I took the delivery of the stock; I rather think not—my recollection is I did not.

Mr. KELLOGG: But it was bought back the following November?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, did the Union Pacific pay the same price when they bought it back that it got when it sold it—or the Oregon Short Line rather?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't know about that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Didn't they take it back at the same price
280 they sold it, with 6% interest, and pay him a commission beside?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't recall anything about that part of it, except as stated in the record, a copy of which you have.

Mr. KELLOGG: A copy of the letter you mean?

Mr. MILLAR: In the letter and the original record.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, now, do you know of any other securities belonging to the Short Line or the Union Pacific that was sold to any of the directors of the company and bought back again at a profit?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: This is the only transaction you know?

Mr. MILLAR: The only transaction I know about, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you don't know the reason for that?

Mr. MILLAR: No, I do not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know whether Mr. Rockefeller had any duties to perform with refernce to this stock, as a reason why it was sold to him?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not, no, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Or as a reason why he should get a commission out of it?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know of any of the Southern Pacific stock or Southern Pacific properties, or stocks belonging to the Southern Pacific that has been sold to any of its directors and bought back?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not. I never heard of any such sale.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then, will you turn to the meeting March 26, 1903—Oregon Short Line Executive Committee?

Mr. MILLAR: March 26?

Mr. KELLOGG: Look at a resolution where the chairman reported that he had purchased two steamships from the Atlantic Transport Company for $2,200,000 each, and read it, please.

Mr. MILLAR: "Executive Committee of the Oregon Short 281 Line Railroad Company, March 26, 1903. The chairman reported that pursuant to authority conferred upon him at the meeting of the Executive Committee on February 19, 1903, he had purchased from the Atlantic Transport Company two ocean steamers known in the contract as numbers 5 and 6, now under construction at the New York Shipbuilding yard at Camden, N. J., at an approximate cost of $2,200,000 each, the delivery of which is expected about the end of the present year. Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, the action of the chairman was ratified and confirmed."

Mr. KELLOGG: Please look at the Executive meeting of the Oregon Short Line, page 290, and read the resolution in evidence; will you, please?

Mr. MILLAR: This was a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, held April 6, 1903, at which the following preamble and resolution were on motion duly seconded, unanimously adopted:

Whereas, this company is the owner of certain shares of the capital stock of the Southern Pacific Company, which shares are registered on the books of said Southern Pacific Company in the following names, namely, E. H. Harriman, 456,950 shares; J. P. Adams, 100 shares; C. B. Haines, 400 shares; J. J. Hanauer, 5,000 shares; Siegfried Hayman, 20 shares; Kuhn, Loeb & Co., 111,430 shares; S. Sigman, 9,600 shares E. S. Steinam, 15,200 shares; Rich"—probably Richard E.—"Pestel, 100 shares; and

Whereas the persons above mentioned in whose names said stock is registered, have executed and delivered proxies in respect thereof to E. H. Harriman, Alexander P. Humphrey and Maxwell Evarts to vote upon said shares at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company, to be held on April 8, 1903, and at any and at all adjournments thereof;

Resolved that the actions of the persons above mentioned in whose names certain shares of the capital stock of the Southern 282 Pacific Company owned by this company are registered, in executing and delivering proxies in respect of said shares to

E. H. Harriman, Alexander P. Humphreys and Maxwell Evarts, for use at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company, to be held on April 8, 1903, and at any and all adjournments thereof, be and the same is hereby in all respects authorized, approved and ratified."

That is April 19, 1903.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you turn to the Southern Pacific Executive Committee, volume 1, page 13.

Mr. MILLAR: June 20, 1901?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, establishing traffic headquarters at Chicago; Mr. Harriman's letter to Mr. Hays, of the Southern Pacific. Read that please.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He had better read the whole entry. Something precedes the letter.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, read the whole entry.

Mr. MILLAR: At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific Company held June 30, 1901, the chairman reported that, pursuant to authority given him by the Board of Directors June 6, 1901, he had arranged to establish traffic headquarters of the company at Chicago in connection with the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, in charge of Mr. J. C. Stubbs, and that he had addressed a letter to President Hays in relation thereto, of which the following is a copy:

"NEW YORK, June 18, 1901.

Mr. Charles M. Hays, President, San Francisco, Cal.

DEAR SIR: Effective July 1st, next, the supervision of the traffic of the Southern Pacific Company has been committed to Mr. J. C. Stubbs, who will be responsible directly to the Executive Committee.

Please instruct the several traffic officials to report to Mr.
283 Stubbs. On and after the above date the headquarters of the Traffic Department will be in Chicago, Ill.

Yours truly, E. H. HARRIMAN,
Chairman Executive Committee.

Mr. KELLOGG: Read the rest. Is that all there is of it.

Mr. MILLAR: That is all there is.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Hays was president of the Southern Pacific Company at that time, wasn't he?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Turn to page 16. Read the proceedings submitted to the board and the report of the correspondence with President Hays on the subject of reorganization. State the date of the meeting.

Mr. MILLAR: Have you the heading of it?

Mr. SEVERANCE (indicating): That is it right there.

Mr. MILLAR: Meeting of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific Company held July 18, 1901. Mr. Tweed, chairman of the Board of Directors, made a verbal report upon the correspondence which had heretofore passed between himself and President Hays in relation to the appointment of the officers by the President and its bearing upon the whole subject of reorganization, and submitted his letter to the meeting of July 17, in reference to the appointment of Mr. Fitzhugh and a telegram from President Hays dated July 18, all the details of which Mr. Tweed stated fully to the Committee. Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, the action of the chairman of the Board of Directors as reported to the committee was unanimously approved.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you the correspondence referred to therein?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not feel sure about that. This was a part of Mr. Tweed's record, and——

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you make a memorandum and see if you can furnish it some time later. Mr. Chase, please make a memo-
284 randum of the correspondence referred to on page 16, volume 1 of the Executive Committee reports of the Southern Pacific Company in relation to the reorganization of the Southern Pacific. Ask for the correspondence. Mr. Millar can look it up at some subsequent date as we have not time to-day. Mr. Millar, were you present at that meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: I was.

Mr. KELLOGG: What was the verbal discussion and report?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not recall very distinctly, but I got the impression and have the impression now, that the eastern officers were unable to agree with Mr. Hays as to the organization in San Francisco, and that he had appointed an officer, either without consultation with the eastern office, or a man who was not satisfactory to them; that is my recollection.

Mr. KELLOGG: The eastern officer was Mr. Harriman?

Mr. MILLAR: Mr. Tweed and Mr. Harriman.

Mr. KELLOGG: That was after the purchase of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir, the report was made by Mr. Tweed.

Mr. KELLOGG: What?

Mr. MILLAR: The report was made by Mr. Tweed.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Tweed was at that time chairman of the Boar-?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: But that was after the Union Pacific acquisition, was it not?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Harriman was active at that time?

Mr. MILLAR: He was chairman of the Executive Committee.

Mr. KELLOGG: He was chairman of the Executive Committee?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Page- 31 and 32 of the same book.

Mr. MILLAR: In relation to appointments?

Mr. KELLOGG: In relation to the appointment of comp-
285 troller, general auditor, and assistant comptroller.

Mr. MILLAR: This was a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific Company November 27, 1901. On recommendation of the chairman, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that the duties of Mr. William Mahl, as comptroller of this company, shall be such as may be fixed and determined from time to time by the Board of Directors, Executive Committee or chairman thereof.

"Resolved, further, that the office of assistant comptroller of this company, be and is hereby created, and that H. S. Bradt be and he is hereby appointed such assistant comptroller, with such powers and duties as may be fixed and determined by the Board of Directors, Executive Committee, chairman thereof, or comptroller, from time to time.

"Resolved, further, that Erastus Young be and he is hereby appointed general auditor of this company, with such powers and duties as may be fixed and determined by the Board of Directors, Executive Committee, or chairman thereof from time to time.

"Resolved, further, that the secretary be and is hereby relieved from the work and authority assigned to the comptroller or general auditor.

"Resolved, further, that the title of G. T. Klink be and is hereby changed from general auditor, Pacific system, to auditor, Pacific system."

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Erastus Young was at that time general auditor of the Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLAR: Either auditor or general auditor; I forget the distinction in title.

Mr. KELLOGG: One or the other?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Meeting of June 9, 1904, same volume, I believe.

Mr. MILLAR: Of the Executive Committee?

Mr. KELLOGG: Of the Executive Committee, in relation to the lease of the Chicago office for Mr. Kruttschnitt.

286 Com'r LANE: Is that not already in evidence?

Mr. KELLOGG: No, I believe not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was the other company.

Mr. KELLOGG: That was the other company, yes.

Mr. MILLAR: At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific Company, June 9, 1904, the following action was had: The chairman submitted a lease for floor space in the Merchants Loan & Trust Building, Chicago, for the office of Mr. Kruttschnitt, director of maintenance and operation, for use jointly by the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, for a term of three years, at an annual rental of $11,400, payable monthly in advance. Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, it was resolved that the above lease, now submitted, be and the same is hereby approved and confirmed.

Mr. KELLOGG: Page 67, volume 2, Southern Pacific Executive Committee.

Mr. MILLAR: About advertising, Mr. Kellogg?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, page 67.

Mr. MILLAR: Southern Pacific Executive Committee meeting of March 1, 1906. The chairman submitted a letter from Mr. J. C. Stubbs, traffic director, dated February 23, 1906, enclosing a memorandum showing estimated advertising expenses for system lines for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, of which this company's proportion is $128,500. Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, it was Resolved that the expenditure of $128,500 on advertising for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, be and the same is hereby approved and the chairman's action in authorizing the same was ratified and confirmed.

Mr. KELLOGG: Page 107 of the same volume; meeting of July 23, 1906.

Mr. MILLAR: In relation to what?

Mr. KELLOGG: The purchase of the Coos Bay, Roseberg & Eastern Railroad & Navigation Company.

Mr. MILLAR: At that time the chairman stated he had authorized the purchase from J. D. Spreckles & Bros. Co. for the sum of 287 $1,300,000, all of the property of the Coos Bay, Roseberg & Eastern Railroad & Navigation Company; the Coos Bay & Coquille Valley Railroad Company, including coal lands in Fibre Hill Coal Company and Alluvial Hill Coal Company, with their machinery, buildings, dockage, coal bunkers at San Francisco, and docks, coal bunkers, waterfront property, terminal grounds and town lots at Marshfield, and all property complete in that company which belongs to J. D. Spreckles & Bros. Co., and the entire property, including all bonds to be delivered under the guarantee of J. D. Spreckles & Bros. Co. as free and clear of all incumbrances and liabilities. Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, it was Resolved that the action of the president in authorizing the purchase of the property above described be and the same is hereby approved and confirmed.

Com'r LANE: Does that include any steamships?

Mr. KELLOGG: Did that include the steamships, the Commissioner asks?

Mr. MILLAR: They are not recited in the preamble.

Com'r LANE: Do you know whether any steamships were included?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not. I am not acquainted with that property.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Judge Cornish, do you know whether any steamships were included?

Mr. CORNISH: I understand there were one or two small boats which were included.

Com'r LANE: Running from where to where?

Mr. CORNISH: Running up and down the coast from Coos Bay to San Francisco.

Mr. KELLOGG: Volume 2, page 125—no, that is already in. Page 131.

Mr. MILLAR: Advertising, Mr. Kellogg?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, that is the other letter in relation to advertising.

Mr. MILLAR: Shall I read it?

Mr. KELLOGG: Joint expenses, yes.

Mr. MILLAR: Meeting of the Executive Committee of the 288 Southern Pacific Company, October 25, 1906. The chairman submitted a letter from Mr. J. C. Stubbs, dated October 17,

1906, enclosing a memorandum showing additional estimated advertising expenses for system lines for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, of which this company's proportion is $316,260.33. Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, it was Resolved that the expenditure of $316,260.33 on additional advertising for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, be and the same is hereby approved.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now will you turn to the Union Pacific stockholders' and directors' meetings, volume 2.

Mr. MILLAR: Is there a page or date?

Mr. KELLOGG: January 7, 1904. It is the meeting where Mr. Harriman was elected president and resolutions were passed with reference to the powers of the president.

Mr. MILLAR: Do you want the resolution?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. MILLAR: A meeting of the board of directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company January 7, 1904. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved that the by-laws of this company be amended in the following particular: Amend Section 1 of Article 6 to read as follows:

The president shall have general care, supervision and control of the company's business in all its departments under control of the board of directors and executive committee.

"The offices of president and chairman of the executive committee may be held by the same person."

Further resolved, that the chairman of the Executive Committee be and he is hereby authorized to call a meeting of the board of directors for the purpose of acting on said amendment, in accordance with the provision of the by-laws.

Mr. KELLOGG: The amendment was adopted by the board of directors at a meeting on April 11, 1905, was it not?

Mr. MILLAR: I should have to look at that.

289 Mr. KELLOGG: Look and see.

Mr. MILLAR: What is the date?

Mr. KELLOGG: April 11, 1905.

Mr. MILLAR: I think that cannot be the date, Mr. Kellogg.

Mr. KELLOGG: A special meeting was held to vote on this amendment. It was April 11th, 1904, maybe.

Mr. MILLAR: Oh, 1904?

Mr. KELLOGG: Possibly.

Mr. MILLAR: I thought you said 1905?

Mr. KELLOGG: I did say that. I may have been mistaken. Maybe it was the stockholders' meeting. I have on my memorandum April 11, 1905.

Mr. MILLAR: April 11, 1905. A special meeting of the board of directors held April 11, 1905. The chairman stated that pursuant to the action of the Board of Directors taken January 7, 1904, the meeting had been called for the purpose of acting on a proposition to amend Section 1, Article 6 of the By-laws. Whereupon, on motion duly seconded, it was:

Resolved that the By-laws of the Union Pacific Railroad Company be amended so that Section 1 of Article 6 shall read as follows:

"SECTION 1: The president shall have general care, supervision and control of the company's business in all of its departments, under control of the board of directors and executive committee.

"The offices of president and chairman of the executive committee may be held by the same person.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, if you will look at page 174 of the meeting of August 15, 1906, of the Union Pacific Company, in relation to the semi-annual dividends of $5 on the common stock, and a statement with reference to the deferring of the announcement.

Mr. MILLAR: Meeting of the board of directors of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, August 15, 1906. The following action was taken.

The chairman submitted a statement showing the operations of the company, partly estimated, for the fiscal year ending 290 June 30, 1906, and the financial condition of the company.

Whereupon, after full consideration, upon motion duly made and seconded, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted, namely:

"Resolved (1) That a semi-annual dividend of $2 per share be and such dividend is hereby declared on the preferred capital stock of this company, payable October 1, 1906, to stockholders of record at 12 o'clock m. on the 15th day of September, 1906.

"Resolved (2) That a semi-annual dividend of $5 per share upon the common capital stock of this company be and such dividend is hereby declared, payable October 1, 1906, to stockholders of record at 12 o'clock m. on the 15th day of September, 1906.

Mr. KELLOGG: Turn to volume 3 of the Executive Committee—is that all.

Mr. MILLAR: There is a vote further regarding the——

Mr. KELLOGG: Read the rest of it.

Mr. MILLAR: Regarding the authority to the committee.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, read the rest, please.

Mr. MILLAR: The following action was also taken.

"The chairman stated that, as a number of the directors were unable to attend the meeting, it seemed proper that announcement of the dividend should be deferred until they could be informed of the action taken at the meeting. And he suggested therefore, that the announcement and publication of the dividend, provision for the closing of the transfer books, and also the question which had been discussed as to the particular revenues against which portions of the dividend should be charged, be referred to the executive committee. Whereupon, upon motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously Resolved that the executive committee is hereby authorized and empowered to announce and publish the declaration of such dividend at such time as it may deem proper, and to authorize and provide for the closing of the transfer books for the purpose of said dividend, and for the purpose of the annual meeting of the stockholders to be held Tuesday, October 9, 1906, and to specify the income or other fund against which such dividend shall be 291 charged, and to take such other action in connection with the declaration, payment and notice of such dividend as said committee may deem necessary or advisable."

Mr. KELLOGG: Now turn to volume 3 of the executive committee records of the Union Pacific Company, page 210, and read the action of the executive committee on that dividend.

Mr. MILLAR: Meeting of the executive committee of the Union Pacific Company, August 16, 1906. The action of the board of directors at its meeting held August 15, 1906, in respect of dividends payable on the capital stock of this company was considered. Whereupon, upon motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously Resolved:

1. That for the purpose of such dividend and of the annual meeting of the stockholders to be held Tuesday, October 9, 1906, the stock transfer books of this company shall be closed at 12 o'clock m. on the 15th day of September, 1906, and reopened at 10 o'clock a. m. on the 10th day of October, 1906.

Resolved (2) That the secretary of this company be and he is hereby authorized and directed to notify the secretary of the New York Stock Exchange on the 17th inst., and before the hour fixed for the opening of said Exchange on said date of the declaration of said dividends, and the treasurer of this company be and he is hereby authorized and directed to furnish notice of said dividends by publication of an advertisement in the usual form in papers published in the city of New York, as the chairman of the executive committee shall direct.

Mr. KELLOGG: Was there submitted at either one of those meetings a statement showing out of what revenues the dividend was to be paid, the net earnings of the Union Pacific and the balance left after the payment of the 5% semi-annual dividend of the common stock and 2% on the preferred.

Mr. MILLAR: I was away from the city at that time, and I cannot testify of my own knowledge beyond what is stated in the minutes read.

292 Mr. KELLOGG: You have not got such a statement?

Mr. MILLAR: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know what the surplus was?

Mr. MILLAR: No.

Com'r LANE: Do I understand that the books do not show from what accounts these dividends were paid?

Mr. KELLOGG: His books do not.

Mr. LOVETT: His books do not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Your books do not show from what account they were taken?

Mr. MILLAR: These minute books do not show.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do the books in your office, or are they in the Comptroller's Office?

Mr. MILLAR: The Comptroller's Office would have a statement.

Mr. MAHL: Knows about that, I suppose.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: If you will look at the Southern Pacific directors' meeting Vol. 5, Page 188. Please read the record there as to the declaration of dividends by the Southern Pacific directors.

Mr. MILLER: August 15, 1906. At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Company, the Chairman submitted a statement showing the operations of the company, partly estimated, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, and the financial condition of the company. Whereupon, after full consideration, upon motion duly seconded, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, namely;

Resolved, that a semi-annual dividend of $2.50 per share to be known as first dividend be and such dividend is hereby declared on the common capital stock of this company payable Oct. 1, 1906, to bearers of dividend warrants No. 1, annexed to certificates representing such stock, upon presentation and surrender of such warrants to the assistant treasurer of this company at his office at No. 120 Broadway, New York.

The Chairman stated that, as a number of the directors were unable to attend the meeting, it seemed proper that announcement of the dividend should be deferred until they could be informed
293 of the action taken at the meeting. And he suggested therefore, that the announcement and publication of the dividend and any other action deemed necessary, be referred to the Executive Committee. Whereupon, on motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously resolved, that the Executive Committee be and it is hereby empowered to announce and publish the declaration of such dividend at such time and make such provision for the payment thereof as said committee may deem appropriate.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you got the statement that the Chairman submitted, showing the revenues and so forth, of the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. MILLAR: It may possibly be in my files; I cannot speak from knowledge.

Mr. KELLOGG: Make a memorandum to get that at future time, will you, please. That meeting was held on what day?

Mr. MILLAR: August 15, 1906.

Mr. KELLOGG: The same date as the Union Pacific meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you please state what directors were present at that meeting of the Southern Pacific? At what hour was that?

Mr. MILLAR: At one thirty in the afternoon.

Mr. KELLOGG: Aug. 15, 1906?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: What directors were present?

Mr. MILLAR: Directors De Forest, Evarts, Goelet, Harriman, Lovett, Mills, Stillman, Thorne and Vandeventer.

Com'r LANE: May I ask who were absent?

Mr. KELLOGG: Who were absent, do you remember?

Mr. MILLAR: I can very readily ascertain.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, that is the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: If you will read those names off I will check them from this list you gave us.

Mr. MILLAR: De Forest, Evarts, Goelet, Harriman, Lovett,
294 Mills—I don't know which Mills—Stillman, Thorne and Vandeventer; nine out of fifteen.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now the absent directors according to that, of the Southern Pacific, were W. D. Cornish——

Mr. MILLAR: He was one of them.

Mr. KELLOGG: H. E. Huntington.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: He lives in Los Angeles, does he?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't know where he lives.

Mr. KELLOGG: He does not live in New York that you know of, does he?

Mr. MILLAR: Part of the time, I guess, in Ossining.

Mr. KELLOGG: Marvin Hughitt?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir

Mr. KELLOGG: C. H. Mackay?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And David Willcox?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. That would only make fourteen, wouldn't it?

Mr. KELLOGG: And D. O. Mills or Ogden Mills, you don't remember which one was present at the meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes; I was not present at the meeting; I don't know which one was present.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you turn to the record book of the Union Pacific, Page 174, and see what directors were present at that meeting which you just read, and check them to see the absent ones.

Mr. MILLAR: At the Board meeting of Aug. 15, 1906, there were present——

The CHAIRMAN: At what hour was that meeting held?

Mr. MILLAR: One o'clock, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Go ahead.

Mr. MILLAR: Sterling, Frick, Harriman, Lovett, Peabody, Rockefeller, Rogers, Stillman and Goelet.

Mr. KELLOGG: There were absent who?

Mr. MILLAR: Directors Oliver Ames——

Mr. KELLOGG: Of Boston.

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. W. D. Cornish.

Mr. KELLOGG: Marvin Hughitt?

Mr. MILLAR: Marvin Hughitt.

295 Mr. KELLOGG: David Willcox?

Mr. MILLAR: David Willcox.

Mr. KELLOGG: P. A. Valentine?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of New York.

Mr. MILLAR: I understand he lives in Chicago part of the time.

Mr. KELLOGG: And Joseph F. Smith, of Salt Lake City?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, if you will read the minutes of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific Co. in Vol. 2, Page 114, Aug. 16, 1906.

The CHAIRMAN: Before answering that question, Mr. Millar, kindly tell us what notice is given of a meeting of directors?

Mr. MILLAR: At the time of these meetings the by-laws provided for five days notice, either by letter or telegram.

Mr. KELLOGG: Was that notice given in these two cases?

Mr. MILLAR: I cannot testify as to that because I happened to be away at the time; personally I have no doubt it was.

Mr. KELLOGG: Read the minutes of the Executive Committee?

Mr. MILLAR: Of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. KELLOGG: Southern Pacific, Page 114, Vol. 2.

Mr. MILLAR: August 16, 1906. The action of the Board of Directors at its meeting held on August 15, 1906, in respect of dividends upon the capital stock of this company was considered. Whereupon, upon motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously resolved that the secretary of this company be and he is hereby authorized and directed to notify the secretary of the New York Stock Exchange on the 17th instant and before the hour fixed for the opening of said exchange upon said date of the declaration of said dividends; and the assistant treasurer of this company be and he is hereby authorized and directed to give notice of 296 said dividend, by publication of advertisement in the usual form, in papers published in the city of New York, as the Chairman of the Executive Committee shall direct."

Mr. KELLOGG: What directors were present at that Executive meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: De Forest, Harriman, Lovett and Stillman.

Mr. KELLOGG: What directors were present at the Union Pacific Executive meeting?

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Millar, do the by-laws provide for the notice of a meeting of the Executive Committee?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir; their meetings. That is a stated meeting held weekly, and this was the—well, in answering you, I was speaking then of the Union Pacific. The last record I read was the Southern Pacific. They have stated meetings held bi-weekly, and these ——

The CHAIRMAN: And these meetings all occurred at the stated times?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir. These Executive Committee meetings were stated meetings.

Mr. KELLOGG: Was this a stated meeting?

Mr. MILLAR: This was the regular bi-weekly meeting of the Executive Committee.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where was it held, at the office, 120 Broadway?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Were meetings of the Executive Committee of either company held at other times than the stated dates, under the by-laws.

Mr. MILLAR: Occasionally, provision being made for special meetings, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: How, by adjournment, or by call?

Mr. MILLAR: I should say more frequently by adjournment and occasionally by call; but always by notice.

The CHAIRMAN: And what would the notice be in case of a special meeting by call?

Mr. MILLAR: If an adjourned meeting, the fact that it was an adjourned meeting is stated in our form of call; if it was a 297 special meeting it would be so stated, but no other detail.

Mr. CHAIRMAN: Anything prescribed in making the notice?

Mr. MILLAR: I don't recall precisely, but I think there is three days' notice on the Executive Committee meetings at this time.

Mr. LOVETT: The provision of the by-laws of the Southern Pacific, is as follows:

"Regular meetings of such Executive Committee shall be held at such times as the Committee shall from time to time determine. Special meetings may be called at any time by the Chairman or any three members of the Committee."

The CHAIRMAN: Not providing how they shall be called or upon what notice, I suppose you could call them up by telephone and have them present in a few minutes.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, actual notice I think is all that is required.

Mr. KELLOGG: What directors were present at the Executive Committee meetings?

Mr. MILLAR: Of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes. Did you read that?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, what directors were present at the Union Pacific meeting, Page 310, Vol. 3?

Mr. MILLAR: At the meeting on Aug. 16, 1906, of the Union Pacific Executive Committee, there were present directors Harriman, Lovett and Stillman.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, will you turn to Vol. 3 of the records of the Executive Com. of the Union Pacific, Pages 242 and 243?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And read the resolution in relation to the ownership of the Fruit Express that we got mixed up on this morning.

Mr. MILLAR: A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Pacific directors held Dec. 13, 1906. The Chairman stated
298 that the contract between this company and the Armour Car Lines with reference to the transportation of fruit and other perishable freight contained a provision authorizing the termination thereof upon six months' notice from either party, and that the latter had given notice of its intention to terminate such contract. That he was advised that under the Interstate Commerce Act as amended, railroad companies are required to provide refrigerator cars and to show the charges for such cars and for the service of refrigeration, ventilation, etc in their tariffs and to include such charges in their freight bills.

That under the circumstances it seemed advisable for this company and the Southern Pacific Company to provide for the incorporation of a company whose stock shall be taken by them and acquired to furnish them and their allied lines the refrigerator cars required by them and to take over and carry on the business of furnishing cars for traffic originating upon their lines which requires refrigeration and ventilation, and of attending to the icing and ventilation of such cars. And that pursuant to this plan he had heretofore caused a corporation known as the Pacific Fruit Express Company to be organized under the laws of the State of Utah, with an authorized capital of $12,000,000 and had arranged with W. H. Bancroft to subscribe for 11,996 shares and P. L. Williams, D. E. Burley, J. A. Reeves and F. H. Knickerbocker, each to subscribe for one share of such capital stock, and that subscriptions had been made for account of Union Pacific Railroad Company and Southern Pacific Co., each to take one-half of the shares so subscribed for.

He further stated that under the laws of the State of Utah it was necessary that ten per cent. of the authorized capital stock should be paid in in cash at the time of the organization of the company, and that he had directed the treasurer of the Union Pacific R. R. Co. to pay that amount, one-half of it to be repaid to said company by the Southern Pacific Co.

The Chairman further stated that in furtherance of this plan he had some time ago authorized the purchase for account of said Pacific Fruit Express Co. of 6,000 refrigerator cars at a cost 299 of $1700 each, amount- in the aggregate to $10,200,000, some of which cars were about ready for delivery, and it was hoped that the others would be delivered by the time or very soon after the expiration of the contract with the Armour Car Lines Company under the notice heretofore given. And he further stated in order to provide the Pacific Fruit Express Co. with the funds necessary to pay for such cars, it should issue its stock from time to time to the Southern Pacific Co. and Union Pacific R. R. Co. and each should take one-half of such stock when and as issued at par.

The Chairman further stated it might be necessary or advisable to admit some other railroad companies as stockholders of said Pacific Fruit Express Co., but that this could be done later by the sale by the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific R. R. Co. of portions of the stock so taken by them to such other railroad companies.

On motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously resolved:

1. That the action of the president of this company in causing the incorporation and organization of the Pacific Fruit Express Co. under the laws of the State of Utah with an organized capital stock of $12,000,000, and an arrangement for the subscription on account of this company for 6,000 shares of such capital stock and for payment into the treasury of said company of ten per cent. of the authorized capital stock, be and such action is hereby ratified and approved.

2. That the president of this company be and he is hereby authorized to pay and receive or arrange for the subscription and for the payment for and receipt of one-half of the remaining capital stock of said Pacific Fruit Express Co. from time to time as issued by said company pursuant to the recommendation of the Chairman as above set forth.

3. Resolved that this company as a subscriber to the capital stock of said Pacific Fruit Express Co. hereby assents to the purchase by said company of 6,000 refrigerator cars at a cost of $1,700
300 each, amounting in the aggregate to $10,200,000, as above stated by the Chairman of this Committee.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you turn to Pages 294 and 295 of the same volume, in relation to the Equipment Association?

Mr. MILLAR: Isn't it Page 244, the same date?

Mr. KELLOGG: Perhaps it is.

Mr. MILLAR: The Equipment Association organization?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, I guess that is right.

Mr. MILLAR: At the same meeting the following action was taken. The Chairman stated that in his opinion it was advisable to have a corporation formed for the purchase of equipment to be used by this company and its allied lines, the intention being that the Equipment Co. should take title to the rolling stock and then lease it to the various associated companies, or at all events to hold the title thereto until such rolling stock should be distributed among the said companies. That pursuant to such plan he had heretofore caused a corporation to be organized under the laws of the State of Utah, known as Union Pacific Equipment Association, with an authorized capital stock of $100,000, and had caused the entire amount of this stock to be subscribed for on account of Union Pacific Railroad Co. as follows: W. H. Bancroft, 996 shares, P. L. Williams, W. S. McCormick, E. Buckingham, and C. H. McNitt, one share each. That under the Laws of the State of Utah it was necessary that 10% of the authorized capital stock of this corporation should be paid in in cash at the time of the organization of the company, and he had directed the treasurer of the Union Pacific to pay this sum, namely $10,000 into the Treasury of the Union Pacific Equipment Association, which had been done. On motion, duly made and seconded it was unanimously resolved that the action of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, in causing the organization of Union Pacific Equipment Association under the laws of the State of Utah, with a capital stock of $100,000, and in causing the said stock to be subscribed for account 301 of the company, and in directing that ten per cent. of the capital stock be paid in cash, and the action of the treasurer in paying $10,080 into the treasury of the State of Utah upon such subscription be and the same is hereby ratified and approved and confirmed.

Further resolved, that the treasurer of this company be and he is directed and authorized to pay into the treasury of the Pacific Equipment Association the remainder of such subscription, namely the sum of $90,000 when and as the same shall be called by the Board of Directors of said Union Pacific Equipment Association.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is the Southern Pacific included in that as an allied line.

Mr. MILLER: It does not state the companies meant by "allied lines" and I don't know what it did mean.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know whether equipment has been acquired and leased to the Southern Pacific under that?

Mr. MILLAR: I do not; no sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know anything about that?

Mr. MILLAR: No, sir. This action was taken Dec. 13th, last.

Mr. KELLOGG: I think that is all I wish to ask Mr. Millar. One moment, here are some resolutions I will have marked Exhibits.

Papers marked Exhibits 66, 67, 68, 69 & 70 Mr. Millar's Testimony.

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you Exhibits 66, 67, 68, 69 and 70 and ask you if those are certified transcripts from the books of the Union Pacific and of the meetings of its stockholders and directors?

Mr. MILLAR: Not the stockholders.

Com'r LANE: You had better state the general purport of those.

Mr. MILLAR: Excuse me, I would like to see the last one.

Exhibit No. 70 passed to witness.

302 Mr. MILLAR: Exhibit No. 70 was prepared by me but unlike the others it is not a certified copy.

Mr. KELLOGG: It is a copy?

Mr. MILLAR: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I offer this in evidence.

Exhibit No. 70 is a supplemental agreement in reference to the election of officers of the Chicago & Alton Railroad. It is dated the 31st of January, 1906, and signed by E. H. Harriman, Jacob H. Schiff, and R. S. Lovett, parties of the first part, and W. H. Moore, D. G. Reid, and J. H. Moore, parties of the second part, and the Central Trust Company, trustee. The other main agreement was introduced yesterday.

Exhibit No. 69 is an amendment to the pension rules beginning with the Southern Pacific Road, which was offered yesterday, and a copy was not furnished at that time.

Exhibit No. 67 is a resolution authorizing the purchase of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad stock. (Reading:) "The agreement made by the president of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company with Messrs. Kuhn, Loeb & Company, for the purchase of 323,342 shares of the common stock and 72,064 shares of the preferred stock of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, and the resolution adopted by the executive committee of said Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, approving such agreement."

Exhibit No. 66 is a statement of loans made to and by the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the collaterals securing them, and the resolution approving them. That was called for yesterday. Does the Commission wish it read in detail?

The CHAIRMAN: Oh, no. That concludes your examination of Mr. Millar?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Milburn; Do you desire to ask any questions?

Mr. MILBURN: No sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Millar, you may be excused.

Mr. MILLAR: I would like to explain about that pension roll. If I gave the impression in my testimony in reference to that 303 matter, or if counsel did that, that was to take in the Southern Pacific, that was not the object of the amendment, but to give the man working in the different companies the right to count the years when they changed into another company?

Mr. KELLOGG: Certainly, we understood that. The Southern Pacific service was included?

Mr. MILLAR: It has a pension service of its own.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Mahl, will you resume the stand.

WILLIAM MAHL recalled.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Mahl, have you since you left the stand been able to make up some of the statements we asked for yesterday?

Mr. MAHL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I show you an exhibit marked "5-Mahl." Was that made up by you, Mr. Mahl?

Mr. MAHL: Under my direction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is a correct statement of what it purports to show is it not?

Mr. MAHL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE (referring to Exhibit No. 5): This is "Oregon Railroad Navigation Company; statement showing holdings of Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company stock;" 993 shares in the name of E. H. Harriman, Chairman, and one share each in the names of W. W. Cotton, Wm. Crooks, W. D. Cornish, R. P. Schwerin, H. F. Conner, R. S. Lovett, W. R. Litzenberg, making a thousand shares in all.

Com'r LANE: Those are the individuals?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes sir, 993 shares in the name of Mr. Harriman as chairman. That thousand shares of stock in the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company all belongs to the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. MAHL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I now show you exhibit marked "6-Mahl," consisting of two sheets. Was that prepared under your direction?

304 Mr. MAHL: It was.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And is a correct statement of what it purports to show?

Mr. MAHL: It is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This is a statement (referring to Exhibit No. 6) which shows the names of the persons in whom there is registered the Southern Pacific common stock and Southern Pacific preferred stock that belongs to the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company? Is that true?

Mr. MAHL: That is right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Aggregating 900,000 shares of common and 180,000 shares of preferred?

Mr. MAHL: That is correct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now is it a fact, is it not, that all this stock is under a mortgage of the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. MAHL: It is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What company is the trustee under that mortgage?

Mr. MAHL: The Equitable.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Equitable Trust Company?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you give the date when that stock was deposited with the Trust Company as collateral security?

Mr. MAHL: I cannot.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you state by reference to your report there what the date of the deposit of that stock was?

Mr. MAHL: December 1st, 1904——

Com'r LANE: I cannot hear you.

Mr. MAHL (referring to book): The mortgage is dated December 1st, 1904. The securities must have been deposited 30 days preceding that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that date?

Mr. MAHL: December 1st, 1904.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that these shares have been deposited with the Eqitable Trust Company from some time prior to December 1st, 1904?

Mr. MAHL: Probably.

305 Mr. LOVETT: Will you allow me to interrupt there?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: I think Mr. Mahl must be mistaken. The securities could not be deposited before the date of the mortgage. It was some date after the date of the mortgage.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When were they deposited, about when? Tell me within a month.

Mr. MAHL: The mortgage is dated December 1st.

Mr. LOVETT: The reason I interrupt you, I prepared the mortgage and know that it was some time after that the stock was deposited.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Before the annual meeting of 1905?

Mr. LOVETT: I know it was some time after the date of the mortgage.

Mr. MAHL: I have at the office the exact date the securities were deposited.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I wish you would furnish that. They were deposited shortly after the mortgage was dated—within a few months?

Mr. MAHL: Undoubtedly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is the holding of the Oregon Short Line of 180,000 shares of preferred stock also under that mortgage?

Mr. MAHL: It is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was that deposited?

Mr. MAHL: About the same time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many bonds were issued against that deposited stock?

Mr. MAHL: One hundred million—not only against that, but against some other stocks.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. MAHL: One hundred million were issued against the stocks now referred to and other stocks.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The one hundred million of stock was Oregon Short Line stock?

Mr. MAHL: Bonds.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What were the other stocks put under that mortgage aside from the Southern Pacific stock?

Mr. MAHL (referring to papers): $2,564,000, face value,
306 Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, income A, 5% bonds; $23,907,300 Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company common stock; $10,866,800 Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company preferred stock.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all, is it?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, and the Southern Pacific stock referred to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, when were the one hundred million dollars of bonds that are secured by the Southern Pacific stock and the other stocks and bonds you mentioned issued and sold?

Mr. MAHL: I cannot give you the dates. I can furnish the dates. I do not recall them now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was the whole issue put out?

Mr. MAHL: The whole issue was put out and sold.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you make up a statement, please, giving the dates of such sales, the amounts received for the bonds, and the persons to whom they were sold?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you tell what was done with the proceeds of that large bond issue?

Mr. MAHL: I believe that part of that was used to retire the $82,000,000 of participating bonds that were outstanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was that $82,000,000 of participating bonds issued for? What was the purpose; was it to take up Northern Pacific stock?

Mr. MAHL: I do not recall now; that was before my time. I will have to look at the Annual Reports and find out.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you find that out from your books.

Mr. MAHL: I can.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you kindly make up a statement showing the issue of that $82,000,000 bonds?

Mr. MAHL: 4% and participating bonds?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The 4% and participating bonds. State the purpose for which they were issued, and the persons to whom they were sold, and the amounts received for same.

307 Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have any recollection of any other purpose that was subserved by the making of this one hundred million dollar mortgage?

Mr. MAHL: I don't now recall.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have included that in your statement?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Very well; that will all show. I show you, Mr. Mahl, Exhibit No. 7. Was that made up under your direction?

Mr. MAHL: It was.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is a correct statement of what it purports to show?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And is taken from other items picked out of your last annual report?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

(Same is hereto annexed and marked Exhibit No. 7 to Mr. Mahl's testimony.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, this statement shows that on the 30th of June, 1905, the credits to profit and loss on the Union Pacific R. R. Co. was $34,943,194.42, and that same item on the 30th of June, 1906, one year later, was $42,796,026.39, or a gain during the year of $7,852,831.97. Now, out of what kind of items are those credits made up?

Mr. MAHL: I think they are mentioned there in your statement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I understand an increase is shown here?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But what I want to get at is this: does this credit to profit and loss—that is the surplus account?

Mr. MAHL: That is the gain between the two years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This is called "credit to profit and loss." That shows a surplus of $42,000,000?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

308 Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what you call "operating surplus?" what was called here yesterday "operating surplus?"

Mr. MAHL: Not altogether. A profit and loss balance takes in all transactions of every kind and character.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let me see if it does. This does not take in any profits you make by buying and selling stocks and securities?

Mr. MAHL: Not in this instance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I mean.

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that this surplus, or the increase in the surplus during the year of $7,852,831 was made up in this way, wasn't it—first, you took your gross receipts from traffic, and you substracted from that the operating expenses and struck the balance; you took out of that your dividends and your interests and rentals and other things of that kind; then you added to rentals so obtained your income by way of interest on investments or dividends or stock investments, and in that way you got this increase in surplus—isn't that true?

Mr. MAHL: Not entirely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just state how you did do it?

Mr. MAHL: For instance, we received during the year $1,463,000 from sale of lands.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That went in?

Mr. MAHL: Which, under the various provisions of the mortgage we were required to again apply in the purchase of other lands; but, on the other hand, we expended, mind you, on these betterments and additions, $6,263,000. Now, this money which we apply here, we really used that to write off our betterment account. A part of the betterment account which is not written off in that way comes out of the earnings, and increases the profit and loss; and in that seven million dollars there is a certain sum of money for betterments, and I think that is shown on that statement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This statement shows, "Expended for 309 extensions, $506,903.56. Expended for betterments and additions (after deducting amount appropriated from income and proceeds of lands and other properties sold which was applied to betterments and additions), $1,593,224.30. Increase in assets, $8,861,239.02. Total, $10,961,366.88;" and from that you decrease—that sum was decreased by an increase in capital of $2,174,836.00 and an increase in contingent liabilities of $933,698.91, leaving a net balance that I have stated, a gain during the year?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That did not include any profits whatever that you made in handling securities, did it; that is, buying and selling?

Mr. MAHL: No; there was none charged at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, I show you Exhibit No. 8. I will ask you if this is the statement submitted to the Board of Directors of the Union Pacific at their meeting on August 15, 1906, at the time they voted the dividend of 5%?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was prepared under your direction?

Mr. MAHL: That is a copy of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is a copy of the statement submitted?

(Same is hereto annexed and marked Exhibit No. 8, to Mr. Mahl's testimony.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Mahl, this statement shows that your gross receipts in 1906, were $67,281,542.60, an increase of $7,956,593.94 over the preceding year. Your operating expenses were $35,261,170.84, or an increase of $7,008,468.80, leaving a net profit in 1906 of $32,020,371.76; out of which you took your taxes, leaving a surplus for the year of $30,317,769.44. Now that is surplus arising from operation, isn't it?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Traffic?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that does not include any money you have received from handling securities, does it?

310 Mr. MAHL: Investments and interests.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What?

Mr. MAHL: Is the interests on investments stated in there?

Mr. SEVERANCE: But that is afterwards: That is receipts from traffic over and above operating expenses and taxes?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you had applicable to dividends and bond interests solely from your business as a railroad company, aside from your business, as an investment company, thirty millions, and a fraction over as the proceeds of the year's business ended June 30, 1906?

Mr. MAHL: That is right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you also received from rentals and other sources $7,767,491.42, didn't you?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does that include the interest on bonds that you own, and dividends on stock that you own?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir; it does. It is stated here in that report.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now that made an aggregate income then, of $38,085,260.86. Now, the next item in this statement is "Less fixed charges, including rentals, $8,883,416.03. Now, these fixed charges include the interest on your outstanding bonds?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And any rentals that you have to pay?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that that left a net surplus of $29,201,844.83 applicable to dividends on your stock?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Without including any income whatever from the profits you may have made by buying securities at one price and selling them at a higher price.

311 Mr. MAHL: That is correct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They didn't include profits made by buying securities at one price and selling them at a higher price?

Mr. MAHL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, the next item is "4% dividend on preferred stock, $3,982,032.00, and that leaves a balance of $25,219,812.83 applicable to dividends on your common stock?

Mr. MAHL: That is right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is right, is it?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your common stock outstanding amount to about $195,000,000, doesn't it?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that right?

Mr. MAHL: A little over.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is not a million over?

Mr. MAHL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that would—putting it out on a 10% basis would take $19,500,000 to pay the dividend, wouldn't it, for the year?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That would leave you, assuming that your business for 1906 and 1907, up to June 30, 1907, is no greater than up to June 30, 1906, would leave you about six million dollars over and above paying this 10% dividend, without counting in any profits that the Union Pacific would have made by buying securities or bonds or stocks at one price and selling them at a higher price?

Mr. LOVETT: And without including the dividends on Southern Pacific stock?

Mr. MAHL: I was just going to call attention to that. This statement when it was made up did not include the dividends which we received, of $2,250,000 of the Southern Pacific common stock.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the dividends you are to receive beginning last July?

Mr. MAHL: That were received last July.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that dividend is not shown?

312 Mr. MAHL: No, at that time it had not been declared.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you are able to earn from the sources that have been detailed here, have you, the amounts that I have stated, without including any profits from these stock investments?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: Has Mr. Mahl given you a list of those profits?

Mr. SEVERANCE: No. That statement has not been made up yet.

Mr. LANE: It will be; you have called for it?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir; we have.

Mr. MAHL: It is in preparation now.

Mr. LOVETT: We have furnished everything that we have been able to in the limited time at our disposal.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; you have done very well.

Now, Mr. Mahl, I see on the bottom of this statement, a memorandum of $6,657,305.36 expended for betterments and additions. Out of what funds were those expended and what were they charged to?

Mr. MAHL: They were expended out of current funds, or any moneys that came in; those were expenditures, really, of what you might call a capital account. They were simply put there as a memorandum to show what has been expended on capital account.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean that that was expended out of capital account already acquired by the sale of securities, or out of capital account to be hereafter reimbursed out of the sale of additional securities?

Mr. MAHL: I cannot tell. We are going right along spending money for betterments and additions, and we take it from any of those which are in the treasury.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would even take it from the profits on stock, if you happen to have it on hand?

Mr. MAHL: Take it from any fund we might happen to have.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The next item in this memorandum is $17,230,940 expenditures for construction of new lines and 313 equipment for twelve months ending June 30, 1906, dealt with as a free asset estimated: now, will you state what that expression means—dealt with as a free asset?

Mr. MAHL: Property against which no securities of any kind have been issued.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is no securities specifically issued against that property, but you don't know but what there still remain in your treasury money realized from the sale of securities heretofore put out by your company which will be sufficient to cover that?

Mr. MAHL: That would not be taken in.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then, this is in the nature of a suspense account to be hereafter dealt with?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, securities issued against it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Here is another memorandum: there is charged in the above expenses and taxes carried to the reserve fund for betterments equipment and general extraordinary affairs subject to the action of the Board of Directors the sum of $2,206,610.39. Now, that amount of $2,200,000 is included in the $35,000,000 of operating expenses, isn't it?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you have, in figuring up the operating expenses to be set over against your gross receipt included an item of $2,200,000, that may properly be charged to capital account, except that you deemed it wise to absorb that much as part of operation?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you explain what that item means?

Mr. MAHL: That money has not been expended but has been charged against the year's income, and a fund created, against which hereafter any extraordinary expenses, such as washouts, damages, etc., which would ordinarily have to be charged to operating expenses will be charged against that reserve.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If that is the case, why do you say betterments and extraordinary affairs?

Mr. MAHL: Yes; it might be used for that.

314 Mr. SEVERANCE: Consequently your operating expense for the year are $2,206,000 really less than shown in the aggregate of $35,000,000, because you have taken out from your receipts this $2,200,000 extra money and put it in a reserve fund to be used in the future?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: Is that the beginning of that, or have you had such a fund before?

Mr. MAHL: We have had such a fund before.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the amount of it altogether?

Mr. MAHL: Something like $4,000,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you make up a statement of that account showing the amounts that were put into it, and the charges against it?

Mr. MAHL: There have been no charges against it.

Mr. KELLOGG: He has got the amount right there.

Mr. MAHL: $4,774,610.39 to the good of that account at the close of the year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And up to this time there have been no charges against it whatever.

Com'r LANE: Is that in the treasury of the company?

Mr. MAHL: It is more in the nature of a book account; the money is there in the common treasury.

Mr. LANE: All of the funds went in the treasury and you draw on them indiscriminately, and you keep these common accounts as matter of segregation?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Did you make up exhibit No. 3, or is that made up by the secretary?

Mr. MAHL: Made up by the secretary.

Mr. KELLOGG: Your books show, do they not, the amount of Southern Pacific stock owned by the Oregon Short Line Company from and after its acquisition, or the commencement of its acquisition of Southern Pacific stock, don't they, at all times?

Mr. MAHL: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, now, can you state from memory how much Southern Pacific stock the Short Line owned during the entire year of 1903 and 1904, and since?

315 Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: You cannot state?

Mr. MAHL: No. I can state how much they owned June 30, 1906.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, June 30, 1906, they owned $108,000,000 didn't they, of the Southern Pacific stock—$90,000,000 and $18,000,000—common and preferred I mean?

Mr. MAHL: That is correct.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you got the annual report so that you can tell me the amount the Short Line owned at all times?

Mr. MAHL: No; I can only show it to June 30th. I can show it at the end of each year.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of each year?

Mr. MAHL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Kellogg, we can have a statement made out at any particular day. Do you want the date of the annual meeting?

Mr. KELLOGG: This statement shows this, Mr. Lovett: That the Oregon Short Line Company voted 900,000 shares of stock at a meeting at an adjournment of a meeting of the Southern Pacific Company held on April 8th, 1903, the books closed on April 3rd, 1903, and I would like to know the amount of stock that the Short Line Company did actually own in the Southern Pacific Company on April 8th, 1903, and April 3rd, 1903, and at all times thereafter, until December 1st, 1903?

Mr. MAHL: I can furnish that from the books.

Mr. LOVETT: Your books will show that?

Mr. MAHL: They show that.

Mr. KELLOGG: And I suppose after that time the amount has not been changed?

Mr. LOVETT: Except by the preferred stock.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, do you recollect a transaction that is shown in the minute book of the Short Line Company, the sale of 300,000 shares of Southern Pacific stock to William Rockefeller on March 31, 1903?

Mr. MAHL: I do not now recollect it.

316 Mr. KELLOGG: You have no recollection of it whatever?

Mr. MAHL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any questions, Mr. Lovett?

Mr. LOVETT: No.

Comm'r LANE: Is that all. You may be excused, Mr. Mahl.

Mr. KELLOGG: We have no other witnesses to-day, that is all at this time, but we have other witnesses that we will call when Mr. Harriman is examined. I suppose the commission cannot fix a date at present.

Com'r LANE: That depends on Mr. Harriman's condition, and I understand from his counsel that they do not know just when he can appear. Is there some stipulation you want to enter into?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, we are just talking about it. We want the various directors subpœnaed to appear here at the adjourned day. Mr. Lovett says if we let him know he will get them to appear.

Mr. KELLOGG: In addition to those who have been subpœnaed I would like Mr. William Rockefeller, who is a director, and for whom a subpœna is issued, but Mr. Rockefeller, as I understand, is ill and out of the city.

Com'r LANE: Mr. Rockefeller is ill?

Mr. KELLOGG: I understood so, but I may be mistaken as to that. William Rockefeller is the man we want. The marshal reported he was out of the city, and I believe he is unwell.

Com'r LANE: You do not wish him subpœnaed for Chicago?

Mr. KELLOGG: I hardly think so.

Com'r LANE: No further testimony.? If not this hearing will stand adjourned until next Tuesday, at 10:00 o'clock in Chicago.

At this point an adjournment was taken until Tuesday, January 8th, 1907, at 10:00 o'clock A. M. in Chicago, Ill.

317 In the Matter of the Consolidation and Combination of Carriers, Relations Between Such Carriers, and Communion of Interest Therein, Their Rates, Facilities, and Practices.

JANUARY 8TH, 1907.

Continuation of hearing in above matter at Chicago, the same having been adjourned from New York City.

The CHAIRMAN: Gentlemen, we will now take up the proceeding in the matter of the Combination of certain carriers subject to the Act to regulate commerce, their relations, rates and practices, which was adjourned from New York to this time and place, for further hearing here at Chicago to-day. Mr. Kellogg, are you ready to proceed?

Mr. KELLOGG: We are.

The CHAIRMAN: Who will you call?

Mr. KELLOGG: We will call Mr. Ripley.

E. P. RIPLEY, called and sworn as a witness, was examined by Mr. Kellogg in chief, and testified as follows:

Q. Are you President of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been such?

A. Eleven years.

Q. Generally speaking, the Atchison Company has a line
318 of railroad from Chicago to Kansas City, New Mexico, Southern California and San Francisco?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with its connections a line leading into Texas and other places?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is known as the Santa Fe system?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Previous to your presidency of the Santa Fe Company, with what company were you associated?

A. With the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

Q. In what capacity?

A. Vice President.

Q. In charge of traffic?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you occupy that position?

A. Five years.

Q. Previous to that time, you were with what company?

A. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy.

Q. In what capacity?

A. In various capacities from clerk to General Manager.

Q. Did you ever have charge of the traffic of the Burlington system?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For a number of years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you commence to have charge of the traffic on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy line?

A. I became general freight agent in 1878.

Q. From the time until you became president of the Santa Fe Company you were connected with various traffic departments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now Mr. Ripley what companies are competitive with the Santa Fe Company for transcontinental business?

A. Almost all of the lines leading west from Chicago, in fact all of them more or less.

Q. And the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Northern Pacific and the Great Northern?

A. To a limited extent.

Q. Did you notice in the papers—I just want to call your attention to it, or rather I will state that it appeared in the hearing in New York that the Union Pacific Railroad owned ten millions of the stock of the Santa Fe Company. Did you know of that ownership?

A. I did not.

Q. You saw it in the papers?

A. Yes, sir.

319 Q. Now will you tell me whether any other Union Pacific interests or parties connected with the Union Pacific own any stock in the Santa Fe Company or have representation on your Board that you know about?

A. My first knowledge that the Union Pacific held any stock, the first intimation that I ever had that the Union Pacific held any stock in the Atchison was contained in the press despatches from

New York last week wherein it appeared that that had transpired in the evidence. My first knowledge that certain parties who were interested in the Union Pacific were stockholders in our road, came to me in the summer two years ago, the summer of 1904.

Q. What took place at that time, and from whom did you get your information?

A. My first information came from Mr. Harriman, who, being here at that time, asked me some questions about our property, and incidentally mentioned that he and some of his friends had been buying stock because they believed that it was a good investment.

Q. Well, was there anything said about a representation on the Board?

A. At that time, no, but later we were approached by some parties in New York; I think first by Mr. Shiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Company, saying that they had accumulated some stock and would like a representation on the Board. Various interviews were held on that subject between some of our directors and Mr. Harriman and Mr. Frick and Mr. Shiff, I think, at some of which I was present, and at some of which I was not. We said to them that the amount of stock which they were supposed to hold, which they said they had accumulated, and which we had reason to believe they had, would justify them in asking for a representation; that under our cumulative system of voting, whether we liked it or not, they could elect two directors and that we would make room for two directors on our Board without any friction or without any contest, providing always that the parties serving in that capacity should not be identified with or officers of any competing corporation.

Q. And you referred to competing corporations such as 320 the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific or any other?

A. Or any other.

Q. Why didn't you want officers of competing lines?

A. Well, it is not a very satisfactory proposition to have officers of competing lines sitting on the Board of Directors and hearing discussions about subjects which might be inimical to their interests.

Q. You do not think it is proper?

A. We did not think we wanted it.

Q. Well, now what amount of stock did they claim to own at that time?

A. I do not know that they made any claims. We understood that they owned an amount of shares variously estimated at from one-eighth to one-seventh of the capital stock.

Q. Of the Atchison Company?

A. Yes, sir, about two hundred thirty thousand shares perhaps, or something like that.

Q. That would be twenty-three million dollars?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the capital stock of the Atchison Company, or what was it at that time?

A. Roundly speaking—well I will be exact.

The CHAIRMAN: You are speaking now of what date?

Mr. RIPLEY: Two years ago. It was Two hundred fifteen million dollars in round numbers.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. Two hundred fifteen million dollars?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That would make about thirty million of that ownership?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Then did you investigate to see whether the gentlemen controlled that amount of stock?
A. No.
Q. You took their statement for it?
A. Yes, but we had some corroborative evidence in the transfer books although that amount of stock did not show as belonging to them.
Q. It is true, is it not, that stock is not always transferred to the owner?
A. A very large proportion—not a very large proportion, but a very large aggregate amount of our stock stands in the names of brokers.
321 Q. Well, now, what representation did they demand, one or two directors?
A. I don't think that they made any demands. They suggested that they were fairly entitled to two directors.
Q. Whom did they ask to be elected?
A. Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick.
Q. They were elected?
A. They were elected.
Q. And are still directors?
A. Yes, sir.
The CHAIRMAN: When did their election take place?
A. It took place in the Fall of 1904 I think.
The CHAIRMAN: At the regular annual meeting?
A. At the regular annual meeting, yes, sir, that is my recollection, but I will not be certain about it.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. Mr. Henry H. Rogers, is it?
A. H. H. Rogers, yes, sir.
Q. Of the Standard Oil Company. And Mr. Henry C. Frick?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are they both directors of the Union Pacific?
A. I think so.
Q. And were at that time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You understand that fact?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. Did you have any talk with Mr. Harriman about these gentlemen in New York, other than the talk you spoke of?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well what did you say about their representation?
A. I told him that Mr. Frick and Mr. Rogers would be entirely satisfactory to us.

Q. Did he say they were representatives on the Board of the Union and Southern Pacific?

A. Not at all. I distinctly told him that they could not be admitted, and that they should not be——

Q. And on the Union Pacific?

A. Oh, yes. No. I don't know that I understood your question. I thought you asked me if they were to represent the Union Pacific on the Atchison Board?

Q. Oh, no, not at all. I asked you if he said anything about their being directors on the Union Pacific.

A. No, I don't think that was discussed. I knew it and he knew it.

322 Q. Do you believe that their interest continues, or do you know anything about it?

A. I have no knowledge on that subject. I have no reason to suppose that it does not.

Q. This acquisition of stock by the Union Pacific Company direct, you know nothing of whatever?

A. Nothing whatever.

Q. Mr. Ripley did your company lease to the San Pedro Company—you know the Company I mean, the San Pedro road?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any trackage rights?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What trackage rights?

A. We leased them the right to run their trains over that portion of our line between Daggett, California and Colton, California, 110 miles over the mountain.

Q. Over the mountain?

A. Over the Colton pass.

Q. You have a written contract with them for that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it contain any traffic agreement?

A. None whatever.

Q. No reference to traffic whatever?

A. No.

Q. Or rates?

A. No.

Q. Or the rates to be charged?

A. No.

Q. Are you willing to furnish us a copy of the lease?

A. Yes.

Q. Has the Santa Fe Company any contract for the division of traffic or maintenance of rates or in reference to the rates to be charged, with the San Pedro Company at all?

A. No, sir, except the ordinary traffic arrangement for division of rates?

Q. You mean the tariffs?

A. Yes.

Q. The joint tariffs?

A. Yes.

Q. On file?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there any agreement or understanding between the Santa Fe Company and the Union or Southern Pacific for the division of any traffic whatever?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or for the maintenance of any rates?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or for any pooling?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Ripley, you know about the time that the Union
323 Pacific bought stock in the Southern Pacific, about 1901?

A. Well, I know of it as others know of it; it was common report only.

Q. Well, about the time they took over the management of the Southern Pacific line, about 1901 or the summer of 1901?

A. It always seemed to me as if it was the other way. I thought the Southern Pacific took over the management of the Union Pacific.

Q. Well, the Union Pacific was the company, you understood that was the company that acquired the stock?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Prior to that time, Mr. Ripley, were the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific competing lines for transcontinental traffic?

A. In a certain sense and to a certain extent, yes.

Q. Well, take the traffic from the Atlantic seaboard as far West as Pittsburg, was it not a fact that that traffic could go by the Sunset route, Southern Pacific or the Union Pacific and its connections?

A. Oh, yes, it could go by a variety of lines, but it all had to reach California over the Southern Pacific route.

Q. From Ogden?

A. Or else over the Atchison. There are only two lines into California.

Q. That is from Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. But the Union Pacific was a link in the competing line, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it not the fact that in the traffic meetings prior to that time, the contest between the Southern Pacific and all the rest of the roads — as to those rates?

A. Well, I don't know. There was no more contest between those two than between any other two. The Texas Pacific was also interested.

Q. There was a contest between them, was there not?

A. Well I do not know that I would say that there was a contest. The Union Pacific was a connection of the Southern Pacific, and it was obliged to and did turn over its business to the Southern Pacific at Ogden. The Union Pacific had certain interests in the traffic from the east that were opposed to the interests of the Southern Pacific New Orleans' line. To that extent I would say yes.

324 Q. Now, traffic from all eastern points practically could and did go by both lines to California, did it not?

A. That depends on your definition of "eastern points."
Q. Well, east of Pittsburgh?
A. Yes.
Q. Traffic from the middle western states, Cincinnati, St. Louis, southern Illinois, Kentucky, and Tennessee could and did go to the Pacific coast via the Union Pacific and its connections, and via the Sunset route by rail, and its connections.
A. I suppose so.
Q. On Oriental traffic, by steamship lines to Pacific coast ports and from there to the east, that traffic could and did go over the Union Pacific from Portland and over the Southern Pacific from San Francisco, did it not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. The Union Pacific controlled the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company.
A. I suppose so.
Q. And had a through line from Council Bluffs and Kansas City to Portland?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the Southern Pacific had a through line from New York via its Morgan Steamship Line and rail to Portland?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And for that International traffic——
A. Pardon me. I don't think the Southern Pacific line from the east by way of New Orleans and Portland was used to any extent. It was too circuitous.
Q. Well, it was to San Francisco?
A. It was to San Francisco, yes.
Q. So that the Union Pacific over its own rails was, for the Oriental traffic coming to the east, a competitor with the Southern Pacific over its own rails?
A. To some extent, yes.
Q. And traffic can and does move that way to-day, does it not?
A. I presume so.
Q. Now what was true of freight was also true of passenger business, was it not?
A. Yes, I presume so. There never was any passenger business via New Orleans of any consequence.
Q. Is it not a fact that from all points east of the Missouri River the passenger rates to California and North Pacific coast
325 points have been practically the same over the Southern Pacific and its rail connections, as over the Union Pacific and its rail connections?
A. To North Pacific coast points?
Q. To California and North Pacific coast points.
A. I am not sure about that. I think there have been at times, if not always, differences; that is a higher rate to Portland by way of San Francisco, and a higher rate to San Francisco by way of Portland. I am not sure about that.
Q. Generally speaking the rates are the same?
A. I am not prepared to say that.

Q. The Rock Island connects with the Southern Pacific at El Paso?

A. Yes, so does the Texas Pacific.

Q. Freight and passengers from the middle western states to San Francisco and north to California are competitive with those lines, the Southern Pacific and with the Union Pacific and its line to Portland?

A. I should hardly say that there was any real competition to Portland.

Q. Do you know that freight was not shipped via. both those lines?

A. I do not know that it was not.

Q. Well, freight business to and from the Orient would be competitive that way, would it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now is it not true that cotton, grain and various other products from the Southern states are competitors over the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific as far north as the Great Northern?

A. Not grain—cotton. I never heard of any grain being moved from the Southern States up.

Q. Of cotton you have, haven't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And freight from the Orient to the East is competitive over those lines?

A. It can be moved either way, yes.

Q. Then you would say, would you not, that prior to that acquisition, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were competing lines for certain classes of traffic?

A. To a very limited amount, yes, sir.

Q. Well, do you know the amount?

A. No.

326 Q. You do not?

A. No.

Q. The amount of traffic from the Eastern States to the Pacific Coast via those lines, is very large, isn't it?

A. Yes, in the aggregate.

Q. That can either go by rail, Union Pacific and its connections, or by the Southern Pacific, can it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And does go by both?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, taking the Central Pacific, in connection with the Union Pacific, you would say that the Union Pacific is a link in a very large competitive business between the East and the West, would you not?

A. Yes.

Q. So that as a link in the transcontinental traffic, the Union and Southern would be very largely competitive, would they not?

A. Yes, the Union Pacific would be competitive so far as the Atlantic seaboard business is concerned, with that portion of the Southern Pacific which lies east of the Meridian of Ogden.

Q. There are other lines connected with the Central Pacific at Ogden, are there not?

A. Yes.

Q. What lines are they?

A. The Denver & Rio Grande interest is the only one I know of.

Q. And the Rio Grande Western? Well, you call that the Denver & Rio Grande interest. At Denver, or Pueblo, they connect with the Burlington, and the Rock Island, and with your line, do they not?

A. Yes.

Q. So that on all business over those lines to and from the Pacific coast, in connection with the Central Pacific, the Union Pacific is competitive, is it not?

A. The Union Pacific is competitive with those lines, yes.

Com'r HARLAN: What is the term of office of your directors?

Mr. RIPLEY: Four directors go out every year; the term is three years.

Com'r HARLAN: For what term are Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick elected?

Mr. RIPLEY: Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick were I think
327 elected for an unexpired term and then re-elected. Mr. Frick's term expires in 1908, Mr. Rogers' in 1908.

Com'r HARLAN: When were they re-elected?

Mr. RIPLEY: They were re-elected in 1906 as to Mr. Rogers, in 1905, as to Mr. Frick.

Com'r HARLAN: Have you any knowledge as to what stock it was that voted for them on the occasion of their re-election?

Mr. RIPLEY: All the stock. Practically all the stock, that is all the stock that was voted. Our stockholders unfortunately never come to our meetings. They send their proxies and I practically vote this stock myself.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. It is a fact, is it not, that under your cumulative voting thirty millions of stock could have elected two directors?

A. They could, yes.

Q. And forty millions of stock could elect more than that?

A. Well I have not figured that out, possibly that is so.

Mr. MILBURN: How many directors have you Mr. Ripley?

Mr. RIPLEY: Fifteen.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How much stock is usually present?

Mr. RIPLEY: From two-thirds to three-quarters is represented.

Commissioner PROUTY: How many different stockholders?

Mr. RIPLEY: The last I knew, about nineteen thousand.

Commissioner PROUTY: I am not talking about the entire number of your stockholders, but I ask you how many stockholders would be represented at a meeting by proxies sent to you and voted by you?

Mr. RIPLEY: I can only answer that as a matter of judgment. We never had got any figures like that but of the eighteen thousand stockholders I should say that probably twelve thousand or thirteen thousand voted.

The response from the smaller stockholders, their response
328 in the way of proxies, is usually larger than it is from the larger stockholders. A good deal of the stock is held in the hands of brokers and they are very apt to be very remiss about sending the proxies, but the smaller stockholders send their proxies in.

Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You make up a form of proxy do you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And send it out beforehand?

A. Yes, we send it out sixty days before election, and ask them to send their proxies to a Proxy Committee if they cannot be present themselves. The fact that our meetings, under our charter are necessarily held in Kansas, and the fact that our stockholders almost all live east of the Allegheny mountains, or east of the Mississippi River at least, makes it difficult for them to get there.

Mr. MILBURN:

Q. I think you said that you had fifteen directors?

A. Yes.

Q. And that these questions arose between certain individuals who own stock and you and your associates?

A. Yes.

Q. And that the position was that you would not have anybody on your Board as a representative of some other railroad interest?

A. Yes.

Q. And you understood these gentlemen, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick to represent those individual interests in your stockholders?

A. Yes.

Q. And since their advent into your Board, have you found them loyal directors to the Atchison interests?

A. I think they are two as good directors as we have ever had and while I have perhaps been rather on the watch for something in the nature of interests in other institutions, I have failed to detect anything of the kind. On the contrary, I think that they have been absolutely loyal to our interests.

329 Q. You have never noticed any effort on their part to, as I might say, favor some other railroad interest rather than your own?

A. No, never.

Q. The Union Pacific proper, Mr. Ripley, runs from Kansas City and Omaha, to Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. For a line from the Atlantic seaboard to San Francisco and that part of the coast, it has to have connections with some eastern trunk line and middle states trunk line and then the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. The Atchison Road extends from Chicago to San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. By way of Kansas City?

A. Yes.

Q. And then to the Southwest?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Union Pacific proper is not a link in your line, or a connection?

A. No, sir.

Q. The Southern Pacific is also a link in the transcontinental line which I first described?

A. Yes.

Q. So that in making a through rate on that transcontinental line, the Southern Pacific is an indispensable factor?

A. Yes.

Q. There is a transcontinental line by the Morgan line of Steamships from New York to New Orleans and then via the Southern Pacific (the Sunset route as they call it) to San Francisco.

A. Yes, New York & Galveston I think now, rather than New Orleans.

Q. And the competitors for the business, the transcontinental business on the Atlantic seaboard are they all rail lines to the Pacific coast, and the Southern Pacific with its steamship line and Sunset route?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you speak of a line extending from Kansas City and Omaha to Ogden, as a competitive line between the Atlantic seaboard and the Pacific coast, with a line from the Atlantic Coast to the Pacific coast?

A. Well, the word competitive, is not perhaps exact. The Union Pacific between Omaha and Ogden and between Kansas City
330 and Ogden, may form part of a competitive line, roughly speaking, 800 miles out of 2,300 miles, the lines from New York to Ogden, composed of the so-called trunk lines, five or six of them, and the lines between Chicago and the Missouri River, six or seven of them, and the Union Pacific, cover a distance, roughly speaking, of 2,300 or 2,400 miles. All of those lines are in competition, more or less, for the business, which is also competed for by the lines of the Sunset route via Galveston. The Union Pacific is no more a competitor of that line than is the Northwestern or Burlington, or the Milwaukee & St. Paul, or the Erie, or the Pennsylvania, or the New York Central, or the Grand Trunk. They are all more or less remotely competitors of that line for certain business.

Q. They are connecting lines in which the Southern Pacific is an essential link?

A. Yes, the Southern Pacific, otherwise, the western one thousand miles or eight hundred miles of that line.

Commissioner PROUTY: Before this combination, the Union Pacific and the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific were all competing for business east of the Mississippi River to the Pacific coast and San Francisco?

A. No more so than now.

Commissioner PROUTY: I was going to ask you that very question. Do you notice any difference between then and now?

Mr. RIPLEY: No, I do not.

Commissioner PROUTY: You said you would not have a representative of the Union Pacific on your board, but that you would have a representative of Mr. Harriman. Just what is the difference in your mind between those two things?

Mr. RIPLEY: Excuse me. I did not say that at all. What I said was that these gentlemen jointly, Mr. Harriman being one of the number of four or five or five or six, had stock enough to entitle them to representation. They united on two men that were unobjectionable to us, and we agreed to give them seats on our Board. I conceive that there is a great difference between that and con-

331 ceding to Mr. Harriman himself, or to any personal representative of Mr. Harriman as an officer of the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific, such a thing.

Commissioner PROUTY: You did not give much when you simply conceded to a man what he can take. If these gentlemen could take those two seats, you did not concede very much when you agreed to it.

Mr. RIPLEY: We did not in that sense concede very much, but if they had undertaken to force themselves in by election, it would have taken them six years to get two men into the Board. I thought we did concede something.

Mr. MILBURN:

Q. Mr. Ripley, as to Portland, you would scarcely as a practical railroad proposition, consider a line made up of the Morgan line of steamships to New Orleans and then from New Orleans by rail to Portland, as competitive with an all rail line to Portland?

A. It might be considered remotely competitive.

Q. Very remotely would it not be?

A. My notion about that is that it has never been actively a competing line.

Q. When you spoke of Pittsburg freight, originating at Pittsburg, or in that vicinity, being accessible to the southern route, what line would it take?

A. It could be floated down the Ohio River or Mississippi River or be taken by the Southwestern lines to New Orleans, or taken by rail to New York.

Q. How far west should it be, should you say Mr. Ripley, if it had gone by rail from Pittsburg, west, by the time it had reached New Orleans?

A. How far west?

Q. How far west would it have been if it had gone by the direct routes, how far west would it have been by the time it had got to New Orleans by the other route?

A. If we went down the Ohio River, it ought to have arrived very nearly on the Pacific coast by the time it got to New Orleans.

Q. And when it got to New Orleans it would have still to 332 go to San Francisco?

A. It would still be about as far away——

Q. As when it started?

A. Well not quite that, but about as far away as Chicago.

Q. When you spoke to the Union Pacific proper being a competitive line for Oriental traffic, you merely meant as a link of this transcontinental line which you mentioned?

A. A link in the transcontinental line.

Q. A link in the transcontinental line of which the Southern Pacific is also a link?

A. No. The Southern Pacific would not be a link in that case. The question as put to me was on the assumption that the Oregon Short line was a part of or controlled by the Union Pacific.

Q. Then it would be a link to San Francisco and to the Orient via San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. And it could go on the Oregon line to Portland?

A. Yes.

Q. And then from Portland by ship to the Orient?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the past experience of an Oriental line from Portland, as compared with an Oriental line from Puget Sound and San Francisco?

A. No, I have not.

Q. You do not know what the experience has been?

A. No.

Q. In endeavoring to work trans-continental traffic via Portland to the Orient?

A. No, I do not. I know what the experience has been in trying to work it via a point south of San Francisco.

Q. Was that unfavorable?

A. That was disastrous.

Q. You do not know how disastrous it has been trying to work the Oriental business via Portland?

A. I do not.

Q. In comparison with Puget Sound and San Francisco?

A. No.

Mr. KELLOGG:

333 Q. You say that the Union Pacific was a factor, a link in the trans-continental line the same as the Milwaukee, the Northwestern the Rock Island and other lines? You do not mean to the same extent, because there are more lines east of the Missouri River than west?

A. Yes.

Q. So that the Union Pacific was a very important link was it not as to a very large traffic which was competitive with the Southern Pacific. I am speaking of it as a link as far as Ogden.

A. For the San Francisco business?

Q. Yes.

A. As far as Ogden, yes.

Q. That is a very large business?

A. Yes.

Q. A much larger business than the Milwaukee, the Northwestern, the Rock Island, the Burlington and the other lines all centered at Omaha, because there it was divided up, isn't that true?

A. Yes. The Union Pacific has all the business which those lines brought to it, and each one of them had their share.

Q. Is it not a fact that in the pool which existed prior to the Interstate Commerce law, the Union Pacific had thirty per cent. of the business for many years?

A. I do not know.
Q. You do not remember? It had a very large percentage?
A. I had no interest in it and never knew of it.
Q. The Atchison Company you considered a competitor for the San Francisco business with the Southern Pacific?
A. I think so, yes.
Q. And with the Union Pacific?
A. Yes.
Q. For the business from the Eastern States?
A. Yes.
Q. And yet it does not run to New York?
A. No.
Q. It has to be taken in connection with the lines connecting with the Atchison at Chicago?
A. Yes.
Q. And yet the Atchison is an important competitor, isn't it?
A. Yes. The business does not originate mostly east of here.
Q. What is that?
A. The seaboard eastern business is not a very large proportion of the total.
Q. But it is quite a large business?
A. Quite a large business.
334 Q. And you have soliciting agents in the East, do you not?
A. Yes.
Q. In all the large cities?
A. Yes.
Q. Now you certainly would object, as you said, to an officer of the Union Pacific being an officer of your Company?
A. Yes.
Q. Because it is a competing line?
A. Yes.
Q. And the only reason you draw a distinction between Mr. Harriman and these gentlemen who are directors on your Board, Mr. Rogers and Mr. Frick, is that they are not in the active management of the Union Pacific, but merely directors?
A. They represent their investments and those of their friends, that is all.
Q. You do not know how big an investment they represent in the Union Pacific?
A. I do not.
Q. It may be much larger?
A. Maybe.
Q. It is understood, is it not, that Kuhn, Loeb & Company were bankers of the Union Pacific road?
A. I have heard it so stated?
Q. When this project was proposed to you, you objected to it didn't you, Mr. Ripley?
A. What project?
Q. Of having those interests name any men on your Board?
A. No, I don't think I objected.
Q. What is that?

A. I don't think I objected to it. I said if they had the necessary amount of stock, had stock enough to warrant it, it was only fair that they should have representation.

Q. Why did you make the condition that they should not be representatives of another company?

A. Well because I thought it was essential for the welfare of the stockholders I represented that there should not be any representative of a rival company on our Board.

Q. You said you had watched with some fear. Was not that because you suspected that Kuhn, Loeb & Company and those gentlemen wanted representation on your Board for that reason?

A. I knew nothing about their having accumulated stock except what I saw in the newspaper. I watched it with some interest.

335 Mr. MILBURN: You watched the two fifteenths.

Mr. RIPLEY: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. Who were the five or six men that you understood had acquired such an amount of stock in the Union Pacific road as they represented?

A. Mr. Frick and Mr. Rogers, Mr. Harriman and Mr. Schiff. I don't remember now, I think William Rockefeller was among them, although I never talked with him, or never knew definitely that he was interested.

Mr. MILBURN:

Q. Mr. Ripley, Mr. Kellogg compared your line with the Union Pacific proper. There is a great distinction between them in the fact, is there not, that you go to California, and you go to San Francisco and they do not?

A. Oh, yes, and we are competitive with the Southern Pacific, not only for the Trans-continental business, which is a very small part of the total but also in New Mexico, Arizona and California locally. They are our principal competitors.

Q. The Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As between yourself and the Union Pacific proper, the difference between you as competitors in the trans-continental business and California, and the Union Pacific proper, is that your line runs right to California?

A. Yes.

Q. And theirs stops at Ogden?

A. Yes.

Q. For a great deal of business originating say in Kansas City, you and the Union Pacific proper are active competitors?

A. Yes, and this business for Colorado and for points in Kansas.

Q. Both your lines are right there?

A. Yes.

Q. Running to the same terminal?

A. Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. Just a word. The business from Kansas City, from the packhouses, can go at the same rate via the Union Pacific as the 336 initial carrier or via the Southern Pacific with its connections from Kansas City, can't it?

A. I don't think so.

Q. The rates are the same from Kansas City to California via the Southern Pacific as via the Union Pacific?

A. I don't think so. By way of New Orleans?

Q. No, no, by way of El Paso?

A. Oh, I presume so.

Q. So that for all the Mississippi Valley the rates are identically the same for all products to and from California via the Southern Pacific and via the Union Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you mean to say that that is a small business to and from California?

A. I do not think I said that.

Q. It is a large business, isn't it?

A. Yes, it is a considerable business. What I said was a small business by comparison was the Atlantic seaboard business.

Q. Now the business that goes to and from California from the Central Mississippi states and east of there which may go either via Southern Pacific or Union Pacific, is very large, isn't it?

A. That is a relative term. I do not know how large it is. It is quite considerable.

Q. What percentage of your business is through business from California as far as Kansas City and east of there?

A. I think possibly fifteen per cent.

Q. That is a very large business, you would call it so wouldn't you? What are your total gross earnings per year?

A. About eighty million.

Q. That is twelve million dollars on your line alone?

A. No.

Q. Fifteen per cent.?

A. Oh, yes, but of that eighty million you have there your passenger earnings, your mail earnings, and express earnings.

Mr. MILBURN: And your local earnings?

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. What percentage of your business is through passenger
337 business from points as far east as Kansas City?

A. Our entire passenger business is about twenty-five per cent. of our gross earnings. I suppose that our through business is perhaps twenty-five or thirty per cent. of that.

Q. Now, all passenger business from the middle states east of the Missouri River to the Atlantic seaboard, or a large proportion of it is competitive between the Union Pacific, your line, and the Southern Pacific, isn't it?

A. Yes, in that sense.

Q. It may go either way at the same rates?

A. Yes.

Com'r PROUTY: On that business would it make any difference to the Southern Pacific whether it went one way or the other?

Mr. RIPLEY: Well, a little I suppose. It would earn a little more money. I do not know just what the divisions are, but presumably they would earn a little more money west of El Paso than they would west of Ogden.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. It would make a difference to the Union Pacific, wouldn't it?
A. If they did not get it, yes.

Whereupon the further hearing of said matter was adjourned to ten o'clock the following day, January 9th, 1907.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, January 9th, 1907,
10 o'clock A. M.

Present: Commissioners Knapp, (Chairman), Lane and Harlan.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Kellogg, are you ready to proceed?

Mr. KELLOGG: I will have Mr. Severance examine Mr. Markham.

M. C. MARKHAM, called as a witness, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Markham, where do you live?

338 Mr. MARKHAM: In St. Louis.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. MARKHAM: Assistant to the Vice President of the Missouri Pacific Railway.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are your functions in that position? What do you have to deal with?

Mr. MARKHAM: I review and direct under the advice of the Vice President, the traffic and operation of the Railroad, excepting the road department; that is the traffic operation of the company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have to do with all the traffic of the System?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you occupied that position, Mr. Markham?

Mr. MARKHAM: Over a year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that time what was your position?

Mr. MARKHAM: I have been engaged in railroading some 30 years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With what railroad were you connected immediately before going to the Missouri Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: I was Assistant to the President of the Western Pacific, and prior to that with the Illinois Central.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that, with the Illinois Central. In what department of the Illinois Central were you engaged?

Mr. MARKHAM: From clerk to Assistant General Manager and Assistant Traffic Manager. That position I occupied for fifteen years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, during the time you were on the Illinois

Central and since you have been with the Missouri Pacific, have you been informed as to traffic conditions throughout the country?

Mr. MARKHAM: Generally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And particularly with reference to trans-continental business or business to the Orient, originating in this country, or coming from the Orient or the Pacific Coast to the East?

339 Mr. MARKHAM: Not to any great extent with business from the Orient or to the Orient, but with business to the Coast generally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The railroads with which you have been connected have made it essential that you keep in touch with those traffic situations?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, prior to the time that the Southern Pacific management was taken over by Mr. Harriman and his associates, or the Union Pacific, that is, in the Spring of 1901, will you state whether or not the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, known as the Sunset Route, were competitors for Pacific Coast business?

Mr. MARKHAM: They were competitors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were? You say they were competitors?

Mr. MARKHAM: They were competitors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For what class of business and in what territory were they competing?

Mr. MARKHAM: For all classes of business east of the Missouri River.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Markham, how were the rates adjusted by way of the Sunset Route as compared with the all-rail lines of which the Union Pacific formed a part?

Mr. MARKHAM: The rates were the same, as I understand, via New Orleans and via Omaha and Ogden.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what territory?

Mr. MARKHAM: In the territory east of the Mississippi River.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, take the Illinois Central. That Company—its lines reach Omaha and a connection with the Union Pacific and also reach New Orleans and a connection with the Southern Pacific at that point, did they not, while you were with them?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you state whether or not there was active competition between the Union Pacific on the one hand and 340 the Southern Pacific on the other for business originating on the line of the Illinois Central?

Mr. MARKHAM: We generally found it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You generally found it?

Mr. MARKHAM: In soliciting the business for the Southern Pacific, which, as a general thing, gave us the longest haul.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, it was for the interest of the Illinois Central to take the stuff by way of New Orleans because they got a longer haul?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you did find that the two roads were competing to get that business from you, did you?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; that was the general understanding. Of course, we worked with them both.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Worked with them both?

Mr. MARKHAM: Worked with them both.

Mr. SEVERANCE: During those days, did you know Mr. Neemyer?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was his position here in Chicago?

Mr. MARKHAM: I think he represented the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the Union Pacific have a representative here then?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Not Mr. Neemyer, was it?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Knight represented them?

Mr. MARKHAM: Mr. Knight, I think. I did not know Mr. Knight, at least I have met him too. Knight was the name I recollect now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know they had a separate representative?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And these gentlemen were each trying to get all the business they could off your line for their respective lines, were they not?

341 Mr. MARKHAM: That was the general understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were the two men that were general agents of the respective companies here in Chicago and solicitors of traffic?

Mr. MARKHAM: They were the General Agents and supervised the soliciting.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I mean. They had charge of the solicitors that were soliciting the traffic?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: After the Spring of 1901, Mr. Neemyer became the representative of both lines here, did he not?

Mr. MARKHAM: I do not know what year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you remember the fact?

Mr. MARKHAM: I remember the fact. It was somewhere along about that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, did you know the fact that at other points from which a large amount of tonnage originated, the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific commenced to be represented by the same man after—well, after Mr. Stubbs was placed in charge of the traffic of the whole system?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, I know it at Cincinnati, where we had an office. I did not know of other places of my own knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not know except as to Cincinnati?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did there come to you from your subordinates, or did you ascertain otherwise, whether there was any lessening of competition between the two systems, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for trans-continental business after this consolidation of officers?

Mr. MARKHAM: Well, I do not know but such thing had been reported. It was generally understood that such was the case.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not know that it was officially reported, but it was understood?

342 Mr. MARKHAM: In the general conversation, we all took it for granted.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you see any way, from your knowledge of traffic and the business of soliciting the routing of traffic, can you see any way that Mr. Neemyer here in Chicago, for instance, could carry on a very active competition with himself, if he represented both lines?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, I do not see how it could be done. I can see how he could make a division of the business as against the Southern route and as against the Ogden route, for possibly reasons of his own.

Mr. MILBURN: I did not catch that?

Mr. SEVERANCE (addressing stenographer): Read the answer.

The answer was read by the stenographer as follows:

"No, I do not see how it could be done. I can see how he could make a division of the business as against the Southern route and as against the Ogden route for possibly reasons of his own."

Mr. SEVERANCE: That would not be competition, would it?

Mr. MARKHAM: Not in the sense that I understand competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If he was acting for the Southern route, diverting business that way, there would be no representative of the Union Pacific to compete with, and vice versa. Is not that so?

Mr. MARKHAM: That is so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Markham, when Mr. Ripley was on the stand yesterday, Mr. Milburn brought out the fact that the Union Pacific was not—endeavored to bring out the fact that the Union Pacific was not a trans-continental line having control of business from the Missouri River to the Coast by reason of the fact that at Ogden it had to turn over its business, the San Francisco business, to the Southern Pacific, its competitor. What have you to say as to that, taking into account the fact that the Union Pacific control the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation 343 Company, and the latter had a line of ships from Portland to San Francisco.

Mr. MARKHAM: I would say the link was completed right straight through.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, as a practical matter, practical railroading, was it feasible or practical or even possible for the Southern Pacific to control the Union Pacific situation by reason of owning the line from Ogden to San Francisco, so long as the Portland gateway was open to the Union Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: I should not think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Union Pacific was in position, was it not, by reason of the traffic that was moving out there, to demand and receive fair divisions from the Southern Pacific over the line from Ogden to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, for what territory on the Pacific Coast was the Union Pacific a competitor to the Southern Pacific—I mean the Union Pacific with its connections?

Mr. MARKHAM: I should think all the way from Seattle to San Diego.

Mr. MILBURN: I did not catch that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He said all the way from Seattle to San Diego.

Mr. MARKHAM: It would also include Vancouver, I suppose, by steamship.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Markham, was this competitive business a large business, or was it a comparatively trifling business? Was it a large traffic, this trans-continental business which Mr. Markham has testified was competitive between these two systems?

Mr. MARKHAM: I could not say as to how large it was. It was always considered important in amount.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you cannot say in dollars and cents?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But among traffic men that was considered a large item of traffic, was it not?

344 Mr. MARKHAM: It was considered of sufficient importance to make a very great effort to get it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What way did the fruit of California, dried fruit and fresh fruit, come to the Chicago market, for instance? Did any of that come by the Southern Pacific and New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Brought up over the Illinois Central?

Mr. MARKHAM: Brought up over the Illinois Central.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did it also come by way of the Union Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Santa Fe?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is it about the passenger business, particularly the winter tourist business? Were the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific competitors for that business?

Mr. MARKHAM: We took business from Chicago to San Francisco via New Orleans.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it also went, of course, by the Union Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: Also went by the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In fact, all the lines to the Coast were competing for that business, were they not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did machinery and heavy commodities of various kinds move by New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From the Illinois Central territory?

Mr. MARKHAM: From the Illinois Central territory and the manufacturing centres in the east, and Indiana, Ohio and Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how would these shipments reach the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: They would reach them at New Orleans or Omaha, as they were routed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I how say, would they reach the 345 Southern Pacific System—over what rails would they reach there?

Mr. MARKHAM: They would reach the Southern Pacific at New Orleans via connecting lines there or Ogden by the Union Pacific and Denver & Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I was coming to that in a moment. But in order to ship to California from these manufacturing towns you have spoken of in Indiana and Ohio, it is necessary to first ship over some other railroad before they reach the Southern Pacific tracks at at New Orleans. That is true, is not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And traffic did move that way and in very considerable quantities, did it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at the same time traffic moved over other rails and connections with the Union Pacific at Omaha. That is true, is it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And thence to the Coast; so that from all that Central Traffic Territory it was just as essential and necessary for the Southern Pacific to have a rail connection to New Orleans as it was for the Union Pacific to have a rail connection to Council Bluffs. The stuff had to move over other lines first?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; to control the business from Omaha and New Orleans, of course, it was necessary that the rails of the respective lines should reach there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that as to that trans-continental business the Southern Pacific formed what was yesterday termed a link as well as the Union Pacific formed a link in the Northern route.

Mr. MARKHAM: The link to the point of origin of the shipments.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You may examine, Mr. Milburn.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Markham, as I understood you, you said that the Union Pacific line by the Oregon Short Line to Portland and thence——

346 Mr. MARKHAM (interrupting): The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company.

Mr. MILBURN (continuing): Yes, and thence from Portland to San Francisco by vessel, was a Union Pacific route from San Francisco to Ogden, which made it independent of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MARKHAM: Do you want an answer?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, sir.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; I did.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, taking freight bound for San Francisco and taking it by the Union Pacific from Ogden up to Portland, it was about nearly as far from its destination when it got to Portland as it was when it was at Ogden, was it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: A little more, I think.

Mr. MILBURN: A little more. So, it was hauled a thousand miles and that got no nearer its destination than when it began.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Treating the Union Pacific as an independent line and the Southern Pacific as an independent line, that is the line from Ogden to San Francisco, with other connections at Ogden than the Union Pacific for eastern business, what would you say as to the power of the Southern Pacific over the Union Pacific with respect to transferring business to it there if the Union Pacific attempted to operate a San Francisco line via Portland?

Mr. MARKHAM: I should say that the line from Ogden to San Francisco would be entirely independent of the Union Pacific.

Mr. MILBURN: The line from——

Mr. MARKHAM (interrupting): Ogden to San Francisco.

Mr. MILBURN: Via Portland, would be entirely independent?

Mr. MARKHAM: I am afraid I did not get you correctly.

Mr. MILBURN: I am assuming that the Southern Pacific line is entirely independent; that is, the line from Ogden to San Francisco. You appreciate that?

347 Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, it gathers the east bound freight at San Francisco and brings it to Ogden, does it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, at Ogden it has a choice by which line it can send it east, has it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, what would the effect be on the eastern business in respect to its transportation east of Ogden if the Union Pacific operated a line to San Francisco via Portland to avoid transferring the freight at Ogden to the Southern Pacific for transportation to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: The effect would be no different than it was for the reason that the matter of rates which the Union Pacific could make by way of Portland dominated the whole situation.

Mr. MILBURN: No, but I am talking—I am bringing your attention to this fact: The Southern Pacific has it within its power at Ogden to transfer a large or a small quantity, relatively speaking, of freight to the Southern Pacific, has it not? It would have as an independent line?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; large or small; that is right.

Mr. MILBURN: It could transfer the bulk of its business to the Denver & Rio Grande, could it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: I do not know whether it could. I do not know that it could.

Mr. MILBURN: Why not?

Mr. MARKHAM: There are things that work that would make it doubly expensive for the Southern Pacific to probably carry out a policy of that kind.

Mr. MILBURN: It has that power?

Mr. MARKHAM: It could do that and destroy itself.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, but let us—you may think one is being destroyed, and I may think the other. It has that power at Ogden? We will take that step. Has it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: It has that power.

348 Mr. MILBURN: That is a power over the Union Pacific, is it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: It is a very natural thing, would it not be, to say, if you operate a line, or attempt to operate a line from Ogden to San Francisco via Portland, a thousand miles longer, adversely to us, we will exercise that power against you. That would be perfectly natural, would it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: I do not know that I could go as for as that. To some extent, it would.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, then, do you know from any experience what volume of traffic the Union Pacific was ever able to take around to San Francisco via Portland?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir; I do not.

Mr. MILBURN: As a railroad man, would you consider that a feasible competitive line to be at Ogden and to transport San Francisco freight, to transport it by railroad to Portland and then by ship from Portland to San Francisco, as compared with a line direct, a railroad line direct from Ogden to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: The rates are made from New York. I will give you your answer. The rates are made today from New York to San Francisco, a natural route, at least under more adverse circumstances than that would be.

Mr. MILBURN: That still does not answer my question. That takes me into a region of other things. I am bringing before you a concrete proposition, whether, as a railroad man, you would regard it as a feasible competitive route from Ogden to San Francisco, to go by rail to Portland and then by ship from Portland to San Francisco, as compared with a line from Ogden to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: What a railroad man has to consider under those circumstances are the rates, the rates that can be made by that route control the whole situation. A rate may be made less than by 349 the Ogden route. Therefore the situation is controlled as much as if the line was direct?

Mr. MILBURN: You say it is conceivable that there should be such a difference in rates, such a difference in rates that the transportation of the extra distance could be afforded.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That the extra thousand miles of distance would cut no figure.

Mr. MARKHAM: It has been in practical operation every day for years.

Mr. MILBURN: Do you think so? Do you know so?

Mr. MARKHAM: I know it.

Mr. MILBURN: Over that line, I am speaking of.

Mr. MARKHAM: All throughout the country.

Mr. MILBURN: No, but this line? I do not know about other lines. This line, you say, has been in practical operation?

Mr. MARKHAM: It has governed the rates.

Mr. MILBURN: The line from Ogden to Portland?

Mr. MARKHAM: From Ogden to Portland.

Mr. MILBURN: And from Portland to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: The power that line had to make those rates, of course, enable it to get a proper share of the business from the Union Pacific at Ogden.

Mr. MILBURN: Do you know of the business ever being done that way?

Mr. MARKHAM: By the way of Portland?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, sir.

Mr. OGDEN: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: To San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, I understand so.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, do not understand. Do you know?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, I do not know, but in times of——

Mr. MILBURN (interrupting): In your judgment, the trans-continental rate is fixed and is founded on the fact that the Union Pacific can take freight up to Portland and then take it back to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: No.

350 Mr. MILBURN: But it is a factor? That is a factor?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: You were speaking of the Illinois Central situation. It has a line running from Chicago to New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And a line running from Chicago to Omaha?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, sir.

Mr. MARKHAM: It also has a line—what is that point west of Chicago, the short line?

Mr. MARKHAM: Sioux City?

Mr. MILBURN: No.

Mr. MARKHAM: Dubuque?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It runs to Omaha.

Mr. BALDWIN: Freeport.

Mr. MILBURN: Freeport.

Mr. MARKHAM: It does not run from Chicago to Freeport, Mr. Milburn, that is, not direct—oh, yes, it does, right through Freeport—that is right—by the way of Rockford.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, freight originating on the Illinois Central, the natural, normal route, taking that first, Mr. Markham, part of it would be via—would be to go north and via those lines to the Pacific Coast, would it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Originating where?

Mr. MILBURN: On the Illinois Central? The normal—I am talking about the normal.

Mr. MARKHAM: Having destination where?

Mr. MILBURN: California—San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: We took all that we could by the way of New Orleans; always endeavoring to take it by the way of New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: To get the longest haul for yourselves?

Mr. MARKHAM: And the most money.

Mr. MILBURN: To get the longest haul?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That would take as an equivalent of the most money?

351 Mr. MARKHAM: We did not take it all.

Mr. MILBURN: But when you controlled the situation, you took it to New Orleans so as to get the longest haul to New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: That is, prior to this Union Pacific—Southern Pacific, we took that business. After that we could not take it.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, let me understand that. What effect did that have?

Mr. MARKHAM: We had instructions from the Southern Pacific that we had better send it by the way of Omaha, there being a division of territory.

Mr. MILBURN: That you had better send your freight by the Southern Pacific line connecting at Ogden?

Mr. MARKHAM: Above a certain line of demarkation, we would send by the way of Ogden; below that, we would send by New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: Above a certain line of what?

Mr. MARKHAM: A certain line running—I have forgotten the territory, but certain territory was prescribed under which we would send business to Ogden——

Mr. MILBURN (interrupting): Will you give me——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let him finish his answer. He has not finished.

Mr. MILBURN: I thought he was through.

Mr. MARKHAM: Certain territory was prescribed whereby we could send by New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: Can you give me what that line was?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir. It was a line northeast from Cairo that struck the lakes at either Cleveland or Buffalo. All east of that line would go by New Orleans and all west by way of Ogden. I am not positive on that, that is, on that line.

Mr. MILBURN: Will you tell me who gave you that order?

Mr. MARKHAM: We had the information from our soliciting agent.

Mr. MILBURN: You are speaking here—at this time what office did you hold?

352 Mr. MARKHAM: Assistant Traffic Manager of the Illinois Central.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, you did not take your orders from soliciting agents, did you?

Mr. MARKHAM: I did not take orders from soliciting agents. I got my information from soliciting agents.

Mr. MILBURN: If there was such an order as that affecting the business of your road, from whom did it emanate?

Mr. MARKHAM: The order emanated from a source that we recognized very fully to know that it was for our best interest to observe it.

Mr. MILBURN: Let us get away, if we may, from generalities like that. Who issued the orders? If there was an order of that kind, somebody must have issued it?

Mr. MARKHAM: We got the information from our soliciting agent and the soliciting agent told us he got instructions from the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILBURN: Then, what you say is that you, as Assistant Traffic Manager of the Illinois Central were informed by your soliciting agent that your traffic, which was in your charge from a certain territory had to go one route and certain traffic from another territory, another route?

Mr. MARKHAM: That is right.

Mr. MILBURN: And you, as Assistant Traffic Manager of that road had to submit to an order conveyed to you in teat way?

Mr. MARKHAM: But I did not submit. We had instructions, but did not submit.

Mr. MILBURN: You say you had the instructions? That is what I want to get, who from?

Mr. MARKHAM: I mean this way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let him explain it.

Mr. MILBURN: I say it is important. That is what I want to get.

Mr. MARKHAM: Our soliciting agents who reported to the traffic officers, would give us information of that character, but of course we did not come into contact with them. We gave general in-353 structions. We were given to understand that such and such business had to go by way of Omaha and such and such business had to go by the way of New Orleans. If it did not go, we knew that they had it in their power to make it cost us very dearly.

Mr. MILBURN: That is you- statement, but you can — us nothing but what your soliciting agent told you? That is all you can give?

Mr. MARKHAM: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We will give you the definite information later.

Mr. MILBURN: All right, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You will get it.

Mr. MILBURN: We would like it in a definite way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You will get it.

Mr. MILBURN: But we do not care for it otherwise. (Addressing witness:) You spoke of Mr. Neemyer, who was agent at Chicago, did you not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: At one time he was agent for what line?

Mr. MARKHAM: For the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILBURN: For the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And in Chicago?

Mr. MARKHAM: In Chicago, yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Was he at that time when he was acting for the Southern Pacific, working the Ogden Line, as it was called?

Mr. MARKHAM: The Southern Pacific by way of New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: He was agent of the Southern Pacific at Chicago, you say?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Soliciting agent, or what do eou call it?

Mr. MARKHAM: He was General Agent of the solicitors east of Chicago.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, was he working at that time the Ogden line?

354 Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; when he could not get it by New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: I think it answers my question to say, "yes." I think I am entitled to the answer.

Mr. MARKHAM: I want to answer you.

Mr. MILBURN: I asked you whether he was working the Ogden line?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; he was working the Ogden line.

Mr. MILBURN: At that time?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Markman, in the Chicago territory, to solicit or seek for freight there to go by the Sunset Route means that it is taken to New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: Not necessarily. The Illinois Central, of course, in soliciting freight there would take it to New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: No, I am not talking of the Southern Pacific agent in Chicago for the territory there.

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir; not New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: Where, then?

Mr. MARKHAM: Why, by any of the various junctions with the Sunset Route in Texas, by El Paso or the many junction points this side reached by lines,——

Mr. MILBURN (interrupting): I am talking about California business.

Mr. MARKHAM: That is what I mean. It could be taken by many lines and given to the Southern Pacific in Texas at the Texas junctions as well as taken by the lines from the north and given to the Southern Pacific at New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, not only New Orleans, but other southern points similar to New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And taking New Orleans as an instance, I just ask this one question: For freight in the vicinity of—what you call in the territory of Chicago—that would be a very roundabout way, would it not, to go to New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: Not for freight.

355 Mr. MILBURN: Then, to go to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: It is not so considered.

Mr. MILBURN: When it got to New Orleans, it was farther from San Francisco than when it started?

Mr. MARKHAM: I think that is true, thirty-two hundred miles as against twenty-four hundred.

Mr. MILBURN: Taking the two extremes, how far is it from Chicago to New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: 912 miles.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Markham, you spoke of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific being competitors for business originating on the Illinois Central?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: By that you meant the Southern Pacific from New Orleans or those other points you mentioned. That would be, so far as the Illinois Central is concerned, New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And the other competitor would be a line made up of the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific and some other line between Omaha or Council Bluffs and the Illinois Central itself?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: It has a line to Omaha?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Those are the two competitive routes?

Mr. MARKHAM: Those are the two competitive routes.

Mr. MILBURN: One route is made up entirely of the Southern Pacific and the Illinois Central by the south?

Mr. MARKHAM: There might be other lines——

Mr. MILBURN (interrupting): I am talking of the Illinois Central.

Mr. MARKHAM: You are talking of a local station on the Illinois Central?

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, sir; I am talking of the Illinois Central. One competing line would be the Illinois Central and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: You understand, of course, by reason of 356 the junctions on the Illinois Central, that probably one-third of the territory might be competitive to New Orleans with some other lines.

Mr. MILBURN: I am talking about traffic originating on the Illinois Central.

Mr. MARKHAM: That is what I have in mind too.

Mr. MILBURN: Very well. So, from the time it strikes the Illinois Central you say it has two competitive routes to San Francisco. One was made up of the Illinois Central and the Southern Pacific—the Illinois Central to New Orleans and the Southern Pacific from New Orleans to San Francisco.

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir. There might be half a dozen competitors to New Orleans from the Illinois Central stations.

Mr. MILBURN: I am not talking about any other. I am talking about that line now. I say, that is one competing line.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: From the Illinois Central to the Southern Pacific at New Orleans and over the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MARKHAM: But there might be half a dozen competing lines——

Mr. MILBURN: I concede it. I am talking of the proposition between two competing lines which you mentioned.

Mr. MARKHAM: That is, half a dozen lines to New Orleans and one line from New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: I am talking about traffic on your old line, the Illinois Central. I am not talking about traffic on any other line.

Mr. MARKHAM: But you understand, the traffic on the Illinois

Central you are talking about may be competitive between four or five lines to New Orleans.

Mr. MILBURN: I am talking about traffic that got to your line; not that missed your line.

Mr. MARKHAM: I will follow you on that.

Mr. MILBURN: When I talk of traffic originating on the Illinois Central, that is Illinois Central traffic. Now, you take the 357 one route, which is the Illinois Central to New Orleans and the Southern Pacific to San Francisco.

Mr. MARKHAM: I will follow you on that line now.

Mr. MILBURN: Do you say, yes?

Mr. MARKHAM: I do not understand the question now?

Mr. MILBURN: You do not?

Mr. MARKHAM: No.

Mr. MILBURN: You said that the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were competitors for Illinois Central business for San Francisco.

Mr. MARKHAM: That is, prior to this amalgamation.

Mr. MILBURN: That is what I am talking about.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Were competitors for Illinois Central business for San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, then, I say the competing lines, so far as these two companies are concerned, the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, would be from the Illinois Central to New Orleans and by the Southern Pacific to San Francisco, No. 1.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: No. 2 would be the Illinois Central to Omaha and by the Union Pacific to Ogden and by the Southern Pacific to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That is true, is it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: So that in both competing lines, the Southern Pacific and the Illinois Central were common elements?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, not in a traffic sense. I cannot follow you on that.

Mr. MILBURN: In both those competing lines, the Illinois Central and the Southern Pacific were common elements?

Mr. MARKHAM: If there was nothing else between the point of origin of the traffic on the Illinois Central and New Orleans and Omaha, there was nothing else.

358 Mr. MILBURN: Well, it seems to me, Mr. Markham, it should be pretty plain.

Mr. MARKHAM: Our mind seems to run in different directions.

Mr. MILBURN: No, my mind does not run in any direction. It runs in the direction where you take it. I want to get at the facts. I will repeat it once more and then give it up if we do not come to the point.

You spoke of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Mr. MARKHAM: Can I answer you this way——

Mr. MILBURN: No, answer the question.

Mr. MARKHAM: You are perfectly right if you eliminate from the question all other lines except the lines you mentioned. That is, if I do not find anything to harrass me in the situation except the lines you mentioned, that is, the Illinois Central to New Orleans plus the Southern Pacific, and the Illinois Central plus the Union Pacific plus the Central Pacific—if you take everything else away, then——

Mr. MILBURN: I take those lines and all those competing lines. The Southern Pacific and Illinois Central would be common elements.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, common elements.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, those were the lines which were competing for Illinois Central traffic so far as the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific were concerned, were they not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: When did you leave the Illinois Central, Mr. Markham?

Mr. MARKHAM: In 1903.

Mr. MILBURN: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Markham, Mr. Milburn seems to make a great deal of the fact that some lines are longer than other lines and have the impression that they cannot successfully compete because they are longer. Let us examine into that questions for a moment. Take Mr. Milburn's own lines. The Southern Pacific, the Sunset Route, made up of a line of steamers from New York, running to New Orleans and Galveston and by rail from New Orleans to 359 San Francisco, has been for years an active competitor with the all rail lines, not only from New York but back into the country, at least as far as Pittsburgh, and sometimes to Cincinnati. Is not that true?

Mr. MARKHAM: Not to Cincinnati.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, to Indianapolis?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, as far back as Toronto, Buffalo, Pittsburgh and Wheeling.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, leave it there. Now, the Southern Pacific line, boat and rail, is how much farther from New York to San Francisco than an all-rail route?

Mr. MARKHAM: I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, the boats have to go down from New York around the southern end of Florida and then get up to New Orleans, and then there is a long line—or to Galveston; then, there is the long bow-shaped line going up to San Francisco. That is very much longer—and then you must add to that the distance from Pittsburgh to New York. That is certainly very much longer, perhaps a thousand or two thousand miles longer—I expect two thousand miles longer than a direct rail route from Pittsburgh to San Francisco, is it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: I should think so. That could easily be determined or figured out.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Here is a map that shows (exhibiting map).

Mr. MARKHAM: It is 440 miles from Pittsburgh to New York.

You can take the Coast Line to Florida, plus the meridian from Florida to Galveston and you will get the distance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The coast line to Florida would not do. The boat lines run clear around the southern end of Florida.

Mr. MARKHAM: I was taking the meridian from the southern end of Florida to Galveston.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact not only that the Southern Pacific haul freight that distance, but don't they also absorb the rail charge from Pittsburgh to New York in addition? All railroad men know that.

360 Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that the Southern Pacific not only conveys traffic that tremendous distance, a couple of thousand miles farther than the all-rail haul, but in addition it pays over to the Pennsylvania Road, or whatever road may transport the traffic from Pittsburgh to New York the amount of its local charge and takes that out of the revenue it gets for transporting the stuff around to San Francisco. That is true, is it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It does that in competition with the all-rail lines running west from Pittsburgh?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, in the face of that fact it does not seem impossible, does it, that a rail and boat line by Portland might dominate the situation, as you say, as against the straight line to San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: It is considered no disability in the matter of control of traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you were asked whether Mr. Meemyer when he was the representative of the Southern Pacific did not work the Ogden line. That was the language, I think, of the question, and I think you said he did. What did you mean? You said he did when he could not get the other way, or something of that kind? What did you mean by that answer?

Mr. MARKHAM: I meant that that would be his proper function.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, the Santa Fe was a competitor all the way from Chicago, was it not?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Southern Pacific's interest was to take everything possible by way of New Orleans or Galveston or Texas junction points, because they got the longer haul as against the short line?

Mr. MARKHAM: That is as I understand it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you said, Mr. Markham——

Mr. MILBURN: What was that answer?

Mr. SEVERANCE: He said yes. You were also asked whether the Southern Pacific could not have turned over all its business 361 to the Denver & Rio Grande, and you said that if they wanted to ruin themselves they could have done it. What did you mean by that?

Mr. MARKHAM: I think I said self-destruction. I meant that the other route by the way of Portland could make the rates of such a character that it would be self-interest for the Southern Pacific to come to some proper understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there not another factor in that, Mr. Markham? There are a number of roads running to Omaha, connecting with the Union Pacific, and they turn a large amount of traffic over to the Union Pacific at that point, west bound?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, would not self-interest impel the Southern Pacific to treat fairly the haul from Ogden to San Francisco and take a proper division to get a share of that traffic that the Union Pacific had turned over?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. MILBURN: Just one question. Do you know, Mr. Markham, whether that freight originating in the Chicago territory, the Southern Pacific has got the most net money going by the Ogden line, or going by the Southern Pacific, the New Orleans line?

Mr. MARKHAM: I do not know the net money.

Mr. MILBURN: You do not know the net money?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir, I do not.

Mr. MILBURN: You have no figures from which you can tell which was the most profitable line for the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Com'r LANE: One moment. Do you regard the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific as competitors?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: And the Great Northern?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: And the Canadian Pacific?

362 Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: Do you regard the Canadian Pacific and the Southern Pacific, running from New Orleans, as competitors for San Francisco business?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; from New York State and all that territory.

Com'r LANE: Take it for this territory.

Mr. MARKHAM: Hardly, although I suppose, in as much as the same rates obtain from New York, that business might be sent from Chicago to New York and taken by the Canadian Pacific, if not to a connecting line at Detroit.

Com'r LANE: Sent back to Detroit and taken by the Canadian Pacific that way?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; or from Chicago to New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or from Chicago to St. Paul?

Mr. MARKHAM: Or to St. Paul, and pay the local rate in the same way as Mr. Severance has just stated that the local rates are paid by the Morgan Steamship Company from Pennsylvania and New York State to New York.

Com'r LANE: Is there a through route from here to San Francisco by way of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: I do not know that there is now.

Com'r CLEMENTS: At the time you say there was competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and your road was carrying freight from Chicago to New Orleans bound for San Francisco, for instance it was to your advantage to have it all go by the Southern Pacific, wasn't it?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Com'r CLEMENT: You got the longer haul and the greater division of the through rate?

Mr. MARKHAM: That depended on the distance. If it originated at Memphis, for instance, it might be that it would be more profitable to take it north; according to the——

Com'r CLEMENTS: It might be more profitable to take it north to the Union Pacific?

363 Mr. MARKHAM: We generally took it south when we could.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Did that determine that you take it north or south, according to whether you would get the greater division of the rate?

Mr. MARKHAM: We always worked in the direction of getting the greatest revenue.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Yes. Do you remember about the time that the complaint of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company was up in regard to rates to Denver, for instance, from Chicago on steel rails and other iron and steel products; that it was shown in that case there had been a heavy movement of steel products from Chicago to San Francisco by way of New Orleans, or do you know about those things?

Mr. MARKHAM: I don't know about that.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Was that a fact that freight of that kind did move in large quantities?

Mr. MARKHAM: I don't recall it moving. Oh, yes; to San Francisco by way of New Orleans; yes, by rail.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Via the Illinois Central and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes sir.

Com'r CLEMENTS: From Chicago by way of New Orleans to the Pacific Coast, San Francisco?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Com'r CLEMENTS: There was a rate at that time—I don't know whether you remember it — not, but it is a fact—a rate of $1.60 from Chicago to Denver, and, say 60 cents on steel rails from Chicago to San Francisco.

Mr. MARKHAM: I don't recollect.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, now, in what way did this competition manifest itself to you, as an officer of the Illinois Central Railroad, and having the routing of this business either by way of the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific? You would get it at Memphis and other places?

Mr. MARKHAM: Only in the reports that were received from time to time from the soliciting and traveling agents.

364 Com'r CLEMENTS: Was there a difference in the rates?

Mr. MARKHAM: No.

Com'r CLEMENTS: The rates were the same then by one route as by the other?

Mr. MARKHAM: The published rates were.

Com'r CLEMENTS: The published rates were?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, now, what manifestation of competition was there; was there any departure from the published rates?

Mr. MARKHAM: An undue volume of traffic going by one route from time to time, or it would go by a route other than that by which it was solicited, probably.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Were you called upon to adjust movements of freight and the freight rates applicable to them, on a basis lower than the published rates in those days in connection with the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir; never was.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Was there any practice of that sort?

Mr. MARKHAM: There was.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Cutting the rates or paying rebates below the published freight rates?

Mr. MARKHAM: I suppose there was. It was general at that time.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, did your company participate with the Union Pacific on the one hand and the Southern Pacific on the other in the adjustment of rates lower than the published rates, in that period I am talking about.

Mr. MARKHAM: I don't recollect anything having come before me on that matter, that I could answer definitely.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Was there at any time an offer made to you by the Union Pacific or a representative of the Union Pacific on the one hand and a representative of the Southern Pacific on the other for a better division of the through rate more favorable to the 365 Illinois Central than that which had theretofore prevailed?

Mr. MARKHAM: Not to me.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Any inducements of that sort offered by either line to have the freight moved over it that you know of?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, the divisions are generally determined upon in convention and the Southern Pacific had very set views on those matters, and their views generally obtained in the matter of divisions.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Their views obtained? You mean by that that the determination of the Southern Pacific as to the division of the through rate dominated the situation?

Mr. MARKHAM: Generally.

Com'r CLEMENTS: And fixed the limit or what could be obtained by the Union Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: I don't know about the Union Pacific.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, in what way did the—how did the views of the Southern Pacific operate to fix the division of the through rate as between you and these other roads, whichever route you would send the freight by?

Mr. MARKHAM: I think there was—there had been originally fixed a set division, and it was not varied from. I don't know what the division was now, but I know that the general impression was that the divisions were fixed by the Southern Pacific and they were masters of the situation. We had to acquiesce.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Did this practice of deviating from the published rates or paying rebates prevail by both roads, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific in those days?

Mr. MARKHAM: I don't know that it prevailed by any road, Mr. Clements. I only know the general impression. Whether it obtained, I do not know personally.

Com'r CLEMENTS: You were only speaking of that then as a matter of general report?

366 Mr. MARKHAM: General report.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Did you have any contact with these matters by which you had any personal knowledge of it?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir; in connection with the Southern Pacific, I did not.

The CHAIRMAN: Mr. Markham, you were connected with the Illinois Central Railroad Company for a number of years?

The CHAIRMAN: And up to about what date?

Mr. MARKHAM: 1903.

The CHAIRMAN: It appears that the Union Pacific acquired control of the Southern Pacific in 1901?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Or two years, perhaps, before you ceased to be connected with the Illinois Central?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: You were aware of that acquired control at the time it occurred?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: By public knowledge?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Did you observe any difference in the conditions which your company met after that control of the Southern Pacific was acquired than before?

Mr. MARKHAM: I cannot say that I did.

The CHAIRMAN: Was any difference reported to you by your subordinates?

Mr. MARKHAM: I have got an impression there was. We had taken it for granted that it would be so, as being the natural thing.

The CHAIRMAN: I understand.

Mr. MARKHAM: And therefore did not look for it in the same way we would otherwise; and it might have been there and not noticed it.

The CHAIRMAN: In what manner, if at all, did that change of control affect your company?

Mr. MARKHAM: Only in this matter, I think, that I described a short time ago; that business in and around the territory of 367 Chicago would have to be sent by way of Omaha, when otherwise, if we controlled it ourselves with the shippers, we would route it by the way of New Orleans.

The CHAIRMAN: That is, you secured a less share for the long haul to New Orleans than you did before?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir. We received a less revenue by being obliged to send the business by way of Omaha instead of New Orleans, as we had done before?

The CHAIRMAN: That is the same thing, isn't it?

Mr. MARKHAM: Well, in substance it might be.

The CHAIRMAN: Yes, it comes to the same thing.

Com'r HARLAN: You had to use the short haul instead of the long haul?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: What is the difference in that haul to Omaha and to New Orleans?

Mr. MARKHAM: About 400 miles.

Mr. MILBURN: From any point south of Chicago, on the Illinois Central——

Mr. MARKHAM: It would be more.

Mr. MILBURN: What?

Mr. MARKHAM: It would be less. It grows less as you go south.

Mr. MILBURN: That is, from Chicago to Omaha, and Chicago to New Orleans there is a difference of 400 miles?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; about that.

The CHAIRMAN: The Union Pacific has a line from Kansas City to Denver, and also one from Omaha to Denver, hasn't it?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: And at the time you speak of was there competition for traffic moving to Denver and Colorado common points as between the all rail lines up to Omaha or Kansas City and then the Union Pacific to Denver and the water lines to New Orleans and then rail to Denver in that territory?

Mr. MARKHAM: From the seaboard territory?

The CHAIRMAN: Yes.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Was that an active competition?

368 Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; not from the territory west of Buffalo and Pittsburg.

The CHAIRMAN: No. I understand that. But from the seaboard territory?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was that to New Orleans or to Texas points and up to Colorado?

Mr. MARKHAM: It was to Colorado points.

The CHAIRMAN: I asked about Colorado common points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I know, but would it move from New Orleans; did boats stop there, or would it be moved from Galveston?

Mr. MARKHAM: Boats did stop there ten or fifteen years ago, but not for some years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then the stuff didn't move by way of New Orleans, but by way of Texas points.

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir; by Galveston, for instance.

The CHAIRMAN: You were familiar in a general way at least, with that competition for seaboard traffic, moving to Colorado common points, were you not?

Mr. MARKHAM: In a general way, as understanding the traffic situation of the country.

The CHAIRMAN: You are not connected with the Missouri Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Your road reaches Denver and Colorado points?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir. It reaches Pueblo.

The CHAIRMAN: And your line is a competitor for traffic to that territory?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Which it secures from its connections east of the Mississippi River?

Mr. MARKHAM: Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: Have you observed any effect in competition which your line meets in securing a share of that traffic, resulting from a control of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific?

Mr. MARKHAM: No, sir.

369 The CHAIRMAN: Is there any other question to be asked Mr. Markham?

Mr. SEVERANCE: No questions.

The CHAIRMAN: If not, he is excused.

(Witness excused)

J. C. STUBBS, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. KELLOGG: You are the Traffic Director of the Union Pacific Railroad, are you not, Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of the Oregon Short Line Railroad?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of the Southern Pacific System?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you have anything to do with the steamship lines?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to——

The CHAIRMAN: Pardon me, Mr. Kellogg. Do we understand, Mr. Stubbs, that your jurisdiction does not cover the Morgan lines from New York?

Mr. STUBBS: Well when I answered as to steamships I referred to the Pacific Mail. Yes, it does extend over the Morgan Line.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific System, in a general way, then, owns the Morgan Line of Steamships from New York to New Orleans and Galveston, does it?

Mr. STUBBS: I so understand it.

Mr. KELLOGG: And lines of railway extending from New Orleans through Louisiana and Texas, Arizona and New Mexico, California and Oregon up to Portland?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not understand that the Southern Pacific owns the lines through Texas.

370 Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I mean they control them through stock ownership?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I presume that is so, but I would not be a very good witness on that, I think. I don't know the facts.

Mr. KELLOGG: All the Southern Pacific is under your jurisdiction?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Including the Texas lines?

Mr. STUBBS: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: No?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't have anything to do with the Texas lines?

Mr. STUBBS: No, sir; except as to traffic that passes through.

Mr. KELLOGG: Except as to through traffic?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes; passing through the State; and to that extent my jurisdiction or control over that is no greater or no less than if these Texas roads were held by perfect strangers.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, we will see about that in a minute. Prior to the first——

Mr. STUBBS: You can take my word for it; you will find that out before you get through.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to the acquisition of the South- Pacific by the Union Pacific, what was your jurisdiction?

Mr. STUBBS: The same as now, eliminating the Union Pacific System.

Mr. KELLOGG: You were the Traffic Manager of the Southern Pacific System?

Mr. STUBBS: I was one of its vice-presidents in charge of traffic, to be accurate.

Mr. KELLOGG: At that time who was the head of the Southern Pacific System?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, until his death, practically Mr. Huntington was, but after his death Mr. Hayes, the General Manager——

Mr. KELLOGG: He was the President, wasn't he.

Mr. STUBBS: President; yes, sir.

371 Mr. KELLOGG: But Mr. Huntington during his life and the estate after his death, until the sale of the stock to the Union Pacific, controlled the Southern Pacific System?

Mr. STUBBS: They dominated it.

Mr. KELLOGG: How many years were you connected with the system?

Mr. STUBBS: From 1870.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, that system then, included the rail lines that I have mentioned from Portland through San Francisco to New Orleans and the line from San Francisco to Ogden, did it not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the steamship lines from Ogden too—or from New Orleans and Galveston to New York?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, what steamship lines at that time did it control on the Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I understand at the time of Mr. Huntington's death the Southern Pacific Company, or the people that controlled the Southern Pacific Company—I cannot be exact as to that—held a majority of the stock of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: That steamship line had boats running from what ports to what ports?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, from San Francisco to the Orient, and to Panama and coastwise.

Mr. KELLOGG: In connection with the Panama Railroad?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And where?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, coastwise points; that is, Mexican points; I believe they made stops——

Mr. KELLOGG: Did it control any other steamship line on the Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: It controlled, with the Union Pacific, the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: What line was that?

Mr. STUBBS: That was the line that operated between San Francisco and Asiatic ports.

372 Mr. KELLOGG: Who owned at that time the stock of that company; how much did each company own?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, my understanding is that it was equally divided between the controllers, the individuals controlling the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific Company, but I cannot be accurate as to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, now, during those days——

Mr. STUBBS: In other words I mean to say by that, that I did not know whether the Southern Pacific side was owned by the individuals or by the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: You understand that either the company or the interests with them owned them?

Mr. STUBBS: Practically the same.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is practically the same thing?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Did the Union Pacific during those days own a line of railroad from Council Bluffs via Denver, thence to Cheyenne and Ogden to Portland?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: What steamship lines did it control or the Navigation Company control?

Mr. STUBBS: I understand that they operated a line of steamships between San Francisco and Portland, and then they had steamships

—they had various steamboat lines on the Willimat and the Columbia Rivers.

Mr. KELLOGG: Did they also own another line of steamships which operated in connection with the Orient at that time?

Mr. STUBBS: I cannot be accurate as to that. They established or there was established a line of steamships between Portland and Oriental ports, first, I think, by outside parties.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Doddwell people?

Mr. STUBBS: Doddwell people, but I don't know but what another man intervened later. However, at the time I went there the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company was organized and controlled by the Oregon Railroad and Navigation.

Mr. KELLOGG: At the time you went there—you mean
373 the time you became connected with the Union Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And prior to that time either private interests owned a line in connection with the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, or the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company owned the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Line which operated to Asiatic ports?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: In connection with the Union Pacific System?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, in connection with the Navigation Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company was a part of the Union Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And controlled by it?

Mr. STUBBS: I understood so.

Mr. KELLOGG: You understood that it was at that time did you not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now——

Mr. STUBBS: I wish to be understood as saying, in the matter of being controlled by the Union Pacific, that it had its separate organization; that is to say the President of the Union Pacific Company had nothing to do, had no control over the President of the Navigation Company; but it was generally understood—I understood it—that the stock ownership was in the same hands.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is as you understood it, and I believe it to be a fact that the Union Pacific owned the stock and controlled in that way the Short Line and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company?

Mr. STUBBS: I so understood it.

Mr. KELLOGG: And in connection with those lines from Portland, there was a steamship line running to San Francisco, and a steamship line running from Portland to Asiatic ports?

374 Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Southern Pacific had a rail line from Portland to San Francisco?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, Mr. Stubbs, prior to that time—I say prior to March, 1901—I believe that was about the time of the acquisition?

Mr. STUBBS: Somewhere about it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to that time you were the Traffic Manager of the Southern Pacific System, or Vice-President in charge of traffic, and familar with its business for many years, were you not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Business from the Atlantic Seaboard as far west as Pittsburg and common points all through the Atlantic coast moved via the Southern Pacific, the Morgan Line and Southern Pacific Railway Line to Pacific Coast points, did it not?

Mr. STUBBS: A part of it did.

Mr. KELLOGG: I didn't say all of it; some of it?

Mr. STUBBS: Very well. Except as to the City of Pittsburg, Buffalo and Wheeling. The line is somewhat east of those points. I cannot describe it to you exactly, but Pittsburg proper and Buffalo proper, and Wheeling proper business did not go that way.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, do you say, as a matter of fact, that no business ever went from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Buffalo to the Atlantic seaports and via the Morgan Line and the Southern Pacific to California and Oregon points?

Mr. STUBBS: No, I do not say of my own knowledge that no business ever did that, go that way, but I do say that no tariffs were published, through tariffs were published that way from Pittsburg proper.

Mr. KELLOGG: Don't you know, Mr. Stubbs, of your own knowledge that business did go that way?

Mr. STUBBS: Indeed, I do not.

Mr. KELLOGG: You do not?

Mr. STUBBS: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: All right. Business then east of Pittsburg and Buffalo from all that territory or the principal points, all 375 moved via the Morgan Line and Southern Pacific to the Pacific coast?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: To the Orient via the——

Mr. STUBBS: No. Oh, yes; I am not sure but what it did westbound. Yes, that is right.

Mr. KELLOGG: And business from the Orient?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: It didn't move that way?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: No business at all?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: No business came——

Mr. STUBBS: It was never solicited and I do not recall of a single case.

Mr. KELLOGG: You know of no business?

Mr. STUBBS: No business.

Mr. KELLOGG: But business from the Pacific Coast did move to Atlantic seaboard places via that line?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: As far north as Portland?

Mr. STUBBS: I think not. I am not sure. I think that very little business was done from that end; some hops moved from Willimat Valley, but I wouldn't be sure about that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, business moved from the eastern points for Portland via that line, didn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: I think some did; that line was worked for Portland.

Mr. KELLOGG: And even moved to Seattle and Tacoma?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: No business ever went there that way to Seattle and Tacoma?

Mr. STUBBS: I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you know the merchants of Seattle Tacoma, many of them?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you remember the Spokane rate case in which merchants of Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and San Francisco
376 testified that merchandise all moved from Pittsburgh and eastern points, and even points as far west as Cleveland, to Portland, Seattle and Tacoma via that line?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't remember that case?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not remember it. There may have been something of that kind but it was very small; not enough to attract my attention.

Mr. KELLOGG: But it did move to Portland?

Mr. STUBBS: I think in small quantities.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you remember that prior to 1896 the rates via that line at one time to Portland were less than they were via the Union Pacific for a while?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not remember.

Mr. KELLOGG: You do not remember it?

Mr. STUBBS: No, sir. I should be very much surprised to learn that it was a fact or had been a fact.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, the rates to-day are from that eastern country the same via the Morgan Line and the Sunset route as they are via the all-rail lines on substantially all traffic?

Mr. STUBBS: Substantially.

Mr. KELLOGG: That means that the Southern Pacific Company takes the stuff from Pittsburg or east of Pittsburg, pays the rate to the seaboard or absorbs or the rate is taken out from the through rate, at the same rate that would be hauled via the all-rail lines to California points?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Business west of Pittsburg and the territory between there and the Missouri River, the rates are the same via New Orleans and Texas Points, with the Southern Pacific as they are via Ogden or other gateways to the Pacific Coast, are they not?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that practically on all the business that goes to and comes from the Pacific Coast from the territory east of the Missouri River in the United States the rates are the same and it can go either via New Orleans gateway or Ogden?

377 Mr. STUBBS: Oh, no; not east; all the territory east of the Missouri.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, substantially the rates are the same.

Mr. STUBBS: Not substantially. I cannot conceive of business, or the rates would be the same from Omaha on the Missouri River or Kansas City by the Sunset Route as they are the other way.

Mr. KELLOGG: Aren't the rates substantially the same from Kansas City via El Paso to California points?

Mr. STUBBS: They are to California points, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And substantially the same from St. Joe?

Mr. STUBBS: I am not sure. However, I will answer that I think you are right.

Mr. KELLOGG: Passenger business. Take the tourist business in the winter, aren't substantially all the rates east of the Missouri River and as far north as St. Paul the same via the Sunset Route and its connections as via the Union Pacific and its connections?

Mr. STUBBS: I don't know about that. I don't know as to the St. Paul. I cannot say.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, substantially all the territory east of the Missouri River.

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Com'r CLEMENTS: How far south does that answer hold good as to freight and passenger business?

Mr. STUBBS: In what respect?

Com'r CLEMENTS: In what respect?

Com'r CLEMENTS: That the rates would be the same either via the Union Pacific or the Sunset route.

Mr. STUBBS: The passenger business, according to my understanding, the great bulk of it moves on round trip rates, and the round trip rates cover nearly all of this territory.

Com'r CLEMENTS: How far south do you recall is embraced in this territory?

Mr. STUBBS: I think as far as New Orleans.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Clear to the Gulf?

Mr. STUBBS: But I am not a very good witness as to what 378 the passenger rates are. You can get that from Mr. McCormick.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, as to freight; how is that—substantially the same by either route from points in Georgia and Tennessee?

Mr. STUBBS: I think the rates from Missouri River points are the same; from New Orleans north and from Missouri River points are the same from Kansas City north. My recollection is that Galveston and Houston take practically the same as Kansas City. Chicago is a little higher.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Take a point in Kentucky and Tennessee and Georgia; would you include that in the same territory where the rates would be substantially the same by either route?

Mr. STUBBS: Not east of the Mississippi River; no.

Mr. KELLOGG: What point is that?

Com'r CLEMENTS: I am speaking of the southeastern territory.

Mr. STUBBS: Still, in a large measure the rates to California are blanket from nearly all this eastern territory, the same.

Com'r CLEMENTS: That is what I am asking about. What do you mean by this territory; how far south does it go?

Mr. STUBBS: My answer was this: That according to my recollection the rates from New Orleans and all Mississippi River points are the same, and from Kansas City and all Missouri River points, and from Galveston and Houston are the same. The Chicago rates, I think, differ.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, then do the same rates apply from points east of the Mississippi River and south of the Ohio River; substantially the same by either route?

Mr. STUBBS: I cannot be exact as to that; I don't know. The tariffs will show that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Here is the westbound trans-continental tariff. (Counsel hands witness tariff.)

Mr. STUBBS: I have been out of the rate business a good
379 many years. I do not know what the rates are any more than some clerk, some stranger.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Of course we are only asking now about their being substantially the same in general; not being absolutely and specifically the same.

Mr. KELLOGG: I think Mr. Stubbs was correct that substantially all the territory has the same rates.

Mr. STUBBS: Now, according to this tariff the class rate—it shows the rates from Missouri River common points on $3.50 scale, first class; Mississippi River, $3.70; Chicago and Milwaukee points, $3.90. But the most of that business is done under commodity rates westbound and the differences in the commodity rates are not as marked as they were in the class rates, and I guess it is safe enough to say that they are generally blanket, although not always.

Mr. KELLOGG: I think that is substantially correct.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, generally blanket—you mean from Mississippi River points?

Mr. STUBBS: All this territory as far east as the Atlantic Seaboard.

Com'r CLEMENTS: And that means from New Orleans and as far as the Mississippi River goes north?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir. Except that St. Paul is on the Missouri River basis.

Com'r CLEMENTS: And that is the same thing—the same thing is true all east of the Mississippi River?

Mr. STUBBS: Practically so. I think there is some—I think that would have to be modified in respect to the southeastern territory, but I am not sure about that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then, Mr. Stubbs, why is it that New York has, always has had, substantially the same rate as other points east of the Mississippi River to California points?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, the reason has been from the very beginning, the nature of the competition from New York to San Francisco, which was controlling as to all the business; it was the sea competition that fixed the rate.

380 Mr. KELLOGG: Via the Southern Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: Via all the lines.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, via the Southern Pacific was an important factor in that competition, wasn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: Not at the outset.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, it has been for many years?

Mr. STUBBS Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, now then——

Mr. STUBBS: No more than the other all-rail lines.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, no. With the all rail lines it was the sea competition that made the rate from New York the same to San Francisco as it was from Chicago, wasn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: It was not the all-rail lines that made that?

Mr. STUBBS: That is hardly the correct statement. It is the sea competition that determined the rate between New York and San Francisco, for example, and all the other rates based on that; sometimes they were higher. There was a period, I think, back in the early seventies when we charged a higher rate from Chicago and interior points than from New York.

Mr. KELLOGG: I am coming to that. That was in the early days?

Mr. STUBBS: I think it was, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And in the traffic meetings when you represented the Southern Pacific System in those days you insisted, did you not, that as you went west from New York to the interior the rates should be raised, should be higher than New York, because you had to haul the stuff east of New York and then around by the sea?

Mr. STUBBS: No, I don't think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: You never made that claim in a traffic meeting?

Mr. STUBBS: I wouldn't say that. I have probably advocated this, that in order to be consistent, the rates should be higher.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, in the traffic meetings then, in the 381 early days when the Southern Pacific, when you represented that line, in order to be consistent you insisted that the rates should be higher than west of the seaport, in order that your line might participate in that business?

Mr. STUBBS: Oh, no. I wouldn't state it that way. They were treating that in an academic manner.

Mr. KELLOGG: No, it was not academic.

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, it was academic. Now, wait a minute. You will understand that when this line—now, we are going back; I am, at least, to the early days, say previous to 1883.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well?

Mr. STUBBS: Or 1885. When I went to California in 1870 practically all the business from this territory and east of this territory moving to San Francisco moved via sea?

Mr KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. STUBBS: We didn't get a hat full of the through business. The merchants had their connections made and adjusted to that business. We had to make the rates from time to time to meet competition, primarily of the Clipper ships, secondly of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and it was not until, I think, 1878 that we made very much of an impression on that business and it was accomplished only by contracts. Taking a large importer, as he was called.—Every man that imported, that got his goods from the east in San Francisco, was called an importer in those days. We made a contract—when we started we went to a large dealer whom we found from the records was shipping a certain percentage or a large percentage of his business via the sea, the Clipper ships, another percentage, because the time was shorter by the Pacific Mail, and a very small percentage by rail; and taking up these merchants individually we figured on his insurance and the interest for the difference in time and then considered whether we could undertake, by the aid of our connections east, to contract with him for all his business at an average rate which would be equal to his average cost as he was then shipping it. Well, my experience was that in very 382 nearly every case the average was so low that we could not meet it, but the merchants would add 25, and sometimes 40 per cent. to the rate and say: "There are advantages that we cannot express to you that we realize in shipping it by rail"; and one by one we made those contracts. They were not private contracts; they were open public contracts. Anybody could make the contract, and there was no law against it in those days; and that was the scheme and the method used by which we made our first inroads into the movement of the tonnage by the sea.

Mr. KELLOGG: During the time of the ocean competition the Morgan Line in connection with the Southern Pacific was an important factor in the competition from Atlantic ports, seaports to California points?

Mr. STUBBS: Not at this time.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, afterwards it was?

Mr. STUBBS: Afterwards, yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to 1901?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And for many years the Southern Pacific and the Morgan Line was an important factor in that competition?

Mr. STUBBS: I should think so; yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you represented that line?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And in those meetings that you had, traffic meetings, you were opposed by the Union Pacific, were you not, as to the basis of rates west of New York?

Mr. STUBBS: You mean from this territory?

Mr. KELLOGG: No, the territory west of New York and east of Pittsburg and west, even of Pittsburg.

Mr. STUBBS: I do not think so?

Mr. KELLOGG: You do not think so?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, prior to the Interstate Commerce Law there was a trans-continental pool, was there not?

Mr. STUBBS: Sometimes.

Mr. KELLOGG: At times there was?

383 Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: In which the trans-continental roads took a certain percentage of the business?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir. They divided all that trans-continental business; divided it all.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, certainly the trans-continental lines divided it all. The Southern Pacific had a percentage of that business, did it not?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I suppose when you say the Southern Pacific you mean that Sunset route?

Mr. KELLOGG: I mean the Sunset route, including the Morgan line of steamships.

Mr. STUBBS: I would not be sure about that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Isn't it a fact, Mr. Stubbs—let me refresh your memory.

Mr. STUBBS: I wish you would.

Mr. KELLOGG: Isn't it a fact that at one time the Southern Pacific or the Sunset route had 21 or 23 per cent., and the Union Pacific 30 per cent., and that you insisted in a traffic meeting that the Southern Pacific should have an additional—should have up to 23 per cent., and the Union Pacific opposed it?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, it is too far back for me to remember.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, you remember the pool, don't you?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not remember that pool that you have in mind. I know that from time to time we had arrangements that we called pools, and I think properly called pools. They were ineffective. We divided the traffic between us.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you had percentages for each line?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir, I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Southern Pacific participated in that?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: And had a percentage?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Union Pacific had a percentage of the trans-continental business?

384 Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then they were competing for this business, were you not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And during those days the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, when you were with the Southern Pacific, were sharp competitors for the trans-continental business, were they not?

A. The Union Pacific, was not.

Q. Well it was a competitor for that business?

A. It was seeking that business, but it was a connection of the Southern Pacific.

Q. It was a competitor with the Southern Pacific for that business?

A. It was part of the line that was competing for that.

Q. It was a link in the competition?

A. Yes, a small link.

Q. Well, a thousand miles wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. And it had about thirty per cent.——

A. It had carried it 10 2 miles.

Q. It had about thirty per cent. of the trans-continental business?
A. I would not remember it, I cannot remember what it was so as to give any information.
Q. You have some information?
A. Not the slightest.
Q. It had as much as the Southern Pacific?
A. Well I should say that the line made by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, as against the Southern Pacific El Paso line would have more, because it has always taken and can to-day and always will take a larger percentage of the total business.
Q. Now during those days the Southern Pacific had its own freight soliciters or commercial agents in all the large cities of the country, didn't it?
A. What days?
Q. Prior to 1901, general agents.
A. It had I think from about 1888, it had an agent in Pittsburg and a general western agent in Chicago, and I think an agent in St. Louis and an agent in Cincinnati.
385 Q. Are you speaking of the Southern Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Prior to 1901 that is?
A. Yes.
Q. Prior to 1901 it had a General Agent or a traffic official in New York, didn't it?
A. Well it had in New York and Boston. I thought you were alluding to this territory.
Q. Oh, no.
A. New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore.
Q. It had one in Cincinnati?
A. Yes.
Q. Chicago?
A. Yes.
Q. Des Moines, Iowa?
A. Not as far as I know.
Q. And Detroit, Michigan?
A. No.
Q. And Kansas City, Missouri?
A. I think not.
Q. At Pittsburg it had?
A. Yes.
Q. Buffalo?
A. I think not.
Q. Portland, Oregon?
A. I think at one time they may have had a passenger agent in Buffalo.
Q. It had one in Portland, Oregon?
A. Yes.
Q. And in San Francisco?
A. Yes.
Q. And in all the important points out West?
A. Yes.
Q. It had one in St. Louis?

A. Yes, I stated that.

Q. Can you furnish us a list of the commercial agents, the freight or passenger agents, whatever you call them, in the large cities prior to the acquisition of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific, in the cities off its line of road. I mean the principal cities not connected with its line of road?

A. I think I can give them to you from memory.

Q. You have given some of them?

A. I think I have given you all of them.

Q. Those agents were not at the same time agents of the Union Pacific, were they?

A. No.

Q. They had their agents in the same cities?

A. I don't know as to that, I know they had in some.

Q. They had in Chicago?

A. I think so.

Q. In Pittsburg?

A. I think so.

Q. In New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Boston?

A. Yes.

386 Q. Buffalo?

A. I do not know as to Buffalo.

Q. And in St. Louis?

A. Yes.

Q. And in a good many other places, didn't they, in Portland, Oregon?

A. I think not.

Q. They have no General Agent in Portland?

A. I think the Navigation Company represented them there.

Q. Well, the Navigation Company I mean?

A. Of course, that was its headquarters.

Q. Well now, your men were at that time actively engaged in soliciting business for your line alone, were they not?

A. The Southern Pacific.

Q. Yes?

A. That was part of their business.

Q. That was part of their business?

A. Yes.

Q. Trying to get all they could?

A. Yes, for all its line. Don't forget it had a line from Ogden, west.

Q. I have not forgotten it at all, Mr. Stubbs. Business via water lines also move from the seaboard points via Panama, and the Southern Pacific's line of steamers from Panama to San Francisco, didn't it?

A. I did not know the Southern Pacific had a line of steamers.

Q. I mean the Pacific Mail had a line?

A. Yes.

Q. The Southern Pacific owns the control of the stock, doesn't it?

A. I have understood that it owns fifty-one per cent. of the stock of the Pacific Mail, but how long it has owned it I don't know.

Q. That was a line over which freight was transported in competition with the other lines, was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. And the Clipper Lines around the Horn?

A. Through the Straits of Magellan.

Q. About what time was it that you became the Traffic Director of the Union Pacific Railroad?

A. I think the appointment dates from July 1st, 1901, but the office did not become organized and effective until perhaps late in 1902, because of my illness. I was very ill.

Q. Since 1903 then you have been Traffic Director of the Union and Southern Pacific and their allied lines?

A. Yes, you might state it to be more accurate, since 1902.

387 Q. Well since 1902, that is near enough. Now you say that you are not a traffic director of the Texas lines, the lines in Texas. The Southern Pacific Company owns the stock and controls through stock ownership, the Texas lines, I believe?

A. Well I do not know the fact.

Q. You understand that to be the fact, don't you?

A. I believe it to be the fact.

Q. I don't think there is any doubt about it. Those lines have separate organizations, have they not?

A. They have.

Q. Mr. E. H. Harriman is President of those lines, isn't he?

A. If you give me the guide, I can answer you. No, he is not.

Q. Well, he is president of the Galveston, Harrisburg & San Antonio?

A. I don't know. Is he Judge?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Judge Lovett is President of one of them.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. The Texas & New Orleans Railroad he is president of?

A. Really, I would have to have the books in order to answer that. He is president of some of them.

Q. You understand that the Southern Pacific controls those lines and that they are a part of its system?

A. No, sir, I understand so far as traffic matters are concerned, quite the contrary.

Q. You have charge of the through traffic east and west over those lines from New Orleans to San Francisco, don't you?

Mr. LOVETT: If you wish the record to appear here on that, as a matter of fact the Southern Pacific owns practically all of the stock of the lines in Texas known as the Southern Pacific lines. The railroads are managed, however, by their own organization.

Mr. STUBBS I think it would be a fair answer to say yes to that, although I do not control, except as a connection, the busi-

388 ness that would originate in Texas. I desire simply to give you the facts in the case.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. As a system competing for Eastern and Western traffic that goes over those lines from New Orleans each way, you have charge of that through traffic?

A. Practically, but no more than I would have under the conditions such as if the Southern Pacific Company had no ownership in the Texas lines; simply because of my jurisdiction over both ends of the road.

Q. When you are in a meeting considering the question of a through rate from New York to San Francisco, you don't have to wait to call up a man down in San Antonio, Texas, to know whether you shall make it or not, do you?

A. No, I do not make those rates.

Q. Well you have something to do with them?

A. If there was perhaps any dispute in reference to the higher traffic officers, it might come to me.

Q. You generally have charge of the subject of rates and represent all of those lines on that subject?

A. In a general way, so far as they interchange traffic.

Q. Who are your assistant traffic directors?

A. Mr. E. O. McCormick and Mr. Storr.

Q. Mr. B. C. Storr?

A. Mr. B. C. Storr.

Q. They have jurisdiction over the entire systems under your direction?

A. Just as far as mine.

Q. Is their jurisdiction divided between passenger and freight?

A. No.

Q. Does one of them have particular charge of passenger traffic?

A. Well it is my habit to refer passenger matters to Mr. McCormick, because he knows more about it than I do, and I think he knows more than Storr does, but he also handles freight or takes anything that comes up.

Q. Now when you finally organized your Traffic Department, you made a great many changes in the system of the two systems, did you not?

A. Not many.

Q. Well what did you make?

A. The only change that I recall, as resulting from the new 389 control, was that I consolidated the agencies in Chicago, in St. Louis, and in Pittsburg, and in Cincinnati.

Q. Previous to that time in Chicago, Mr. Neimeyer had been your local agent?

A. He was General Western Agent.

Q. What jurisdiction did he have, what was his business?

A. Well he had charge of this territory here, and I think he also exercised supervision over the Cincinnati and Pittsburg officers.

Q. And Detroit?

A. No. There was no Detroit agent, that was established after I came here.

Q. That is prior to your coming here he had this jurisdiction?

A. I think he has it to-day.

Q. Well now to-day he has charge of the Southern and Union Pacific also—the Union Pacific also have an agent here in Chicago, at that time, didn't they?

A. Yes.

Q. And kept a separate office?

A. Not after I had consolidated them.

Q. I mean before that?

A. Yes.

Q. A separate General Agent, and a separate office?

A. Yes.

Q. Separate solicitors of freight, and an entire organization, which was separate?

A. I do not know how many solicitors they had, or I don't know that they had any.

Q. Presumably they would have.

A. I think it is likely.

Q. You consolidated them, and put Mr. Niemeyer at the head?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the two systems only have one Chicago office?

A. Yes.

Q. What is Mr. Niemeyer's business now?

A. I think the same as before. I think that the Cincinnati agency, and the Pittsburg agency report to him, and I think the Detroit agency does.

Q. Well is all the intervening territory what is called his territory.

A. Well I cannot give you that information, but each one of these centers take a certain territory.

390 Q. The intervening territory is covered when necessary by freight solicitors under the jurisdiction of Mr. Niemeyer, or agents of his?

A. Yes.

Q. So that really his jurisdiction extends as far east as Pittsburg?

A. Yes.

Q. And as far north as Detroit, and as far south as the Ohio River?

A. Yes.

Q. And west to the Mississippi?

A. Yes.

Q. Or to Omaha, or as far as Omaha?

A. I think not. I think he don't go west of the Mississippi River.

Q. Now through his agency or his solicitors, they look after and solicit traffic for the two systems, do they not, in competition with other lines?

A. Yes.

Q. There is a certain amount of that traffic that he can route either way he pleases, isn't there?

A. No.

Q. None of it whatever?

A. I think very little, I think it is safe to say no.

Q. Do you wish to be understood as saying that there is no traffic whatever that Mr. Niemeyer can route in any direction at all?

A. I do not say that there is no traffic whatever he cannot change.

Q. Then there must be some?

A. Wait till I have finished my statement. I do not think that Mr. Niemeyer controls the direction of any traffic or any agent that the Southern Pacific has. He must work with the connection, the connection which originates the traffic, dominates and controls the routing of it.

Q. There is a certain amount of traffic that Mr. Niemeyer or his agents soliciting in this territory between here and Pittsburg, or the Mississippi River and Pittsburg can route via either Southern Pacific or Union Pacific?

A. That is where I disagree with you.

Q. You say there is not?

A. I do not think there is any that it is at all important in amount.

Q. Well there is some, isn't there?

A. I would not say that, because I do not know.

Q. You do not know whether there is any?

A. I think it is very doubtful. I think you have a mis-
391 taken idea as to the purpose of these agencies, and as to their influence.

Q. What is his business?

A. I have described it already.

Q. Well what is his business?

A. His business is to represent these lines here in relation to the public, and in relation to the connecting lines, and in every way that we need him.

Q. If the dictating of the route of the traffic is entirely in the hands of the other lines, the connections, why do you need a General Agent in Chicago?

A. To work with the other lines.

Q. To work with the other lines?

A. Yes.

Q. And get traffic from them?

A. Yes.

Q. Does not your solicitor visit the wholesale houses?

A. Yes.

Q. The commercial houses?

A. Yes.

Q. In order to get freight to be shipped by your line?

A. I think not, not originally. I mean to say that they cannot control the routing of any traffic to any extent against the will of the originating line.

Q. I am not stating that; I am asking you if there is not a certain amount of free traffic that your solicitors get from shippers, where the route is either via the Ogden gateway, or via the Southern Pacific?

A. Well I have already answered that question. I believe that if there is any of that traffic that it is very small in its amount. You will have Mr. Niemeyer on the stand, and you can get that information from him.

Q. Well now, these various solicitors of yours, Mr. Niemeyer, who solicits freight to be routed,—they solicit freight to be routed over your line as against the Santa Fe and the Northern Pacific, do they not?

A. Yes.

Q. And they succeed, do they not?

A. Why, I think they are useful, yes.

Q. Then they must get some traffic, which they influence to go over your line, instead of the Santa Fe?

A. I do not mean to say that their influence is not good
392 and effective, but what I wish to be understood as saying is, that it is not conclusive, and that they cannot do it as against the influence of the connecting line, the originating line.

Q. Then if the entire business is in the hands of the originating line, what is the object of your commercial agent soliciting as against the Santa Fe or the Rock Island, or the Northern Pacific?

A. I want to watch the originating line, and see that he treats us right.

Q. That is all you have them for then, as watchers of the originating line?

A. Watchers and solicitors of the originating line, keeping up our connection with them.

Q. Then, according to your views, there is no competition whatever between any line from the east and the coast trade?

A. Well, have I said so?

Q. Is it true, doesn't that follow?

A. Have you asked me that question?

Q. Yes.

A. My answer to that is no.

Q. There is no competition?

A. My answer to that question would be, yes, there is plenty of competition.

Q. There is strong competition between the lines for the transcontinental business, isn't there?

A. Yes.

Q. Don't your agent- participate in that competition?

A. Yes, they assist.

Q. And they are factors in the struggle for business for the Union and Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. As against the other lines?

A. Yes, competitors of the Southern Pacific.

Q. As against the competitors of the Southern and Union Pacific, but as between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, Mr. Niemeyer is not competing for one, as against the other, is he?

A. Just as much to-day as ever.

Q. Do you mean to say they never were?

A. Yes.

Q. When Mr. Niemeyer was here, representing the Southern Pacific alone, and the Union Pacific had their agent representing the Union Pacific——

A. I will qualify that. He differs in this respect; Mr. Niemeyer has always worked for the Ogden route.

Q. Exclusively?

A. Yes, practically. That is so far far as his own in-
393 fluence goes, and his instructions were to do that. If he would—but he would work just as freely with the Rio Grande as he would with the Union Pacific. If he found that he could aid the Union Pacific and the Union Pacific had originated the business, he would work with them; if it was the Rio Grande he would work for them.

Q. He never worked for the New Orleans route?

A. No, sir, I don't believe so. If he did he disobeyed instructions.

Q. His instructions were, prior to 1901, at all times to work the traffic exclusively——

A. From this territory, yes.

Q. That is not the case with the man at Pittsburg, is it?

A. Well, I am not sure about that; I think his instructions were to work either.

Q. To work either?

A. Yes.

Q. But he was working for the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. The Union Pacific also had an agent?

A. Yes.

Q. And that man was working for the Union Pacific alone?

A. Yes.

Q. He was not working for the Sunset Route.

A. He was working for the Southern Pacific. I want to correct that statement. You say that man was working for the Union Pacific alone. He could not work for the Union Pacific without working for the Southern Pacific.

Q. He was not working for the Sunset Route via New Orleans?

A. No.

Q. And your man was?

A. Well, incidentally, yes.

Q. Now, there was only one man there?

A. That is right.

Q. That man is not competing with himself, is he?

A. Yes.

Q. He is?

A. He might be. If he found that the lines leading from Pittsburg to New Orleans were working a certain line of traffic, he would help that line. On the contrary, if he found they were working it direct via Chicago or St. Louis over the Union Pacific, he would work that line.

Q. When he was working the Union Pacific he could 394 not be working the Southern Pacific, at the same time, as to the same traffic?

A. No, he could not be effective. He would be simply doing incidentally what the two agents would be doing under like conditions and circumstances.

Q. Except they were not competing—he was not competing with himself?

A. Well, the competition is originated, represented, created, fostered and promoted by the initial line. The influence of the Southern Pacific in this territory, against any of its connections, and the Union Pacific alike would be if exercised against one of its connections in favor of another, disastrous, and the consequences would be very serious.

Q. Will you tell me whether it is true or not——

A. I know what your theory is, and perhaps it is pretty hard to convince you to the contrary, but I am giving you the facts as I see them.

Q. I understand what you are giving me exactly, I think. Will you tell me whether the Pacific lines, the Northern Pacific is competing with the Union and Southern Pacific, and how they do compete for transcontinental business?

A. Why I think so.

Q. How do they do it?

A. In every known way.

Q. Name them, we want to find out?

A. They do it through their officers, they do it through their service, they do it through their soliciting agents, and they do it in a thousand and one ways.

Q. And you do it in the same way as against them?

A. Yes.

Q. You do it yourself by looking after the general traffic, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And your assistants do it by looking after the Union and Southern Pacific?

A. Yes.

Q. And your General Freight Agents do it by looking after the Union and Southern Pacific?

A. That is you are speaking now about our connecting with the Northern Pacific.

Q. Yes?

A. Yes.

Q. And your soliciting agents throughout all the United 395 States, where they are after traffic are hustling against the Northern Pacific?

A. I think so.

Q. Now where you have joint agents, joint traffic officials, joint assistant traffic officials, having charge of the Union and Southern Pacific in the same place, will you tell me how they can compete with themselves? If you can, I would like to be enlightened?

A. Well I would not put it that way, that they were competing with themselves. That is the first answer. The second answer is that the Union Pacific is a connection of the Southern Pacific and in many cases and with respect to such territory it is to the interests of the Southern Pacific that the business should move via Ogden over the Union Pacific, because it would get a larger net out of the rate. Now there may be some exceptions to that with respect to the Pittsburg territory, and territory west.

Q. East you mean?

A. No, west. As to the Atlantic seaboard territory, where the competition is the most rife and most effective, the conditions to-day are just as they always were. They have separate joint agents at New York, separate general agents at Boston, separate general agents at Philadelphia, and I think they have separate general agents at Baltimore, and they work that territory just as independently as they ever did.

Q. Then you don't mean to say that you and your traffic directors and the joint agents who represent the two, are or can be competing with themselves, you don't pretend to say that?

A. I do not see the point of your question.

Q. Oh you don't.

A. I have explained it as best I can, the facts with respect to these agents that we have been talking about. Now if you have a theory of your own, and want to establish it by my testimony, I do not believe that I can go as far as you may want me to.

Q. You did state that the Northern Pacific and the Union and Southern Pacific were competing through the traffic officers,
396 assistant traffic officials as well as General Agents?

A. Now will you let me interrupt you there.

Q. No, you said that, didn't you?

A. I said in that way—— Of course I am not an authority on what the Great Northern and Northern Pacific is doing.

Q. They don't have common traffic officials and common traffic directors and common freight solicitors in certain places, and those particular officers are not competing with each other, are they?

A. Well but you forget a vital fact.

Q. Is that true, or is it not?

A. I will answer it in my own way. You forget the whole fact that the Union Pacific is a connection of the Southern Pacific.

Q. I have not forgotten it at all?

A. I think there cannot possibly be said to be a competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific for California business.

Q. There never was, was there?

A. According to my theory, no.

Q. Then why did the Union Pacific have thirty per cent. in the pool, and the Southern Pacific twenty-one per cent.?

A. I don't recall what the pool was, but you must remember if there was a pool, that it involved other lines. They had to divide it that way, if that was so.

Q. As to your eastern agents, you say they are competing as actively as ever in New York and Boston?

A. I said so, yes.

Q. If the two lines are not competing, how are they competing?

A. Well possibly you are juggling with words, and I should be more careful in my answer.

Q. No, I am not at all?

A. You said they are competing. What I said was this: That with respect to the Atlantic seaboard business, that the conditions to-day in the matter of two representatives were the same as before 1901 that you speak of, that the Union Pacific had its general agents there soliciting or working in aid of its connections and watching its connections and the Southern Pacific still had its agents, its general agents there, but the Southern Pacific is the initial 397 line there, while the Union Pacific is not: but even the Union Pacific, all the endeavor of the Union Pacific general agencies in this Atlantic seaboard system, must contribute to the Southern Pacific because they cannot get into California otherwise, and really you might say that the agency was practically joint.

Q. They are practically joint, are they not?

A. They are not, but I say that you might say because in helping their own line, the Union Pacific, they cannot fail to help the Southern Pacific that they are.

Q. I understand your theory?

A. Well my fact you mean.

Q. Then they are competing in this way; that if the Southern Pacific man gets freight in New York, the Southern Pacific gets the whole transportation to San Francisco, does it not, via the Morgan Line and Sunset route?

A. The Southern Pacific, except for that little link, between Galveston and El Paso. The G. H. & S. A. gets it there.

Q. It owns the stock of that line, does it not?

A. I have heard Judge Lovett say that it did.

Q. Then if that is true, the Southern Pacific gets the entire charge does it not, for the haul?

A. Eventually, yes.

Q. If the Union Pacific agent gets it, the Southern Pacific gets the haul from Ogden to San Francisco?

A. That is right.

Q. And the Union Pacific gets 1032 miles from Council Bluffs?

A. It did once, its gets 1003 miles now.

Q. Well you have shortened the line. It is from Council Bluffs to Ogden, isn't that true?

A. Yes.

Q. As to that, there is competition as between the agents, is there?

A. As to that seaboard business, yes. That is there is competition between the agents in so far as the line from New York to San Francisco via Ogden is concerned, and the line from New York via Galveston, and El Paso, but the competition is a line competition. You might draw the Union Pacific agency out of New York I think to-day, and I think it would not affect the volume of business 398 which the Union Pacific gets with respect to this trans-continental traffic.

Q. Why don't you do it then?

A. Well, I may. I have not quite got to that yet.

Q. I suppose the public interest is not considered, it is simply a question of the volume of traffic that the Union and Southern Pacific can get?

A. You have not given me an opportunity to say it yet, but in establishing this general agency in Chicago, and these agencies I have named, and even in New York, so far as the Union Pacific is concerned, the solicitation of traffic was to my mind a small part of their duties, a small part of it. Now when I established the joint agency here in Chicago, the main reason for doing it——

Mr. MILBURN: For the Southern Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: For the Southern Pacific. That is before I had anything to do with the Union Pacific. The main reason was that I was over 2000 miles away from Chicago and the headquarters of all our competitors and of our connections practically, were at Chicago. I had no means of communication with them, except by letter or by wire. I wanted someone here that belonged to me or to my railroad company to have his finger upon the traffic pulse and the management and doings of our connections, and our competitors. Now that was primarily the reason for establishing the joint agency in Chicago.

Q. You wanted somebody who owed allegience to the Southern Pacific alone?

A. That is to be eyes and ears for me. I will give it to you in full, the facts. I sent him here for the purpose of intercourse with the officers of these lines that could not be very readily, or as fully accomplished in any other way. Furthermore I sent him here, or established the agency here as an advertising agency. I did not propose to be the tail to the Union Pacific kite, or any other company's kite. I wanted the Southern Pacific's sign up here.

Q. That has been taken down?

A. No, it has not.

Q. It has been consolidated?

399 A. Yes, you may say so, but the conditions then were very different from the conditions to-day. California was, comparatively speaking, unknown. It had not been advertised, the advertisement had not been as fully distributed. I wanted this agency here to distribute our advertising matter. I could not trust our connections to do that as fully, and we were spending and had spent millions of dollars in advertising California. Now these items, and these considerations that I have mentioned to you were not subordinate to the matter of soliciting business, but they were principal, and the solicitation of busines was subordinate to them.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. In other words you did not propose to leave the Union Pacific, as merely a connecting line, to represent you in the East and in Chicago?

A. In those days, yes.

Q. You could get freight from the Denver & Rio Grande and its connections, as well as the Union Pacific could you not?

A. Why, we did get it, and we do get it to-day.

Q. Therefore you thought it was for the interest of the Southern Pacific to have a separate representative in Chicago?

A. I did.

Q. But you think that necessity has passed away?

A. Why I think so, yes.

Q. And that the Union and Southern Pacific, now together——

A. Not altogether on account of the joinder of interests, but the changed conditions.

Q. Now that necessity seems to have passed away at the same time the Union Pacific got control of the Southern Pacific stock, isn't that true?

A. Well it would be apparently so, but no, as a matter of fact. No, the joinder of agencies would have nothing to do with it to-day.

Q. Let me ask you. Did you prior to the acquisition of the stock of the Union and Southern Pacific have one single joint agency in any of these large cities for soliciting business?

A. Not at the time, but once we did join with them in New York City.

400 Q. You did not have such at that time, and had not for several years before?

A. No, but we had a joint agency with the Union Pacific for many years in New York.

Q. But you had not for many years before this, many years, before 1901?

A. For the reasons that I have stated to you, we thought it best to establish our independent agencies.

Q. It did not have one common traffic official or officer.

A. I do not know of one.

Q. It now has a common President, Vice President, Traffic officials and assistant traffic officials, and directors of maintenance and operation, has it not?

A. I will answer that in detail.

Q. No. Have I named any officials that are not common?

A. What the Commission wants are the facts.

Q. Certainly.

A. Well I will give the Commission the facts as I understand them.

Q. All right sir.

A. I understand that Mr. Harriman is President of each one of those lines to-day. That was not true when I came to Chicago.

Q. Well it is now.

A. I understand that the director of purchases and supplies is the same for all these lines; that the director of maintenance and operation, Mr. Kruttschmitt, is the same, and that the Traffic Director is the same, the officers here. I also understand that each one of these companies the Navigation Company, the Short Line, the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific, as well as the Morgan line and the Louisiana and Western line, have their separate set of operating officers having their headquarters respectively at San Francisco, at Portland, at Salt Lake City, at Omaha and at New Orleans and that those officers, separate officers are charged with the immediate and direct management of those lines both as to operation and as to traffic and so far as the traffic is concerned that my relation to them is only supervisory.

401 Q. Now all of these freight agents and traffic officials report to you, don't they?

A. The general officers do.

Q. Mr. Munroe, who is the Traffic Manager of the Union Pacific, reports to you?

A. Yes.

Q. How far west does his jurisdiction go?

A. Well the Union Pacific road runs to Ogden.

Q. Where does his jurisdiction end, at Ogden, or at Green River?

A. Green River, I believe.

Q. Well now, from Green River west Mr. Bancroft has charge of operations?

A. Well I am not so sure. I think it will be found that Mr. Reeves, who is General Freight Agent of the Short Line, also handles the line from Green River to Ogden, subject to Mr. Munroe and he has the immediate management of it.

Q. That is Mr. Munroe's jurisdiction extends to Green River?

A. Well did I say that now? You don't want to try to make me say something I did not. I would not be certain about it. Mr. Munroe will be on the stand, and he can tell you.

Q. Who is the traffic official of the Short Line?

A. Mr. John A. Reeves is the General Freight Agent.

Q. Well now, John A. Reeves, his jurisdiction extends from Green River on the Union Pacific to where?

A. Well it extends from Salt Lake City to Butte, or to Silver Bow, and it extends west to Huntington and it extends west also on the Central Pacific line to Sparks.

Q. That is the Southern Pacific line, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Then this freight agent——

A. Now let me explain that.

Q. All right, explain it.

A. His jurisdiction over the Central Pacific is subordinate to Mr. H. H. Jones, who is freight traffic Manager of the Southern Pacific with headquarters at San Francisco.

Q. And that man is subject to your jurisdiction?

A. Yes.

Q. Now then what is this man's name at Salt Lake?

A. Mr. Reeves.

Q. And he has jurisdiction over part of the Union Pacific
402 and of the Short line, and of the Southern Pacific as far west as Sparks?

A. Sparks.

Q. How far west of Ogden is that?

A. A little over 600 miles.

Q. In the written instructions given him, was it stated that as to the Southern Pacific line he was subject to—what was the other man's name?

A. You mean Mr. Jones.

Q. Mr. Jones.

A. If I recollect right his circular of appointment is approved by Mr. Jones.

Q. Who issued that circular of appointment, you?

A. I think so.

Q. Will you get us the circulars appointing, or changing the appointments of all of the freight agents and traffic officials, so we can see exactly what they contain?

A. Well, I think I can get you all that have been publishd since I have been here. That is what you want?

Q. Yes. Now this freight agent at Portland then has charge of the Southern Pacific line in Oregon and of the Navigation line in Oregon, has he not?

A. Yes, but he is subject to the Southern Pacific Freight Traffic Manager with respect to the lines in Oregon.

Q. He is subject to you?

A. Yes.

Q. So that ultimately you get back to the same head?

A. That is right.

Q. And the systems are divided up, the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, irrespective of the mileage owned by each corporation, are they not, in that way?

A. You mean that they have common officers?

Q. Common freight agents over certain parts of their lines irrespective of the mileage owned by each corporation?

A. Well, if I understand your question yes.

Q. So this separate organization laps over on to the Southern Pacific line and all of its heads in you as the common traffic official of both lines?

A. That is right.

Q. All of these general freight agents then of these various lines report to you?

A. Where there is not a freight traffic manager, or a higher local officer, yes.

403 Q. That is, the highest traffic officer of each line reports to you?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. Now who is the freight agent in charge of the Union Pacific,—of the Oregon Railway and Navigation and the Southern Pacific line in Oregon?

A. R. B. Miller is the general freight agent, of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, and also of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon, but with respect to the latter he is subject to H. H. Jones, who is Freight Traffic Manager of the Southern Pacific Compan*ie*'s Pacific system.

Q. Who appointed him?

A. I did.

Q. You appointed him for the Southern Pacific, and for the Navigation Company, both of them?

A. Well I think I was wrong in saying that I appointed him as general freight agent of the O. R. & N. I think Mr. Campbell appointed him General freight agent of the O. R. & N. but I put him in charge of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon.

Q. Who has charge of the steamship line from Portland to San Francisco?

A. I think Mr. Sherine has.

Q. He also has charge of all the other steamship lines?

A. Well he is practically the managing officer of all our steamship lines on the Pacific.

Q. Both Union and Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, that is my understanding.

Q. So that your steamship lines are under one general management?

A. Practically.

Q. Now Mr. Stubbs do you remember the Graham case pending in the United States Court in New York against the O. R. & N.

A. Yes, I remember the case, but I don't remember the facts of the case. I was very remotely connected with it. I believe I was put on the stand with respect to some statement that Graham made as to advice that I had given him in a letter as to what the divisions of the trans-Pacific rates were, but as to the dispute between Graham and our people, in its detail, I know very little about it.

Q. Did you testify in that case, Mr. Stubbs, as a witness?

A. According to my recollection, as to this particular fact.

404 Q. Did you say as follows: "My relations with Mr. Graham, so far as I can recall, and I believe I do recall them, were wholly with respect to his interests in the Coos Bay region. I dealt with him in the movement of freight by way of our line, that is the Southern Pacific line to Roseburg. I could hardly be any authority or advisor to him with respect to contracts for the steamship connection with the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company in the way of giving him information or advice, because that line was directly opposed to the interests I represented and a competitor to the lines via San Francisco.

A. Possibly I said that.

Q. That was before the time of the Union Southern Pacific joint control that is, that you were referring to?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you also testify "I would undertake to say that it is very unlikely that he would have asked me about them or either of them. The relations of the Southern Pacific with the Pacific Mail, and the relations of the O. R. & N. with the Dodwell Lines, because as I have explained, the two lines were diametrically opposed to each other, and a competing vigorously everyday in the year."

A. I think so.

Q. You testified to that?

A. I think so.

Q. That is that the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company in connection with the Doddwell Line and the Southern Pacific and its line were competing vigorously every day in the year.

A. That is for trans Pacific business.

Q. For trans Pacific business.

A. Yes, sir, and they are doing it to-day.

Q. Then they are competitors are they?

A. In that sense yes.

Q. On the trans Pacific business?

A. In that sense, yes.

Q. From the Pacific coast points to the Atlantic Coast points?

A. The Union Pacific participates in both lines, don't forget that.

Q. The Union Pacific does not participate in business coming off the Doddwell Line, does it?

405 Whereupon the further hearing of said matter was adjourned till two o'clock P. M. the same day, January 9th, 1907.

After Recess.

2 O'CLOCK P. M.

Mr. J. C. STUBBS resumed the stand.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Stubbs, I show you a list of your joint agents, freight and passenger, so far as named in various places, and ask you if that is substantially correct? (Presenting paper to witness.) If you desire, you can check it over during the afternoon and hand it in later, unless you know off-hand.

Com'r HARLAN: You have not named the roads, Mr. Kellogg?

Mr. KELLOGG: The Union Pacific and Southern Pacific; a list of joint agents in various places.

Mr. STUBBS (after examining list): I think that is practically correct, as I read it over. I do not know who these traveling agents are. I do not appoint them.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, subject to correction, you are willing to say that is substantially correct?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, I am willing to say it is substantially correct.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to the consolidation in 1901 of the management of the two companies, neither the Southern Pacific nor the Union Pacific had a joint agent in either of those places, did they?

Mr. STUBBS: I think that is true.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Stubbs, if there has been any particular competition between those lines since 1901, it has not evidenced itself in the reduction of rates, has it?

Mr. STUBBS: I think that whatever competition there was between those lines before 1901 and now will not be evidenced by differences in rates.

406 Mr. KELLOGG: You would not now permit the Southern Pacific Company to cut the rate—I mean, even by a published tariff—from the Atlantic Seaboard to the Pacific Coast for the purpose of taking freight away from the Union Pacific line, would you?

Mr. STUBBS: I would permit it as much as I would permit it for the purpose of taking the freight away from the New York Central or the Northwestern.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, would you permit it?

Mr. STUBBS: To-day?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, sir.

Mr. STUBBS: I think not with respect to either one of the lines.

Mr. KELLOGG: You would not permit it to take business away from the Union Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: Or any other——

Mr. KELLOGG (interrupting): Well, I have asked you as to the Union Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: I will say yes, and add to it, or any other company.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is, you would permit it? You mean you would not?

Mr. STUBBS: I mean I would affirm your statement.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you would not permit the Union Pacific to cut the rates for the purpose of taking the business away from the Southern Pacific, would you?

Mr. STUBBS: I would not in the same sense that previous to 1901 I would not have permitted the Southern Pacific to cut the rates to take business away from the Union Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, Mr. Stubbs, did you not used to cut the rate to and from California points by the Southern Pacific for the sake of taking business away from the Union Pacific and other lines?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: As a matter of fact, in 1896, did you not have a merchandise rate to Portland from New England and New York points which you reduced 5 cents a hundred for the purpose of getting the business below the other roads?

Mr. STUBBS: I think not. I do not recall it.

407 Mr. KELLOGG: You do not recall it?

Mr. STUBBS: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You will not swear that it was not so?

Mr. STUBBS: To the best of my knowledge and belief, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Will you say you never did cut the rates on the Southern Pacific for the sake of taking business away from any other line?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, it has been so long since it was done it has passed out of my mind, if it has been done.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, how long?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, a great many years.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, how many is a great many years?

Mr. STUBBS: It might be seventeen, fifteen or twenty; I cannot tell which.

Mr. KELLOGG: Say, seven years ago, before the acquisition of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific, or ten years ago, did you not at times reduce the rate or cut the rate, whichever you call it, on the Southern Pacific or Sunset Route for the purpose of taking business away from other lines?

Mr. STUBBS: I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: You think you never did?

Mr. STUBBS: I may have done it. When we first opened the Sunset Route along in 1883, I think the line was opened as a differential line.

Mr. KELLOGG: But after that you have no recollection of ever having done that?

Mr. STUBBS: I have not.

Mr. KELLOGG: You always maintained the rate?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: The published tariff rate?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir. Of course, you mean by your questions to ask me whether we initiated the cut.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, no—whether you initiated it or not or made it with somebody else.

Mr. STUBBS: I mean the line initiating it.

Mr. KELLOGG: No, I mean the line itself or with somebody else.

408 Mr. STUBBS: Tell me what you do mean?

Mr. KELLOGG: Were the rates cut, your proportion or the whole on the Southern Pacific Sunset Route for the purpose of taking California business to or from California from any other line?

Mr. STUBBS: I think not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Never?

Mr. STUBBS: In 1886 there was a war of rates instituted by the Santa Fe, the management that was then in charge of the Santa Fe that involved all of the lines to California, both by the Southern and the Union Pacific routes, and I think pretty much all of the lines west of Chicago. Since that time I do not remember any cuts in rates.

Mr. KELLOGG: No cuts since 1886?

Mr. STUBBS: As against another line. The rates have been equal by all roads.

Mr. KELLOGG: And always maintained?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I think so; measurably so.

Mr. KELLOGG: Not entirely maintained?

Mr. STUBBS: I could not answer as to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, since 1901, all or practically all, or at least a great majority of the rates of the transcontinental freight from this territory you named east of the Mississippi River, as covered by transcontinental freight tariff have been advanced, have they not? (Referring to tariff.)

Mr. STUBBS: As to east bound rates?

Mr. KELLOGG: As to west bound rates.

Mr. STUBBS: Wait a minute; well, no—as to west bound rates, I think in February, 1904, was it not, there was an advance undertaken, but for the most part it did not last very long; that is, the general scale was advanced by all routes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Are not the rates on a large number of commodities from the territory east of the Mississippi River, known as the Trans-Continental Freight Bureau Territory, covered by that tariff, ten cents a hundred pounds higher than they were in 1901?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I can only repeat my former answer

409 that in 1893 or 1894—I do not remember the date——

Mr. KELLOGG: You mean 1903 or 1904?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, 1903 or 1904, that all the trans-continental lines, in view of the increased expense, endeavored to secure an advance, I do not know, but I think generally an advance of 12½ per cent., and tariffs were published showing that advance in rates, but my recollection is that here and there immediately the advance was recalled in respect to particular articles or particular commodities, as they were found to pinch and could not be maintained. How much of that advance has been maintained until to-day and is now in force, I am unable to say.

Mr. KELLOGG: I show you the west bound Trans-continental Freight Bureau tariff, including all the lines of railroad running west of the Mississippi River, for all business from points east of there to the Pacific Coast, with the old rate in red and the present rate in black. This has been checked up by the Commission and I believe it to be substantially correct, and I wish to know if that corresponds with your recollection of the advance?

Mr. STUBBS: I do now know. I was not in the Convention, was not in the meeting or association, or Freight Bureau at the time these rates were decided upon.

Mr. MILBURN: What date did you say, Mr. Kellogg?

Mr. KELLOGG: About 1903, I think.

Mr. STUBBS: I could not answer that. I was going to answer that the tariffs on file with the Commission will show the fact to the Commission. You do not need my testimony to affirm or deny it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, the rates generally on the Union Pacific Road are substantially as high to-day as they were in 1901, are they not?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not know anything about what the local rates are, what changes have been made. I do not recall any material change, except a recent reduction in the rates to Utah common points, which was very material and I think some reductions with 410 respect to Idaho points, points east of Huntington, on the Short Line. I cannot tell you as to what they were.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, your report——

Mr. STUBBS (interrupting): I believe the rates to Montana common points have also been reduced.

Mr. KELLOGG: On your line of road?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir; and I believe on other lines of road also.

Mr. KELLOGG: The reports which you file and publish show that the rate per ton per mile all over the Union Pacific line in 1896 was 9.5 cents—no, 95/100 of a cent per ton per mile and in 1896 it was 92/100 of a cent—substantially the same. That is a pretty fair indication that the rates since 1901 have not been reduced much, is it not?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, it does not necessarily follow. There might be a change in the movement of the traffic that would work a slight difference in the average percentage.

Mr. KELLOGG: But it is a fair indication generally, is it not?

Mr. STUBBS: I should say that any material reduction on a considerable volume of traffic for a considerable period during the year would manifest itself in the average rate per ton per mile.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. STUBBS: And yet month by month, if you will allow me to explain—month by month you will find on different commodities, changes in rates, in the rate per ton per mile, both advances and reductions, which are not the result of any change whatsoever in the rates, but a change in the direction or length of the haul, the average length of the haul.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, yes.

Mr. STUBBS: Well, it is quite material.

Mr. KELLOGG: I notice that in spite of the rate per ton per mile being substantially the same as it was ten years ago, the earnings per mile of road have nearly doubled.

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, there has been a very large increase and a very large increase in expense too.

411 Mr. KELLOGG: And the earnings per mile of road have nearly doubled?

Mr. STUBBS: I cannot answer as to that. I presume the reports will show it.

Mr. KELLOGG: You say there has been a very large expense, increase in expense since then?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: The ratio to total gross earnings of operating expenses—the percentage of operating expenses—to total gross earnings are much less to-day than they were in 1896, are they not?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not know.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is what your report shows.

Mr. STUBBS: I do not make these reports.

Mr. KELLOGG: You have a general familiarity with the traffic of the System?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not pay much attention to those questions of accounting.

Mr. KELLOGG (referring to memorandum): Well, I wish to call your attention to the fact that your report shows that your rate per ton per mile is substantially the same on the Union Pacific and that the net earnings per mile have increased from $2,896 to $5,962 per mile of road.

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I will not dispute it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Very well; and that the percentage of operating expenses to gross earnings were practically 62 per cent. in 1896 and 55 at the present time. Do you think that is substantially correct?

Mr. STUBBS: I will not dispute it. I cannot say. I would have to take our annual reports and look at them. I do not carry those things in my mind.

Mr. KELLOGG (referring to memorandum): And that your earnings, that the Union Pacific Company has a large surplus from operating, exceeding seven million dollars after paying ten per cent. Do you know about that?

Mr. STUBBS: No, except what the annual report says.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, you do not doubt that fact, do you?

412 This statement is made up by your Auditor or Comptroller.

Mr. STUBBS: I do not doubt it. If you have his statement, why do you want my testimony?

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I want to ask you a question that follows it. That being the case, do you consider the trans-continental rates which are competitive between those various lines, reasonable rates, or are they pretty high?

Mr. STUBBS: I think they are reasonable.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you think the competition is just as keen to-day on the question of rates between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific as it ever was?

Mr. STUBBS: As it ever was. I not only thing it; I know it.

Mr. KELLOGG: And, being at the head of both companies, you have a very good opportunity to know it?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, as to the Southern Pacific, its rate per ton per mile is just as high to-day as it was—substantially as high as it was in 1896. Is not that true?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: And generally its rates are as high as they were at that time?

Mr STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: And its earnings, both net and gross, have more than doubled?

Mr. STUBBS: I think that is quite likely.

Mr. KELLOGG: And its operating expenses to its gross earnings have decreased?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not know as to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, that is what the report shows.

Mr. STUBBS: Well, that is not my side of the account.

Mr. KELLOGG: You have more to do with handling the traffic than making the rates. You do not think, in view of that fact, that the rates on the Southern Pacific System are a little high?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: You think they are very reasonable?

413 Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, do you think they are low?

Mr. STUBBS: I think they are fair.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you think the competition on that transcontinental business, in view of that fact, is just as keen between the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific as it ever was?

Mr. STUBBS: As I said, I know it.

Mr. KELLOGG: That also in view of the fact that they have the same traffic officials, the same president and the same ownership?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, do you mean by that that there never was any competition?

Mr. STUBBS: Not to any considerable extent.

Mr. KELLOGG: You have testified heretofore that there was.

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I said whatever competition there was has continued. I have repeatedly stated to you that the Union Pacific was a connection of the Southern Pacific. Now, the Union Pacific had no authority, no right, and could not in any way reduce the rates, except secretly, and I have no knowledge of it having done that in connection with the Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: It could reduce on its own?

Mr. STUBBS: I supposed we were talking in the main about the interchangeable business.

Mr. KELLOGG: In connection with its connection to the east it could reduce its proportion of the rate, leaving your proportion the same, could it not?

Mr. STUBBS: It could not do that without every one of its rivals, the Santa Fe, the "Q", the Rock Island and the Missouri Pacific and Rio Grande doing the same thing.

Mr. KELLOGG: Certainly.

Mr. STUBBS: What would be the object of their doing it under those conditions, and that without any combination?

Mr. KELLOGG: What is the object of any competing line ever reducing rates?

414 Mr. STUBBS: Well, I think that wherever there is such an act it is with the object of getting a larger share of the business.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is all.

Mr. STUBBS: Not with any particular idea of benefiting themselves permanently.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is all, Mr. Stubbs.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Mr. Stubbs, what express company operates over the systems of road you represent, the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific and their lines?

Mr. STUBBS: The Wells Fargo & Company express operate over the Southern Pacific. I think over the Union Pacific, the Navigation Company and the Short Line the Pacific Express Company operates.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Do you know whether the Southern Pacific owns any stock of the Wells Fargo Company?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not know of my own knowledge. I have understood that either the Southern Pacific Company or some of the people that are represented or interested in the Southern Pacific Company own stock in the Wells Fargo.

Mr. LOVETT: It owns about a million and a half out of about eight millions. That is the latest information I have.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Can you give the same information as to the Pacific Express Company?

Mr. STUBBS: I cannot. I understand that the Union Pacific has an interest in the Pacific Express Company.

Mr. LOVETT: 40 per cent.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Do you know what the stock is?

Mr. LOVETT: Six millions. The Union Pacific owns 40 per cent. and the Gould Lines 60 per cent.

Com'r CLEMENTS: What is the capital stock of the Wells Fargo?

Mr. LOVETT: Eight millions.

Com'r LANE: Is there any competition between the Southern Pacific and the Nrothern Pacific for San Francisco business?

415 Mr. STUBBS: Well, somewhat in the same sense that there is with the Union Pacific. The Northern Pacific connects with the Southern Pacific at Portland and they interchange traffic. I think the Northern Pacific also publishes through rates in connection with the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company Steamship Line from Portland down and also from Seattle. I cannot [illegible] exact as to that, but whatever the amount of business they [illegible] that way, it is infinitesimal, I think. I mean in connection with the steamship line.

Com'r LANE: The Great Northern, does that have any influence upon rates or competition for San Francisco business with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: I believe the Great Northern connects with the Navigation Company at Spokane and works into California over the Southern Pacific—over the Navigation Company and Southern Pacific via Portland. I would not be sure about that, but I think they have that route.

Com'r LANE: Then, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, the Union Pacific and Central, the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific from New Orleans, the Sunset Route, are all competitors for California business.

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir; measurably.

Com'r LANE: Do you think that there is just as much competition today between the Sunset Route and the Union Pacific Route as there ever has been?

Mr. STUBBS: I know it.

Com'r LANE: Is there just as much competition today between the Sunset and the Union Pacific and the two northern routes, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific as there ever has been?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so. I think so. If there is any mitigation of that competition, it is such probably, only such as may be worked by the amendments to the law. You cannot reduce a rate now without 30 days' notice. Before you could do it in 3 days.

Com'r LANE: Do you think, assuming there was a combi-
416 nation in ownership between the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, that that would affect in any way the competition in rates for California business?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not think it would have the slightest effect.

Com'r LANE: You say yourself that the giving to you of the traffic direction of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific had no effect upon that competition?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Com'r LANE: The competition of those two routes. Suppose also you had the traffic direction of the Santa Fe, Great Northern and the Northern Pacific, would that affect it?

Mr. STUBBS: Not under present conditions.

Com'r LANE: They would be all as free to compete as they are now?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Com'r LANE: Then, it is your idea that the fact that these lines run parallel to each other and are under opposing ownership does not materially affect the rate or competition?

Mr. STUBBS: It is not likely to under present conditions. It might do so at the initial stage when the practice in the past was—it is my experience that if a new line was opened it seemed to be the idea of the traffic manager to ring the bell and raise the flag and reduce the rates. But he has got out of that, considering his own self-interest, and very soon, or within a reasonable time, so far as the general business was concerned, the rates were the same.

Com'r LANE: They have come down to a condition of equilibrium?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir. There is more or less influence on rates. The most effective influence on rates is the needs of the traffic; that is the development of it, and that is manifested to the carrier generally through the reports of its agents coming in contact with the shippers, producers and merchants, or by direct intervention or petition or showing on the part of the merchants or producers, and when that showing is made, of course there is an attitude of resistance 417 on the part of the carrier, but sooner or later—but more often sooner than later—the carriers recognize in some measure the demands of the petitioner, and the rates are reduced, but instead of being reduced by the individual carrier, they are usually reduced by the whole bunch at once, that is, I mean by all the carriers.

Com'r LANE: Suppose you were also the director of the Denver & Rio Grande, that connects with the Southern Pacific at Ogden, would that make any difference in the direction of the freight?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, If I were a director of the Rio Grande, I presume that would only be in the event that the ownership or control of the lines were the same, and of course in that event it would be a question as to whether there should be a preference of interchange on the part of, we will say, the Southern Pacific, in favor of one or the other of these two connections. So far as the Union Pacific is concerned, from the very beginning, because of the shortness of its haul, there has always been a preference in favor of the Union Pacific. That preference has been limited, however, to very small tonnage, which we call "uncontrolled business."

Com'r LANE: We have testimony before us, taken — New York to the effect that the acquisition by the Union Pacific of the Southern Pacific or vice versa affected materially the Denver & Rio Grande and its Ogden connection with the Central Pacific, and that that made necessary the establishment or was a prime factor that made necessary the esrablishmout of the Western Pacific to San Francisco.

Mr. STUBBS: I do not think you believed it.

Com'r LANE: You do not think that is so?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, I will say I do not think that is so. As a matter of fact, the Southern Pacific works preferentially with the Union Pacific, but notwithstanding that for the last four years, on the average for the last four years,—and you cannot equalize interchange business except by an average——

Com'r CLEMENTS: Except by what?

Mr. STUBBS: By an average: For the last four years the 418 Southern Pacific at Ogden has given the Rio Grande as large a per cent. of the business it had to offer as the Rio Grande has given to the Southern Pacific.

Com'r LANE: How could the Rio Grande get to San Francisco except over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: It cannot.

Com'r LANE: So, it gave you all it had going to San Francisco?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: And you gave it back an equivalent to the amount it gave you?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir; that is what I mean.

Mr. KELLOGG: An equivalent in tonnage?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir; an equivalent in tonnage. I will frankly say to you that I was surprised when the showing came to me that way. That is also true of passengers. In other words, the Rio Grande, according to the custom governing the interchange between connecting lines has not a thing to complain of as to the Southern Pacific, and if they found their building of the Western Pacific upon the suspicion—because it cannot be more than a suspicion, the facts being as I have stated them—that they were not getting as much tonnage as they were entitled to under the rules from the Southern Pacific, why, then, they have been misled very materially.

Mr. KELLOGG: Has there been a great increase in tonnage that has been delivered to the Union Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: There has been a very material—according to my recollection—increase on the gross tonnage moving both east and west bound via Ogden, but the increase has been almost wholly on the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes, there has been no increase of tonnage delivered to the Denver & Rio Grande since 1901, has there?

Mr. STUBBS: There has been no material increase in the tonnage delivered by the Rio Grande to the Southern Pacific nor by the Southern Pacific delivered to the Rio Grande.

419 Mr. KELLOGG: One of the reasons would naturally be because you gave preference to the Union Pacific as to the unconsigned traffic, did you not?

Mr. STUBBS: It might have had some influence, but the facts are as I state them, and the Commission can judge. I do not think anything the Southern Pacific Company has done could have worked that result which I have stated to you; but, on the other hand, or in order to be perfectly plain and frank, for there is nothing to conceal in the matter, the Southern Pacific Company has worked preferentially with the Union Pacific as against the Rio Grande and I personally told Mr. Gould just to the extent and the degree to which we would do it.

Mr. KELLOGG: One question I did not think to ask you. Did you wish to ask a question (addressing Commissioner Clements)?

Com'r CLEMENTS: Yes, but I will not interrupt you.

Mr. KELLOGG: On business to the Atlantic Seaboard and points east of that line near Pittsburg, the rates are the same to certain Colorado points via the Texas ports as they are via all rail, are they not?

Mr. STUBBS: No, sir; I think not. I think, so far as Colorado and Texas are concerned—I think that is a differential territory.

Mr. KELLOGG: That the rates are less by the southern routes?

Mr. STUBBS: By the South Atlantic as well as by the Gulf ports.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is, that business moves from the Atlantic ports via Galveston and rail from there to Colorado points at less rates than by rail all the way?

Mr. STUBBS: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that business by the Sunset Route is in competition with the lines running west from New York and Pittsburg to the Colorado points?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir; the Union Pacific works business that way in connection with the Savannah route, taking it from the Savannah route at Kansas City?

420 Mr. KELLOGG: And as to that business the Union Pacific does not have to have the Southern Pacific as a connection?

Mr. STUBBS: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific are naturally competitive as to that business?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, they, as a matter of fact—the way the business moves, you may say there is a measure of competition there, but it would not necessarily follow because the Union Pacific can make a line via Galveston as well as the other.

Mr. KELLOGG: But it can also make a line via Kansas City and Council Bluffs.

Mr. STUBBS: It has a line that way.

Mr. KELLOGG: And using that line to Colorado points, it does compete with the Southern Pacific via New Orleans?

Mr. STUBBS: Today precisely as it always has done.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is all.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Mr. Stubbs, you said a moment ago that where a new line is built, sometimes it starts into competition by reducing rates, but that as a general rule it settles down to where, if a reduction is made by one, it is made by the whole bunch.

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I was speaking with respect to the general experience in the past.

Com'r CLEMENTS: That is what I understood.

Mr. STUBBS: That has been my experience.

Com'r CLEMENTS: That is the way I understood you.

Mr. STUBBS: I had no particular case in mind.

Com'r CLEMENTS: That, you state, is the general practice?

Mr. STUBBS: It has been in the past. I think it will grow more and more into disuse, the opening of the new line in that way. The reason is that it does just as much harm to the community at large as it does to the railroads or carriers. Instability of rates is as damaging to the public as it is to the carrier, and far more so.

421 Com'r CLEMENTS: I suppose the thing that keeps a single road from doing that is the knowledge of the fact that the others will follow suit and do the same thing, so that no permanent increase in tonnage is gained by it.

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, that has its influence, but then the consideration of its own interests independently would lead the carrier to hesitate today. Rates, as a whole in the United States are low. There is no question about that. Take any comparison you may make with foreign countries, they are low, and I think that in the natural course in the growth and development of commerce and new countries, they are bound to go lower, and that going lower in the way that they will under settled conditions, that the condition of the public, the country, the community served by the carriers, as well as the carriers themselves—it will be far more healthful. I do not know of an instance where I have in my official relations passed through a war in rates where the merchants, the shippers, did not complaint just as bitterly—well, more bitterly than I complained of the effect on us. It unsettled all conditions.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, of course, that is due to a rate war. But what I was coming to was, you said that where a reduction was made now under modern methods or present conditions, ordinarily it was done by all the roads and not by one; that they all made the reduction—that they all made the reduction substantially at the same time.

Mr. STUBBS: Well, it may be caused by the position taken by one road, but before the reduction is put into effect, all that are concerned in it or affected by it, know it, and have put themselves in position to meet the rates and put their tariffs in on the same date.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Is not that substantially true in respect to increases as well as decreases?

Mr. STUBBS: Why, it must necessarily be true in respect to increases. I cannot increase a rate unless my competitor does.

Com'r CLEMENTS: You would not undertake to do it,
422 would you, unless you felt sure that the others would do the same thing at the same time substantially?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, not — ordinary conditions. There might be conditions that would cause me to do it, but I think I will let my answer stand as yes to your question.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Take these increases that have just been referred to by Mr. Kellogg, occurring in 1903. They appear to have been published by all trans-continental lines at the same time?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Are they published by a joint common agency that represents all the trans-continental lines?

Mr. STUBBS: They were, and to-day the tariffs for Pacific Coast business, published by the trans-continental lines are published by a common agency, and we are petitioning your Commission to allow that to continue. We believe that it will work to the public interest as well as our own.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Were these increases you have just referred to by all these lines published by a common agency at the same time? They must have been the subject of conference and understanding between the competing lines, were they not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, we do not deny that. We do confer as to what rates shall be.

Com'r CLEMENTS: And reach an understanding as to what each other shall do in respect to the matter? Is that true?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, in one sense, yes, sir; but not in the sense that any one line is compelled or coerced by another to do that thing. After all it is done in such a way, that as a matter of fact, it is the individual interest of the company that is considered and operates upon the mind of its representative in determining whether the change shall or shall not be made.

Com'r CLEMENTS: But after all, is it not also true that if you wanted to make an advance you would not in fact under-423 take to do it until you had the practical assurance that the competitor would also do it at the same time? In other words, your action would be dependent on his, would it not?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, that fact, Mr. Commissioner, is—or that condition or practice is not created by the organization. For example, if I operated a line out of Chicago to the Missouri River and I felt that the conditions were such that rates were not remunerative, they were not fairly proportioned to our expenses, and Mr. Biddle operated another line and Dr. Darius Miller another, and half a dozen others, I might go to each one of those men individually and state the facts and say that I was of the opinion that the rates ought to be advanced, and I might be satisfied that if I did it, they would follow, and yet have no assurance or agreement that would subject them to a penalty or in anywise deter them from doing what I thought it was to our interest to do, if they did not want to.

Com'r CLEMENTS: But if you did not believe that they were going to do it or have practical assurance that they were going to do the same thing at the same time, you would not do it?

Mr. STUBBS: I would not dare do it; no, sir.

Com'r CLEMENTS: So, after all, it is not absolutely independent action, because your action is dependent on the knowledge of what they will do.

Mr. STUBBS: It is just as independent as the act of any member of society can be. Every member of society is under some obligation to his neighbor. He yields a portion of his natural right in order to contribute to the well being of the whole, and I do not see any difference.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, he has the power to reduce rates without the consent of his competitor, has he not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir; but he will not do it unless he talks with them about it.

Mr. KELLOGG: It has been done, has it not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir. There have been a great many things done. I do not think you will put an experienced traffic manager upon this stand but what will tell you that a great many 424 things have been done that ought not to have been done, and he will be very glad to see them made impossible.

Mr. KELLOGG: But some one line or the other must reduce the rate as a starter and usually does without the consent of the other, don't they?

Mr. STUBBS: I think—well, you might—I do not like your word "consent." Of course, it must be true that any suggestion whatsoever, whether it is for an advance or for a reduction, must have a starting point with some one person or some one company. I believe that to that extent your statement is true, but not true in the sense that I think you would like to have me tell it.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Have you ever attempted to increase or reduce rates on your road after talking with these other gentlemen representing other roads where they did not consent to it and you desisted from your purpose because you did not get their consent or concurrence?

Mr. STUBBS: I do not remember ever having advanced a rate without feeling pretty certain that my competitors would follow, but I think there have been cases that I have reduced rates openly by published tariffs that I had reason to believe that my competitors would rather that I would not do it.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is what you call competition, isn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: That is competition

Com'r CLEMENTS: Well, if the same interests dominated the various roads that had previously been in competition——

Mr. STUBBS: Sir?

Com'r CLEMENTS: I say to the extent that the same interests dominated the various roads that had previously competed, isn't all that difficulty about concurrent action removed; that is, if the same people own the Southern Pacific and the Northern Pacific, the C. B. & Q. and the Santa Fe, or, in fact, if they influenced the action of each one, you would not be troubled then about having to 425 talk to Mr. Darius Miller and these other various representatives of the various roads?

Mr. STUBBS: I think, under those conditions that the rate would be diminished gradually, just as rapidly as though they were under the continuance of the present conditions.

Com'r CLEMENTS: What would reduce them in that case; what influences?

Mr. STUBBS: Why, the commercial and industrial conditions that call for it. I do not suppose that there is anybody who will sit up and say that because an individual merchant says he would like to have a lower rate than he is getting, that that is a good reason for doing it, or that because a half a dozen merchants would combine and say, we want a reduced rate, that they ought to have it. The question is whether the reduced rate will be of a general public benefit, and whether it is for the interests of the community at large, in which I count the carrier as one.

Com'r CLEMENTS: Suppose under these conditions that several lines had reached the point where they publicly and openly maintain and declare dividends to the extent of 10 or 12 or 15 per cent. a year, would that be any cause for a reduction on the ground that it was more than ought to be taken?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I don't know whether it is expedient for me to give my personal opinion about that, but I think in considering these dividends of 10 per cent.—presuming that whoever refers to that is referring to the Union Pacific——

Com'r CLEMENTS: Not solely.

Mr. STUBBS: That it would be well to remember——

Com'r CLEMENTS: There are other roads that have declared more than that.

Mr. STUBBS: It would be well to remember the lean years that the stockholders of those roads have gone through. Years when they didn't get any dividend at all; and when you do that and make the average I think you will find, so far as the roads that I have any connection with are concerned, that the average inter-426 est on the investment has been very small, compared with what is commonly made by commercial enterprises.

Com'r CLEMENTS: I didn't mean to refer to the Union Pacific particularly. My question was when they get to where they do that year after year, when they come to have what would be generally regarded as an excessive income, would that be a factor that would cause a reduction of the rates if the commercial conditions did not demand it; and I referred to other roads as well as the Union Pacific when I spoke of 10 per cent.

Mr. STUBBS: Well, under present conditions I don't think 10 per cent. interest is a very excessive interest. Take the cheapness of money and the high profits that everybody is making, that is, everybody engaged in any enterprise; take even the cost of labor or I mean the revenue of the laborers to-day as compared with what it was ten years ago. I think the laborer is getting perhaps just as much out of the general increased prosperity of the country as the capitalist is, if the capitalist does not get more than 10 per cent.

The CHAIRMAN: Just one question, Mr. Stubbs. At one time a portion of the lines between Ogden and San Francisco was an independent line—the Central Pacific, wasn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I think I know what you want.

The CHAIRMAN: I want to locate the date of the acquisition of that property by the original——

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, I know. The Central Pacific was the original line operated by the Central Pacific Railway Company. That ran from Ogden to Sacramento and from Sacramento to San Francisco.

The Southern Pacific Railroad was constructed by the same people. The Southern Pacific Railroad was built to Yuma on the Colorado River and the Southern Pacific Railroad of Arizona was built across to Arizona; and the Southern Pacific of New Mexico was built across the State of New Mexico to El Paso, or to the Rio Grande River, just opposite El Paso.

Well, those lines, those Southern Pacific Lines were built by the promoters and constructors, and practically the owners of 427 the Central Pacific; and the Central Pacific continued to operate them until sometime along in 1885, when the Southern Pacific Company of Kentucky, the holding Company, was organized and took over all the stocks of both companies. That is my understanding of it. Of course, I am not an authority on those things, but that is my understanding.

The CHAIRMAN: That is just the point I wanted to determine, that there was a unity of interest at all times between the line from San Francisco east as far as Ogden and the line subsequently built from San Francisco south that again forms a part of the southern route.

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir; practically the same men built them.

The CHAIRMAN: And when the holding company, under the laws of Kentucky, was organized, it acquired both of them at about the same time.

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Stubbs, you referred just now in the discussion of the matter of dividends to the lean years, of the past; there may be lean years in the future may there not?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I hope there won't, but I am afraid there will be.

Mr. MILBURN: This is a period of what you call very prosperous conditions, physical conditions?

Mr. STUBBS: The most exceptional that I have known of in my life.

Mr. MILBURN: You spoke, in answer to a question which assumed your control as traffic manager over many other different lines, which were enumerated, from those which are under your present jurisdiction, that you did not think it would make much difference with respect to competition under existing conditions. What do you mean by "existing conditions?" I think that was your phrase.

Mr. STUBBS: In the law, and the more sense that railroad
428 companies, through their officers and agents, are getting every day.

Mr. MILBURN: What do mean by "the law?"

Mr. STUBBS: I mean that the Interstate Commerce Law will be very effective in restraining practices that, while in the past were lawful or at least not prohibited, have been detrimental to the interests of the public and the carrier. I have particularly in mind in saying this, the mid-night tariff that is killed by the thirty days' notice clause, and also the fact that the thirty days' notice clause is going to make a stability of rates generally that has not obtained, and it is of more value, upon the whole, to the public, in my judgment, and I think merchants generally consider it so, than the volume of the rate, whether it is more or less. I don't know of anything that has been said to me more often by strong shippers and able men than that "We want to be sure; we want to be certain, Mr. Stubbs, that we get as low rates as our competitors, but one thing that is of more value to us than anything else is to have staple rates so that we can adjust our business to it and know that when we buy goods to-day, that in 10 days after we have shipped, our competitors who have bought subsequently, cannot ship and get a difference of 2 or 3 or 5 per cent. in the rates over us."

Mr. MILBURN: You give significance to the thirty days' provision and to the effect of it, which I do not quite follow or appreciate. Would you mind amplifying it a little?

Mr. STUBBS: The present law provides that the published rates cannot be changed, either advance- or reduced, except upon thirty days' previous notice and publication and posting of the tariff. The old law provided that a published rate might be reduced upon three days' notice and publication and posting of the tariffs and might be advanced by ten days' notice. Now, in my opinion, that change was the wisest change that has taken place in the new law, notwithstanding some people may take a different view. I think that the effect of that is going to be of more public benefit than any other.

429 Mr. MILBURN: As a measure maintaining rates.

Mr. STUBBS: Giving stability.

Mr. MILBURN: Giving stability, and preventing a slashing of rates?

Mr. STUBBS: Not slashing.

Mr. MILBURN: Changes of rates.

Mr. STUBBS: Changes that may be made orderly and in a lawful way.

Mr. MILBURN: That was one factor that you put under the head of "existing conditions." What was the other—the personal equation, did I understand that of the officers; the actual men in charge?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I don't know that I elaborated that.

Mr. MILBURN: I don't know whether you gave that at all.

Mr. STUBBS: I hold strongly this view, Mr. Milburn, I don't know that I can express it better than by giving an illustration. At the time the question was up as of great public interest between the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, that the common control of those lines would wipe out all competition between them—in talking with my friends I expressed a view that I hold, that that was impossible. I consider Mr. Hill one of the greatest men in this country, probably at the lead as a practical railroad man; but with all his power it is utterly impossible for Mr. Hill, even if he has the will, and owning and controlling the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, to completely destroy competition between them. He has got to employ officers; vice-presidents, general managers, traffic officials. And what I mean by the personal equation, if I stated that, is that the Vice-President of the Great Northern has a personal interest in that line: he has his reputation, his record to make; he has his influence and he is going to build his line, the Great Northern, as against the Northern Pacific, and Mr. Hill cannot help that. If he takes that out of the man, the officer, then he destroys his influence, his value, and he might as well turn his business over to a hundred dollar clerk.

430 Com'r HARLAN: If the same man makes the rates for these two roads, the competition between the roads will not take the form of rate changing, will it?

Mr. STUBBS: The same man in making the rates would not do any differently than two men in making the rates. The rates are the same; the rates have been the same from St. Paul to Seattle over the Great Northern and over the Northern Pacific—not any more so since the so-called interest of Mr. Hill in both companies than they were before he was known to have any interest.

Com'r HARLAN: In response to Mr. Kellogg you said that a seduction of rates was competition. Every one knows that that is one way by which railroads may compete with one another. Now, if you were the rate maker for the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific, would it be likely that the competition between those two roads would take that form?

Mr. STUBBS: In my humble judgment, quite as likely as if you were the traffic manager of one line and I was of the other. That is what I mean by the personal equation.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Stubbs, taking the trans-continental business, the trans-continental lines, rather; they are made up of various groups of railroads, are they not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: The trunk lines running to the Atlantic seaboard from Chicago; some from Chicago and some from Buffalo and so on; they are one element in these trans-continental lines, are they not?

Mr. STUBBS: Necessarily.

Mr. MILBURN: The trunk lines between—I suppose the general expression that I may use is the Mississippi River and the Missouri River, are made up of another set are they not?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: The lines west of that; west of the Missouri River are another group?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, bringing together those lines in 431 relation to trans-continental traffic, what would be the importance, as a factor in rates, in rate making of the Union Pacific as a separate and independent system; not coming east of Kansas City and Omaha; not going west of its western termini?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, the Union Pacific would be a middle line in the through line, and would have to do pretty much what its connections desired.

Mr. MILBURN: Did you hear Mr. Markham's testimony this morning?

Mr. STUBBS: I did.

Mr. MILBURN: Do you remember the testimony he gave, I think, in response to questions that I put, about a transcontinental line worked by the Union Pacific from Ogden to Portland and thence by water to San Francisco, as an effective independent line which would preserve its independence in dealings with the Southern Pacific or the Central Pacific from Ogden to San Francisco, as an independent line? Do you recollect that testimony?

Mr. STUBBS: I do.

Mr. MILBURN: Will you please give me your view of that matter, of that situation, in your own words?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, the navigation company, I understand, by which I mean the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, has operated a line of steamers between San Francisco and Portland—well, as far back as I can recollect; long before I had any connection with it; and the Short Line, the Oregon Short Line and the Union Pacific have been the Navigation Company's principal dependents in the matter of connection for a long time for trans-continental business to Portland or to any point south of Portland; although it has been a connection at Spokane also with the Great Northern for Portland, and for business to points south of Portland; that is, for many years, and they have never been able to—I don't recollect that we have ever made any serious attempt to take trans-continental business, what we call trans-continental business; business originating, say, east of their eastern terminus, to San Francisco via Port-
432 land and the Columbia River and the Pacific Ocean on their steamships. It seems to me that fact of itself would show that it was in their judgment practically an old thoroughfare.

Now, as to the Union Pacific individually, the Union Pacific connects with the Oregon Short Line at Granger. Granger is somewhere in the neighborhood of 130 miles east of Ogden and it also connects with the Southern Pacific, what was originally known as the Central Pacific, at Ogden. Now, the Union Pacific, I would consider, would have a longer haul and a very considerably larger portion of the through rate by interchanging its traffic with the Central Pacific at Ogden than it would by interchanging its traffic with the Short Line at Granger; while the use of the Ogden Line would open up to the Union Pacific all the interior territory, the common points, what is called the Pacific Coast common points, including some interior points like Sacramento and Marysville, and by working with the Union Pacific all of the California, all of the interior California is opened up freely and fully to the Union Pacific by the Southern Pacific. If it worked a line by Portland and the Steamship it would be getting less out of the through rate than it would if it delivered to the Southern Pacific at Ogden, but would also be limited to San Francisco proper and would take the business under the necessity of a delay waiting for the ship to depart from Portland and the increased time required in the haul from Granger to Portland, thence to San Francisco by ship as against the all-rail haul from Ogden direct to San Francisco. So that it would be manifestly to the disadvantage of the Union Pacific to work the line via Portland -or San Francisco business or for California business, independent of what might follow if it undertook to do it in view of the attitude which the Southern Pacific might take toward it.

Mr. MILBURN: Treating, Mr. Stubbs, the Southern Pacific Line as totally independent and the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company as one system, and the Union Pacific endeavoring and seeking to work 433 a line to San Francisco via Portland, what effect would that have in the ordinary course of things in its relation to the Southern Pacific; what would be its power to do so?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, of course—I think if I or you or brother Kellogg were traffic manager of the Central Pacific under those conditions we would try to handle the Southern Pacific traffic in such way as to make it a very expensive thing to the Union Pacific to use the line via Portland.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the line via Portland might make it expensive to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. STUBBS: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Not as long as Mr. Stubbs had the Southern Pacific.

Mr. STUBBS: Not if Mr. Severance was in command of that, because you cannot cut those rates—that is what you had in mind—without cutting your own in getting the traffic. You cannot hurt me under those conditions without hurting yourself quite as badly.

Mr. KELLOGG: And vice versa?

Mr. STUBBS: That is it. No; not in the other case. Evidently it would not be necessary with another connection for the Southern Pacific to cut rates to make you very sick if you were running the Union Pacific and they wanted to do it?

Mr. MILBURN: Without changing its rates?

Mr. STUBBS: And without doing any unlawful thing either.

Mr. MILBURN: Taking this very case, without changing its rates at all, if it was an independent line, it could divert all the traffic subject to its control to the Denver & Rio Grande, couldn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: Certainly.

Mr. MILBURN: It could divert all the traffic subject to its control to the Denver and Rio Grande, couldn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: Certainly.

Mr. MILBURN: It could exercise its influence in that?

Mr. STUBBS: Certainly.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, now, as a practical railroad man, Mr. Stubbs, if you were in charge of the Union Pacific System, including in it the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad and 434 Navigation Company and the boats of the Central Pacific, and say they were an independent company, wouldn't you regard it as quite essential to the welfare of your line to operate it in connection for San Francisco business with the Southern Pacific line?

Mr. STUBBS: No doubt of it. That is the view that the Union Pacific has always taken of it. I do not suppose it is a proper thing for me to exhibit on the witness stand, but it seems to be such a preposterous notion as to be hardly worthy of a serious answer, that it would be at all, in any sense or in any degree, to the interest or profitable to the Union Pacific or even the Navigation Company, to work business via Portland and the sea as against the Union Pacific's all-rail connection at Ogden, with the Central Pacific, or the Navigation Company's connection at Portland with the Southern Pacific line. You might make a paper case out, but you cannot get any railroad man or any traffic man that knows his business to say anything differently.

Mr. MILBURN: There is, is there not, along the Oregon Short Line or in the region of the Oregon Short Line, and I do not know but what the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Line—it is the Navigation Line Judge Lovett tells me. In Washington they are reaching wheat producing lands; that is true, isn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: The Navigation Company's Line runs from Portland up the Columbia River and then has various branches running from Wallula and another junction point through to Walla Walla and Spokane and draining what is called the Palouse Valley, that famous wheat producing country; and in that territory is also the Northern Pacific.

Mr. MILBURN: That is a business local to that region?

Mr. STUBBS: Altogether local to that region, but not local to the Navigation Company, because it is subject to the competition of the Northern Pacific. The Northern Pacific is seeking to draw 435 that wheat or the flour that is made from it, out through Tacoma and Seattle, while the Navigation Company seeks to take it out by Portland. The ships that serve Puget Sound take it, after it is milled into flour, to the Orient. The ships that serve Portland take it from Portland, in the form of flour, from Portland. That is the chief business of those lines, of the outgoing business of those Washington lines, including the Navigation Company.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, Mr. Stubbs, that was Oriental business, originating right there in the locality that you have described, consisting of the wheat grown there and the flour ground from it?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: A large and valuable business?

Mr. STUBBS: The principal market for it, but not altogether, but the principal market for it is in the Orient; some goes to Europe and some goes to South America.

Mr. MILBURN: And that is taken by the Northern Pacific to Puget Sound and by the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company to Portland, and thence by ships to the Orient?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, what was the connection, if you can tell me, between that local traffic and the so-called Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company? Will you give a history of that thing, if it is in your mind?

Mr. STUBBS: It was essential, absolutely necessary, for the navigation Company to have a steamship Line, or to induce a steamship line to operate between Portland and the oriental ports, in order to furnish an outlet for this wheat grown on its line in Eastern Washington; otherwise, as that was the chief market, that is, the orient was the chief market for that wheat—otherwise that wheat, converted into flour, would go out to the orient from Seattle and from Tacoma, and the Navigation Company would get no haul in it, no earnings on it whatsoever. The Navigation Company, before I was with it—this is simply a matter of history; I don't know 436 that my testimony is worth anything on that—had engaged with Mr. Doddwell to run a line of steamers in connection with Portland to the Orient, but it was not a profitable venture for Mr. Doddwell, and he withdrew. The upshot of it was that the Navigation Company had to provide steamships in order to take care of that business or lose the business, which was practically in one sense local to it in Eastern Washington. They then organized, or caused to be organized the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company and chartered vessels and have since operated it at considerable loss. I mean by that that the earnings from the Steamship Line do not meet the expenses by quite a considerable sum—I cannot recall what it was per annum; but when you take into consideration that it enabled the Navigation Company to hold its grain traffic from Eastern Washington into Portland, of course it was a profitable arrangement. This is the occasion for the organization or establishment of a Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company; that is the occasion for continuing it; and all other traffic that it handles through Portland in connection with the Portland and Asiatic Steamship Company is merely incidental.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, now let me ask if there has been any considerable volume of so-called trans-continental traffic for the orient which took that line?

Mr. STUBBS: Very little. There is some, but the ships were infrequent. According to my recollection, they couldn't guarantee even a monthly service. While from Puget Sound and from San Francisco, there were several lines which gave, well, at least biweekly and sometimes oftener service, and the demands—the number of ships that were warranted by the line—I think it would not exceed three, sometimes there were only two—all their space at times was demanded by the offerings of flour and local cargo, and transcontinental traffic would be shut out so that it was found to be very difficult to engage outward tonnage that way. The inward tonnage they worked and got all that they could, making the same rates, as I understand it as were made by Puget Sound and it was 437 forwarded from Portland over the trans-continental lines precisely as it had been forwarded from Seattle or Tacoma or San Francisco, had it gone that way.

Mr. MILBURN: So the origin of that line was the cocal traffic on the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. STUBBS: There never would have been any line there, either of navigation ownership or private ownership, except for that business.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, the whole situation, Mr. Stubbs,—would you ever think of trying to establish a steamship line at Portland to endeavor to compete for trans-continental or oriental traffic with Puget Sound?

Mr. STUBBS: No, sir. As I say, the sole reason, the foundation reason for the establishment of that line was to take care of the wheat and flour traffic. That is a matter of public knowledge.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, Mr. Stubbs, that same local traffic, the flour and what not that originates on the Oregon Railroad & Navigation line, to some extent finds its way to San Francisco, doesn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: How is that?

Mr. MILBURN: I say that some of the products that we have been referring to here as a local on the Oregon Railroad and Navigation line, to some extent finds a market in San Francisco? No, I am wrong about that.

Mr. STUBBS: Oh, certainly. You mean wheat and flour and their products go to San Francisco? Yes, and for that matter some of it goes to San Francisco for transfer to South American vessels, but I don't think that is in very large volume.

Mr. MILBURN: They still run between——

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir. That local business, particularly in wheat, is increasing in San Francisco. The wheat production of California is diminishing very rapidly.

Mr. MILBURN: What steamers run there?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, I don't know.

Mr. MILBURN: Don't some of the independent steams run?

438 Mr. STUBBS: Oh, yes, a number of them.

Mr. MILBURN: There is an independent business done there.

Mr. STUBBS: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: And has the Navigation Company——

Mr. STUBBS: There is a lot of schooners that run south with lumber, and I believe they also run with wheat. I think there is a regular steamship line between San Francisco and the north coast, but, whether,—independent of the Navigation Company,—it goes into Portland, I am not sure; I think it does not; but as to that I am not a very good witness because I haven't paid any attention to that business.

Mr. MILBURN: Oh, very well. I don't think of anything else now. Do you think of anything else that you think I might ask you?

The CHAIRMAN: You don't mean that Mr. Stubbs is exhausted?

Mr. MILBURN: I save myself by asking if there was anything else

I might ask him about, or that I ought to ask him, whether I have been a diligent pupil.

The CHAIRMAN: Have you anything further, Mr. Kellogg?

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Stubbs, you say the Doddwell Line or the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Line was primarily created, organized, for the purpose of handling flour to the orient and to San Francisco?

Mr. STUBBS: That is my impression. Of course, I was not connected with it——

Mr. KELLOGG: To the orient and not to San Francisco?

Mr. STUBBS: No, to the orient.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is not its only business?

Mr. STUBBS: It takes any business that it can, but it gives preference to that.

Mr. KELLOGG: It brings back something from the orient doesn't it?

Mr. STUBBS: I explained that.

Mr. KELLOGG: And delivers it to the Navigation Company?

439 Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, the San Francisco ships don't take any of that business, do they, from up the Palouse country?

Mr. STUBBS: No, not under any through rate. I don't know whether—I think they have at times taken flour.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, they trans-ship it at San Francisco?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir. It was done by the Navigation Company's boats or outside boats, but I am not sure, I think I have known of cases of that kind.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then in the case coming back, it is delivered to the Navigation Company and hauled east by the Navigation Company, the Union Pacific and the Short Line?

Mr. STUBBS: That is right.

Mr. KELLOGG: What did you mean by testifying when you testified in this case, that the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Southern Pacific Lines were diametrically opposed to each other and competing vigorously every day in the year—in the Graham case?

Mr. STUBBS: Well, it is a fact, as I have testified here, that the Southern Pacific Company takes business into Southern Oregon, and as I said, I was not sure about it, but I think that it took business to Portland and possibly out of Portland for eastern points; and it is also a fact, just as I have explained to you that the steamship line between the orient and San Francisco and the steamship line between the orient and Portland, and the steamship line between the orient and Puget Sound all compete for the traffic from the orient to all points in the United States.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Navigation Company and the Short Line and the Union Pacific are the connecting links with one of those steamship lines?

Mr. STUBBS: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And is therefore a competitor of the Southern Pacific?

440 Mr. STUBBS: There is no question about that, so far as business goes, but it don't amount to anything.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is all.

The CHAIRMAN: Any further questions to be asked Mr. Stubbs. If not he is excused.

(Witness excused.)

J. M. HANNAFORD, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?

Mr. HANNAFORD: St. Paul, Minnesota.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. HANNAFORD: Second-Vice-President of the Northern Pacific Road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are your duties as Second Vice-President of the Northern Pacific Railroad?

Mr. HANNAFORD: They relate entirely to traffic and commerical interests.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years have you been connected with the Northern Pacific?

Mr. HANNAFORD: 34 years last spring.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. HANNAFORD: Thirty-four years last spring.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what different capacities, Mr. Hannaford, have you been connected with that road?

Mr. HANNAFORD: Everything in the traffic department from Chief Clerk in the freight department to Second-Vice-President.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you say for 23 years you have been connected with the Traffic Department of the Northern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how many years have you been — the traffic department, under your own title or another?

A. Well more than twenty years.

Q. The Northern Pacific has its western terminus at Portland, Oregon, does it not? Or rather Portland, Seattle, Tacoma and all along up the coast?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have a line running to Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long has that line been built?

441 A. Since—well we ran to Portland in connection with the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company at first in 1883, the last part of 1883, that line was opened.

Q. Your own line?

A. No, the line in connection with the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company. I don't think I can give you the date exactly, but in the late '80's our own line was put through from Tacoma.

Q. From Tacoma down to Portland?

A. That was the first part that was built over to Tacoma that was the later, the late construction.

Q. Now the lines of Railway that reach Portland are the Northern Pacific the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir, those are the principal lines.

Q. Mr. Hanaford, in the old days prior to the enactment of the Interstate Commerce law, which was in 1887 were you familiar with traffic meetings that were held by the trans-continental road, did you attend those meetings?

A. I attended them all I think, except during the winter of 1886 and 1887.

Q. You had been attending them for several years hadn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Prior to that time did you often meet Mr. Stubbs at those meetings?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What road was he representing?

A. The Southern Pacific.

Q. Who represented, if any one, who represented the Union Pacific at those meetings?

A. Well various officials of that company the late Thomas M. Kimball and I think Mr. Vinning when we first met Mr. Clark, the General Manager and Mr. Shelby, Mr. Munroe and whoever their traffic official in charge was at that time.

Q. Now at those meetings were there discussions as to divisions and pools of trans-continental business?

A. Prior to 1887 there was.

Q. Yes that is what I mean, prior to 1887?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific figure as independent parties to those pools, separate parties?

A. Separate roads, yes, sir.

442 Q. Separate roads, and the Northern Pacific also?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was an arrangement with the Northern Pacific was there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was there not also at one time an arrangement for division of the traffic, that is traffic for certain parts of the west being handled by the Northern Pacific and traffic for certain parts further south being handled by the other lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In those negotiations the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific acted as separate and independent roads, did they not?

A. To the best of my knowledge, yes, sir.

Q. Isn't it a fact that in those meetings there were discussions between the different lines as to the percentages that they should be allowed, and were not the different lines each, including the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific struggling to get as large a per cent. as possible of the common business?

A. All of us were.

Q. In those days they did not allow—they had not arrived at the point of having one man to compete for two roads, but each road had its own representative. That is true isn't it?

A. Sometimes one man represented two roads.

Q. But not where they were competing with each other?

A. Only by proxies.

Q. Where their interests were common?

A. Where they were joint or common.

Q. That was in the case where it was a question of the division between the different roads?

A. No.

Q. That was not a case of that kind?

A. No.

Q. They each had their own representatives?

A. They each had their own representatives as a rule.

Q. Our Mr. Stubbs was endeavoring to get as large a percentage of the business as he could for the Southern Pacific system?

A. The indications pointed that way.

Q. What you mean by indications is that that is based on 443 what Mr. Stubb said, his arguments in the meeting?

A. Yes, certainly.

Q. And Mr. Munroe or the other gentlemen, whoever they may have been, who represented the Union Pacific, were likewise trying to get as large a percentage as they could for that line?

A. As large a percentage of earnings, or as small a percentage when it was a division of expenses.

Q. Now Mr. Hanaford, prior to 1901 you were familiar with traffic conditions so far as trans-continental and overland business was concerned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as you always have been. Now prior to 1901 was there any active competition throughout the Atlantic seaboard territory and the Chicago territory, between the different trans-continental lines for the Pacific Coast business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All the roads were competing for that business?

A. Well all of the roads lying west of a line drawn north and south through Chicago.

Q. What Pacific roads were competing for it, the Southern Pacific was competing for it, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Santa Fe?

A. The Southern Pacific with some restrictions of territory.

Q. And the Santa Fe?

A. The Santa Fe.

Q. And the Union Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific.

Q. The Northern Pacific?

A. The Barlington and the Denver & Rio Grande road. The Northern Pacific at the date you mentioned, the Great Northern and the Canadian Pacific, were the principal lines. Of course they had lines that led up to them.

Q. Now has the Sunset route, the Southern Pacific been one of your competitors at Portland on business originating in the Atlantic seaboard states?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has the route made up of the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company likewise?

A. Yes, sir.

444 Q. These three roads have been competitors for the Portland business?

A. The Great Northern has been for some time in connection with the Union Pacific via Spokane.

Q. Now Portland is a large distributing point, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is the wholesale point for all that region up there?

A. Yes, in Oregon.

Q. And the traffic there is a very considerable traffic into Portland?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And out of Portland?

A. We consider it so.

Q. Now has your road also participated to the same extent (perhaps not to a large extent) but to some extent in the San Francisco business?

A. Quite largely in passenger business and to a limited extent in freight.

Q. How do you get into San Francisco with your freight?

A. From the—over the Southern Pacific lines from Portland and over the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's boats from Puget Sound.

Q. The O. R. & N. has always maintained a line of boats from Portland and San Francisco, has it not? By always, I mean a good many years.

A. Well, I cannot explain to you just the combination there. I have always supposed that the Pacific Coast Steamship Company—just what that organization is I don't know. The same managers handle the boats that run to Puget Sound and the boats that run to Portland, except the wild boats, the outside boats, there are more or less outside boats.

Q. Now, in late years has there not grown up quite a large traffic in cotton shipments from the Southern States of the United States to the Orient?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What lines are competing for that?

A. What line of boats?

Q. No, what line of railroad to get to the coast?

A. So far as I know all the lines are competing for that.

Q. Now, the Southern Pacific take that cotton by the Sunset route, do they not?

A. I think they do from Texas. I guess they do from 445 all the territory so far as I know in the South.

Q. All the cotton States?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Considerable of that traffic comes to you?
A. Yes, it comes up by Kansas City, the Burlington and some to St. Paul in connection with other lines. It comes from Louisiana.
Q. It also moves west over the Union Pacific, does it not, that cotton?
A. I suppose so.
Q. You say it comes up to Kansas City. That would be the Union Pacific connection?
A. I think it goes over the Union Pacific. I don't know but to Portland what it goes over the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railway & Navigation Company.
Q. And is shipped to the Orient from Portland?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When it is taken from the South by the Sunset route it is shipped to the Orient from San Fancisco or possibly also from Portland?
A. No, I think, from San Francisco. I don't think they ever bring any up to Portland via that route.
Q. In handling your traffic has it been your practice to maintain general agents or commercial agents at different large points in the east?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Chicago?
A. Chicago.
Q. Pittsburg?
A. Pittsburg, New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Buffalo.
Q. What are the functions of those agents?
A. Well, to represent the Northern Pacific Railroad and to get all of the business they can that we are able to carry and route it over our line.
Q. That is, they endeavor to get the business consigned to points of connection on your line, at St. Paul perhaps?
A. Yes, they are there to secure business for us if they can.
Q. And that includes transcontinental and Asiatic business?
A. Yes, any business.
Q. Now, do your agents meet any competition at such places and in the same line with agents of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?
A. Yes, sir.
446 Q. And at some places you meet an agent who represents both the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, don't you?
A. Recently.
Q. How is that?
A. Recently we have.
Q. Now, those commercial agents that are kept at these different points throughout the country are a great assistance are they not to the lines they represent in securing the routing of traffic over those lines?
A. Why we feel so, yes, sir.
Q. And that is the reason you keep them there?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you do a large winter tourist business over your line?
A. No, sir.
Q. You do not.
A. No, sir.
Q. That goes further south?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You get summer tourists up your way?
A. Yes, we get a large passenger business from California returning via our line in the Spring. That I presume would be called winter tourists.
Q. Now, a great deal of the winter tourist business is handled by round trip tickets, isn't it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that business solicited?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And the tourist goes out over one of the Southern roads and comes back over your line, or the Canadian Pacific or the Great Northern?
A. If we can get him to, that is the part we solicit.
Q. And the Southern line solicits the trip out?
A. I guess they solicit both ways.
Q. Well, that is an active competitive business?
A. Quite so.
Q. I think you said that you handled some tonnage into San Francisco?
A. Yes, a limited amount. Not as much as we did prior to 1887.
Q. How is that?
A. Not as much as we did prior to 1887, but we handle some there still.

Mr. MILBURN:

Q. 1887 seems to have been an eventful year?
A. It was, very.

Mr. MILBURN: I wonder what happened.

447 Mr. HANAFORD: I spent six months in the hospital and that is why it is so firmly impressed on my mind.

Mr. MILBURN: To say nothing of the Interstate Commerce act.

Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Now isn't all the traffic in the middle territory of this country naturally, that is, the Pacific Coast traffic or Asiatic traffic from the middle territory both ways, going and coming competitive between these various lines beginning with the Southern Pacific on the south, taking in the Santa Fe, the Union Pacific and the Great Northern, or practically all of it?
A. Well to some degree. Some of it of course is quite strongly competitive between all the lines. The further east you get, and the further towards the south that you get, I think the Southern Pacific are competitors for the Chicago business.
Q. Where? You are?
A. We are very strongly, and all the other lines are that I know anything about, and I suppose the Southern is and I think they are in connection—either via the Illinois Central and New Orleans, or via some of their El Paso connections. I don't see why they should not be. If I was running the road I should be.

Q. The rates are so adjusted from New York and back nearly to Pittsburg or about to Pittsburg and Buffalo so that the Southern Pacific and all these northern lines are competitive for Pacific coast business in that region, are they not?

A. That would be what was known as the Trunk line territory?

Q. Yes?

A. Why I should say so.

Mr. MILBURN:

Q. Mr. Hanaford you were speaking of the good old times prior to 1887 when you gentlemen used to meet and divide things up into percentages, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the earlier part of your testimony. And you said in those conferences somebody was there representing the Northern 448 Pacific, and other gentlemen representing the Southern Pacific, and somebody else representing the Union Pacific?

A. All lines that were interested were represented.

Q. All engaged in getting as much as possible?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now the Southern Pacific man—did you say it was Mr. Stubbs, did you mention anybody?

A. I don't know that I did. He represented them quite frequently, and quite frequently there were other officials.

Q. The Southern Pacific man in that conference would represent the Sunset route, wouldn't he, that would be one.

A. That would be one, yes, sir.

Q. And he would represent the Central Pacific route, wouldn't he?

A. Always, yes.

Q. So on the theory of my friends here he was representing competitive lines, was he not?

A. I don't know what his theory is. Those are the two lines that he represented.

Q. One line is the Central Pacific line. That was a line of about 800 miles in length, wasn't it?

A. Practically that, Ogden to San Francisco.

Q. Extending from San Francisco to Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was part of the so-called trans-continental line made up of itself and the Union Pacific and the other lines to the east?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is what he was there standing for, wasn't he, representing whoever it was?

A. Well he did not forget at any time the other interests that he represented.

Q. And he was asking for a percentage for the Sunset route?

A. Always, yes, sir.

Q. And he was asking for a percentage for the other line of which the Central Pacific was a part?

A. My memory is not very clear in regard to that but I do not think there was any segregation of the percentage that the Southern Pacific asked for in this division of expenses and revenue.

449 Q. Could the Union Pacific get any percentage without the Southern Pacific sharing in it?

A. I don't know what the division of spoils was between the two lines.

Q. Any percentage that the Union Pacific got, that is for that line would be shared in by the Southern Pacific as owning the line from Ogden to San Francisco, would it not?

A. As I say, I do not know.

Q. You do not know?

A. No.

Q. How else could it get its portion of that percentage for its railroad?

A. Well the advocate for the Southern Pacific always spoke of his percentage as a unit for the line from Ogden to San Francisco and from San Francisco to New Orleans. I never heard any discussion that so much of it should be for the Central Pacific line and so much of it should be for the Sunset line. He might in his own mind have had a division, but so far as I ever heard it was not mentioned.

Q. If that percentage was made he would have to account with the Union Pacific for its proportion?

A. I don't know. I have no knowledge of that particular. It never was developed in any of the meetings that I remember of.

Q. The point is that in those conferences he was representing, whether as a separate interest or as a unit, those two lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any personal knowledge of the Chicago business, the legitimate Chicago business as you call it, that goes to California via New Orleans and the Sunset route?

A. I have not.

Q. That is pretty round about, isn't it? I think we have had it here given as 900 miles from Chicago to New Orleans?

A. I think so, I never went over the route, and I never worked for it particularly.

Q. Where would 900 miles from Chicago take it on its western journey?

A. Well, somewhat east—well, about 500 miles west of Omaha, 400 miles.

Q. If it went that route it would be 400 miles west of Omaha by the time it got to New Orleans?

A. Yes.

Q. And then it was about as far off from San Francisco

450 as when it started, isn't it?

A. I don't think that there is a great quantity of California freight that is sent that way. I think it mostly went by El Paso.

Q. That is from Chicago to El Paso?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then via the Southern Pacific.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the Southern Pacific then got the haul on it from El Paso to San Francisco? That is, the traffic that would be gotten by the Rock Island and other roads running to El Paso either themselves or other connections.

A. I think so; yes, sir.

Q. And there delivered to the Southern Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as compared with going by the other lines and the Union Pacific, going on to the Southern Pacific and Ogden?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So between the two roads the difference would be the difference of the haul between El Paso and San Francisco, and between Ogden and San Francisco, so far as the original Southern Pacific railroad was concerned?

A. Yes, sir, I should think so.

Commissioner LANE: Has there ever been an active and real competition between the Southern Pacific, the Sunset route, the Union Pacific with its connections, the Oregon Short Line to Portland, and the Northern Pacific for San Francisco business?

A. I don't think Mr. Lane I fully understand that.

Commissioner LANE: Has there ever been any competition from Eastern points to San Francisco between the three roads, one on the extreme south, the Sunset route, one in the center made up of the Union Pacific from Omaha west to Ogden, and from Ogden up to Portland and from Portland down to San Francisco by boat and the Northern Pacific from Duluth out to Puget Sound, and from there by boat down to San Francisco?

A. I don't know that there has ever been any competition between the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, or the Southern Pacific for San Francisco business as against the Sunset Route. The Northern Pacific has done, when its facilities enabled it to do so, quite an amount 451 of competitive business for San Francisco. We had a share, getting from six to eight per cent. of that business in the early days.

Commissioner LANE: Why is it no longer possible for you to get it?

A. Well the people won't patronize us. The Short rail lines I think are preferable.

Commissioner LANE: They prefer the short rail lines. What is the difference in distance between freight originating at Buffalo, going to New York by rail, and from New York around by water to Galveston, and Galveston to San Francisco by rail and freight originating at Buffalo, carried by the lakes to Duluth and from Duluth to Puget Sound and then down by water on the other hand?

A. Well I could not tell you without figuring it up but I think 1500 miles in favor of the line from Duluth via Portland, and the water down perhaps not over 1200.

Commissioner LANE: You have the water haul at the western end and the other people have the water haul on the eastern end.

A. Well yes, but the advantages of the Southern Sunset route on San Francisco business are very great. There is the water competition, they can take their business in New York, gather it up from the various producing points in New England and New Jersey and adjacent to New York, take it into their warehouses in New York and put it all on to one steamer, and have it all reach New Orleans or Galveston at one time. I have understood—it may be good service—but I have understood it was lack of facilities that forced them to take that business right off that very day and send it up to San Francisco in special trains, but unfortunately the all-rail routes cannot equal that service on 6,000 tons of freight that is ready to go on the same day. This whole 6,000 tons on the Sunset route gets there at one time. If it was not for that service all under one control I should feel quite like opening the line that you mentioned from Buffalo to the Puget Sound to the water and down to San Francisco, but I cannot do it because I have got to depend on a lot of lines between Buffalo and St. Paul to do that same service that they do with their boat direct to New Orleans.

452 Commissioner LANE: It is because of the superiority of the route and the superiority of the service that there is not active competition between the Northern Pacific and the Sunset, for San Francisco business.

A. We cannot equal that service.

Commissioner LANE: You cannot equal the service that they give?

A. No, sir.

Commissioner LANE: How long since you have tried?

A. Oh off and on for 20 years. Every time that the boat service on the Pacific has been a little better we thought we could get in and do some of it, but we have failed almost every time. We do some business down there, enough so that we are mentioned in the expenses of weighing, and so forth, but not very much.

The CHAIRMAN: You appear in the tariff, do you?

A. Yes.

Commissioner LANE: You have a through rate, have you?

A. Yes.

Commissioner LANE: Do you think that competitive conditions are the same between the trans-continental lines west running into San Francisco or connecting by boat with San Francisco from the Northern line that would exist, were they all under the same ownership?

A. I don't believe I understood that.

Commissioner LANE: Supposing that the Sunset route and the Santa Fe and the Union Pacific and the Central and the Short line and the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific were all owned by the same persons and all under a common direction as to traffic. We will say that Mr. Stubbs was the traffic Director. Do you think that the same competitive business would exist then that exists now, and that there would be practically the same condition of things?

A. I think so, yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: No better and no worse.

A. I don't see how they could be. The rates are not made by the overline carriers in any respect.

Commissioner LANE: They are made by competition between the markets?

A. Very largely by water competition, the Pacific Coast
453 rates. Of course there is no one connected with that trade but what will agree with me I guess, in saying that we get all we can out of it every time.

Commissioner LANE: All you can on the freight?

A. Yes, and it is pretty nearly the cost of handling the business.

Commissioner LANE: So that so far as rates are concerned, or facilities are concerned and competition between the lines is concerned, your opinion is that that condition to-day would not be changed if all the lines were under a common ownership?

A. I don't think they would.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Why is that so, is it because they all act in unison now?

A. I should hardly want to put it that way. Tariffs are made. I know of no two competing points in the United States where the tariff is different between points by different carriers over 24 hours or 30 days at least. Perhaps it might be now. Just as quickly as they can get them the same they must do of course, so that the tariffs are uniform. You cannot operate two roads having two sets of tariffs.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Have there been conflicts and contests between competing carriers in years past in which the rates figure away down to almost nothing?

A. Some very disreputable ones that I have been concerned in myself.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: From time immemorial the public generally has believed that there was more vitality in competition and separate ownership, and separate action. Is that all a mistake? Has the policy of the Government been altogether mistaken in regard to that fact? Does it make no difference whether one man owns or controls everything or whether there is a dozen different independent managements existing and independent ownerships?

A. I think there has been a great deal of mistaken judgment in regard to that. I am not prepared to give a discourse on it myself.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Don't you think your opinion is rather speculative and theoretical as to what would be the effect if 454 all of these roads were under one management?

A. No, I don't think so. It is based upon a pretty long and hard experience and I have never known anything but temporary war fare and struggles between carriers to get a larger percentage of the business, or something of that kind, that have made any very material difference in the rates, except that there has been a general decrease in them ever since I have been in the business.

Commissioner LANE: Is there more competition to-day between the Great Northern and Northern Pacific in the matter of facilities than there was ten years ago?

A. Why, I think it is a little stronger than it was. We have got more money to take care of them now than we had then.

Commissioner LANE: You are more aggressive in competition for business, and better prepared to take care of it than you were ten years ago?

A. I think so. We have spent a great deal of money in the last few years. We have built some very fine warehouses and have spent something like $300,000 in building warehouses on our tracks at Seattle, in order to get the business away from the Great Northern, because they are the only people there except ourselves.

Commissioner LANE: You had put in all your warehouses at Tacoma?

A. No, these are private warehouses that we lease and rent to tenants.

Commissioner LANE: You lease warehouses at Seattle to tenants?

A. Yes, we built some fine brick buildings there.

Commissioner LANE: What was the object in doing that?

A. To get them located on our tracks so that they would give us a preference in hauling the business.

Commissioner LANE: You had plenty of warehouses in Tacoma, didn't you?

A. None of that character. These gentlemen do business in those houses. They are commission men and so forth. We had plenty of warehouses for wheat, and warehouses to unload and 455 handle our own interchange business with connecting carriers and the ocean, but these are a different proposition.

Commissioner LANE: That is not the most notable achievement of your road in the way of competing with the Great Northern, is it?

Mr. HANAFORD: No, sir, we are spending fifty millions of dollars now to enable us to take care of the business that we have, in the way of double tracks, locomotives, and so forth.

Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Just a word about this answer that you made to Mr. Lane that you think conditions would be the same if all the railroads now competing with each other were under one management. You don't think, do you, that if there was no incentive given to these separate lines to give good service,—assuming the rates are uniform,—that the same situation would exist that does today?

A. I don't see why it should not.

Q. Well, self interest is the strongest thing to move people to do things in this world.

A. Yes sir.

Q. Now, if you own a railroad and I own a railroad and we are reaching the same points and I am trying to get the business and you are trying to get the business, although we may agree to charge the same rate, we will each try to give better service than the other.

A. We each ought to try to give the best service we can.

Q. If a shipper has a lot of commodities to transport and we are each after them and one of us is able to give the cars quicker than the other, he will get the business naturally?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Or, if he can give quicker service in transit.

A. Yes sir.

Q. You don't mean to say, do you, that if you eliminate all that activity, the situation will be just the same as it is now where that activity exists?

A. I don't know what you mean by eliminating the activity. The management of the Northern Pacific Railroad, the only one that I know intimately about, is putting on extra passenger trains to-day, locally, in Montana where we have no competition whatever,
456 because the people complain about waiting for our delayed overland train. We don't have to do that because there is any ownership except our own.

Q. You often travel between St. Paul and Chicago, don't you?

A. Yes sir.

Q. And you unfortunately I suppose sometimes have to travel between Boston and New York. Now, don't you think that that is a pretty good object lesson on the point that you have under discussion. When you compare the kind of trains that run between New York and Boston, those midnight horrors that they have, with the trains between here and St. Paul where there are four or five lines fighting for the business. Don't you see some difference in the condition resulting from common ownership, a different condition from the separate ownership that they have up here?

A. I did not suppose matters between New York and Boston were as bad.

Mr. MILBURN: You must have had a bad night.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I have had many a bad night on those trains.

Q. Isn't that the secret of the fine service that there is between here and St. Paul and Minneapolis, because there are four or five roads actively working for the business, don't that result in putting on fine trains and keeping up the equipment and giving good service?

A. I don't know. I should be ashamed if I was connected with the Milwaukee & St. Paul and had the passenger business between here and the Twin Cities that they have, not to give good service for it.

Q. Well, they do give good service, don't they?

A. I don't believe it is because somebody else is giving good service that they do it.

Q. You don't think it makes any difference if there are other lines preparing to take the business and give good service. You think the whole thing is done from a sense of duty and that competition does not cut any figure.

A. That is my view.

Q. Then I suppose that view explains to all branches of 457 industry, don't it? You regard the generous heart as being better than competition.

A. I don't know a damn thing about anything but the railroad business. I never did anything else.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. What is competition in railroads?

A. I don't know that I am intelligent enough to give you a definition in a few words of that. I know what it is and I have felt its influence a great many times. I think where two roads are soliciting the same business between the same points, that they might be called competitors for that business.

Q. Now, you said all the lines west of Chicago reaching the Pacific Coast were competitors for trans-continental business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what does that competition consist in?

A. Each trying to get it and carry it and get the revenue out of it.

Q. And it has in the past resulted many times in one of the lines cutting the rates, or reducing the rates by tariffs or otherwise?

A. Yes, when they thought they were not getting a fair share of it or when they thought someone else had got in before them.

Q. That is what you call competition, is that right?

A. That is competition or the effect of competition.

Q. Now then, you say if every railroad in the United States belonged to one corporation the competition would be just as great as it is today, do you?

A. I do if you think that cutting rates is the only thing that there is in competition.

Q. No, I am asking you the general question.

A. That is rather a larger proposition that I should want to answer.

Q. Well, all the trans-continental lines then.

A. I think the service would be as good as it is now and the rates would be practically the same.

Q. I asked you if the competition would be the same if they all belonged to one corporation?

A. I think so.

Q. There would be the same struggle for the business for each separate line?

A. Each one of them would have to have its corps of officers who would be compelled to get all they could for their line.

458 Q. The same reduction of rates to get business, as against each other.

A. It is pretty hard to reduce rates now. I do not know about that.

Q. You don't know about that?

A. I think reductions would be continually made, but you said reductions against each other.

Q. Yes, that is exactly what I said.

A. I don't know that there would be any reduction against each other.

Q. There would be no interest for doing it.

A. There would be a reduction to get the business.

Commissioner HARLAN: Would you, as traffic manager of the Northern Pacific, make a reduction as against Hanaford, the traffic manager of the Great Northern, in order to get business for the Great Northern.

Mr. HANAFORD: No, I don't think I would.

Commissioner HARLAN: In other words, if you represented the interests of both roads you would not make a reduction, would you?

Mr. HANAFORD: I think I would.

Commissioner HARLAN: On one as against the other.

Mr. HANAFORD: No, but on both at the same time.

Commissioner HARLAN: No, but I say on one as against the others.

Mr. HANAFORD: I don't know why I should make it on one as against the others.

Commissioner HARLAN: You would not do it because you represented both interests and that would be the reason, would it not?

Mr. HANAFORD: Well, I don't know, I should expect——

Commissioner HARLAN: How could Hanaford, of the Northern Pacific, reduce rates on Hanaford of the Great Northern, if he represented both interests?

Mr. HANAFORD: Not without both of them knowing it, surely.

Commissioner HARLAN: That is, Hanaford of the Great Northern would have to consent to it.

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes, I might do that.

Commissioner HARLAN: Isn't it manifest, Mr. Hanaford,
459 that the substitution of one rate maker on two roads, for two rate makers on two different roads eliminates the possibility of a difference of opinion between the two rate makers? In other words, I, of the Great Northern, may think the rate is too high and I would want to reduce it, and you, of the Northern Pacific, might think it was all right. If I reduce it you would have to meet it, wouldn't you?

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes, that is correct.

Commissioner HARLAN: Now, if you made the rates for both roads, you could not make it against your own judgment for the Northern Pacific.

Mr. HANAFORD: No, but I should probably be moved by the same influences as you as traffic manager of the Great Northern were moved to reduce it.

Commissioner HARLAN: I just want to get at this as a matter of logic and reason, whether you mean to say and mean us to understand that the ownership of all the railroads of the country in one corporation would not result in curtailing the competition as expressed in the form of the making the rates. Do you mean the country to understand that to be your answer?

Mr. HANAFORD: You mean, if I follow you correctly, that if the government owned the railroads of the United States, that the rates would be on a higher basis than they are now?

Commissioner HARLAN: Oh, no, no, we are not talking about Government ownership at all.

Mr. HANAFORD: Well, that is one ownership.

Commissioner HARLAN: Well, let us limit it to the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern.

Mr. HANAFORD: Limit it to two roads and I can perhaps grasp it.

Commissioner HARLAN: Well, limit it to those two roads the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern. Now, do you mean to say that the substitution of one rate maker for two rate makers for those two roads would have no effect upon the possible reduction of rates?

Mr. HANAFORD: I don't think it would. Assuming that the man handling them handled them to the best of his ability.

460 Commissioner LANE: Do you think in the matter of facilities that competition is of value?

Mr. HANAFORD: I suppose it has a certain bearing, but we have uniform rules for providing facilities. I suppose you mean by that side tracks?

Commissioner LANE: I mean for instance the providing of cars. Let me give you an illustration. We have recently held a hearing in Minneapolis and Chicago on the question of Car Shortage. We had reports for instance from Iowa that at their competitive points it was comparatively easy to get cars, but at the non-competitive points it is difficult; that in the northwestern country the elevators at competitive points had less difficulty in getting cars than the elevators at non-competitive points. Now, suppose that these non-competitive points were turned into competitive points and two roads were disputing for the traffic, would there not be a rivalry as to the furnishing of cars to those elevators in order to get the business?

Mr. HANAFORD: There might be. That would depend upon the person-el of the people who were handling the road. I don't want to put it in that way. I don't think you heard of anything of that kind on the Northern Pacific. I have asked some of the elevators at competitive points on our road if they would not use the other line anyway to help them get the grain out. The situation has been very bad with us, something that we have deplored considerably. We have taken cars of our elevators that could not get help from anybody else in preference to elevators at those junction points where there was more than one outlet.

Commissioner LANE: So that you do think then that there is a value in competition between roads in the securing by the shipper of facilities in transportation.

Mr. HANAFORD: Oh yes, some.

Commissioner LANE: That is, under the present condition of things it would be far better to have roads competing between each other than to have one road own all the transportation facil-

461 ities of the country, so far — the shipper getting his car is concerned?

Mr. HANAFORD: I would not want to say yes to that question just in that way. I think there are conditions under which competition perhaps—where a would-be shipper has got better service by their being two roads than where there was one. I think those are rather exceptional cases though. It depends largely on the management.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. You think the philanthropic gentlemen down in New York who control and own these railroads will in the very nature of things give the very best service possible whether there is competition or not.

Mr. HANAFORD: Well, I don't think they have but very little to do with the facilities and service that is given. I think the men that operate the roads will give the best they can.

Mr. MILBURN: Leaving the philant-rop*hy* out of it and taking yourself as manager of an extensive system that had previously consisted of independent lines, don't you think you could move your cars and your other facilities a great deal more effectively for the transaction of the business of the whole system than if the system consisted of many independent systems each holding on to its own cars at critical junctures, for operation.

Commissioner LANE: You mean, wouldn't it be beneficial to have a car-clearing house or pool?

Mr. MILBURN: Well, say a single management of a railroad.

Mr. HANAFORD: I think the free interchange of cars, a freer interchange of cars than we have had in the last six months would relieve the situation considerably?

Mr. MILBURN: Not that I am arguing in favor of it, but simply as getting at the natural results. Don't you think a big system comprehending a number of railroads facilitates the best use of all the facilities of that system rather than the same system broken 462 up into a number of separate concerns independently operated?

Mr. HANAFORD: Well, I should think so.

Commissioner LANE: Don't you think that it is possible for the railroads as individual systems, by co-operation to effect that same thing without any ownership whatever?

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: Then, you are eliminating competition to just that extent that you co-operate, are you not?

Commissioner LANE: Well, what is his answer to that?

Mr. HANAFORD: Why, yes.

Mr. MILBURN: If you co-operate for car service you are eliminating competition with respect to car service.

Mr HANAFORD: The road that has the most cars—there won't be any road that will have the most cars, of course, under those circumstances.

Commissioner LANE: Do I understand you to say that if all of the systems, we will say, in this part of the country united in a general car pool and by common direction the cars could be turned from one place where cars were not needed to another point where cars were needed, that that kind of co-operation would be an elimination of competition?

Mr. HANAFORD: In car service.

Commissioner LANE: In car service but not in competition for the business at all, would it?

Mr. HANAFORD: No, not at all.

Commissioner LANE: That is what we are talking of, isn't it, it is car facilities furnished to the shipper.

Mr. HANAFORD: You would have to be very careful about that because it cannot be confined to one locality. It would have to be a general proposition. Our cars are to-day away down in Florida and Alabama and we cannot interchange freely with those roads.

Commissioner LANE: Simply because you cannot get them back?

Mr. HANAFORD: Unless we could get them back.

463 Commissioner LANE: Because the other roads take them away from you and keep them. But that is not the trouble on your road, because you have over two thousand more cars than you are entitled to.

Mr. HANAFORD: I do not know about that.

Mr. MILBURN: I want to ask one question, Mr. Chairman, and then I will be through. Taking your line, as manager of the Northern Pacific, to-day, using all your forces to act as against your rivals and competitors, to get all the business that you can, to what extent does the change, of lawful rates I mean—lawful I mean now—cut any figure in that competition for business, do you get my point?

Mr. HANAFORD: No, I do not, Judge.

Mr. MILBURN: How much of a figure—as you are managing your railroad as you are conducting it and striving for business—how much of a figure does the change, the actual change in the lawful rates, a change in a lawful way of your rates? How much business in this competition do you get by changing your rates that you would not otherwise get, by lawfully changing your rates? How much of an agency is that in this business competition under present conditions?

Mr. HANAFORD: Well, it could be made considerable of an agency.

Q. As a matter of actual experience as the business is done? If you reduce your rates you know that your competitors will come to you.

Mr. HANAFORD: If I reduce without consulting with the gentleman that are going to be benefited by it, yes sir.

Mr. MILBURN: I am talking as the business is actually done, how much of a figure is this power of changing your rates lawfully?

Mr. HANAFORD: Why, I think it is a good deal of a figure.

Mr. MILBURN: You think it cuts a good deal of a figure, do you?

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes.

464 Mr. MILBURN: In getting business to-day, you all have the same rates.

Mr. HANAFORD: Not perhaps in getting competitive business as it is in building up business. You have got to adjust the rates in building up a business.

Mr. MILBURN: You all have the same rates to-day for your competitive business.

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: Haven't you?

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: You are striving for it under that system of things of common rates?

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: Or your competition is carried on with those common rates, is it not, to-day?

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes.

Mr. MILBURN: A power that you are not exercising is not helping you in your present competition.

Mr. HANAFORD: There is a power there that you can exercise you know.

Mr. MILBURN: You are not exercising it.

Mr. HANAFORD: Sometimes I am as far as I am requested.

Mr. MILBURN: Lawful change I mean, not unlawful.

Mr. HANAFORD: If it is made perhaps for unlawful purposes.

Commissioner LANE: That power to reduce rates is largely a power that is used as a threat and over other railroads.

Mr. HANAFORD: No, I don't think so. Very often it is a question of judgment with the manager of a certain road or a certain system of roads. He believes that the business can be materially increased in a direction perhaps where he needs the reduction of rates.

Commission LANE: Well, I can say to you, "If you cut down your rate on this traffic from that common point, I will cut my rate from another common point on another product," and that will prevent you from making the change which you contemplate.

Mr. HANAFORD: I will if I feel I am going to lose more
465 than I am going to gain by it. The day was when it would not, but I have got older now.

Commissioner LANE: You see the wisdom of acting in harmony.

Mr. HANAFORD: It would drive me out of any proposition of that kind if it was going to cost dollars and cents.

Commissioner LANE: Is that the reason you don't go into San Francisco market for business?

Mr. HANAFORD: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: It is not that you have practically agreed to divide the territory up and surrender San Francisco to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. HANAFORD: No sir, nothing of that kind, we have no arrangement with the Southern Pacific of any kind and we received no benefit from staying out of it.

Commissioner LANE: Do they leave you alone up in your territory?

Mr. HANAFORD: They cannot get up there very well unless under this new arrangement they have. We took that into the courts and put up a gate at Portland and shut them out from coming up there and the courts sustained it.

Commissioner LANE: Then they regarded that as your territory for a while, but now they are making an effort to break down the gate.

Mr. HANAFORD: No, I don't think—they didn't have anything to do with forming this new law. I am afraid it is going to break it down.

Commissioner LANE: You think they are likely to come up there?

Mr. HANAFORD: I think so.

Commissioner LANE: You think that would be injurious to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. HANAFORD: I think it would be injurious to the Northern Pacific. I would rather they would build a line up there.

Commissioner LANE: You would rather they did?

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes.

Commissioner LANE: You think now they will go in over your tracks?

466 Mr. HANAFORD: Well, there is a question about it. I am rather in hopes to have you gentlemen decide it favorably to my wishes. This proposition of making tariffs from any junction point and compelling any road to take its locals will let them do that because our locals from Portland to Puget Sound, by reason of water competition are very low. We built a road clear across the continent for the express purpose of carrying that business. We hope to take it down to Portland but we hate to take it down there at the low local rates that are made necessary in the Puget Sound region. There is no law, understanding or reason why they should not build a road up there if they want to, but I hate to have them use ours.

Commissioner LANE: Suppose you use the water and just get your road a little of the San Francisco business, they might compromise by not going up there.

Mr. HANAFORD: I don't think so. The rate from every point in the east to San Francisco is exactly the same as it is to Seattle, that is near enough for all practical purposes. The distances are about the same. Now, in cutting that we might get a small amount of business, on the small amount of business that we should get from San Francisco we would have to carry through a very large business on our own reduction of that rate. We cannot reduce the San Francisco rate without reducing the Puget Sound and Portland rate. If I could I think I should carry a larger percentage of the San Francisco business than I do, but I cannot do it. I have got to pay the penalty myself by cutting the rates on our own business.

Commissioner LANE: That is the reason I suppose that it is not wise for them to carry business up into your territory from San Francisco by water, because you have got to treat your terminal rates on San Francisco Bay and Puget Sound as sacred to yourselves.

Mr. HANAFORD: I don't know whether it behooves them any to do some of it or not, but there is not any understanding with us in regard to it.

Commissioner CLEMMENT: If you were traffic manager
467 for all the trans-continental roads and their earnings were going into the pockets of the same owners, no matter from which line the earnings came, you would still be under every inducement to make the best possible showing that you could for the Northern Pacific and earn all that you could for the property?

Mr. HANAFORD: I think so.

Commissioner CLEMMENT: If the owners called on you for increased earnings or increased dividends, would it not be much easier for you to produce that result than it would be if there were half a dozen different managers representing half a dozen different complicated ownerships in these several roads?

Mr. HANAFORD: I do not think so. I think if I was running one of them I could do that a good deal easier than I could if I was running all of them.

Commissioner CLEMMENT: You think you could increase the rates on your road and manage in competition with the others easier than you could if you managed all of them?

Mr. HANAFORD: Yes, because we could not raise the rates without your consent.

Commissioner CLEMMENT: You could not?

Mr. HANAFORD: Not very much. You would be sort of watching over that, I guess?

Commissioner CLEMMENT: We might be doing something about it. We don't make your rates.

Mr. HANAFORD: No, but you do not allow any raise of them without giving you thirty days' notice that we are going to, and people these days don't stand a raise very pleasantly.

Whereupon the further hearing of said matter was adjourned until the following day, January 10th, 1907, at 10 o'clock A. M.

468 CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, January 10th, 1907,
10 o'clock, a. m.

Present: Commissioners Knapp, (Chairman), Clements, Lane, Clark and Harlan.

The CHAIRMAN: Gentlemen, the Commission is obliged to announce that we can only sit during the morning session of today. Two of our members are compelled to leave at 6:30 tonight to be in Spokane to take up a case assigned for hearing there next Monday. We have been in session, as you know, long hours every day here and have been in consultation at night until nearly midnight. There are a number of things we must dispose of as the members of the Commission who are going west cannot get back to Washington under four or five weeks. We can, if desired, sit tomorrow forenoon here, but cannot hold a session this afternoon, as we are under the necessity of taking that time for other matters.

Mr. KELLOGG: We prefer to close here at this time at one o'clock.

The CHAIRMAN: Very well.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hiland, will you take the stand.

J. H. HILAND, called as a witness, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hiland, what is your official position?

Mr. HILAND: Third Vice President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What branch of the railway business is under your jurisdiction?

Mr. HILAND: The traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in the traffic business?

Mr. HILLAND: Well, all of my railroad experience has been in that line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years?

Mr. HILAND: Thirty-eight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And during what part of that 38 years have you been engaged in the west?

Mr. HILAND: All of it.

469 Mr. SEVERANCE: With what different railroad companies?

Mr. HILAND: The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul; the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is part of the Northwestern——

Mr. HILAND: And the affiliated lines which constituted the Missouri River Passenger Association in 1884 and 1885.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, during the last 20 or 25 years, you have been very familiar, have you not with the movement of traffic and the conditions surrounding the movement of traffic practically all over the United States and in a general way and particularly so as to points in the United States west of Chicago.

Mr. HILAND: Well, my experience has been entirely in the handling of traffic originating and destined to points served by the railroads I have mentioned.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That included traffic from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also from the Orient to the Atlantic and Middle States and from the Pacific to the Middle States?

Mr. HILAND: I would not want to say that I know very much about Oriental traffic. Therefore, I would rather exclude that entirely from my answer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But Pacific Coast traffic you have had a great deal to do with?

Mr. HILAND: I have had more or less to do with it as a connecting link in the lines that formed the Trans-Continental Association.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Hiland, prior to 1901, will you state whether the Southern Pacific Sunset Route was competitive for Pacific Coast business with the Union Pacific line?

Mr. HILAND: Prior to 1901?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir.

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did that include business from the Atlantic Seaboard?

470 Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And from the Middle States, the Mississippi Valley?

Mr. HILAND: Well, as to the Middle States, I should say that it does not come north of the Ohio River to any very great extent—a little, perhaps, but not to any great extent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, there is traffic over the Sunset by rail connection to Texas points?

Mr. HILAND: That is what I mean.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Chicago freight moves that way, does it not?

Mr. HILAND: Oh, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Chicago and common points?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Hiland, do you know anything about the movement of the wool business of California and Oregon to Boston—I believe Boston is the great wool market of the country?

Mr. HILAND: Boston and Philadelphia.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. How does that business move?

Mr. HILAND: Well, that business moves in both direction-, that is, through both gateways, what we call the Gulf gateway and the Missouri River and Atlantic Seaboard gateway across the Mississippi River and Missouri River through Kansas City and Omaha, and some of the wool in the northern part of the Pacific Coast through the northern gateway. It moves through all channels, depending very largely where the wool originates in that district.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Take the wool of Oregon particularly. Oregon is a large wool growing State, is it not?

Mr. HILAND: I understand it is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Wool comes from there over the Southern Pacific by the Gulf and also comes over the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Union Pacific, does it not—both ways?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you say you do not know much
471 about Oriental business. You have had to do, however, with Asiatic business, have you not? You have received and handled it over your lines?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Coming both through Portland and San Francisco?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now is there competition from Cincinnati, or is the business originating in Cincinnati and Trunk Line Territory competitive as between the Union Pacific route to the Coast and the Southern Pacific route by way of New Orleans and Galveston?

Mr. HILAND: It is particularly competitive in so-called Trunk Line Territory; to a lesser extent as you go west.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Hiland, will you state whether or not you have found since 1901, as an officer of the Milwaukee & St. Paul Road, any more difficulty in getting traffic from Missouri River points, such as Omaha, than you experienced prior to that time—through business from the Coast?

Mr. HILAND: Well, you mean—I do not know that I quite catch your question there. You ask me if I experience more difficulty in getting business to and from Omaha.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh no, coast business coming by way of Omaha, coming off the Union Pacific, if you find any more difficulty getting that business to move over the line of the Milwaukee & St. Paul now than you did formerly?

Mr. HILAND: I should say, yes, a little more difficulty.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what do you attribute that difficulty, Mr. Hiland?

Mr. HILAND: Well, from my standpoint it may be attributed to two or three causes; the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway are projecting their line into that territory and that influence possibly, may be directed, or through connections and affiliations of lines that will be competitive with the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad west of the Missouri River and lines that have been within com-472 paratively recent years connected in the other direction, including lines which are and have been established for many years?

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the recent affiliations of certain lines?

Mr. HILAND: It may be so. The competitive conditions are more in the lines of the least resistance, so that the least resistance now takes the business; and our line being against the greatest resistance, perhaps, than heretofore, naturally feels the effect of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I see. So you do not consider the Milwaukee & St. Paul the line of least resistance between Omaha and Chicago, since the recent affiliations of different lines that have been brought out in the testimony?

Mr. HILAND: Well, that of course is a matter of judgment and is more or less of a personal opinion, and that is my opinion.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is based on information that has come to you in your position as the head of the traffic department of the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Hiland, take up this matter of competition. What are the elements, to your mind, which make up competition—I mean, applied to railroading?

Mr. HILAND: Well, that is a pretty broad question to answer, but I should say that the elements of competition are governed by at least three influences.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, what are they?

Mr. HILAND: First, and the important one is the rate question. Second, is the facilities, character of service and the manner of conducting, soliciting and serving the public.

Com'r CLEMENTS: What did you mention as the first?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Rates; second, facilities; and third, personal solicitation and serving the public. Now, Mr. Hiland, having in view your definition of the elements that make up competition, do you think that those three elements, that is competition in rates 473 and facilities and in solicitation for business—serving the public—would be as strong if all the railroads were controlled by one man or one company instead of being independent of each other?

Mr. HILAND: That depends on whether they were separate and distinct managements in the operation of the property and granting that they are separate and distinct managements, the competition then would, to my mind, resolve itself into one of personal rivalry and not in the nature of monetary considerations, and possibly it might also be said that the character of the service might be lessened and modified, and that while there might be competition, it would be governed entirely by the selfish motives of individual ownership, and that would, to a great extent limit competition or eliminate competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Hiland, would you say that competition, as railroad business is transacted, could continue to be active if instead of separate commercial general agents, soliciting business at large centers, those agencies were consolidated by different lines and the business put in the hands of one man?

Mr. HILAND: That would remove competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You may cross examine.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Hiland, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, that is, your road has a line from Chicago to Omaha and what other points?

Mr. HILAND: Kansas City, Chamberlain, Evarts, the Twin Cities and Duluth.

Mr. MILBURN: And its, what I may call immediate parallel lines or competing lines in its system, in the territory of its system, not regarding it now as a link in longer lines, are what?

Mr. HILAND: What is that?

Mr. MILBURN: Are what companies? Its immediate rivals in the territory of its own system?

Mr. HILAND: I will commence on the north: The Wisconsin Central; the Chicago & Northwestern; the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific; the Chicago Great Western; the Illinois Central; the Atchison, Topeka & Santa 474 Fe; the Chicago & Alton; the Iowa Central; and the Minneapolis & St. Louis. I guess I have got them all. I do not know.

Mr. MILBURN: Now, coming to the line between Chicago and Omaha, what are the immediate rivals of that line?

Mr. HILAND: I should have to name as rivals of that line all of the lines except the Wisconsin Central.

Mr. MILBURN: Then, all of those lines are—or each one of those lines rather, is a link in trans-continental service which passes through Omaha and Chicago?

Mr. HILAND: Not all of them. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe runs through to destination. The others are links. Some of them are longer links and some of them are shorter.

Mr. MILBURN: But they are links in a trans-continental line which passes through Omaha and Chicago?

Mr. HILAND: Omaha, Chicago and St. Louis.

Mr. MILBURN: I was referring now particularly to Omaha and Chicago, and, say, Kansas City and Chicago.

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And those are the lines which are the rivals for all, which I would call trans-continental Union Pacific business at Omaha?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: It interchanges with those lines?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: With what companies, do you know, that it has through car arrangements between Omaha and Chicago?

Mr. HILAND: The Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway through Omaha as to passenger traffic.

Mr. MILBURN: And freight?

Mr. HILAND: Well, there is an interchange, so far as I know with all of them.

Mr. MILBURN: With all?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: With what lines do you interchange
475 your trans-continental California traffic—trans-continental traffic?

Mr. HILAND: We exchange our trans-continental traffic with any line that we can get to handle it for us. In other words, our business is sent over the lines of the least resistance.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, which are those lines? Now, as a matter of experience, I am talking—taking the volume of your traffic from year to year which lines would the bulk of it go over, or which lines does the bulk of it go over?

Mr. HILAND: Well, if you ask which line the bulk of it goes over I should say that it goes by the Union Pacific Railroad, but if you ask in the general, as I understood you, in taking the whole year's business it is fluctuating. It may, as I say, go very largely at times over what we would consider a weak line for California traffic and that weak line might possibly be a strong line at times caused by the influences I have described as competitive.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, the bulk of your business, taking it by lines, trans-continental business is over the Union Pacific?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: You spoke of the elements of great resistance and least resistance in connection with changes that you have noticed since 1901; that your line had been the line of great resistance which had affected conditions as compared with some other lines of least resistance. Will you be a little more particular about that?

Mr. HILAND: Well, did I answer exactly in that way?

Mr. MILBURN: Well, I dare say not.

Mr. HILAND: I would like to have the reporter repeat just what I did say.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, perhaps we can avoid the time.

Mr. HILAND: All right.

Mr. MILBURN: The time of searching the notes. You were asked by Mr. Severance if you had noted changes in the volume of 476 your trans-continental business since 1901.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is not quite what I asked. I asked whether he discovered any change in the difficulty of getting business.

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, that is right—since 1901, and you said you had, and the reason for it was that traffic took the line, or business took the line of least resistance, and yours had been the line of great resistance.

Mr. HILAND: Well, if I conveyed any impression of that kind, I probably conveyed an exaggerated one in your mind. Now, the lines of least resistance that I had in mind when I answered that have been constituted by reason of the elimination of secret and preferential rates since the so-called injunction of—I think that was in 1902, and the influences that have governed since that period, especially among trunk lines that have adhered more closely to what we call good, honest business methods; that the lines of least resistance are the lines that have been not as particular perhaps, in their methods of conducting the business, and that naturally in the creating of a route to be selected by the shipper, the shipper takes the line that is the most desirable from every point of view. I do not know whether I have made that quite clear to you or not.

Mr. MILBURN: The lines that you referred to as affected by the injunction in 1902, which lines were those?

Mr. HILAND: I do not recall all of them. I know the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad was one.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, now, perhaps I can concentrate what I want to get at in a single question, Mr. Hiland, and that is this: Was the ownership of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific one of the elements you had in your mind in your statement of the reasons for your greater difficulty in getting trans-continental traffic at Omaha since 1901?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: How?

Mr. HILAND: By reason of self interest, as I view it, and 477 the fact that it is more profitable I assume, in getting the long haul of the business, the greater revenue through the southern route on certain classes of traffic. If you will recall the questions that were asked of me, you will find that a certain particular commodity was alluded to and that particular commodity I had in my mind when I answered the question and when I answered yours now.

Mr. MILBURN: Well, then, as I understand you, it is the fact of the Southern Pacific Route and its greater dominance that has created a difficulty at Omaha?

Mr. HILAND: I will not put it that way. It is the fact that business moves in that direction. Now, what dominates that I do not know.

Mr. MILBURN: It moves in the direction of the Southern Pacific route?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: You do not know what it is that dominates that?

Mr. HILAND: I do not know of my own knowledge what dominates it.

Mr. MILBURN: You, then, could bring in the other part of your answer that in your opinion it is the ownership by the Union Pacific that may be one of the causes of that condition.

Mr. HILAND: I only judge that and in framing that answer I judge by myself if I owned that property what I would do with it. I would make it earn the limit.

Mr. MILBURN: But it might make a difference if you owned 40 per cent. of that property and owned the whole of your other property, how far you would discriminate against the property of which you owned the whole, would it not?

Mr. HILAND: Not necessarily; if the 40 per cent. yielded to me more than the other, then the 40 per cent. would control.

Mr. MILBURN: On that assumption?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That is pretty obvious.

478 Mr. SEVERANCE: You might increase that 40 per cent. a little, might you not?

Mr. MILBURN: How much is it?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Close to 50 per cent.

Mr. MILBURN (addressing Mr. Lovett): How much is it.

Mr. LOVETT: About 45.

Mr. MILBURN: Mr. Hiland, do you draw any distinction between the power of a link in a trans-continental line over rate- and the power of that same company in control of its own line?

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that question?

(The question was repeated by the stenographer.)

Mr. HILAND: I will answer that question the way it appeals to me. I may not get your meaning, and therefore I want the answer to conform to the way I understand it. The C. M. & St. P. Railway, is a link in the formation of the trans-continental line and does business, interchanges. That link has nothing whatever to say about the rates in either direction. It, however, does, as a portion of the link, solicit business for the through line in order to increase the movement over the particular link that it forms in the line to and from trans-continental territory.

Mr. MILBURN: You were referring to competitive trans-continental business between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific prior to 1901; that was competition between a trans-continental line made up of the various links of railway extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, for instance, and taking one in the case of the Union Pacific, it would be a trunk line, an Atlantic Seaboard Trunk Line, and your road or some other road to Omaha, and the Union Pacific from Omaha to Ogden, and from Ogden the Southern Pacific to San Francisco. So, the Southern Pacific would be a link in that line, would it not?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: And the other route would be the Southern Pacific by steamer from New York to New Orleans or Galveston and thence by the Sunset Route to San Francisco.

479 Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: So that the Southern Pacific was the whole of one line and a link in the other?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hiland, you stated in answer to one question of counsel that the Milwaukee & St. Paul had felt the result of this amalgamation by reason of the diversion of shipments to the Southern Pacific. Now, I do not know whether you discovered anything of the kind, but I will ask you whether in your opinion the large stock interest of the Union Pacific in the Illinois Central has had any effect on the business of the roads this side of Omaha?

Mr. HILAND: I have not any opinion on that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have no opinion on that subject?

Mr. HILAND: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is a very recent acquisition?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hiland, you say the Milwaukee & St. Paul has nothing to say about the rates to the Coast on trans-continental business. That is because the rates are made by the so-called Pacific lines, is it not, and you take your division?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir; made by what is known as the trans-continental lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Union Pacific is one of those lines?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And there are a number of different lines this side of Omaha that are competing for the haul this side of Omaha and you are one of them?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you have to take whatever division is given you?

Mr. HILAND: Well, we take the customary divisions. They are the same by all lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Certainly, but the rates are made by the trans-continental line, the Union Pacific?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

480 Mr. SEVERANCE: All trans-continental business that goes over the Union Pacific does not go by the Central Pacific to San Francisco, does it? There is also business going over the Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company—that is in the northern part? Some moves over the Short Line and allied lines and not over the Central Pacific at all?

Mr. HILAND: I do not understand that it does. I do not know just exactly where the connection is made. My understanding is that the Oregon Short Line connects with the Union Pacific Railroad and the Central Pacific is in no way an intervening link. That is my understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is right. Do you send business to the Pacific Coast by way of Kansas City and thence through the connections of the Sunset Route?

Mr. HILAND: Very little.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Some?

Mr. HILAND: Some.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you also send it to Kansas City and to the Coast over the Santa Fe?

Mr. HILAND: Some. Very little, however, through that route and it is business that originates in a territory where the Kansas City route is the most natural route for it to take.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you do not force it either way?

Mr. HILAND: No, sir. No, if we were going to take the business at all, we would take it to the northern gateway.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Take it to St. Paul and Minneapolis?

Mr. HILAND: No, we would take it to Omaha and through that way to California trans-continental business, because the service and facilities and all that sort of thing would afford the best service for other business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But there have been times in the past when rates have been changed by these different trans-continental lines in the effort to get business, and that has diverted business from its natural orderly movement into other lines, has it not?

481 Mr. HILAND: That always has occurred when there has been an opportunity for the fluctuation of rates not covered by a tariff. That is varying.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. MILBURN: The trans-continental rates are all the same, are they not, Mr. Hiland, on all lines?

Mr. HILAND: As I understand.

Mr. MILBURN: And cannot be changed by any one without complying with the law and giving notice to all the others?

Mr. HILAND: That is right.

Mr. MILBURN: Just one question, and I am through. You said about the rate making—now, assume that the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific are independent of each other; that is, there is no ownership of one by the other, and as to trans-continental San Francisco business: You have a line made up of the Southern Pacific to Ogden, the Union Pacific from Ogden to Omaha, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul from Omaha to Chicago, the Lake Shore from Chicago to Buffalo and the New York Central from Buffalo to New York. Now, the Union Pacific would not as a link be the rate making power of that line, would it, as the link from Ogden to Omaha?

Mr. HILAND: Not solely.

Mr. MILBURN: Why would it be any more than any other—more than your line from Omaha to Chicago?

Mr. HILAND: I think my answer says "not solely the rate making power."

Mr. MILBURN: The rate making power would be all of those elements, would it not?

Mr. HILAND: No, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: Who would? Would the New York Central cut any figure?

Mr. HILAND: I said the so-called trans-continental lines, and when I said the trans-continental lines, it is well known that the lines west of the Mississippi River, from St. Paul west on the one hand and from the Missouri River, Kansas City, south on the other absolutely makes the rates in both directions.

Mr. MILBURN: Then, in that case it would be the Southern 482 Pacific and Union Pacific that would make the rate?

Mr. HILAND: Well, I presume all of the lines in the territory described would all have a voice in the making of the rates.

Mr. MILBURN: Yes, all the lines?

Mr. HILAND: Yes, sir.

Mr. MILBURN: But I am talking now—eliminate for a moment all the other lines and say they were making a rate over the line, a trans-continental rate I have described. You say that that rate would be made by the lines west of the Missouri River over that line, and that rate would be made by the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, as the lines west of the Missouri River?

Mr. HILAND: Well, to answer that question would be entirely hypothetical, because a condition of that kind does not exist and cannot exist by reason of the fact that the lines are there and therefor you cannot suppose something that does not exist and cannot exist.

Mr. MILBURN: It did exist prior to 1901, did it not? The Southern Pacific was independent of the Union Pacific?

Mr. HILAND: And the rates were made then substantially the same as they are now.

Mr. MILBURN: The rates were the same.

Mr. HILAND: Were made the same.

Mr MILBURN: And were the same? They were made by the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, were they not?

Mr. HILAND: Not entirely, no.

Mr. MILBURN: That is all.

The witness was excused.

JULIUS KRUTTSCHNITT, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Kruttschnitt, prior to 1901, what position did you hold with the Southern Pacific Railway?

483 Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I was—prior to 1901 I was Vice-President in charge of operation.

Mr. KELLOGG: Vice-President in charge of operation. Where were your headquarters?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: From 1895 to 1901 they were in San Francisco.

Mr. KELLOGG: That was the headquarters of the Southern Pacific system?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: That system is substantially as Mr. Stubbs described it yesterday?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: I do not care to go over that again. When did you become an official of the Union Pacific Company—about when?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I think it was the first of April, 1904

Mr. KELLOGG: The first of April, 1904. Since that time you have occupied what position with the Union Pacific Railroad?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Director of Maintenance and Operation.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are the director of maintenance and operation of what lines?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Of the Southern Pacific Lines and of the Union Pacific System, taking in the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Oregon Short Line.

Mr. KELLOGG: Your headquarters are where?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: In Chicago.

Mr. KELLOGG: Your jurisdiction extends over those lines in what respect?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I have charge, as the title would indicate, of operating matters and maintenance of the property.

Mr. KELLOGG: Maintenance of the property and operation of the property, and Mr. Stubbs has charge of the traffic?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, have you an assistant director of operation and maintenance?

484 Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I have.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who is he?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Mr. Scott.

Mr. KELLOGG: His jurisdiction is co-extensive with that of yours, under your directions?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: It is.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, describe to the Commission the operating officials who report to you upon various systems and who work under your direction generally?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Well, briefly they are the general managers of the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do the steam engineers of those lines report directly to you or to the general managers of the local lines?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: To the general managers of the different systems.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, who is the general manager of the Union Pacific?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Mr. Mohler.

Mr. KELLOGG: His jurisdiction extends from what place to what place?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: From Omaha and Kansas City to Denver and Green River.

Mr. KELLOGG: Green River is a station on the Union Pacific main line to Ogden, is it?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And about how far east of Ogden?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: About 176 to 180 miles or thereabouts.

Mr. KELLOGG: The balance of the Union Pacific's railroad from Green River to Ogden is under the charge of what official?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Mr. Bancroft.

Mr. KELLOGG: His position is what?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: He is Vice-President and General Manager of the Oregon Short Line and he is General Manager of that part of the Union Pacific from Green River to Ogden and of the Southern Pacific from Ogden to Sparks, Nevada.

485 Mr. KELLOGG: Sparks, Nevada, is how far west of Ogden?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: 555 or 560 miles.

Mr. KELLOGG: He reports to you, does he not, Mr. Bancroft?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: He does.

Mr. KELLOGG: He has charge of all the Short Line Railroad extending to Butte and west as far as Huntington?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Oregon Railway & Navigation Line, which is controlled by the Union Pacific, extends from Huntington to Portland and generally from Portland up the river to Spokane, does it not?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The Southern Pacific line commences at Portland and runs south to San Francisco, east from Ogden and from San Francisco generally—I am speaking of those controlled by the Southern Pacific—generally through California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas and Louisiana? I am speaking of their control simply. That is correct, is it not?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, that is correct.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, who has charge of the maintenance of way and operation in Oregon of the Short Line and of the Southern Pacific line—in that State?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Mr. O'Brien, who is Vice-President and General Manager of the O. R. & N.

Com'r LANE: I cannot hear you.

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I say, Mr. O'Brien, who is Vice President and General Manager of the O. R. & N.

Mr. KELLOGG: What is his first name?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: J. P.

Mr. KELLOGG: He has charge of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and of the Southern Pacific Lines in Oregon.

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir; as far south as Ashland.

Mr. KELLOGG: How far is that from the State line of Oregon, if you recollect?

486 Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: 430 miles—Oh, from the State line of Oregon?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Oh, about 30 miles.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is a division, I suppose?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: A division point.

Com'r LANE: North of the State Line; about 30 miles north of the State line?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And about how far is it to Portland?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: 430 miles.

Mr. KELLOGG: That branch of the line is the Southern Pacific's Line; that part of the line from Portland south?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, who has charge of the next division—oh, yes, does Mr. O'Brien report to you?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: He does.

Mr. KELLOGG: What is his title?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Vice-President and General Manager, and General Manager of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon.

Mr. KELLOGG: He is Vice-President and General Manager of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, and General Manager of the Southern Pacific lines?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, south of that, who is the next man in the division?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: E. E. Calvin.

Mr. KELLOGG: Where is his headquarters?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: San Francisco. He is Vice-President and General Manager of the Pacific System, of the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. KELLOGG: How far does his territory extend?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: From Ashland on the north to El Paso on the south and east, and to Sparks, Nevada, on the west.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then the lines in Texas, who has charge of those lines?

487 Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: They are in charge of their respective presidents.

Mr. KELLOGG: Each line having—Is the President of each line the general manager?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: He is not.

Mr. KELLOGG: No. Mr. Harriman is the president of some of them, is he not?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Mr. Harriman is president of the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio, and of the Texas & New Orleans.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has charge of the maintenance of way and operation of those lines, reporting to you?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: No one.

Mr. KELLOGG: What is your jurisdiction over the lines in Texas?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I have none.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you consult with them?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I do not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Under your direction, does the purchasing agent purchase the equipment for them?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: He does not.

Mr. KELLOGG: In Louisiana, who has charge of the lines?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: You mean immediately in charge?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Mr. Fay, who is the general manager, and he has a general superintendent.

Mr. KELLOGG: He reports to you?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, does Mr. Thorne who is the purchasing agent of the lines of the Pacific system—he buys engines and materials in large quantities, and cars, etc., for the entire system, does he not?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: He buys cars and engines for all of the systems, over which I have jurisdiction, and I think for the others.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, who makes out—who authorizes the requisition for those engines, for instance, that you are going to buy during this present year?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: The requisition of all the lines, except 488 the Texas lines, are made on me; I approve them and send them with a favorable recommendation to the President, who has the purchases made.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, in purchasing engines for the Texas lines, have any been ordered for this year?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I think so.

Mr. KELLOGG: You haven't heard of it, directly or indirectly, officially?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Only in this way, Mr. Lovett is president of some of the lines and Mr. Harriman of some of the others, and they frequently correspond with me, asking my opinion about those matters.

Mr. KELLOGG: And in the purchase of engines and equipment for those lines, Mr. Harriman and Mr. Lovett, who are respectively the presidents of those lines, consult with you?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And are these engines bought separately from the engines of all the systems, or are they all ordered together by Mr. Thorne?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: That I don't know. Mr. Thorne, I expect, would have to tell that. I don't know how he orders them.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, now, the engines for those lines come out of the common stock ordered for the system, don't they?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: In other words, if you are placing an order for the Pacific System for fifty engines, you place an order for 46 of them, and Mr. Harriman for two for a certain line, and Mr. Lovett for two more for another line, do they not; is that the way you do it?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: You divide it up?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: What is the object of that?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I don't know.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't know?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: You had better ask Mr. Lovett or Mr. Harriman; I don't know.

Mr. MILBURN: You can tell him.

489 Mr. KELLOGG: Now, do you keep track—in the estimating and making of provision for money to improve the lines in Texas, does Mr. Harriman and Mr. Lovett consult you, or do they consult you?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: They take your opinion as to how much money should be expended on the Texas lines and where it should be expended?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I expect you would have to ask them about it. I don't know whether they do or not.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, they ask your opinion, then?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Perhaps that is more proper. Whether Mr. Harriman takes it or not, you don't know?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: No, sir.

Mr MILBURN: I don't want Judge Lovett left out of that Presidential business, you know.

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, no; I am not going to leave the Judge out.

Mr. MILBURN: I have a president here, you know.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, in making up your estimates for the improvements and betterments of various lines, you do this, do you not?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: No. The general managers do it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I mean they are approved by you?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir; they are submitted to me, with the exceptions to which I have called attention.

Mr. KELLOGG: With the exceptions of the Texas lines, these estimates for improvements and betterments of the lines during the year are made up by the general managers first, and then they are submitted and approved by you, with the exception of the Texas Line?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Or disapproved; approved or disapproved?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Passed on by me.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, then, as to the Texas lines those are 490 made up by the respective general managers of those lines in Texas.

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And they are considered by the Presidents of those lines?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: And those presidents confer with you as to the advisability of making those improvements and betterments on those lines?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: The estimates for the improvements of those lines are submitted to you then, are they not?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I think so. I don't know whether they submit all.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, in the selection of the division superintendents, and important officials in the immediate operation of Texas lines, are you consulted by Mr. Harriman and by Mr. Lovett?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I think so.

Mr. LOVELL: And I suppose you give your advice?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: So that practically you are the director of maintenance and operation of all of the Pacific System that you have described, except the lines controlled by the Southern Pacific in Texas, and advisory as to those?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Well, I have no official connection with them.

Mr. KELLOGG: You are not a regularly appointed official?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I am not a regularly appointed official.

Mr. KELLOGG: Do you exercise an advisory position over them?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: As I have already explained.

Mr. KELLOGG: In the appointment of the various officials under the general manager, excluding the Texas lines, what authority do you exercise?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: For all the lines, excluding the Texas lines?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

491 Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Supervisory.

Mr. KELLOGG: If a general superintendent is to be appointed, you approve it or disapprove it?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes. The general manager appoints him, subject to approval.

Mr. KELLOGG: The appointment is not announced until his approval by you, is it?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And is that the case of any official below the division superintendent?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: No. I hardly think they would submit anyone below the grade of division superintendent.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then, the general superintendents and the division superintendents are submitted and approved by you before they are announced?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, how often do the general managers make reports to you?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: As far as the general report goes each general manager writes what we call a monthly letter, stating about what has been done on the line under his charge during the month; the general condition of the property; it is a letter of general information. In addition to that there is of course correspondence which would be initiated by the general manager at such times as might seem to him proper.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, under Mr. Bancroft in Utah there is a general superintendent or a division superintendent—what is it?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Bancroft has a general superintendent and an assistant general superintendent.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, the general superintendent under Mr. Bancroft has jurisdiction over the same lines of the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, and the Short line that Mr. Bancroft has?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And subject to his orders?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And reports exclusively to Mr. Bancroft?

492 Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir. So does the assistant.

Mr. KELLOGG: So does the assistant?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: All the division superintendents on those lines report exclusively to Mr. Bancroft, do they?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: No. To the general superintendent.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, then, to the general superintendent, then, and that is the case over all the lines excluding the Texas line?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir, with a few modifications. The Southern Pacific has two general superintendents; but that arrangement is substantially the same on all the lines.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you anything to do with the steamship lines, Mr. Kruttschnitt?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: With the Morgan Steamship Lines only.

Mr. KELLOGG: You have general charge of the maintenance and operation of the Morgan Line?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: From New York to New Orleans and Galveston?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And to Havana, it runs?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: To Havana.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has charge of the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Mr. Schwerin.

Mr. KELLOGG: Does he report to you?

Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: He does not.
Mr. KELLOGG: He is in San Francisco?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: He has also charge of the Portland and San Francisco line?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: No.
Mr. KELLOGG: Who has charge of that?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: You mean the rail line?
Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, no; the steamship line.
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Oh, the Portland——
493 Mr. KELLOGG: The boats that run between Portland——
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Mr. Schwerin has also.
Mr. KELLOGG: And he has also charge of the Pacific Mail Lines?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: And the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Lines?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I don't know whether he runs that or not; whether he controls that or not.
Mr. KELLOGG: These men do not report to you?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: They do not.
Mr. KELLOGG: To whom do they report?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Well, Mr. Schwerin reports to Mr. Harriman.
Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Harriman direct?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes.
Mr. KELLOGG: Now, who originated this plan of dividing up the Pacific Systems into divisions under a director of maintenance and operation, irrespective of the mileage owned by each line?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I don't know who the originator was.
Mr. KELLOGG: Wasn't it Mr. Harriman?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I suppose so; I don't know.
Mr. KELLOGG: So far as you know, it was?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: So far as I know.
Mr. KELLOGG: You didn't do it?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: No, sir.
Mr. KELLOGG: You received your directions from Mr. Harriman?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: I received my appointment and directions from him.
Mr. KELLOGG: Did he map out this plan of having the Pacific System divided up into divisions and under the control of operating officials, irrespective of the mileage owned by each line?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: If you mean whether he prescribed the mileage under each general manager, yes. Now, as to the limits of the divisions and the jurisdiction of the officials under them, no.
494 Mr. KELLOGG: You did that.
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: Yes, sir; I did that.
Mr. KELLOGG: Did you talk that over with Mr. Harriman?
Mr. KRUTTSCHNITT: In a very general way only.
Mr. KELLOGG: That is all.
Mr. MILBURN: No questions.
(Witness excused.)

E. O. McCORMICK, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. McCormick, what is your position with the Pacific System?

Mr. McCORMICK: Assistant Traffic Director.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you charge particularly of passenger business?

Mr. McCORMICK: Both passenger and freight.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well——

Mr. McCORMICK: Under Mr. Stubbs.

Mr. LOVETT: Speak a little louder, please.

Mr. McCORMICK: Both passenger and freight, under Mr. Stubbs.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, I think Mr. Stubbs stated that you were more familiar with the passenger business than the other assistant directors.

Mr. McCORMICK: Because I had longer association with it.

Mr. KELLOGG: What was your position previous to being assistant traffic director of the Pacific System?

Mr. McCORMICK: Passenger Traffic Manager of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: With headquarters where?

Mr. McCORMICK: San Francisco.

Mr. KELLOGG: How long?

Mr. McCORMICK: From May, 1899, until April, 1904.

Mr. KELLOGG: You had exclusive charge of all the passenger business of the entire Pacific System, the Southern Pacific System, I mean, during that time?

Mr. McCORMICK: Well, mainly the Pacific System, but what we called the Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: That included the lines controlled by the 495 Southern Pacific Railway Company, or the Southern Pacific Company, I should say?

Mr. McCORMICK: Yes, for through business to New Orleans and locally on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. KELLOGG: Did you also have charge of the passenger business of the steamship line?

Mr. McCORMICK: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: You didn't?

Mr. McCORMICK: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, so far as you know there were no common passenger officials prior to 1901, between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific? I don't mean a mere ticket agent; I mean passenger officials?

Mr. McCORMICK: You mean above the rank, say, of general passenger agent?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes; passenger agent or assistant general passenger agent, or anything of that kind.

Mr. McCORMICK: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: When were you appointed assistant traffic director of the Pacific Line?

Mr. McCORMICK: In April, 1904.

Mr. KELLOGG: April, 1904?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: Since that time your office, either you or Mr. Stubbs, have had charge of the passenger business on all the lines?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Supervising, yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, do the local passenger agents of the various divisions report to your office—to Mr. Stubbs, I mean?

Mr. MCCORMICK: The general passenger agents?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. MCCORMICK: Periodically.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Lomax, of the Union Pacific, has charge of the passenger business of the Union Pacific?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: What part of the Union Pacific?

Mr. MCCORMICK: All of it.

Mr. KELLOGG: As far west as Green River?

Mr. MCCORMICK: On through business, yes; as far as Ogden.

496 Mr. KELLOGG: Do you mean——

Mr. MCCORMICK: Locally, I would say that he handled the business to Green River.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, on through business, of course, he would arrange for through business running clear through to the Coast, wouldn't he?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Well, no, he would arrange up to Ogden on through business, and then Mr. Fee from there on.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who reports to your office—Mr. Lomax?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has charge of the passenger business locally on the lines covered by Mr. Bancroft's jurisdiction, as described by Mr. Kruttschnitt?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Mr. Burleigh.

Mr. KELLOGG: With headquarters at Salt Lake?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Salt Lake.

Mr. KELLOGG: He has charge of the lines from Ogden to Sparks, on the Union Pacific, and been Green River and Ogden and of the Short Line?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: I believe your entire Short line?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes.

Mr. KELLOGG: He reports to your office?

Mr. MCCORMICK: ——.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has charge of the passenger business in the territory covered by the general manager in Oregon?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Mr. McMurray.

Mr. KELLOGG: He reports to your office?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: He has charge of the Southern Pacific in Oregon, north of Ashland, and of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Lines?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has charge of the passenger business on the Southern Pacific Lines in California?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Mr. Fee.

Mr. KELLOGG: How far does his jurisdiction extend?

Mr. MCCORMICK: To El Paso, Texas, on the south, and 497 to Ashland, and to Sparks, as described, for the transportation department and on the through business to Ogden?

Mr. KELLOGG: He reports to your office?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has charge of the Louisiana lines?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Mr. Batturs, with headquarters at New Orleans.

Mr. KELLOGG: What is his title?

Mr. MCCORMICK: General passenger agent.

Mr. KELLOGG: Of the lines in Louisiana?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And he reports to your office?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, in a way.

Mr. KELLOGG: And does he cover the Morgan Line also, the Morgan Line of steamships?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir, as an assistant to Mr. Nutting, in New York.

Mr. KELLOGG: What advisory capacity does your office occupy in relation to the Texas Lines?

Mr. MCCORMICK: None whatever, except on requests.

Mr. KELLOGG: On request?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir. At times I have been asked to represent them, possibly, at a meeting, when it was not convenient for them to come here, but we have no direct control and no advisory capacity unsolicited.

Mr. KELLOGG: But your office has charge of through business to and from New Orleans, through Texas, does it not?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir. By consent of Mr. Dunlap, who is the chief traffic official of the Texas Lines. That is, if a through rate were made he signifies his assent to be a participant in that through rate.

Mr. KELLOGG: Is Mr. Dunlap the traffic director of all the Texas Lines?

Mr. MCCORMICK: I don't think he is. I could not be positive without looking at the guide. He is of the G. H. & S. A.

498 Mr. KELLOGG: How many passenger agents have you got; general passenger agents in Texas?

Mr. MCCORMICK: We have one, Mr. Anderson, under Mr. Dunlap, and then—I am not sure just where Mr. Anderson's jurisdiction extends as to the other Texas Lines. They are divided up there and I haven't had much to do with them.

Mr. KELLOGG: Does Mr. Anderson consult your office?

Mr. MCCORMICK: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Never?

Mr. MCCORMICK: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: Mr. Dunlap does it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Mr. Dunlap would probably do it over his name, if there was a necessity.

Mr. KELLOGG: There has been at times a necessity?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Oh, yes. Just recently, a day or two ago.

Mr. KELLOGG: You represented them at a meeting?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir; at his request.

Mr. KELLOGG: You often do that?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Very seldom; very rarely.

Mr. KELLOGG: And you route business from Texas both ways?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir; on the through line. Operate a through train service that way.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, Mr. McCormick, the rates for passenger service—take what is known as the Northern tourists business, it is a large business, isn't it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Generally speaking, the travel is toward California in the early winter, and back in the spring?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: The heaviest travel?

Mr. MCCORMICK: The heaviest.

Mr. KELLOGG: But there is more or less winter tourist business all winter long, both ways?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir; and more or less tourist business the year around, so that it compels the Southern Pacific, for instance, to be a participant in the all-year round-trip rate which is some-499 thing unusual in any other territory; which rate is open alike to every road in the country.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, all the rates for passenger business, for this business, for all the territory east of the Missouri River, to California and return by all the lines are the same, are they not practically?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Well, yes. Some routes are slightly higher than others, but on account of the situation of the two rate-making points in California the Southern Pacific has what you might call a free rate for 482 miles between Los Angeles and San Francisco. It gets nothing for a portion of its route. It must make the same rate to San Francisco as it makes to Los Angeles; and then the Southern Pacific opens its road to every connection for divers routes; it does not demand that they send it back and forth over one line, but it is open to everybody in that way.

Mr. KELLOGG: And the Union Pacific does the same thing?

Mr. MCCORMACK: The Union Pacific does the same thing. The Santa Fe Company does the same.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that the passenger business from the eastern territory, east of the Missouri River, can go to and from all California points at practically the same rate.

Mr. MCCORMICK: At practically the same rate; and by reason of the consent of the Southern Pacific Road, with practically the same conditions as instanced now by the Milwaukee & St. Paul, and the Northwestern. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul operate through car service with the Southern Pacific via Omaha to Denver and to California, and in addition to that the Milwaukee and St. Paul are permitted to operate through car service by way of Kansas City, turning it over there to the Missouri Pacific Road, and then to the

D. & R. G., and it is taken again by the Southern Pacific at Ogden; and the Northwestern operate a through service. The Rock Island operate a through service by way of El Paso, etc.

500 Mr. KELLOGG: And there is also a through service by the San Pedro?

Mr. MCCORMICK: There is also a through service with the Northwestern and the Union Pacific and the San Pedro.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, the lines extending from Chicago to California, connecting at El Paso; for instance, the Rock Island, they run a through service with the Union Pacific?

Mr. MCCORMICK: It is afforded the same facilities, as well as the Texas and Pacific, which is a part of the Gould System, officered over by Mr. Jeffery. And each line also is afforded through service by way of Ogden to such an extent that the Southern Pacific has not a single train over its road that Mr. Jeffery's line has not through cars on; no train. We even handle them on the overland limited now.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, take another case. The rates on passenger business, winter tourists business, from St. Paul and Minneapolis, through Kansas City, and southwest, connecting with the Southern Pacific to California, are the same as by the Union Pacific, are they not?

Mr. MCCORMICK: I didn't quite catch that. You mean from St. Paul?

Mr. KELLOGG: St. Paul and Minneapolis; and tourists cars are operated from St. Paul and Minneapolis tri-weekly?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir. There are tourist cars from St. Paul and Minnepolis out over the Southern Pacific, and via Kansas City and the Santa Fe, and the other lines to California.

Mr. KELLOGG: At the same rates?

Mr. MCCORMICK: I mean, for instance, the Omaha line had a tourist sleeper from Omaha, and then over the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific.

Mr. KELLOGG: And also by way of Texas?

Mr. MCCORMICK: I am not sure whether we have that now, a through car from St. Paul by way of El Paso, or not, but we have had.

Mr. KELLOGG: You had in the past?

501 Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Two years ago, for instance, the Chicago Great Western operated that way.

Mr. MCCORMICK: They never closed those gateways to any one.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that the entire passenger business of this country practically to the Missouri River, can to a greater or less extent, and does go via the Southern Pacific or the Union Pacific, as the passengers wish to go or come?

Mr. MCCORMICK: The entire passenger traffic in the territory described could at will select any one of the lines, the Southern Pacific the Union Pacific, the Rio Grande and the Santa Fe; and those lines have through service for the same rates.

Com'r LANE: Does that include the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern as well?

Mr. McCORMICK: If a passenger goes out by way of St. Paul and Portland, and over what is called the Shaster route of the Southern Pacific, and back, there is another—there is an arbitrary charge for that 778 miles between Portland and San Francisco, a higher rate than if he went direct.

Com'r CLEMENTS: What does that amount to?

Mr. McCORMICK: That would be a little less than 2 cents a mile for the round-trip; about $15 to the round trip, I think $7.50 for a one way ticket, on account of the excessive haul; a little less than 2 cents a mile.

Mr. Kellogg: Hasn't that been in existence all the time?

Mr. McCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: So that a passenger cannot go by way of the Northern Pacific at the same price?

Mr. McCORMICK: It has not been changed to my knowledge—the passenger rates to the coast have not been materially changed, to my knowledge in 25 years.

Mr. KELLOGG: But the rates via the Union Pacific and the San Pedro lines are the same?

Mr. McCORMICK: Yes.

502 Mr. KELLOGG: And the rates via the Union Pacific and the Navigation Lines to Portland are the same?

Mr. McCORMICK: How is that?

Mr. KELLOGG: And the rates via the Union Pacific and the Navigation Line to Portland are the same?

Mr. McCORMICK: Well, the Union Pacific and the Navigation around over the Union Pacific through to Portland?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes; they are the same as the rates via the Southern Pacific?

Mr. McCORMICK: You mean around that way to San Francisco?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. McCORMICK: No.

Mr. KELLOGG: They are not the same?

Mr. McCORMICK: No. There is a difference in that rate, an arbitrary on account of the Shaster route, by reason of that excess of 778 miles haul.

Mr. KELLOGG: Has that always existed?

Mr. McCORMICK: Yes. It was higher——

Com'r LANE: Did I understand you to say that the passengers rate to California had not changed in 25 years?

Mr. McCORMICK: No. I mean this way, that the method of applying the rates has not changed materially. But they have changed very greatly because since 1901 we have had a fifty dollar round trip rate to the Coast freely, and then since 1901 we have had a remarkably low colonists' rate, as may be evidenced by the increased sale of land and business there; rates as low as $25; and now I believe ordinarily $33 through, the lowest through rates in the world.

Mr. KELLOGG: Prior to 1901 there was at times a very sharp competition by the various Pacific Lines for this business, was there not; and rates at times were reduced very much?

Mr. McCORMICK: Well, prior to 1901 I was connected with the Vanderbilt system, the Big Four Lines, in a strongly competitive territory from here, and we furnished business for the Southern as well as the Northern route via Union Pacific as it does today, 503 and prior to that time on one occasion there was quite a severe rate war that I remember between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific Lines and its connections. Ordinarily the rates to the coast have been fairly firm, with the exception of surrepti-ous cutting, because they are very low; the round-trip to the coast has always, since it was $110, been less than 2 cents a mile that is very low, taking into consideration the service performed.

Mr. KELLOGG: That is on the long haul?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Well, the lowest rates in the world exist in California itself. The Southern Pacific Road didn't get 2 cents a mile for some of it, and rarely got 3 cents a mile; while the rate between Philadelphia and New York is 3 cents and between Chicago and Buffalo is 3 cents a mile.

Mr. KELLOGG: You mean locally in California they do not get 2 cents?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Locally in California; in fact, they don't get 3 cents a mile locally in California to-day on some of their rates.

Mr. KELLOGG: Now, the emigrant business from eastern seaports to California points is quite large at times isn't it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And that is a business which the railroads have in the past years had sharp competition for, isn't it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Well, yes; territorically speaking I would say so, but not in the past number of years to California. There has been no particular competition for that, because when there was competition there were such crimes committed by people, hotel keepers and runners in New York, that an attempt was made to control that business and have it in the hands of the United States Government officials at the Island, and they sent it out over various lines, giving them from the assault and robbery that had been committed so that there has never been very much of a competition on that business.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, there used to be years ago?

504 Mr. MCCORMICK: It is a long time ago.

Mr. KELLOGG: You don't remember, do you, prior to 1901, during those years when the Southern Pacific was making a struggue to open its line as a popular California route, there was a great deal of competition in those rates at that time; don't you remember that?

Mr. MCCORMICK: You mean emigrant?

Mr. KELLOGG: Oh, in all kinds of business?

Mr. MCCORMICK: To the coast?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes; to and from California points.

Mr. MCCORMICK: I don't think I quite catch that; because the Southern Pacific was the old and direct line to the coast.

Mr. KELLOGG: I am talking now about the Sunset route.

Mr. MCCORMICK: Well, I mean via that line. The Southern Pacific has always opened its line to its connections in a most peculiar manner; even when it was the only line to the coast, its divisions were practically on a mileage basis via Ogden, just as they are to-day.

Mr. KELLOGG: I am speaking of the Sunset route, not the Ogden Line.

Mr. MCCORMICK: It was the same with the Sunset route.

Mr. KELLOGG: I know that they opened their line to all eastern lines, in fact invited the eastern lines by the most liberal allowances, didn't they, to use that line?

Mr. MCCORMICK: No. I don't think any one has ever accused them of excessive liberality.

Mr. KELLOGG: I thought you said that it made very liberal mileage divisions.

Mr. MCCORMICK: Not liberal, not excessively liberal.

Mr. KELLOGG: What do you mean by liberal?

Mr. MCCORMICK: What I said was that it was practically on a mileage basis.

Mr. KELLOGG: You said liberal divisions.

Mr. MCCORMICK: I may say that they are liberal divisions, but I never heard that charge specifically, that they were excessively liberal in naming divisions.

505 Mr. MILBURN: This is the first time that I have ever heard the charge of liberality resented.

Mr. KELLOGG: Then they were not liberal; is that it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes; they were fairly liberal, because they were on a mileage basis. If you run up to the connection of the road and you have the use of that road beyond that point on a mileage basis, it is just as good as if you had your own road. You couldn't do it any better; you escape the maintenance of that road, and you gain the benefit of it.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who has the advertising for all these lines, the passenger lines?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Each officer of each line individually.

Mr. KELLOGG: Doesn't Mr. Stubbs have general charge of the advertising?

Mr. MCCORMICK: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Isn't it divided up, any expense?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Oh, is a division made?

Mr. KELLOGG: Yes.

Mr. MCCORMICK: I can give you it definitely. Once a year our lines meet and decide on what they will have to have for the next year in an advertising way, and they ask for an appropriation, and they get it, and they must say at the time what they propose to use it for, and then they are held to a strict use of the money in that way.

Mr. KELLOGG: Who do they ask for this appropriation; that is the point?

Mr. MCCORMICK: The appropriation—the request comes to Mr. Stubbs for approval.

Mr. KELLOGG: And Mr. Stubbs has to approve or disapprove it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: And he makes the division of the expense between the various Pacific Lines?

Mr. MCCORMICK: No, he does not.

Mr. KELLOGG: That has appears.

Mr. MCCORMICK: No, it doesn't appear. Mr. Fee asks
506 for his money and Mr. Lomax asks for his money.

Mr. KELLOGG: You say there is no common expense that is divided by Mr. Stubbs between the lines, do you?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Regarding advertising matter, no sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: None whatever?

Mr. MCCORMICK: No, sir. Not only is that taken into consideration, but our connections also confer regarding the advertising of through trains. For instance, I have a request now from the Milwaukee & St. Paul Road, to whose through service I have just referred, asking if we would participate with them in the expense of this through advertising.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, the requisitions have to go to Mr. Stubbs for approval or disapproval?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Yes, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Have you seen a letter which was put into evidence in New York where Mr. Stubbs divided up certain advertising expenses and proportioned them to each line for the year? You haven't seen that letter?

Mr. MCCORMICK: No, sir.

Mr. KELLOGG: Well, if he did that you would not deny it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: Well, I wouldn't deny anything that Mr. Stubbs did.

Mr. KELLOGG: I didn't think so. That is all.

Mr. MILBURN: It is quite conceivable, isn't it that as these local officials make their requisitions on Mr. Stubbs, that he should submit to the executive committee of these companies in New York for approval the aggregate appropriation, and show in that statement the division that had been made in the manner you have indicated, isn't it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: That is just the way it was done.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Now, in respect to the regular passenger traffic, how do the rates now compare with what they were ten years ago, leaving out the immigrants and the homeseekers and traffic of that kind.

507 Mr. MCCORMICK: They are lower, because recently our lines in Utah, Wyoming, California, Arizona and New Mexico reduced their rates. The facilities were better and the traffic was larger and they were reduced from five cents to four cents locally.

Commissioner HARLAN: What about the reduction of through rates, did that enter into it?

Mr. MCCORMICK: No, it did not figure to any very great extent in the through rates.

Commissioner HARLAN: How do the through rates to-day compare with the through rates ten years ago?

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Say from New York to San Francisco, or the eastern territory.

Mr. MCCORMICK: Well, I think the through rates, say one-way passenger rate, and the round trip tourist rate, which grants to everyone stop overs, ad libitum, during the last fifteen years the rates have been so very greatly reduced by reason of these very many round trip convention rates, that I would say the aggregate rates for the last fifteen years for through business have not been two-thirds as high as they were before.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Leaving out the conventions and the homeseekers and the immigrants, and all those special classes, how about the regular passenger rates for ordinary travel?

Mr. MCCORMICK: I do not think that the through rate from the River to California on the one way ticket has been reduced in that period. I am not sure when the last reduction did take place, but Mr. Lomax can give you that definitely.

Mr. LOVETT:

Q. All those rates that you put in are open to all connections, are they not?

A. Very freely to all connections.

Q. Prior to 1901, which seems to be the date which Mr. Kellogg takes as eventful in this examination, how did the Union Pacific work its California passenger business, over what lines?

A. Over the Southern Pacific.

Q. From Ogden?

A. From Ogden.

508 Q. Has there been any change in that condition since then?

A. None whatever.

Q. Has there been any change in the policy respecting the interchange of business, joint passenger business and joint passenger rates with connecting lines since 1901?

A. None that I know of. They were free and open to all connections in 1901 as they are to-day.

Q. And prior to 1901?

A. And prior to 1901, even when the Southern Pacific was the only line into California.

Q. And this rate war that you referred to as having occurred at one time between the Atchison and the Southern Pacific, on which side was the Union Pacific in that contest?

A. Well, I should say very strongly on the Southern Pacific side.

Q. On the Southern Pacific side?

A. Yes, sir, as to connections, as it would be to-day.

Q. It would be impossible, consistent with its interests, to take sides with the Atchison in any such contest would it not?

A. Yes, sir, it would be physically impossible. It could not do so at all.

Mr. LOVETT: I believe we have no further questions.

(Witness excused.)

J. A. MUNROE, called and sworn as a witness was examined by Mr. Severance and testified as follows:

Q. What is your official position Mr. Munroe?

A. Freight Traffic Manager of the Union Pacific lines east of Green River.

Q. How long have you held that position?
A. I do not recall the exact date, two or three years.
Q. Prior to that what was your position?
A. Freight Traffic Manager of the U. P. R. R.
Q. How far west did your jurisdiction go then?
A. Ogden.
Q. You lost jurisdiction over the lines west of Green River, two or three years ago?
A. Partially I did, but not entirely so.
Q. What relation have you to the business west of Green River now?

509 A. Mr. Reeves as General Freight Agent of the Oregon Short Line has jurisdiction locally over the U. P. lines subject to my general approval. I leave these local matters very largely in his hands, but as to other business I am at liberty to confer direct with the lines west of Ogden, the Southern Pacific.

Q. Mr. Reeves——
A. J. A. Reeves.
Q. Does he have jurisdiction over the Southern Pacific as far west as Sparks?
A. I understand so.
Q. He also has jurisdiction over the Union Pacific as far east as Green River?
A. He does.
Q. And over the Short Line?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many years were you General Freight Agent of the Union Pacific?
A. Well, I have been Freight Traffic Manager of the Union Pacific since the organization of the present company, February 1st, 1898, and I was also Freight Traffic Manager during the Receivership, back in 1893 and have been associated with their Traffic Department as far back as 1882.
Q. What was your position prior to 1893, were you General Freight Agent?
A. I have been General Freight Agent. I do not recall just the date that my title was changed from G. F. A. to Freight Traffic Manager.
Q. How many years have you been in charge of the Union Pacific traffic locally, there at Omaha, as either General Freight Agent, or General Freight Traffic Manager?
A. Well, I have been identified with the Traffic Department, as I said before, since 1882, the latter part.
Q. But at first, what was your position?
A. Assistant General Freight Agent.
Q. When were you made General Freight Agent?
A. I do not even recall that date, but I can give you those dates if you want them.
Q. It was a very short time after 1883?
A. No, in October 1884 I was transferred to Kansas City and made first Assistant General Freight Agent making a specialty of the Kansas Division lines as then in operation. I remained there until January 1st, 1886, and on my return to Omaha I was 510 made General Freight Agent. Just how long that continued until I became Freight Traffic Manager I am not clear on at this moment.

Q. You have been General Freight Agent or Freight Traffic Manager since the first of January 1886?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first of January, 1886?

A. 1886.

Q. Now to whom do you report?

A. Mr. Stubbs.

Q. And you have done so since July 1st, 1901?

A. I have.

Q. Prior to that time, to whom did you report?

A. To Mr. Burt as President.

Q. As President of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Previous to that time you commenced reporting to Mr. Stubbs, previous to the time you commenced doing that, and after you had been made General Freight Agent, you had at all times reported either to the General Manager or to the President of the Union Pacific itself, had you not?

A. I reported to the receivers during the receivership, and to President Burt subsequent thereto.

Q. And prior to the receivership?

A. To the General Manager or the Vice President.

Q. So that you did not, until July 1st, 1901, you did not report to any person who was an officer of any other railroad system outside of the Union Pacific?

A. I did not.

Q. What is the nature of the reports which you make to Mr. Stubbs, and how frequently do you make reports to him?

A. We have no specific dates for making reports to him. I undertake to keep him advised of conditions and fully posted as to what is current in the way of events, and what is going on.

Q. That is, you keep him as fully advised as you formerly did the General Manager, when you were under his supervision?

A. I do.

Q. So that Mr. Stubbs is at all times kept in close touch with all operations?

A. He is.

Q. Now, Mr. Munroe, prior to the time that Mr. Stubbs took charge of the traffic, it was your custom was it not to represent the Union Pacific at freight meetings with other roads?

A. I did often.

511 Q. For very many years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You remember, do you not, prior to 1887 (the time the Interstate Law was enacted) that there had been a pool of the trans-continental lines?

A. I did not come in close contact or have any discussion about those pool matters. Trans-continental business, under those conditions, was not within my purview. I do not know anything about it, and did not have anything to do with it.

Q. Well you knew about it, didn't you?

A. I had a very general knowledge, but it was so superficial, that I could not give any information of any value on it. In fact I paid no attention to that business at that time.

Q. So you did not attend the meetings at which these matters were discussed?

A. I did not on the pool.

Q. But, after January 1st, 1886, down to the time Mr. Stubbs took charge, you did usually represent the Union Pacific at their freight meetings.

A. I did at some of the freight meetings, and more especially what we call the trans Missouri meetings referring to the traffic of Utah, Colorado and East. The trans-continental meetings were largely attended by my superior officers. I did attend some.

Q. After you became Traffic Manager you attended the meetings?

A. Yes, I attended several.

Q. Now in those meetings you represented no one but the Union Pacific interests did you?

A. That is all.

Q. At those meetings the Southern Pacific was separately represented was it not?

A. Let me correct that a little bit there. Prior to the Receivership of the Union Pacific (which was October 13th, 1893) we did represent the line from Granger on to Portland.

Q. That is the Portland line?

A. But I have had no direct connection with the O. R. & N. Company since July 4th, 1894. Nor have I had any connection 512 with the Oregon Short Line since the date of the formation of the new company. I do not recall the exact date, but it is several years.

Q. But the Southern Pacific was represented in those meetings by another gentleman when Mr. Stubbs was not there, was it not, represented by Mr. Stubbs, or some one for him?

A. Some of the Southern Pacific officials.

Q. Now, since Mr. Stubbs' appointment and his coming here, has it not been customary for him, or one of his assistants, to represent both the Union and the Southern Pacific at these meetings?

A. No, there has been no material change in the representation. Each company has had its representative at the meetings. I am referring now to the trans-continental matters.

Q. And you come to the meetings as well?

A. I come or Mr. Wood or someone, as the case may be. We always endeavor to have direct representation of the Union Pacific road at each one of those trans-continental meetings.

Q. But of course you are under the supervision and direction of Mr. Stubbs?

A. Certainly.

Q. And any suggestion he would make to you as to the attitude you were to assume at these meetings, of course you would follow?

A. Certainly.

Q. Now I think you just stated that you had nothing to do with the freight business of the Short Line or the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company?

A. I have not.

Q. But you had formerly?

A. Under the old organization, prior to 1898, but not for a number of years.

Q. Do you have a General Freight Agent under you?

A. I do.

Q. At Omaha?

A. At Omaha.

Q. Who is that?

A. Elmer H. Wood.

Mr. LOVETT:

Q. Has there been any change in your relations to these conferences since Mr. Stubbs' jurisdiction was extended over the Union Pacific, Mr. Munroe?

A. There has not.

513 Q. You attend as many, or as great a percentage of them, since as before?

A. Precisely.

Q. Over what line does the California business or the trans-continental business of the Union Pacific move?

A. Largely over the line from Council Bluffs west, through Green River, and to Oregon, in connection with the Southern Pacific and as to California trans-continental business for Oregon points, via Green River, Granger and Huntington and also for Southern California points via the Union Pacific to Salt Lake and San Pedro and points south thereof.

Q. When was the San Pedro line opened for through business?

A. About two years ago.

Q. In 1905?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. The line was then competing——

A. May 1st, I think, 1905.

Q. Has there been any change in the movement of that traffic, I mean excluding the San Pedro line, leaving that out.

A. No, sir.

Q. How long has it moved that way?

A. Ever since I had anything to do with the Union Pacific.

Q. No change has been made in the movement since the jurisdiction of Mr. Stubbs was extended over the Union Pacific?

A. Some of the business that is moved down by way of the San Pedro line giving the Union Pacific tonnage by reason of it on account of the inability of the line via Sacramento to haul that business, but the relation to the pro-rating arrangements via Ogden, as between the Union Pacific and Southern are the same as they were.

Q. The only change being that resulting from the completion of the San Pedro line?

A. That is it.

Q. You testified I believe, that prior to the receivership of the Union Pacific line (which occurred I think you stated in October 1903), your jurisdiction extended over the line to Portland, over the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that time, how did you move your trans-continental business?

514 A. Our California business moved by way of Ogden, and the other business by the way of Granger and Huntington.

Q. Has there been any change since then?

A. No.

Q. Did any considerable amount of traffic for San Francisco or other California points ever move by way of Portland, and then by steamer?

A. It did not.

Q. Is that a practicable route and a feasible route for the Union Pacific, Mr. Munroe, as against the connection with the Central Pacific?

A. We never have so considered it.

Q. Why?

A. Because we have always felt it would always cost us more to route San Francisco traffic via Portland, that we would lose more than we would make by it. The line is unnatural in this, that when you arrive at Portland, you are about as far from San Francisco as you are at Ogden. Again, San Francisco is the only point on the Pacific Ocean from which the boats from Portland, or at which boats from Portland touch. There are in California a number of points in common with San Francisco, to which a very large and handsome tonnage is attached, and we always felt that our possible gain by using the Portland route for San Francisco business would be much more than off set in value to the Union Pacific by the resultant action. There was a large business eastbound—I am giving you the thoughts that occurred to me at the time. If I am too long about it stop me.

Q. No, I wish you to make it as full as possible.

A. There were at that time about 8000 car loads of perishable fruit at points substantially local to the Southern Pacific, the routing of which to the Missouri River we satisfied ourselves they could control, and we had hard enough work to hold our share of it anyway. We did not wish to add to our burdens and we felt that the line by way of Portland was not on a parity in service with the line via Ogden; that we would have to have a differential to San Francisco to do any business and the bad effects of the differential would cost us more than the business which we would gain by the Portland route would represent. To illustrate, we have never 515 felt that it would be wise to accord to San Francisco a lower rate via Portland and water, than we accorded Portland direct for the all-rail service. We did not care to advocate what we thought, an unnatural freight rate basis of adjustment by charging the Portland man for less service more than we charged the San Francisco man for the greater, when both competed more or less in the territory intermediate as between Portland on the North, and San Francisco on the south. Those are some of the reasons which actuated us not to open the Portland line for business.

Q. If you were to attempt to open the Portland line even by a reduced rate to San Francisco, I suppose, of course, that the reduction would be met by the Central Pacific?

A. Certainly.

Q. And the same relative facilities would continue?

A. They would.

Q. Well now, the interchange as to the volume of traffic, the interchange with the Central Pacific at Ogden, and the amount of revenue derived from that; how would that compare with the volume and the amount that under any conceivable practicable conditions you could hope to get by way of Portland.

A. Oh very much larger.

Q. What do you know of the organization of the Oriental and Occidental Steamship Companies, Mr. Munroe?

A. Scarcely anything. Oriental traffic as far as the Union Pacific is concerned, is left in the hands of our direct western connection serving the port of San Francisco.

Q. How long has that been the case?

A. Always.

Q. You mean the Southern Pacific?

A. I do.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. All of it?

A. There is a limited amount of that Oriental traffic which is moved by way of Portland; limited, for the reason that the Portland sailings have averaged about one a month, sometimes an extra ship here and there, but there has been no regularity of the 516 sailings via Portland, as there has been via San Francisco. We have had an average sailing from San Francisco of about one every ten days, and we have had at times nine first class ships in that service.

Mr. LOVETT:

Q. What ships from San Francisco for the Asiatic ports have you worked?

A. The Pacific Mail, The Oriental & Occidental and the Japanese lines.

Q. You have worked all of those lines?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In handling such Asiatic traffic as comes to you, as originates on your line, or comes to you from the east, have you always worked that by way of San Francisco?

A. Always. We had some, as I said, a limited amount by Portland.

Q. Has that amount that has gone by way of Portland—is that substantial or insignificant? I want to know something about the relative amount.

A. It is very small compared with that which moves via San Francisco.

Q. How long has that condition been in existence?

A. Always as far as I know, except this, that the Portland line is more or less of a new creation. It has not been in operation I should say, beyond the last ten or twelve years. The San Francisco line has been in operation for years prior to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. How are the rates by the San Pedro line over to the East from your line, from Southern California points, as compared with the rates via the Southern Pacific to Sacramento?

A. They are uniform.

Q. They are just the same?

A. They are.

Q. But at the present time you say you get a larger percentage of the revenue by sending the stuff over the San Pedro.

A. No, I said we were getting some increased business by reason of having the shorter line. To explain that, the distance from Ogden to Los Angeles via Sacramento is substantially 1100 miles, whereas it is a few hundred miles shorter via Salt Lake.

517 Q. Quite a number of miles shorter, isn't it?

A. About 300. The Union Pacific found that business very sharply competitive. The strongest competitor is the Atchison line via Albuquerque and the longer line via Sacramento has ruled us out of a large amount of it in the past because we could not equal the service of the Atchison road. With the San Pedro line we are better fixed and we can duplicate it.

Q. Then there has been competition down there between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific in the way of quick service, even if there has been no competition in rates.

A. There has always been competition in Los Angeles.

Q. Now do you get the same division of the through rate with the San Pedro that you do with the Southern Pacific on Los Angeles business.

A. They are in different groupings.

Q. Well, take Los Angeles, that group.

A. There may be some variance, I would not want to testify from memory on those percentages. We have a group I know, that Los Angeles group as far as the Southern Pacific is concerned, which commences up in Central California. There may be some variation at specific points.

Q. The Southern Pacific have to haul commodities 300 miles further than the San Pedro to deliver them to you. Does the Southern Pacific get any more for doing that than the San Pedro does for hauling it the lesser distance?

A. The original basis, as I recollect it, was a mileage pro-rate from Omaha, via Sacramento and Los Angeles. The application of that same principle, via the shorter line, would give the Union Pacific proper of course more money on an individual shipment.

Q. Is it divided on the mileage basis, or does the San Pedro line get the same amount of revenue?

A. My recollection is that it is a mileage basis.

Q. That the through rate is just the same?

A. The through rate is just the same.

Q. Consequently if you can divert traffic via San Pedro
518 you get the same money out of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you make up a statement of that, showing those divisions?

Commissioner LANE: You have the division tables in your office, have you not?

Mr. MUNROE: I presume we have.

Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Now, Mr. Munroe, you have stated in answer to Judge Lovett that no substantial amount of the California traffic ever moves by Portland. Now the divisions with the Central Pacific line were satisfactory to you, were they not, from the standpoint solely of the Union Pacific?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now don't you know it to be a fact that the possession of that line to Portland, would be influential in preventing the Southern Pacific (if it was independent from you) from making an unfair demand on you as to dividends?

A. I don't think I catch the idea.

Q. As a railroad man, don't you know that the possession of a through line to the coast so that you could go into that San Francisco business, if you saw fit, by way of Portland, was a strong weapon in your hands to prevent the Southern Pacific from making an unfair demand on you as to divisions?

A. No, I don't think it would be.

Q. You do not think it was of any value whatever?

A. I think there was a small value to the Union Pacific in that fact that they have a line from Ogden to Portland, via Sacramento, but the total amount of business to and from the east and Portland handled by the Shasta Route was so insignificant as compared with the direct lines that I do not think it would have any influence at all upon the Southern Pacific, on their traffic.

Q. You do not understand my question. My question is, was not the fact that the Union Pacific in the old days, when it was not 519 amalgamated with the Southern Pacific, that the Union Pacific had a line composed of itself, the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company; and a line of steamers from Portland to San Francisco, the fact that it possessed such a line, was not that a weapon in its hands which would prevent by self interest, the Southern Pacific from demanding an undue or unfair share of the through rate from the Union Pacific?

A. I do not think it would prevent the Southern Pacific from very materially advancing their division on the Union Pacific interchange.

Q. Will you answer my question just as I answered it.

A. Well I will have to say no.

Q. You say no?

A. I do.

Q. You do say then that the possession of a through route to the coast, to Portland, with steamships from there to San Francisco is of no value whatever to the Union Pacific as a weapon against an unfair exaction on the part of the Central Pacific?

A. I don't say it is of no value, I say it is of a minimum value.

Q. You said a moment ago——

A. Pardon me. You ask me if I thought I could use that as a club, against an unfair division. I say I do not think it is possible. I do not think the possession by the Union Pacific of a Portland-San Francisco line would make it possible for that company to prevent the Southern Pacific from materially advancing their percentages of the through rates for the service west of Ogden.

Q. Now let us see. The route to San Francisco by way of Portland, and the sea, is not nearly so round about a route as the route to San Francisco by the Sunset line and the Morgan steamers, isn't that true? There is not naturally near the difference?

A. It is about twice as far from Ogden to San Francisco, as it is direct.

Q. That is not anywhere near as much additional mileage as there is by the Morgan line, around the south coast of Florida, to the Southern Pacific, up to San Francisco as against the straight line across the continent.

A. I will admit——

Q. Isn't that so? It is not anywhere near as great a differ-
520 ence in mileage?

A. No, you are not correct on that.

Q. I am not?

A. No.

Q. What is the difference in mileage between the Sunset route, taking in the Morgan line of steamers to New York and a straight line by rail across from New York to San Francisco?

A. My recollection is that the distance by sea from New York to New Orleans, is 1,800 miles, and from New Orleans to San Francisco, 2,500; in round numbers 4,300 miles. From New York via Chicago and Omaha, to San Francisco, it is 912, 488 and 1,003 and 794.

Q. That is 3,100 then, a difference of 1,200 miles?

A. Whatever it may be.

Q. Is there a difference of 1,200 miles in favor of the route from Ogden direct to San Francisco as against the route around via Portland.

A. There is not.

Q. Then I was correct, and you were incorrect?

A. No.

The CHAIRMAN: It is 1,800 miles from New York to New Orleans.

Mr. MUNROE: And 2,500 miles from there to San Francisco. I understood your question (without wishing to argue this) that the distance was "many times greater" or something of that nature.

Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Now, for many years there has been a competition via the Sunset route and that line of steamers, not only to the extent of putting in the same rates from New York, but in addition the Southern Pacific interests have paid the freight from points out nearly to Pittsburg and Buffalo into New York and taken it around, and that would be a difference of 400 miles more to that haul, would it not?

A. It would.

Q. Now with that object lesson in front of you, don't you think that a good active working of that line via Portland and boats in-
San Francisco would have made it impossible from motives of self-interest alone for the southern Pacific to have demanded an 521 unfair division of the through rate as against the Union Pacific?

A. No.

Q. You are still of the same opinion, are you?

A. I am.

Q. Now you say that the Portland and Asiatic Company does carry some Oriental traffic?

A. It does.

Q. Does that come to you?

A. Part of it.

Q. Where does the rest of it go?

A. They have a large local traffic from Portland in flour, which represents the bulk of their outward bound tonnage. Their inward tonnage consists of the products of the Orient, notably tea and rice, curios and silk occasionally, and that is scattered all the way from Portland east according as the point of consumption varies.

Q. And you bring that over your lines?

A. We handle it over our line.

Q. The bulk of it?

A. The bulk of it; that is, the Portland part of it.

Q. That has been the case—east of Portland the Asiatic company or its predecessors—that has been the case for a period of 10 years or so?

A. Approximately.

Q. For several years prior to 1901?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The effort was made, was it not, to send as much traffic as could be sent over that line because the O. R. and N. owned the line.

A. Yes; they tried to fill their ships.

Q. Both ways. How often did you say the sailings were?

A. About once a month.

Q. You advertise them once every 20 days, do you not?

A. I have not seen the advertisement recently, and I do not know what it is now.

Q. Did you not find prior to 1901 that the Southern Pacific was competitive with the Union Pacific, the Short Line and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company in to Portland?

A. Just the same as it is now.

Q. Is it competitive now?

A. It is.

Q. Then there is competition?

A. There is.

Q. Then it is not a fact, as was suggested by Mr. Stubbs yesterday, that there never had been any competition between the South-

522 ern Pacific and the Union Pacific. You think there is competition now, do you?

A. I think there is competition between various lines.

Q. Business moves from New York and Atlantic seaboard points by the Sunset route up to Portland?

A. I cannot testify as to that, I do not know.

Commissioner LANE: I did not understand Mr. Stubbs to say that there was not any competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He said both. He said at one time that there never had been any, and at another time, I think he said, that there was still competition. It will all be found in the record.

Mr. MILBURN: To the record we appeal.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Is there any pool or committee or agency or official to which the several transcontinental roads, or some of them report their tonnage or their business, either on the basis of mileage or revenue or tonnage or something of that kind so that each one of you may know approximately about what percentage of the whole you are getting?

Mr. MUNROE: No, sir.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Has there ever been such an institution?

Mr. MUNROE: There used to be years ago a statistical compilation of figures, but there has not been now as I recollect for several years.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Do you have any idea from time to time as a representative of the Union Pacific road, what your competitors on each side of you are doing, whether their business is growing or decreasing, I mean their proportion of the through business east and west?

Mr. MUNROE: We watch it with very great care through solicitors actively in the field, both at the points of destination and points of origin. That is part of our business to keep just as close tab on them as we can by every legitimate method.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: But there is no system of reporting one to the other?

Mr. MUNROE: None whatever.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Or to any agency?

523 Mr. MUNROE: No, sir.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Whereby the various officers can be kept posted.

Mr. MONROE: No, sir.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: How long since that was done?

Mr. MONROE: Why, several years, I don't know the exact date.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Has it been done since 1900?

Mr. MUNROE: I do not think it has.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Well do you know whether or not the proportion or percentage generally of the Union Pacific line, as you represent it, is greater or less than it was in 1900?

Mr. MUNROE: I know that our business has been steadily increasing both in the total and in specific cases. I satisfy myself with that showing, and such information as I can get from other sources as to what our competitors are doing.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Do you think you are getting a greater proportion out of it now than before?

Mr. MUNROE: I think we are.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Can you approximate about how much your proportion has increased in that time?

Mr. MUNROE: No, sir, I cannot.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Can you make any estimate about it?

Mr. MUNROE: Why, I would think that our west-bound takings of the trans-continental trade in percentage would be five to ten per cent. more than they used to be.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Than they were how long ago?

Mr. MUNROE: Ten years ago.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Do you have any basis for a like estimate in regard to the Sunset route?

Mr. MUNROE: No, sir, I have not any information as to the Sunset.

524 Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. You say that through your commercial agents you keep tab on your competitors as far as you can?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What roads do you mean by your competitors?

A. I mean,—well, of course, it depends on the business.

Q. We are talking about trans-continental business.

A. Speaking now of the San Francisco business for the purpose of illustration, all lines east of Ogden, other than the Union Pacific; all lines east of El Paso, including the through route of the Sunset line from New York to San Francisco, and incidentally, of course, all the lines operating via the northern gateways.

Q. Now, you say that you go to some trouble and expense to have your commercial agents put you in touch with all the information they can get with reference to the business done by those competitors of yours. That is true, isn't it?

A. It is.

Q. You regard that as of advantage to you in conducting competition, don't you?

A. We do.

Q. And you regard it as of advantage to you to keep that information as far as possible from your competitors, don't you?

A. Although I have——

Q. As to your own line I mean.

A. We do not announce it to them, but we have no idea but what they get it.

Q. They get it if they can?

A. Certainly.

Q. You don't want them to get it?

A. I would not offer it to them.

Q. In the case of one of those competitors, the Southern Pacific that you call a competitor, you have the same commercial agent at Chicago, the same commercial agent at Pittsburg, the same at Cincinnati busily engaged in covering up this information. They are also engaged in gathering up this information for you in reference to the business of your competitors. You don't try to keep that information then from the Southern Pacific, do you?

A. We do not regard the Sunset line as a competitor on Chicago business.

Q. Oh that is it.

A. No, sir, and we never have.

Q. It is a fact, is it not that you don't make any very great 525 effort to keep this information from the Sunset management, or the Southern Pacific management, not any such effort as you do to keep it from the Atchison? and you don't have to hunt half as far to find out what the Sunset is doing, as you do to find out what the Atchison is doing, do you?

A. We don't ask anything about the Sunset. I do not recollect an average of one communication a month to a Sunset man. They are just as separate and distinct from us as the Atchison road is.

Q. And I suppose Mr. Niemeyer is very separate and distinct too?

A. No, he is a joint agent.

Q. He is not separate and distinct?

A. He is not.

Q. You think that he finds out as agent of the Sunset what Mr. Niemeyer as agent of the Union Pacific is doing?

A. I don't think I ever asked Mr. Niemeyer for a bit of information as to the Sunset takings in his territory, because——

Q. Now then, sir, don't you know——

Mr. LOVETT: Just a moment. Because what.

Mr. MUNROE: In the first place as I have said, we have never regarded the Sunset line as a competitor on Chicago business.

Mr. SEVERANCE:

Q. Did you hear the testimony to the effect that a large amount of traffic has moved via the Illinois Central to New Orleans and thence to the Coast.

A. Under abnormal conditions I recognize that the Illinois Central has taken some business. I say the Illinois Central simply as a line between here and New Orleans, but they have taken it for the reason, almost by 100 per cent., of the congested conditions by the normal and direct line. I never can be convinced that when you have to carry the freight from Chicago to New Orleans and when you get to New Orleans you are further away from San Francisco than when you started, that that line will be an active competitor of the Council Bluffs-Union Pacific-Ogden route.

Q. What about the lines from Kansas City to El Paso?

526 A. The lines from El Paso are much more a competitor.

Q. They are competitive to the Union Pacific?

A. They are.

Q. Chicago traffic moves that way, doesn't it?

A. It does, and we recognize that competition as an active and controlling force.

Q. Then as to Chicago business, the Union Pacific on the one hand, and the lines made up from here to El Paso and the Southern Pacific from there on are competing lines?

A. They are.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Isn't there some territory somewhere south of this where both of these lines would naturally be competing?

A. The line naturally falls about the Ohio River.

Q. Anything that originates south of the Ohio River would naturally get better service via New Orleans, than via Omaha, and anything that originates north of there would go via Omaha.

Commissioner CLEMENTS: Cincinnati is about on the dividing line?

Mr. MUNROE: About on the dividing line.

Mr. KELLOGG:

Q. You call that a natural dividing line, do you?

A. I do.

Q. And business north of that line has at times moved via the El Paso gateway and business south of that line via Ogden?

A. Occasionally.

Q. And Pittsburg would be pretty strongly competitive territory then wouldn't it, as it is right on that line?

A. Pittsburg is very strongly competitive.

Q. As between the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific?

A. As between all the gateways.

Q. Is it not a fact that all points east of Kansas City on each side of that dividing line, to the Atlantic seabord are competitive territory for those two lines?

A. To a limited extent the territory south of the Ohio River is competitive, and the territory north of the Ohio naturally moves by the northern gateways. Most of those places move on parallels.

527 Q. It don't always?

A. It don't always, there is no inflexible rule.

Mr. LOVETT:

Q. What are the lines leading from Chicago that take business between California and El Paso?

A. The direct line is the Rock Island system in connection with the El Paso and Southwestern; then the lines radiating from El Paso; the Texas Pacific, with their various connections via such points as Texarkana, Iron Mountain, Ft. Worth and the M. K. & T.

Q. When those lines competing by way of El Paso get that business what do they do with it?

A. Deliver it to the Southern Pacific.

Q. Is there any other way for them to get it to California?

A. I do not know whether any of them have pro-rate arrangements with the Atchison for the back haul or not, but I think not. In practice it is almost entirely Southern Pacific.

Q. The Atchison has its own line from Chicago to California?

A. It has.

Q. When you get this business from them, that is in competition with them, and you get it to Ogden, what do you do with it?

A. Deliver it to the Southern Pacific for California points.

Q. The Southern Pacific has the Pacific coast end of both of those roads, hasn't it?

A. It has.

Q. You cannot make a rate to California without the consent of the Southern Pacific, can you?

A. We cannot.

Q. Now this Portland business that is in competition between the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and the Southern Pacific of about what volume and importance is that? That has been in competition between the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company is it large or small in volume?

A. Very small.

Q. In this contest or possible contest between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific that Mr. Severance assumes in his questions to you, giving you the Portland route as a club to use on the 528 Southern Pacific on the question of divisions at Ogden and giving the Southern Pacific as a club to use on you, the Denver & Rio Grande, which do you think would get the worst of that contest, the Union Pacific or the Southern Pacific?

A. The Union Pacific.

Q. Your loss and sufferings would be many fold greater than the Southern Pacific in that contest?

A. It is very evident to my mind that they would.

The CHAIRMAN: The further hearing of this matter will be continued at the United States Court room in Seattle, Washington, on the 21st inst., at 10 o'clock A. M.

The Commission adjourned.

529 SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, January 21, 1907—10:00 a. m.

Present: Commissioner Lane.

Com'r LANE: Gentlemen, come to order, please. The Interstate Commerce Commission continues here its hearing begun in New York and continued at Chicago, with regard to the intercorporate relations of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific and allied lines. Mr. Severance represents the commission. Judge Lovett, Mr. Dunne and Mr. Cotton the Southern Pacific System. Call your first witness, Mr. Severance.

B. CAMPBELL was called on behalf of the Commission, and after having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Campbell, where do you live?

Mr. CAMPBELL: St. Paul.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is your business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Fourth Vice President of the Great Northern Railway.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long have you occupied that position?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Two years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what particular department of the railroad business is under your jurisdiction?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the time you came to the Great Northern what was your railroad experience,—well, we will say for fifteen years prior to that time?

Mr. Severance: General Freight Agent and Traffic Manager, and Assistant Traffic Director of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and the Union Pacific.

530 Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you were the General Freight Agent and the Traffic Director of the O. R. & N. and its predecessors before the receivership, and were for a time the Assistant Director of Traffic of the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and Southern Pacific, were you not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That states it about right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; you were assistant to Mr. Stubbs at Chicago?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long were you with Mr. Stubbs in Chicago; when did you go there and when did you leave?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Two years. I went there in the early part of 1902 and left at the end of 1904.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were you succeeded there by Mr. Store or Mr. McCormick?

Mr. CAMPBELL: By Mr. Store.

Mr. SEVERANCE: During the time you were with Mr. Stubbs what were your duties?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Supplementary to those of Mr. Stubbs.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, if we knew what Mr. Stubbs' duties were that would be a good answer, but could you give us a little fuller answer?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, he was in general charge of the traffic of the Union Pacific and I was his assistant.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, not only the Union Pacific but of the other lines that I have mentioned, wasn't he?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And under Mr. Stubbs you had supervision of the traffic of these four roads; that is, the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were your duties connected particularly 531 with either the freight or the passenger department, or with both?

Mr. CAMPBELL: With both in a general way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now immediately prior to going to Chicago with Mr. Stubbs, what was your position?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Traffic manager of the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And your headquarters were where?

Mr. CAMPBELL: At Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long did you occupy that position?

Mr. CAMPBELL: About seven or eight years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And before that you were General Freight Agent, were you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: General Freight Agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With largely the same duties as you had as Traffic Manager?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Except jurisdiction over the passenger department—had to do with freight exclusively.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you had jurisdiction over passenger as well as freight when you were the Freight Manager?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes—no, when I was Traffic Manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean Traffic Manager?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company in your day, when you were at Portland, owned or operated what transportation lines?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The rail lines extending into Oregon and Washington, probably a thousand miles; certain steamboat lines on the Willamette, Columbia and Snake Rivers; a line of steamships between Portland and San Francisco, and between Portland and the Orient.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Campbell, your main line of railroad extended from Portland to Huntington, did it not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at Huntington you connected with what line?

532 Mr. CAMPBELL: With the Oregon Short Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that in turn at Ogden or Granger both connected with the Union Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And there was a through freight service, was there not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And a through passenger service?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Through Council Bluffs, in fact from Chicago by way of the Northwestern, there was a through passenger service to Portland, was there not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And a through freight service from Council Bluffs and points east by connecting lines?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you speak of certain steamboats on the rivers; where did the boats run on the Willamette River?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Between Portland and Corvallis.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far up the river is that from Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Substantially a hundred miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How frequent a service did you have with those boats?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It varied according to the stage of the water.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, between what?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Daily service as far as navigation would permit, say as far as half of the distance, and irregular service beyond that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did that line do both passenger and freight business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Both up into the country and back from the river?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, your steamship line you say, one steamship line ran from Portland to San Francisco?

533 Mr. CAMPBELL: I did; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Those ships were owned by the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, were they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many ships did you have?

Mr. CAMPBELL: There were three for the most part.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember the tonnage capacity?

Mr. CAMPBELL: About twelve and fifteen hundred tons each.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were those ships engaged in both passenger and freight traffic?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Carrying passengers from Portland to San Francisco, and bring- passengers up from San Francisco to Portland.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And freight likewise?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did these steamers take down to San Francisco some of the traffic that originated up the Willamette River and which was brought into Portland by your steamboats?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the nature of that traffic?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Chiefly farm products.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, a little more definite, what kind of farm products?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Wheat, oats, potatoes, hay—well, not much hay; some paper manufactured on the Willamette River; those were the chief items.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did any hops move by steamers, or did they go by rail?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Principally by rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did any go by steamers?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Occasionally some; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now as to that traffic along the Willam-

534 ette which you brought in from the country was your line of steamships competitive with the Southern Pacific line running south from Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In no particular?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No. The Southern Pacific did not assume or undertake to meet the competition of the ocean line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am not speaking of the ocean line; I am asking you——

Mr. CAMPBELL: No. The through line from the Willamette Valley points and the Southern Pacific were not competitors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well now, what you mean by competitors, is they did not make the same rates?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Did not make the same rates?

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they were both soliciting to some extent the same class of business and carrying the same class of business, were they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't think the Southern Pacific solicited the business actively or if it carried any of it. Up to the time I was familiar with the situation the Southern Pacific did not attempt to make rates from that territory south that were low enough to compete with the ocean, with the all-water carrier.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, let's see, Mr. Campbell. We will first take up the Willamette Valley boats. Wasn't the business transacted by the boats on the Willamette Valley competitive with the Southern Pacific into Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It was.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; as to practically all of the traffic, wasn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And from Portland on that traffic moved largely by steamer, did it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say that there were potatoes brought down by that steamboat line on the Willamette River to Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

535 Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact that potatoes also moved from that same region south to San Francisco over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not think to any considerable extent where it was in competition with the all-water route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will ask you whether as a matter of fact, from that same region that was tapped by these steamboats on the Willamette, did not potatoes move south over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not think so; not to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know of any?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did any potatoes move south over the Union Pacific from that part of Oregon; I mean the Southern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Oh, when it was beyond the reach of the all-water carrier, say south—I think Salem was a point, or Eugene, the upper Willamette Valley points, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, boats ran to Salem, didn't they?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes. From Salem south, no, or from Salem north, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, take Salem as a point; didn't potatoes move both ways from Salem?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes; I don't think they moved by rail from Salem to San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They didn't?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they from anywhere within the vicinity of Salem?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, from points farther south where they were remote from the all-water route, I think they did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you think there was no substantial competition between that water route, I mean up the Willamette, on potatoes as against the Southern Pacific to San Francisco?

536 Mr. CAMPBELL: Generally speaking, I think not. I think the all-water route virtually controlled the business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But there was some?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Oh there may have been some.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But not a great amount?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That could only be determined by reference to the records. I could not tell you from memory because I really don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now take the item of hops. Were hops carried by the boat at all?

Mr. CAMPBELL: To a limited extent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were they also carried south by rail?

Mr. CAMPBELL: We carried through to the seaboard by rail. They didn't as a rule go to San Francisco by rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, that is what I mean.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The hops originating in the Willamette Valley moved to the seaboard over the Sunset route, did they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they also moved to the seaboard by the Union Pacific route, did they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: What do you mean by the seaboard, the Atlantic seaboard?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and to points west of the Trans-Atlantic seaboard; that is true, is it not, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I suppose it is; I cannot tell you as a matter of fact whether any went west of the seaboard or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they did to the seaboard?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They did to the seaboard.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did they also to some extent move by this steamship route to San Francisco and thence transferred by rail to the seaboard?

537 Mr. CAMPBELL: I think not; I do not know of any such case.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not know anything of that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they did move as far as San Francisco at a time by boat?

Mr. CAMPBELL: To a very limited extent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, but to some extent?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, how did your passenger traffic from Portland to San Francisco,—is there a considerable amount of that over these boats of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No; except between Portland and San Francisco probably.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I am asking about.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There was a large traffic in that, wasn't there?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And there was also a passenger traffic between Portland and San Francisco by rail?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And as to that business, the line of steamers that was run by the O. R. & N. and the all-rail route of the Southern Pacific were strictly competitors, weren't they?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They were competitors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Campbell, as to business originating in the east destined to Portland, that is originating in the Atlantic seaboard territory, didn't that business, some of it, a considerable amount perhaps—I won't ask you to give the amount, but some of it at least moved to Portland by the Sunset Route, did it not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: A small quantity of it did?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and the Sunset Route was made up of the Morgan line of steamers from New York to Texas points, and then all rail line of the Southern Pacific from that point to Portland?

538 Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And business from that same territory, in fact the larger part of the business from that same territory came to Portland all rail over the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and other eastern connections, did it not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: And the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that there were the three systems there that were handling the Portland traffic from the seaboard territory?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How were the rates upon these three lines of communication to the seaboard, I mean the ordinary published rates, were they the same?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They were generally equal.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Generally equal, yes; now it is a fact, isn't it, Mr. Campbell, that years ago, say ten years ago, the Southern Pacific, Sunset Route, cut the rates in competing for that Portland business as against the Union Pacific line and the Northern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Not to my knowledge they never did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you never know of rates being cut to Portland from the Atlantic seaboard territory?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I have been told that they were, but as a matter of fact I do not know that they were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is you did not pay the cut rate?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, and no other rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you know as a practical matter as a railroad man, and you found out in your experience also in competing with the Southern Pacific that they were making lower rates at times in an effort to get that business, didn't you, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, we will say for the sake of progression, that they were.

539 Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is what I thought. And that business for which they were competing in that way was merchandise and things of that character coming through from the seaboard territory?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They not only cut the rate as you believe, from what you have heard and competed for the business, but they got considerable by doing so, didn't they?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think not at any time more than from three and five per cent. of the Portland competitive business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is your best judgment, based upon your general knowledge of the situation?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the O. R. & N. in thos days maintain eastern commercial agencies or were they represented by the Union Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, a short portion of the time they maintained one agent in Chicago, but generally speaking they relied upon the Union agencies.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To secure the business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you spoke of a steamship line to the Orient. You remember, don't you, Mr. Campbell that somewhere about 1897, a line of boats was established in connection with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, known as the Dodwell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: There was such a line operated prior to 1901; I presume it was in 1897; they operated for three years.

Mr SEVERANCE: Yes, they operated three years. They operated down to 1900, didn't they, or perhaps nearly the beginning of 1901.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, probably yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where did those ships touch in the Orient?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Regular ports of call in Japan and China.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The same ports to which the ships of the 540 Pacific Mail and the San Francisco lines proceed?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co. maintain commercial agents in the Orient and solicit traffic for that line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr SEVERANCE: How did you get your traffic?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Through Dodwell & Co.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, they maintained agencies.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Dodwell & Co. owned the ships, didn't they, or at least chartered them?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They had them under charter, I believe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had them under charter, and they were operating under a contract with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the cargoes that they brought to the port at Portland from the Orient in so far as they were destined to points in the east were delivered to the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, were they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they went east over that line and the Oregon Short Line and the Union Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they were distributed, were they not, over the middle west, and in fact all the country east of the Missouri River and perhaps some territory west of there?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Generally speaking, east of the Missouri River.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes and as far as the seaboard?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr SEVERANCE: Would you mind naming those ports of call that you spoke of in Japan and China?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yokohama, Kobe, Nagasaki, and Shanghai and Hong Kong.

541 Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you at that time familiar with the line of steamships going out of San Francisco known as the Occidental and Oriental line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I know that there was such a line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that also proceeded to the same ports of call in the Orient, did it not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: What lines were they?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Occidental and Oriental. It did, didn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: After the Dodwell boats ceased running there, that is after the contract expired you had some boats for a short time operated by a company controlled by Mr. Graham, didn't you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They were operated some way in connection with it. There was an irregular service operated for a short time by vessels which a man by the name of Graham claimed to have under his control.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And after Graham quit or perhaps before the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company organized a corporation of its own, did it not, to handle the steamship business, called the Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was in 1900, wasn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I believe so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And those ships, the ships of that line are still running, are they not, as far as you know; they were when you left the service of the Union Pacific Company, were they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, when I left the service of the company they were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did that line of boats make the same ports in the Orient as the Dodwell line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the O. R. & N. have commercial agencies in the Orient soliciting business for those boats?

542 Mr. CAMPBELL: It had a general agency.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where was that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: At Hong Kong.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who was the agent?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Mr. Cameron.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Cameron; do you know where Mr. Cameron is now?

Mr. CAMPBELL: He is in London, I believe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know what his position is at present?

Mr. CAMPBELL: He is European agent for the Canadian Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did he leave the service of the Portland & Asiatic Company, if you remember?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think within the year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did he have sub-agencies at the other ports, or don't you know about that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, had two or three.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One thing I forgot to ask you, Mr. Campbell, when we were talking about these boats on the Willamette River; did they carry passengers also?

Mr. CAMPBELL: In a limited way, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Salem down to Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Salem is a point on the Southern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It is, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now as to the passenger business on these steamships between Portland and San Francisco, during the summer months were the rates practically the same as the all-rail rates over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, they were substantially the same both winter and summer on the ocean.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Both winter and summer?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The rates were substantially the same?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Campbell, coming down to the 543 spring of 1901 when the Union Pacific purchased the stock of the Southern Pacific road, you still continued there in Portland as the Traffic Manager of the O. R. & N., did you not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you had in addition, did you not, to your duties with the O. R. & N., some kind of relation to the Southern Pacific that you held?

Mr. CAMPBELL: In an advisory way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In an advisory way; and did you report after that time, that is when the bureau was established to Mr. Stubbs in Chicago?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is Mr. R. B. Miller?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Present General Freight Agent of the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long has he occupied that position?

Mr. CAMPBELL: About five years, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Previous to that what was his position?

Mr. CAMPBELL: General Freight and Passenger Agent of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon for a short time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And previous to that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Assistant General Freight Agent of the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, he was—in the first place he was Assistant when you were General Freight Agent?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then he went from you to the Southern Pacific and then came back to the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And hasn't he also at this time a connection with the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't know that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know what his position is?

544 Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, we can prove that otherwise. Now Mr. Campbell, was there an agent by the name of Morse?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was his business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Soliciting Freight Agent in Portland for the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there a man by the name of Coman?

Mr. CAMPBEEL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was his position?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I have almost forgotten his movements; he was for a time General Freight and Passenger Agent of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon. I think for a time prior to that he was——

Mr. LOVETT: At Salt Lake?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Salt Lake City, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For the Southern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: For the Oregon Short Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know a man down there by the name of McCusker?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was his business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: He was Soliciting Freight Agent for the Southern Pacific lines in Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you recall, Mr. Campbell, that some time after the purchase of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific, that you called these various gentlemen that I have named, or at least a part of them, into a conference in your office in Portland and told them in substance that in the soliciting of business for these lines they should solicit the Atlantic seaboard business for the Sunset Route and business west of seaboard territory for the Union Pacific Route unless the shipper was particularly anxious to have the staff the other way, or in substance that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: There was such a conference, but no such instructions were given.

545 Mr. SEVERANCE: What was stated at that conference?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The instructions were given that each representative should work for his own road in preference; failing to get the business that way, to work it for the other.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Wasn't it stated in that conference that the effort should be made to get the business from the seaboard routed over the Sunset Route?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't think so. I don't think any such instructions were given, because I am sure that the Union Pacific was not put out of the seaboard business with its connecting lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is not what I am asking you, Mr. Campbell. I am asking you whether as a matter of fact in that conference you did not either instruct or advise, I don't care which you call it, that the business from the seaboard territory should be secured if possible, without offending the shipper or disobliging him, over the Sunset Route?

Mr. CAMPBELL: To the best of my memory, no, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Didn't you yesterday, Mr. Campbell, tell me in your room at the hotel, that you stated that to these gentlemen?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir, I don't remember that I stated any such thing in*to* the hotel yesterday.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What did you say, if you did not say that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I did not finish saying very much about it yesterday.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I asked you about that, didn't I?

Mr. CAMPBELL: You did, and I told you there was such a conference and you described the nature of that conference, what was said there and so forth, and I did not—I don't think I confirmed, did not intend to confirm, did not mean to confirm what you stated had been the instructions given at Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, Mr. Campbell, you did say this, didn't you——

546 Mr. CAMPBELL (interrupting): But to the best of my recollection the instructions were as I have stated them here this morning, that each man would work for his own interest; failing to get the business that way, to help out the other fellow. But I am quite positive in the nature of things that have existed, as they have existed since that time and up to the time I was last familiar with the workings of the lines, I am quite confident that the Union Pacific—that the instructions which you describe were not given.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well now, Mr. Campbell, in this conversation, this informal conversation I had with you yesterday, you say that I described it; I described it to you as I have asked it, in the main, didn't I?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you certainly led me to understand that that was the fact; you did disaffirm that, did you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No.

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do remember such a conference, that is you remember a conference with those gentlemen, that you called together after the acquisition of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do indistinctly remember the calling of such a conference.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Now prior to that time, Mr. Campbell, you as Traffic officer of the O. R. & N. had never assumed to give any instructions, had you, to the Southern Pacific soliciting agents?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you did assume to do so, at least advise them at that time?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And by whose authority were you acting, in giving advice to the Southern Pacific agents?

547 Mr. CAMPBELL: In that particular case I think on my own initiative.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, in general.

Mr. CAMPBELL: In general of course the directions emanated, the general instructions emanated from Mr. Stubbs' office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were your general instructions from Mr. Stubbs' office that as to the business at Portland you were in chief control so that you could call any Southern Pacific men and give them advice or instructions?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, I should think yes would be a proper answer to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. You had a name, didn't you, for the Sunset Route there; you called it the Hundred Per Cent route, didn't you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Why, I have heard it called that. Any line that gets the entire—the entire length of any line is usually described as the hundred per cent route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Well you have heard at Portland the Sunset Route, seaboard route described as the hundred per cent route, haven't you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I would say yes to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Now as to the business originating on the seaboard, if it came by the Sunset route a hundred per cent of the revenue, of course, came to the Southern Pacific, did it not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, in order to get that business, isn't it a fact that the Southern Pacific absorbed the rate into New York,—from points in New York State and Pennsylvania?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think they did as far up as an arbitrary of fifteen or twenty cents per hundred lbs. would take them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they did that for the purpose of getting the business away from the all-rail routes?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That I presume was the purpose of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; the all rail routes to the north-

548 west here were the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific, were they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About the territory around Cincinnati, Mr. Campbell, which way did the stuff move from there, both ways?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think to San Francisco it moved both ways, but most largely through the northern gateways to Portland. I think it moved wholly by the northern gateways.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Campbell, did traffic come from the east over the Santa Fe to San Francisco and thence up to Portland over the boats of the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't think there was ever any such arrangement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: None at all?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never heard of any; you don't recall ever hearing of any?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not recall any, no, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were there at one time boats running from Portland to Sound points?

Mr. CAMPBELL: For a short time, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About what year was that, if you remember?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It was the year of the Seattle fire, but I cannot tell you what year that was.

Mr. COTTON: Eighty-nine.

Mr. CAMPBELL: 1889.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Only that one year?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think that is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At the present time you are the Traffic Manager, that is the Vice President in charge of traffic for the Great Northern?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You published rates into San Francisco from the Sound points?

Mr. CAMPBELL: From Sound points, no, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean through rates?

549 Mr. CAMPBELL: Through rates, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Through rates to San Francisco?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Going by rail over your line and then from Sound points down to San Francisco by boats?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By what steamers does traffic move, if any?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the Northern Pacific publish rates the same way?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And does that move over the Pacific Coast Steamship Company?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know whether any traffic moves to Sound points from San Francisco originating on the line of the Union Pacific or its connections or the Sunset Route by way of these boats of the Pacific Coast Steamship Co.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know of any, no, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not know whether there is any; do you know whether there is any?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know whether there is any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not know that. How long ago was that company organized, if you know?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Which company?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Longer ago than I have any knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That has been running a long time?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you an officer or director in it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the O. R. & N. make a junction with your road at Spokane?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

550 Mr. SEVERANCE: And does business move to Portland from eastern points by way of the Great Northern and Spokane and thence over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From what portions of the east?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Throughout the east generally, east of the Missouri River meridian.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know, Mr. Campbell, whether any business moves from here to points in Utah, such as Salt Lake by way of your line to Spokane and thence by the O. R. & N., and thence down over the Short Line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Perhaps some lumber and shingles. Maybe a little salmon, but I think nothing beyond that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does lumber move to the east by the O. R. & N. from Portland and that region?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And does it also move to the east by the Sunset Route?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does it move, did it formerly move to the east by way of the Ogden gateway going from Portland to Sacramento that you know of?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at the same time moved to the Ogden gateway by the O. R. & N. and the Short Line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Thence went on to the east in those days there over the Rio Grande or the Union Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there a time during your connection with the Short Line, I mean with the O. R. & N., that it was independent of the Union Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The first control secured by the Union Pacific I think was in 1889; I am not very certain of those figures; afterwards the Union Pacific receivership lost control of the O. R. & N. in 1894.

551 Mr. COTTON: I might suggest, Mr. Campbell, that Mr. O'Neil! was appointed receiver on the 4th day of July, 1894.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, that is what I have in mind.

Mr. COTTON: Is that the time when you meant the change took place?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That is the time I understand the segregation was made.

Mr. COTTON: That was on the 4th day of July, 1894.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And when was the control resumed by the Union Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I have forgotten the year.

Mr. COTTON: The O. R. & N. was organized on August 17, 1896. It had a capital stock of $35,000,000, eleven millions preferred, twenty-four millions of common. The eleven millions preferred under a voting trust, elected ten directors, the twenty-four millions of common stock elected five. The majority of the common stock was owned by the Oregon Short Line, the preferred stock largely owned by the consolidated mortgage bondholders of the old company. The preferred stock, therefore, elected the majority of the directors. The voting trust was dissolved by the guarantee of dividends in 1897 or 1898 at which time the stock then voted equal; that is, for the entire fifteen directors, and afterwards at a date which I do not know, there was some transfer of stock; I do not know, Mr. Lovett, what are the facts about that.

Mr. LOVETT: The Union Pacific took hold of the Oregon and Southern stock in 1899.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now during the time that the stock ownership of the O. R. & N. was not in the Union Pacific, or during the time that it was operated by the receiver, Mr. O'Neill, you still maintained your close relations on eastern business with the Short Line, did you not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Necessarily that was your outlet to the east, that and the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific by Spokane?

552 Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, the two routes, particularly the Great Northern and the Oregon Short Line; the third route was via Wallula and the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The third route, the route of less importance was via Wallula and the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now your agents, after the Union Pacific had acquired control, in soliciting eastern shipments, solicited them over the O. R. & N., the Short Line and the Union Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One thing I forgot to ask about that steamship traffic between Portland and San Francisco. Didn't the steamships pick up at San Francisco commodities that were brought from New York by the way of the Isthmus of Panama?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Consigned to Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were brought up by ship from Panama?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Campbell, when did your connections with the O. R. & N. commence?

Mr. CAMPBELL: In 1886.

Mr. LOVETT: In 1886; and in what capacity?

Mr. CAMPBELL: General Freight Agent.

Mr. LOVETT: And you held that position from 1886 until what time?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That and Traffic Manager until 1901, the latter part of 1901.

Mr. LOVETT: And then you became——

Mr. CAMPBELL: In 1901 or 1902, I guess it was; yes, the latter part of 1902.

Mr. LOVETT: Spring of 1902?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, there is one question I did want to ask. I had forgotten; will you pardon me?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Campbell, when was it if you know that the steamships between Portland and San Francisco were taken 553 out of the O. R. & N., and put into a separate corporation?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Sometime, I think, in 1903.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In 1903.

Mr CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was after control of the Southern Pacific had passed into the Union Pacific hands?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who was placed in charge of those boats?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Mr. Schwerin.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of San Francisco?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he was also placed in charge of the Portland & Asiatic line, wasn't he?

Mr. CAMPBELL: He was since that time, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Since that time, and he is also in charge of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I believe so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, but he would know better about that than you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you think it was 1903 they were put in a separate corporation?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know who owns the stock of that corporation, or did at the time it was organized?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Since that time the O. R. & N. as a corporation has not run a line of steamers to San Francisco; that has been run by this other corporation?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That is without my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, we will find out later by somebody else. Go on.

Mr. LOVETT: So that from 1886 to the spring of 1902 you were the chief officer in charge of the freight traffic of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

554 Mr. LOVETT: And in 1902 you became Assistant Traffic Director and had headquarters in Chicago, and held that position for the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Were there any other boats operated between San Francisco and Portland at the time the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company operated that line, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: There were at varying times, yes, sir, other steamship lines.

Mr. LOVETT: When did the O. R. & N. put on that line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, that is farther back than I can remember.

Mr. LOVETT: It was in operation when you went to the company?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: How many boats were they operating?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Three, I think.

Mr. LOVETT: Could you call their names?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The Elder, Columbia and Oregon.

Mr. LOVETT: And boats of what capacity each?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think about fifteen hundred tons. The Columbia may have been eighteen hundred; I have forgotten.

Mr. LOVETT: Wasn't their cargo southbound almost entirely products of Oregon and lumber, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Almost wholly of farm products.

Mr. LOVETT: Did they carry much lumber?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Not a great deal; some.

Mr. LOVETT: Farm products originating in the Willamette Valley?

Mr. CAMPBELL: And along the line of the O. R. & N.

Mr. LOVETT: And along the line of the O. R. & N. I think you testified on direct examination that the Southern Pacific line did not seriously attempt to compete for that traffic along the Willamette River?

555 Mr. CAMPBELL: It did not for San Francisco.

Mr. LOVETT: For San Francisco. Any competition that it engaged in with the boat line was to Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: That was between points wholly within the State of Oregon, wasn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: The passenger traffic that moved over that line [illegible]s the rate an important factor in that competition, or was it a m[illegible]ter of choice and preference on the part of the passenger for the sea?

Mr. CAMPBELL: In the winter season it was a question of choice,—well, both winter and summer it was a question of choice with the passenger.

Mr. LOVETT: For the sea as against rail line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes. In the winter time they preferred the rail line and in the summer time more of them preferred the water.

Mr. LOVETT: You understand that the rate was an important factor in that or was it largely a matter of preference for method of travel?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't think the rate was an important factor. It was a limited factor, to be sure.

Mr. LOVETT: Do you know whether there was any substantial change in the course of that business after the Union Pacific acquired the stock of the Southern Pacific in 1901?

Mr CAMPBELL: Which business do you mean?

Mr. LOVETT: The business of these boat lines and the Southern Pacific lines to San Francisco.

Mr. CAMPBELL: So far as my knowledge goes there was no appreciable change.

Mr. LOVETT: Either in the rates or the character of the traffic.

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. LOVETT: Up to the time that your connection with these properties ceased in 1903,—conditions have continued about the same as before?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

556 Mr. LOVETT: Did I understand you to testify that the percentage of Portland business that moved via the Sunset route from the east was about three or four per cent., what was the statement as to that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: My recollection is that we usually classed the Sunset and Gulf route as a three to four per cent. route.

Mr. LOVETT: Now what was the relative distance via that route as against the all rail lines that handled the bulk of the business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, it is as far from New Orleans to Portland as it is from New York; then there was the water haul in addition from New York to New Orleans.

Mr. LOVETT: That was as to Portland business from the Atlantic seaboard, it was virtually an impracticable route, wasn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that, you say it was an impracticable route?

Mr. LOVETT: Virtually from Atlantic seaboard to Portland.

Mr. COTTON: Via Sunset.

Mr. LOVETT: That is what I mean, via Sunset.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Mr. Campbell said yes to that?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, of course.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right.

Mr. LOVETT: Now, with reference to these steamship lines, Mr. Campbell, what was the first line that operated from Portland to Asiatic ports in connection with the O. R. & N., or that was promoted or established at the instance of the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Samuel Samuels & Co. put on a line—no, Frank Upton put on a line, oh, I guess as far back as 1885.

Mr. LOVETT: Did the O. R. & N. Co. own that line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. LOVETT: Will you please state, beginning with the first line, just what lines were established and what were the reasons

557 of the line and what arrangements existed between such lines and the O. R. & N. Co.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, Frank Upton first started a line, I think in 1885, and following him was Samuel Samuels & Co.

Mr. LOVETT: When did they commence?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Probably in 1887 or '88. I would not undertake to be at all definite on these dates because I don't remember them.

Mr. LOVETT: Well approximately. Why did Frank Upton quit, do you know?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Because there was no money in the business.

Mr. LOVETT: Then the Samuel Samuels line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They quit for the same reason; and Dodwell following them quit for the same reason; and after that the O. R. & N. organized its own company.

Mr. LOVETT: Meaning the Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The Portland & Asiatic.

Mr. LOVETT: What had been the result of the operations of the Portland & Asiatic up to the time your connection with it ceased, had it been profitable or otherwise?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It was unprofitable.

Mr. LOVETT: Lost money every year, didn't they?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Why were those lines established?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Solely for the purpose of affording an outlet at Portland for the products, agricultural products, produced along the line of the O. R. & N. as against the competition of the Northern Pacific, bringing those products into Puget Sound where they could find an outlet.

Mr. LOVETT: What was the principal product?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Wheat.

Mr. LOVETT: Wheat.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, wheat and wheat product,—flour.

Mr. LOVETT: That flour moves largely to Asiatic points?

558 Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Now if those lines had not been established as I understand, that wheat originating,—wheat and other farm products originating on the rail lines of the O. R. & N. Co., would have gone very largely to Puget Sound and sought an outlet that way?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Reaching the Sound by the Northern Pacific lines?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Then the O. R. & N. Co. felt that it could recoup itself somewhat for the loss of the steamship lines by holding this traffic to its rail lines; is that the idea?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That was the principle on which they acted.

Mr. LOVETT: What was the arrangement between the O. R. & N. and the Dodwell line about which Mr. Severance spoke?

Mr. CAMPBELL: An arrangement for interchange of traffic on a division of the through rate.

Mr. LOVETT: The O. R. & N. did not charter the boats, did it?
Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: And did not own the boats?
Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: And had no interest in the profits of the boats?
Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: Did it make any guarantee against losses?
Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: In other words, it was a connecting rail and steamship line under separate management but with arrangements for through rates and interchange of business?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: And that arrangement continued for about three years?
Mr. CAMPBELL: About three years, yes, sir.
559 Mr. LOVETT: Was the arrangement with the Samuel Samuels line of substantially the same character?
Mr. CAMPBELL: It was, yes.
Mr. LOVETT: And the Upton line substantially the same?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Substantially the same.
Mr. LOVETT: And each of these lines after trying the business for a while, they quit because they could not make any money?
Mr. CAMPBELL: That is the reason, yes, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: Was the Portland & Asiatic Company organized by the O. R. & N. because it could not arrange with others satisfactorily to maintain a line there?
Mr. CAMPBELL: That was the reason.
Mr. LOVETT: The O. R. & N. made a guarantee for a time to the Samuel Samuels line, didn't it, particularly on flour?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: Well, did it lose anything by that guarantee, or did it have to pay anything on account of it?
Mr. CAMPBELL: It had to pay the amount of the guarantee.
Mr. LOVETT: How often were the sailings of these ships, Mr. Campbell, if you recall?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Monthly.
Mr. LOVETT: Monthly?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: Wasn't it impossible for them sailing only monthly to compete with Asiatic ports, particularly from points east, with the lines via San Francisco, the Pacific and O. & O.?
Mr. CAMPBELL: They handled practically no business from the east.
Mr. LOVETT: The demands of the flour traffic had the first call on the tonnage of the vessels didn't it?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.
Mr. LOVETT: And then handled practically no tonnage from east of the Missouri River?
560 Mr CAMPBELL: Practically none, very little.
Mr. LOVETT: Now for the return trip, I suppose what we would call the eastbound trips of the line of steamers, they handled some, picked up some business in Asiatic ports?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They did.

Mr. LOVETT: For the various ports of the United States?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: The volume of that was very small wasn't it, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it would not exceed an average of a thousand tons a month.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes. The ships sometimes came in ballast, or do you know as to that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, I cannot say as to that.

Mr. LOVETT: What was the relative amount of the westbound business of those ships, as compared with the eastbound, approximately; of course I know you cannot be exact?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, about ninety per cent. westbound and ten percent. eastbound, I should say.

Mr. LOVETT: I believe you testified in answer to questions by Mr. Severance that the Great Northern Railway Company has in rates via Portland—was it Puget Sound? What is the name of those boat lines?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Mr. LOVETT: To San Francisco via the Pacific Coast Steamship lines?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Does any business really move under those rates, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Substantially none, that is, far eastern business.

Mr. LOVETT: What do you mean by far eastern?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Business east of St. Paul and Minneapolis. There is business moves west of these points, eastern Washington and Montana.

561 Mr. LOVETT: But other points east of the Missouri River?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Substantially none.

Mr. LOVETT: How long have these rates been in?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know.

Mr. LOVETT: They were there when you were there?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: You have in similar rates via the O. R. & N. and steamers down by way of Portland, haven't you, to San Francisco?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think so; we did have.

Mr. LOVETT: Are those rates in yet?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think they are.

Mr. LOVETT: What is the result via that line, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Nothing, our eastern business,—I don't know that we handled even any Montana business that way. I guess they are practically—I guess the business is practically nil via that route.

Mr. LOVETT: I understood Mr. Severance to ask you whether lumber formerly moved from Portland via the Southern Pacific to Ogden and points east of Ogden; or did you mean to testify that there was lumber moved from Portland via that line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: To what points east of Ogden?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Chiefly to points reached on and by the Rio Grande road and some of the Union Pacific. My testimony was based on what I knew to be the situation say prior to two years ago. I do not know whether it moves that way today or not.

Mr. LOVETT: And that business originated at Portland proper, not at points south of Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Some of it originated at Portland proper.

Mr. LOVETT: What was the amount of that business; was it considerable or insignificant, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, I think it was moderate; I do not remember just what the volume was; I do not think it was heavy.

562 Mr. LOVETT: Wasn't there an abundant supply of lumber on the Southern Pacific lines south of Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: To move that way it had to be carried over two ranges of mountains, didn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Four of them.

Mr. LOVETT: Four. I am not very familiar with the geography of that section. You cannot give any definite idea, Mr. Campbell, as to the volume of that traffic from Portland proper?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, I do not think it was excessively larger, I think it was moderate.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Campbell, of course you are familiar with the location of the Union Pacific with reference to the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific lines?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You testified I believe, that while you were with Mr. Stubbs you had jurisdiction over both those lines, of course, as his assistant?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Assuming that the Union Pacific lines and the Southern Pacific were entirely separate with reference to ownership, and that the Oregon Short Line and the O. R. & N. Co. are a part of the Union Pacific, treating that as one line—I believe at one time prior to the receivership that the Union Pacific interests, those lines were all operated by the Union Pacific under one common control, were they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Do you know whether that line made up of the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line and the O. R. & N. to Portland and thence via boats to San Francisco, ever competed at any time prior to 1901?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They did not.

Mr. LOVETT: With the Union Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, wait a minute; let him ask the question.

Mr. LOVETT: Competed for business with the Southern Pacific for California points?

563 Mr. CAMPBELL: It did not.

Mr. LOVETT: Why, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It was an impracticable route at even rates and the Union Pacific, to open such a route would stand to lose more from diversion of business than the Southern Pacific or Central Pacific could make to its competitors, than it would gain by opening the Portland route.

Mr. LOVETT: If you were in charge of the traffic of the Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line and the O. R. & N., and were working in the interest of these lines alone without any regard to the interest of the Southern Pacific lines, how would you work that business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: If I was in charge of all?

Mr. LOVETT: If you were in charge of the traffic of the Union Pacific and the O. R. & N. and Oregon Short Line, and without any interest at all in the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I would work it by way of Ogden.

Mr. LOVETT: You would consider it to the interest of your lines to manage it that way, wouldn't you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Wouldn't it be practically suicidal from the railroad standpoint to try to work that business by way of Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I should think so, yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: It has always been worked by way of Ogden ever since you have known those lines, hasn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: If the Commissioner please, I would like permission for Mr. Cotton to ask Mr. Campbell a few questions with reference to the local situation.

Mr. COTTON: Referring to these steamboats on the Willamette River, Mr. Campbell, that operated above Salem, tell us about the size of the skimming dish that we used to operate up there?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it had a capacity of 75 tons.

Mr. COTTON: And about how often did she run?

564 Mr. SEVERANCE: Pardon me, what was the question?

(Question read.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: Skimming dish?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have holes in the bottom?

Mr. COTTON: Well, most of the time. She had holes in the bottom most of the time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It ought to have had a rest? It must have been a dangerous draft.

Mr. COTTON: About how often did she run, Mr. Campbell?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think about once a week.

Mr. COTTON: What was her draft?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Six inches light.

Mr. COTTON: What was the occasion of this light draft?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Shallow water.

Mr. COTTON: What is the character of the river as to Snags?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It is full of them.

Mr. COTTON: And how often did she sink?

Mr. CAMPBELL: You have got me; I cannot tell you. I know she wrecked; I was on her once when she got wrecked.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In six inches of water?

Mr. COTTON: No, she drew six inches.

Mr. SEVERANCE: She must have had eight inches of water then.

Mr. COTTON: Well, that is about what they had. That is the object of my question, to show the extent of this competition. Did she always have water enough to operate above Salem during the entire year?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. COTTON: For about how long each year on an average, would you say, since you knew her, she was compelled to tie up entirely?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well above Salem, I should say she tied up about nine months of the year above Independence.

Mr. COTTON: The principal trade that she engaged in,
565 Mr. Campbell, was simply in coming up to little landings and picking up stuff that was delivered to her almost any place along the river, wasn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: There were other boats when you left, and are still engaged in that same business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Our little boat, what became of her, if you know?

Mr. CAMPBELL: She was wrecked, I understand.

Mr. COTTON: And she has not been operated for how many years?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know.

Mr. COTTON: Do you remember her name?

Mr. CAMPBELL: "Gypsy," wasn't it?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: How many boats did we operate below Salem?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I have forgotten, but I think three.

Mr. COTTON: And speaking about competing for passengers, how far is Salem from Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Fifty miles by rail, and about seventy-five by river.

Mr. COTTON: How long did it take these boats to go down and make all the landings, leaving Salem, what time did they leave Salem in the morning, about?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It took them all day.

Mr. COTTON: They would leave about six and get in about four-thirty in the afternoon, didn't they?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Sometimes, yes; generally, yes.

Mr. COTTON: And fifty miles by rail. They did do more or less business from Oregon City didn't they?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And from Salem?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: That was the business of the Portland Flouring Mills and the Oregon City Paper Company, wasn't it?

566 Mr. CAMPBELL: You are talking about freight business, now?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And that was from Oregon City for the Paper Company, and Salem for the flour mills?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: The Flouring mills ran elevators along our line, didn't they, the Railway-Navigation line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Warehouses, yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, warehouses; and was engaged with the Navigation-Railway line in doing other business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: These rates in the Willamette Valley were established how many years ago, that is, these boat rates?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Longer ago than I know anything about.

Mr. COTTON: They have been practically permanently maintained during the whole entire period that you know of, haven't they?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Have there been any breakwaters between the railroad and the Willamette River boats to any extent?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think not.

Mr. COTTON: By "longer ago than you can remember," is that prior to 1886 or when?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Prior to 1886.

Mr. COTTON: In fixing up the subsidy with the Samuel Samuels line, was anybody else a party to the subsidy contract?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Whom?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The Portland Flouring Mills?

Mr. COTTON: They were interested in the line for what reason?

Mr. CAMPBELL: For an outlet for their flour.

567 Mr. COTTON: Did they own mills on the lines of the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: State whether it is or is not a fact that the Portland Oriental line was established mainly for the accommodation of that particular mill?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Practically altogether on that account.

Mr. COTTON: It had no other reason really for its existence other than that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Campbell, where is this mill located, concerning which Mr. Cotton has been asking you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The largest mill is at East Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have they a series of mills along the line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They have mills at Spokane and Dayton; those were the mills they owned when I was familiar with the situation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And does their flour also move down the coast in the O. R. & N. ships or did it move to California points?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To points below, in South America?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Some trans-shipped at San Francisco; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And go also to New York?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Why not that I know of.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Or any points in the Atlantic seaboard?
Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not think so.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Their business was all on the Pacific side, was it?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, I think so.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Did all their flour go by water?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: None move by rail?
568 Mr. CAMPBELL: No, none that I ever knew of.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you spoke of this skimmer, or some boat or other picking up paper in the Willamette Valley. Where did it get the paper?
Mr. CAMPBELL: No; I don't think the particular boat that Mr. Cotton questioned me about handled any paper.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, it did not?
Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.
Mr. COTTON: That was a boat above Salem.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That was the one that was frequently wrecked?
Mr. COTTON: Yes, that was above Salem; the ones below Salem at Oregon City picked up paper; they picked up paper at Oregon City.
Mr. SEVERANCE: By the way, I was just asking Judge Lovett whether you remember in those days when that boat was wrecked, if there were any wrecks along the Southern Pacific in that region. Do you remember any such thing on land or rails?
Mr. CAMPBELL: I guess they have had some.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Now where was this paper mill?
Mr. CAMPBELL: At Oregon City.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is that from Portland?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Sixteen miles.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Now where did that paper move to?
Mr. CAMPBELL: San Francisco.
Mr. SEVERANCE: By boat?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Did that all go by boat or sometimes by rail?
Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it all went by boat.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you sure?
Mr. CAMPBELL: I feel confident that it did.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That all came into Portland and went down the coast?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: On your boats?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.
569 Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Southern Pacific road runs through Oregon City?
Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What else did you say was picked up out there, flour or lumber or what?
Mr. CAMPBELL: On the Columbia River?
Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean in answer to Mr. Cotton you spoke of something besides paper.
Mr. CAMPBELL: Flour at Oregon City.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where did that move to?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That moved to Portland locally and to San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to San Francisco?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did any flour ever move to San Francisco by rail?

Mr. CAMPBELL: None that I ever knew of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never knew of any flour going by rail?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It always went by your boats?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Campbell, you spoke of lumber, I think, being brought in on the Willamette boats. In answer to Judge Lovett you said there was some lumber brought in?

Mr. LOVETT: I don't think he did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Didn't you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't think so; I don't remember it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understood you to say that lumber was brought in by the Willamette boats?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There was no lumber brought in that you know of?

Mr. CAMPBELL: A little hardwood lumber but not a large volume of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was any wool brought in on these boats?

Mr. CAMPBELL: A small amount.

Mr. SEVERANCE: A small amount of wool?

570 Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did that wool move east over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it did ultimately.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did wool also move east over the Southern Pacific either via Sacramento or Sunset route?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, from Willamette Valley points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, Willamette Valley points, that is what I mean. The great wool markets in the country were in Boston and Philadelphia, were they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And wool from that region moved both ways, by the O. R. & N. and by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Judge Lovett was asking you if the matter of travel between San Francisco and Portland was not a matter of individual choice. That is, as to whether passengers would go by boat or by rail. Both lines were soliciting passengers, were they not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And got all the business they could?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did any farm products come into Portland by the Southern Pacific from this Willamette Valley county other than wool?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Grain of several kinds, potatoes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Well, now, did those products that came in by the Southern Pacific proceed on to San Francisco by boats other than the O. R. & N. boats? You said there were other boats running down there?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think that some of them did, yes. The other boats participated in the general traffic from Portland?

571 Mr. SEVERANCE: Who ran those other boats, do you remember?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The California & Oregon Steamship Company, I think was the name.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where was their headquarters, in San Francisco?

Mr. CAMPBELL: In San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How frequent a service did you have with the O. R. & N. boats, a three-day service?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Three days, I think.

Mr. LOVETT: You mean three sailings a week or three trips?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean every three days?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it was every three days?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now Mr. Campbell, you by answering directly "yes," testified in answer to Judge Lovett that the Sunset route was impracticable for Portland business. He asked you that direct question.

Mr. LOVETT: From the Atlantic Seaboard.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From the Atlantic seaboard, yes. He asked you that question, and you said yes. Now it is a fact as you have stated here, isn't it, that business did move that way?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what you mean by impracticable is that as a rule business would go through quicker all rail direct than it would by the Morgan steamers to Texas and thence by rails?

Mr. CAMPBELL: That is what I meant.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what you meant?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is all you meant, is it not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Judge Lovett also examined you with reference to possible suicide of the Union Pacific Railroad, and asked you——

Mr. LOVETT (interrupting): Not possible; impossible.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Impossible suicide, yes; as to whether it would have been suicidal for the Union Pacific to have diverted its business by way of Portland. Now, isn't it also a fact, Mr. Campbell, 572 that the Southern Pacific line from Ogden to the coast was very largely dependent on the Union Pacific for its business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir, I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now let's see; the Union Pacific runs to Omaha. It has traffic connections with the Northwestern, Milwaukee & St.

Paul and various other lines that center there at Council Bluffs, and Omaha, hasn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in that way controls a large amount of traffic, doesn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that traffic is quite essential, isn't it, to the Southern Pacific line from Ogden to San Francisco?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Therefore, the Southern Pacific road could not afford, unless it wanted to suicide, to demand unfair divisions from the Union Pacific on that through business so long as the Union Pacific had the possibility of carrying the stuff by Portland. Isn't that true, about?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, I think the Union Pacific was as dependent upon the Southern Pacific as the Southern Pacific could have possibly been upon the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is not my question, sir. I asked you whether or not as a matter of fact so long as the Union Pacific had a line of its own to tidewater, or did not have such an advantage, that it could compel the Southern Pacific to deal fairly with it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't think so?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, why not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, because it is a physical impossibility for the Union Pacific to control anything like the volume of business over a route through Portland to San Francisco that the Southern Pacific could take away from it by way of Ogden.

573

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you think that the position of this route to the coast was of no advantage whatever to the Union Pacific in the way of securing fair treatment from the Southern Pacific; that is your opinion, is it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I so regard it, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and it was of no consequence whatever?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Not as an equalizer of divisions or anything?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Not at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Not at all. And that would be your opinion also, I suppose, with reference to the Sunset route from New York to the coast—that being a round-about way to San Francisco, partly by water, as it is, you would have the same view as to that wouldn't you, that the Southern Pacific by reason of the position of that line would have no dominating influence that could compel a fair division of the lines east of Oregon; it is the same principle, is it not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, I did not get it clearly in my mind to say whether it is or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Here is the point: You say that that round-about line by Portland could not dominate the situation so that the Southern Pacific could—the Union Pacific could demand fair division with the Southern Pacific; now the Sunset route then, being a roundabout line, being half water and half rail, was no club in the hands of Mr. Stubbs by which he could demand fair treatment with the lines east of Ogden, was it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know whether it was so used or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am not asking you whether it was.

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know whether it was or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Whether it could be used; that is the point. As a traffic man would you say that it could be so used by 574 an able, energetic man like Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think the Southern Pacific Sunset route is a great deal stronger line and in addition it has to be a stronger line in taking freight from the seaboard to San Francisco than it would be possible for the line as formerly described through Portland, because the Southern Pacific owns the entire line through, and it is possible for it to give better service and make better time on the through eastern competitive business than it would be for the Union Pacific to give by the way of Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well now, let's see about that. The distance is not as great, is it, to San Francisco by way of Portland as it is from New York,—I mean from New York the distance is not as great all rail to Portland and thence by water to San Francisco as it is by the Sunset route, is it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the mileage from New Orleans,—well, we will say Galveston to San Francisco, do you know, by the Sunset?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it is two thousand miles, something like that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About the same as from Chicago to Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: About the same.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you know the distance from Galveston to New York by sea?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, I don't.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know it is a long ways, don't you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know as a matter of fact my statement is correct, do you not? That it is farther from New York City by the Sunset route to San Francisco than it is all rail from Chicago via Union Pacific to Portland or down?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it is, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the sea trip is shorter from Portland by water, is it not?

575 Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And therefore you think the advantage lies with the Sunset by reason of the fact that it owns its own rails all the way from Galveston to San Francisco?

Mr. CAMPBELL: And the steamship lines through the seaboard.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Certainly; but the Union Pacific owns its steamship lines. I was getting at the point of destination in your mind, and that is the fact, that you think that the connections of the Union Pacific east would be slow in transporting freight making deliveries?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I have forgotten whether your experience as a General Freight Agent goes back to 1887, does it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, it does not; 1886 or 1887; 1886 I think I testified to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well did you attend the transcontinental pool meetings in the days when the business was pooled before the Interstate Commerce law made that unlawful?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I never did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never attended that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you at that time familiar with these pools?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I was not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was perhaps before you became General Freight Agent?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think that is all.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Campbell, isn't one of the great advantages of the Sunset over the Sound——

Commissioner LANE: A little louder, please.

576 Mr. LOVETT: I ask whether one of the great advantages of the Southern Pacific Sunset route is not in the fact that with its own steamers in New York it can gather the cargo and take it to New Orleans or Galveston in solid cargo lots and load it into train loads, whereas the all rail route like this, for instance, the Great Northern has to depend on its connections—delivering it in car load lots, isn't that very important?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: What is the relative distance by all rail line from New York and the Great Northern to Puget Sound and the Pacific Coast Steamship Company boats to San Francisco as compared with the Sunset route of the Southern Pacific approximately?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I should say that—I have forgotten the length of the water line from New York to New Orleans.

Mr. LOVETT: What is it?

Mr. DUNNE: 2200 miles to Galveston, 1800 miles to New Orleans.

Mr. LOVETT: About 4500 from New York?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, it is about 3000 miles all rail, 3900 miles all rail and the water from here down.

Mr. LOVETT: In other words, the all rail route made up by the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific for instance, and these other lines to Puget Sound, is shorter than the Sunset?

Mr. CAMPBELL: A little shorter, yes.

Mr. LOVETT: And still I believe that you testified that you are not able to move any business of consequence by this Puget Sound line?

Mr. CAMPBELL: We are not.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Severance asked you with reference to the power of the Union Pacific by reason of its line via Portland and the boat line to San Francisco, to deal with the Southern Pacific in the matter of divisions at Ogden, whether that power could not be used to coerce the Southern Pacific Company in according larger division

577 than it might accord if it did not have that club. Suppose the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific were entirely separate and distinct in their ownership and the Union Pacific should attempt to use this route via Portland to San Francisco as a club against the Southern Pacific, as Mr. Severance suggests, and suppose that you were acting for the Southern Pacific with the Rio Grande connection at Ogden and the east, don't you think that you could hold your own for the Southern Pacific as against the Union Pacific in a contest of that sort?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do.

Mr. LOVETT: Which do you think would fare the worst?

Mr. CAMPBELL: The Union Pacific.

Mr. LOVETT: At Ogden the Union Pacific's only connection to California outside of the San Pedro road for the time being is the Southern Pacific, isn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Whereas the Southern Pacific for its traffic east may turn it over either to the Union Pacific or the Rio Grande, may it not?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: The Rio Grande in turn connects with the Burlington, the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific and Santa Fe, doesn't it, in the east?

Mr. CAMPBELL: It does.

Mr. LOVETT: That is perfectly practicable and is in fact a competitor of the Union Pacific east of Ogden, isn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just one other question. Speaking of this Sunset route, you have described in answer to Judge Lovett the advantages of the Sunset route?

Mr. LOVETT: One.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One of the advantages of the Sunset route in gathering business in New York in these ships and taking it out in train loads, and so forth. That does give it a strong advantageous position as a competitor of the other transcontinental lines, doesn't it?

578 Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From the coast. Now, when you speak of the Southern Pacific as a three or four or five per cent., when you said three to five,—the other time you said three to four per cent. line,—from Portland, as to what class of traffic do you refer, the entire traffic going into Portland over the Southern Pacific or as compared with the O. R. & N., or what?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Eastern competitive traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, eastern competitive traffic. Didn't they do more than three or four per cent. of the seaboard traffic?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I don't think so into Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Into Portland, I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I am speaking about, into Portland.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, I do not know about that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Taking the seaboard traffic alone for a moment?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know what percentage of the seaboard traffic; the percentage of what we call competitive traffic, that is traffic originating east of the Missouri River on down on to the seaboard.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Of all of the competitive traffic into Portland, I would regard the Southern Pacific as not exceeding a three to five per cent. line. Now what percentage of the seaboard business they handle, I am not prepared to state.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what percentage of that competitive business came over the Union Pacific and the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well at one time it was as high as 85 per cent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, that would not be ordinary, would it, the Northern Pacific do more business than that, don't they? They do more than ten per cent. of the Portland business, don't they?

Mr. CAMPBELL: They did not at the time I speak of.

579 Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I know, but take ordinary conditions.

Mr. CAMPBELL: I suppose that the Union Pacific takes into Portland now probably forty per cent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, take it in 1900; put it at that time.

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, I should say about fifty per cent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About fifty per cent.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Southern Pacific how much?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think from three to five, say five per cent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Northern Pacific the balance, or the Great Northern?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, the Great Northern had a little of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, and did the Great Northern get it; they got it over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Over the O. R. & N., yes?

Mr. SEVERANCE: By fifty per cent. you mean the Union Pacific business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, I mean the Union Pacific had about fifty per cent. of the whole; the balance of it was distributed with the other lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, distributed between the Great Northern——

Mr. CAMPBELL: The Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and Sunset.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did the Canadian Pacific share at all in that business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, I think not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they run boats from Portland to Vancouver?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that the balance of the fifty per cent. was distributed among these other lines?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes.

580 Mr. SEVERANCE: And what percentage did the Great Northern get?

Mr. CAMPBELL: About fifteen or sixteen.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Fifteen or sixteen; and how much did the Northern Pacific get?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Somewhere around 28 or 30.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is the division as best you can estimate of all the competitive business?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But as to Atlantic seaboard business the Southern Pacific had a larger percentage of the Portland business, didn't it, than you stated, by reason of these splendid facilities that Judge Lovett has dilated on, at New York, Galveston and so forth, the speed at which they could bring their stuff through?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it might be safe to say that the Sunset handled of the strictly Atlantic seaboard business, probably 20 to 25 per cent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; it was rather a formidable competitor of the other lines for that business then, wasn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, there is very little of that business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I say it was a practicable competitor for that business, whatever it amounted to, whatever the extent of that business was?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I would not so regard it, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not think a line that handles 25 per cent. of the traffic of a certain line is a formidable competitor of that traffic, is that the idea?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, I do not think it is where it has the entire route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean that it is not well managed then, that it ought to get more. Is that what you mean?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I think it is physically an inferior route to the others. It is a mere guess on my part to say that they get 25 per cent. of the seaboard business. I don't know as a fact.

581 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Campbell, in that seaboard business, is there or not included a large amount of manufactured articles of heavy character manufactured in the iron foundries and steel mills of the east?

Mr. CAMPBELL: There is a large amount of structural steel and steel product shipped from the east to the coast.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And by way of the Sunset, isn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well this is seaboard business, isn't it?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, that isn't what we class seaboard business, that is interior, not seaboard business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't mean the business out of Pittsburg, but I mean the business in the seaboard zone which is a strip of country a little east of Buffalo and Pittsburg?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I do not know whether any such material moves by the Sunset or not?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not know of that?

Mr. CAMPBELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But in the way of general merchandise of all descriptions; high grade merchandise coming from the seaboard you think perhaps twenty or twenty-five per cent. comes around by the Sunset, do you?

Mr. CAMPBELL: Well, it would be a mere guess on my part. I have not the remotest idea how much does come there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well you must have seen it coming in when you were there for years in Portland?

Mr. CAMPBELL: I never figured it up any further than to carry in my mind the fact that the Sunset-Gulf was regarded as a three to five percentage competitive line in Portland; how much seaboard business it handles I did not know because I never segregated it, and I cannot tell.

Witness excused.

Com'r LANE: We will take an adjournment at this time until two o'clock.

582 SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, Jan. 21, 1907, 2 p. m.

ROBERT LEE, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lee, where do you reside?

Mr. LEE: In Tacoma, Washington.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long have you lived in Tacoma?

Mr. LEE: About fourteen or fifteen years—fifteen years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: During that time what has been your business?

Mr. LEE: Well, I have been connected with the O. R. & N. for the last nine and a half years. Prior to that time I was in the real estate and insurance and transfer and commission business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have been for nine and one-half years connected with the O. R. & N.?

A. Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you also connected with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. LEE: Well, I am the joint agent for the Southern Pacific——

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the O. R. & N.?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long have you been a joint agent of the two lines?

Mr. LEE: About five years last August.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is since August, 1901?

Mr. LEE: Yes, since August, 1901.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And prior to that time did the Southern Pacific have an agent other than yourself in Tacoma?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who was it?

Mr. LEE: Well, first it was Mr. Graham, and then it was—let me see what was his name; I can't just recall his name now, but he is here in Seattle at the present time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is in Seattle at the present time?
583 Mr. LEE: Yes; or was.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Is he still in the railroad service?
Mr. LEE: No.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Now Mr. Lee, take the time that you were solely the agent of the O. R. & N. prior to 1901, what were your duties there at Tacoma?
Mr. LEE: Well, to solicit passenger business and sell tickets, and everything, in the passenger business.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you have anything to do with freight business?
Mr. LEE: No, we didn't solicit any freight.
Mr. SEVERANCE: You didn't solicit freight business at all?
Mr. LEE: No.
Mr. SEVERANCE: But you solicited passenger business?
Mr. LEE: Yes, passengers.
Mr. SEVERANCE: To the East?
Mr. LEE: Oh, everywhere.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Everywhere?
Mr. LEE: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, through passenger business and local passenger business?
Mr. LEE: Well, local, yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is to say, now, your Eastern connection for passengers was Portland, was it?
Mr. LEE: At Portland.
Mr. SEVERANCE: On the Northern Pacific?
Mr. LEE: Yes, Portland.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is still the case, is it?
Mr. LEE: Yes, just the same.
Mr. SEVERANCE: For instance, suppose a passenger goes by your line to New York, Chicago, and other places?
Mr. LEE: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And if they go over the O. R. & N. they go first to Portland over the Northern Pacific?
Mr. LEE: First to Portland by the Northern Pacific.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, and then over the O. R. & N.?
Mr. LEE: Yes, and the Short Line.
584 Mr. SEVERANCE: The Short Line, the Union Pacific, and some connection, either the Northwestern or St. Paul, or some of those roads, through?
Mr. LEE: Well, whatever is the wish of the passenger.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is right; and since 1901, since you have been the joint agent of the Southern Pacific and the other road, what have been your duties?
Mr. LEE: Well, just similar,—selling tickets for both lines.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Soliciting business for both lines?
Mr. LEE: Yes, sir; that is, the passenger business.
Mr. SEVERANCE: The passenger business?
Mr. LEE: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: To all points?
Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the South or the East?

Mr. LEE: Well, both South and East.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Both South and East?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you route passengers from Tacoma to the same points either way?

Mr. LEE: Yes; give the passengers their choice.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now prior to 1901 when you assumed these duties for both lines, and this Mr. Graham I believe you said?

Mr. LEE: No; Mr. Steeples is the gentleman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, the other gentleman?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He was performing the same duties to the Southern Pacific that you were to the O. R. & N.?

Mr. LEE: Yes, similar.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, and he was soliciting business, for passenger business?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over his line to all points in the East and South, and everywhere?

Mr. LEE: Yes, sir.

585 Mr. SEVERANCE: Just as you are doing now over both lines?

Mr. LEE: Yes, that is correct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in this solicitation of business for the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, or the Short Line rather, I speak of the Union Pacific because that is the connection.

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are competing with the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern?

Mr. LEE: Yes, the Northern Pacific and other lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Northern Pacific particularly, and other Eastern lines.

Mr. LEE: Well, not any more against the Northern Pacific than the Great Northern.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I understand that; and the Canadian?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But all these lines are competitive for that class of business out of Portland?

Mr. LEE: Yes; of course there are some points, though——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, there are some points I understand, are not common to through business?

Mr. LEE: Yes, for Chicago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and you sell a ticket, for instance, to an eastern point over one of your lines at the same price you do over the other, don't you?

Mr. LEE: Well, no; by the Southern Pacific it is just a trifle higher.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How much higher?

Mr. LEE: Well, to most points it is just the same, but to Chicago it is a Dollar higher.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what points is it the same?

Mr. LEE: Well, to Missouri river points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Missouri river?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now to reach Missouri river over the Southern Pacific, which way do you route passengers?

586 Mr. LEE: Well, we route them by the way of Portland and San Francisco, and then they can take the Santa Fe, or they can go by the way of Ogden or the Rio Grande, or any way they want to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or they could go by the Southern Pacific by Texas, and up through there, I suppose, by the Rock Island through El Paso?

Mr. LEE: Well, of course there are some points there—well, we give the passenger his choice.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand, but you can route passengers by way of the Southern Pacific from Portland down to El Paso and from there up by the Rock Island?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: East to Kansas City?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And your rate for that would be just the same, wouldn't it, as the rate by way of Portland and thence over the O. R. & N. and the Union Pacific to Kansas City?

Mr. LEE: No; it would be a little higher there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How much higher?

Mr. LEE: Well, to Kansas City?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. LEE: It would be $9.35.

Mr. SEVERANCE: More?

Mr. LEE: That is from the south; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the through rate by way of El Paso?

Mr. LEE: Well, it is $59.35, first class.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is Fifty Dollars the other way?

Mr. LEE: No; it is Fifty Dollars the other way, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now there are some points, you say, where the rate would be the same?

Mr. LEE: Yes, just so they don't go South. Well, by El Paso it takes a higher rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, what places are there of some 587 consequence down there where you can route them for the same price?

Mr. LEE: Well, we could route by the way of the St. Paul and Albuquerque, and away around that way; but of course when they get clear South it is a higher rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Suppose you are routing to New Orleans, how is the rate as between the Sunset Route and the Union Pacific, and then down by the Illinois Central, say to New Orleans?

Mr. LEE: Well, that would be the same by California or the same by the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, it would be just the same?

Mr. LEE: Because the Southern has a short line there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. That is, passengers going from Tacoma to New Orleans, for instance, you could route them by way of the Southern Pacific all the way?

Mr. LEE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or by way of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation and Short Line, and then some other line like the Illinois Central reaching New Orleans, for the same rate?

Mr. LEE: Well, they would not take the Illinois Central.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, whatever line they did take connecting down there?

Mr. LEE: Yes; they would go through Denver and connect at Ft. Worth.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; it would be the same rate?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say you don't solicit any freight business at all?

Mr. LEE: No, we don't solicit, only with freight of course the parties come in and want to know the rates, and things of that kind; we don't go out and solicit business.

588 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now to go back to the passenger business a minute, Mr. Lee, the rates over all the lines to the Coast here are just the same, are they not, into Portland, as they are into Sound points?

Mr. LEE: Yes, just the same.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that in getting this business it is necessary for your roads, either one of them, to absorb the rate from here to Portland, isn't it?

Mr. LEE: Well, it would be the same as the Canadian or the same as the Great Northern would have to absorb.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, surely; I am not saying it by way of criticism; I am just trying to ascertain the fact?

Mr. LEE: Yes, sir, that is right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is rendered necessary by the competition of the roads that go directly to Portland or come directly here?

Mr. LEE: Well, understand, that is a terminal point, and all the coast lines are terminal points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you say the other lines do the same thing in competing with you?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now to go back to the freight matter, there are importers, are there not, here at Sound points who are shipping to, say Salt Lake City, and that part of the country?

Mr. LEE: Importers?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. LEE: You mean lumber, or importers from the Orient?

Mr. SEVERANCE: From the Orient, yes; tea merchants and people like that?

Mr. LEE: Yes; but we don't have any dealings with them whatsoever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How does their stuff go?

Mr. LEE: Well, in fact, we don't pay any attention to how it goes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know anything about that?

Mr. LEE: No, I don't.

589 Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you don't go out and solicit freight business, but you quote rates when they come in to see you.

Mr. LEE: Well, as a convenience, as a favor.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all?

Mr. LEE: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And on what classes of commodities are you asked to quote rates from Tacoma over your lines?

Mr. LEE: Well, in a general way, of course, principally lumber.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Principally lumber?

Mr. LEE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And does lumber move from the Sound points down to connection at Portland, and thence over these other lines?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that lumber comes in competition with the lumber out of Portland, doesn't it?

Mr. LOVETT: What lumber is that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Lumber from Sound points that goes over their lines?

Mr. LOVETT: Over whose lines?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over the line represented by Mr. Lee.

Mr. LEE: Well, of course that would go over the Northern Pacific. Of course there is no line in Tacoma except the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't think you caught my question, Mr. Lee. You said lumber moved from Sound points generally to Portland, I have in mind chiefly of course to a connection, and thence over your lines.

Mr. LEE: Well, the rate is higher that way, and very little lumber moves that way excepting to California points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is it?

Mr. LEE: Yes; it is not competitive.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How does that go to California points, you mean, that are not reached by steamships?

Mr. LEE: Well, even that is reached by steamships; any point in California; that is, they go from Tacoma to Portland, and 590 then from Portland continue on by rail to California points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: San Francisco?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. LEE: Yes, San Francisco and all points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And does lumber also move down by boat?

Mr. LEE: Well, I presume it does.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To San Francisco?

Mr. LEE: Well, I expect it does; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you know, don't you, Mr. Lee, whether it does or not?

Mr. LEE: Certainly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It goes both from the Sound and from Portland, doesn't it?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you don't think of any other commodities on which you are asked to quote rates, except lumber?

Mr. LEE: Well, of course there are some commodities; but I don't think—when parties come in and want to know rates, that is about all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is about all, is it?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't make any effort to get the business?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You simply take what is offered you?

Mr. LEE: Yes; it is all forced.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Kind of forced on you?

Mr. LEE: Well, no; of course they come in; we don't go out and solicit, or anything of that kind.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As you do for passengers?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That you do your best to get the business?

Mr. LEE: Certainly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

591 Mr. LEE: Certainly; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have an assistant, haven't you, your brother?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he performs the same duties that you do, doesn't he, under your directions?

Mr. LEE: Well, he just assists around in the office there; of course he is not employed by the Company at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is employed by you?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But employed to assist in this same work?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Lee, what position did you say you held with the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific?

Mr. LEE: Well, of course I am rightly employed by the O. R. & N.

Mr. LOVETT: By the O. R. & N. then?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: What is the position?

Mr. LEE: Well, as agent, ticket agent.

Mr. LOVETT: Ticket agent?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Have you anything to do with freight; are you an agent of the freight department?

Mr. LEE: No, I don't solicit freight there.

Mr. LOVETT: Well, you are not an agent of the freight department, so far as your duties are concerned?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Are you required to keep track of the freight originating in this territory and moving in this territory?

Mr. LEE: No, not at all.

Mr. LOVETT: This lumber that you spoke about, do you know whether there is any lumber of any consequence moves over the Northern Pacific to Portland, and thence over the Southern Pacific to San Francisco, or to California points?

592 Mr. LEE: Well, of course we don't keep any record of it, but of course we know that there is quite a lot.

Mr. LOVETT: You are not——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just pardon me; let him answer.

Mr. LOVETT: Had you answered my question?

Mr. SEVERANCE: He had not quite finished his answer.

Mr. LEE: Well, I didn't say. We don't keep any record any more than an outsider would know. If you would ask anybody they would have an idea that there was some lumber going.

Mr. LOVETT: You are not required to look after it at all, are you?

Mr. LEE: No, not at all.

Mr. LOVETT: Nor make any report with reference to it?

Mr. LEE: No, none whatever.

Mr. LOVETT: Do you know really anything about how the freight moves, about whether there is any lumber moves that way, or not, of your own knowledge?

Mr. LEE: No, only from observing on the outside.

Mr. LOVETT: By observing, do you mean you have actually seen it move that way?

Mr. LEE: Oh well, I have seen a freight train come by with lumber or something of that kind, but not in an official way at all.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Lee, the Northern Pacific does not make joint rates with the O. R. & N. to this territory, does it, on passenger business,—check through baggage for you?

Mr. LEE: No.

Mr. LOVETT: You have to handle it locally?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: You have no joint rates with either the Union Pacific or the Northern Pacific to this territory?

Mr. LEE: That is right.

Mr. LOVETT: You try to advertise and solicit passenger traffic for the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific?

Mr. LEE: Yes, sir.

593 Mr. LOVETT: Has there ever been any competition between the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific within your recollection prior to 1901, on passenger business?

Mr. LEE: No, I can't say that there is any competition, because parties naturally want to go through California, or go that way, and they will go.

Mr. LOVETT: The Southern Pacific's lines on passenger business are opened up to all of its connections, aren't they, and don't they work its passengers both ways?

Mr. LEE: Yes; you can go any way you please.

Mr. LOVETT: The Southern Pacific and Union Pacific have only two common points, one at Ogden, Utah, and the other Portland, Oregon, isn't that true?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you say you don't know of any competition between those lines for passenger traffic prior to 1901?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you were getting——

Mr. LOVETT: Or since.

Mr. SEVERANCE (continuing): You were getting at that time all the people you could, Mr. Lee, to go to the East and Southeast over your lines, weren't you; that is what you were there for?

Mr. LEE: What I was supposed to be there for.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; well, you did it, didn't you?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did your duty as best you could?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And this other gentleman whose name has slipped my mind, representing the Southern Pacific?

Mr. LEE: Mr. Steeples.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Steeples was doing the same for his Company, wasn't he?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is a fact that passengers are in-594 duced, by reason of personal friendship or by the arguments or talk of solicitors to route certain ways; isn't that so?

Mr. LEE: Well, if they are friends, of course that would make some difference.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you have a great many friends in Tacoma, haven't you?

Mr. LEE: They would not require any arguments there. No; the feature about that is this: Most of the people that come out by the Northern lines, and so on, when they know about California, or hear about it, will go that way without any soliciting to any extent, and that is why I stated there was no competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But there was the attempt by the agents of the respective lines to get the people to go their way; that is what you were there for?

Mr. LEE: Well, they would go that way anyhow.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, they tried to get them to, didn't they?

Mr. LEE: Well, yes, we tried to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, certainly; they tried their best?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You may have competed, if the passengers didn't want to?

Mr. LEE: Well, we try to make them think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Judge Lovett was asking you about making reports; to whom do you report, Mr. Lee?

Mr. LEE: We don't make any freight reports.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am not speaking of freight rates, but your other business, to whom do you report; who is your immediate superior?

Mr. LEE: Well, we report to Mr. McMurray at Portland the general passenger business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You report to Mr. McMurray at Portland on your general passenger business?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he is an official of both the O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific, isn't he?

595 Mr. LEE: Well, he is a joint agent; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Well, what is his title?

Mr. LEE: Well, general passenger agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: General passenger agent of the O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific in Oregon, isn't he?

Mr. LEE: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You make reports to him?

Mr. LEE: For the O. R. & N., but we report to San Francisco for the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To whom do you report there?

Mr. LEE: Well, we are under the jurisdiction of Mr. Fee.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I know; but you don't report directly to Mr. Fee, do you?

Mr. LEE: No; we report to the Auditor.

(Witness excused.)

E. E. ELLIS called as a witness, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live, Mr. Ellis?

Mr. ELLIS: In Seattle.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived in Seattle?

Mr. ELLIS: About ten or eleven years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. ELLIS: I am a general agent for the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any official connection with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. ELLIS: I act jointly in the interest of the Southern Pacific; I report directly to the O. R. & N. though.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are general agent of both the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N., are you not?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, no; I would not put it that way; I am general agent for the O. R. & N.; that is my title.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just state then what your relation is to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. ELLIS: I act for the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I can't hear you?

Mr. ELLIS: I act for the Southern Pacific.

596 Mr. SEVERANCE: In what capacity?

Mr. ELLIS: As a representative.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have they any other representative here?

Mr. ELLIS: None whatever that I know of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been the agent of the O. R. & N. in Seattle?

Mr. ELLIS: Since 1890. Well, no; I was in Tacoma prior to that; about 1895 was when I came to Seattle.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About 1895?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had you been in the railroad service before that, Mr. Ellis?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Whereabouts?

Mr. ELLIS: I was at Tacoma prior to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With what Company?

Mr. ELLIS: Agent for the O. R. & N., Union Pacific, at different times, and I was three months in Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With the O. R. & N.?

Mr. ELLIS: With the Short Line. I have been with the Harriman lines since 1890.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, you have been with the Harriman lines since 1890?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did your connection with the Southern Pacific commence?

Mr. ELLIS: In August, 1901.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And by whom were you appointed as their agent?

Mr. ELLIS: My connection was not with the Southern Pacific, if I may correct that statement; I was appointed joint agent with the O. R. & N. at that time.

Mr. LOVETT: I can't understand you if you don't speak louder.

Mr. ELLIS: I was appointed general agent of the O. R. & N. at that time, and I acted jointly from that time up to the present time; I was a representative also of the Southern Pacific.

597 Mr. SEVERANCE: I am very sorry to ask you to speak a little louder, Mr. Ellis?

Mr. ELLIS: I was appointed general agent in 1901.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I heard that part of it, but the last I didn't hear.

Mr. ELLIS: Yes; and I acted in the interest of the Southern Pacific on and after that time; the agency was taken from the former agent, and the accounts placed in my office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now prior to August, 1901, had the Southern Pacific maintained a separate agency here?

Mr. ELLIS: They had; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who was the agent?

Mr. ELLIS: Mr. C. J. Steeples was the agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And for how many years had he been the agent here?

Mr. ELLIS: Three or four years; something like that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was he denominated the General Agent of the Southern Pacific, or what was his title?

Mr. ELLIS: I think his title was commercial agent; I am not sure of that, however. He was the Sound agent; he had charge of the Tacoma office as well as the Seattle office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and his duties were solely confined to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. ELLIS: They were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now Mr. Ellis, you stated that in August, 1901, you received your appointment as general agent of the O. R. & N.; prior to that time what had been your position?

Mr. ELLIS: I was agent for the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, was there any change in your duties, so far as the O. R. & N. was concerned, when you attached this word "general" to your title?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes; I had a little more territory; I had jurisdiction outside of the City of Seattle, as well as——

Mr. SEVERANCE: As well as in Seattle?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

598 Mr. SEVERANCE: And is your jurisdiction over both freight and passenger business?

Mr. ELLIS: It is; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901, had you had jurisdiction for the O. R. & N. over both freight and passenger business?

Mr. ELLIS: There was practically no freight at that time solicited by the O. R. & N. Company on the Sound.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But whatever was solicited you attended to?

Mr. ELLIS: I did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you have stated that in August, 1901, you were appointed the General Agent of O. R. & N., and you also acted for the Southern Pacific; under whose instructions did you assume the business of the Southern Pacific here in succession to this other gentleman that you have named?

Mr. ELLIS: My instructions came from the O. R. & N. to assume charge of the Southern Pacific accounts; there was practically no freight so far as the Southern Pacific is concerned, at that time.

Mr. LOVETT: Practically what?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Practically no freight so far as the Southern Pacific is concerned, at that time. But you were instructed, were you, by the O. R. & N. to take charge of the Southern Pacific business and handle it to the same extent that you handled the O. R. & N. business?

Mr. ELLIS: I was; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to whom have you since that time reported the business transacted for these two companies.

Mr. ELLIS: I have reported directly to the O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific matters I have reported to the Southern Pacific officers located at Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At Portland; to what official; what is the name of the officer?

599 Mr. ELLIS: Well, Mr. Markham was in for a while, and Mr. Coman was in for a while, and Mr. Miller in for a while, at various dates.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. R. B. Miller?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he is there now, isn't he?

Mr. ELLIS: He is with the O. R. & N. at the present time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Isn't he with both?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes; I think his duties extend also as far as the Southern Pacific lines up to Ashland and north of Ashland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have never reported to San Francisco, as I understand it, direct?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes, so far as passenger business is concerned I report to San Francisco to the Auditor; I report directly there; occasionally we take up some——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Some special question?

Mr. ELLIS: Special question; whenever we are asked by the Southern Pacific we naturally do; it does not originate at my office, but if they ask anything, take up some correspondence, of course I answer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why yes, you answer their letter?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you are transacting your business as general agent for these companies, in fact general agent for both of them under direct instructions from time to time, and making direct reports all the time to Portland?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes. Well, so far as our passenger business is concerned, I report to San Francisco to the Auditor of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you make no reports——

Mr. ELLIS (interrupting): I do make reports so far as the O. R. & N. is concerned; but the ticket system is kept separate between them; we have two separate systems.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But in case of freight you are entirely under jurisdiction of the Portland office?

Mr. ELLIS: I report to Mr. Miller in Portland.

600 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now prior to that time, prior to 1901, you say Mr. Steeples had been the agent here of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. ELLIS: That is right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And had he maintained the ticket office here?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also a soliciting freight office?

Mr. ELLIS: I don't know that he solicited freight; I don't think there was any Southern Pacific freight in here at that time to amount to anything; there was some little lumber business, and so on.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; but he solicited passenger business prior to that time?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes, he did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you solicited business for the O. R. & N., and its connections?

Mr. ELLIS: I did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And since 1901 you have solicited both freight and passenger business for both lines?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now what kind of freight is there that moves from Sound points over the lines of the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, lumber and forest products; rather forest products move to points in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, situated on the Union Pacific proper, by way of Silver Bow.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It goes by the Northern Pacific and Silver Bow?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then that is the Oregon Short Line South of Silver Bow?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes, that is the first Short Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what points in Nebraska, did you say?

Mr. ELLIS: To points in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, and Wyoming, on the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They go clear through to the Missouri river, don't they,—Omaha?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes; any point on the Union Pacific.

601 Mr. SEVERANCE: Any point; and Kansas City?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, what about the Southern Pacific?

Mr. ELLIS: The Southern Pacific; we don't solicit lumber business at all; we have no common rates in there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of freight do you solicit over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, practically no commodities moving out of the Sound to far Eastern competitive points; there are commodities moving to California; that is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Ellis, does lumber move from the Sound to Utah, common points?

Mr. ELLIS: The rate is based local over Portland I think there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't believe I caught you.

Mr. ELLIS: I say, I think the rate is composed local over Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I want to know if lumber does move?

Mr. ELLIS: I don't know of any movement that takes place there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is any lumber shipped from Puget Sound points to Salt Lake City and Ogden, and that region?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes, there is some shipped.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How does it go?

Mr. ELLIS: It all goes by Silver Bow in connection with the Northern Pacific, or by Spokane by the O. R. & N.,—the Great Northern to Spokane and the O. R. & N. at Spokane.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does it ever move by Portland?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes, it moves by Portland also, some of the local over Portland; there is no through rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In moving by Portland it could reach Salt Lake City or Ogden either over the O. R. & N., or over the Southern Pacific and Sacramento, couldn't it?

602 Mr. ELLIS: I don't think the rates apply from the Sound down there. Yes, it could move down there if the rates apply, but I am not positive whether the rates apply.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Campbell testified this morning lumber did move that way?

Mr. ELLIS: It may move that way.

Mr. LOVETT: Not from the Sound.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Not from the Sound; Portland, I mean. Well, you get into Portland from here whichever way you go; so that, after the lumber gets to Portland going out of the Sound, it could go to Salt Lake City and I think to Ogden, and other points, either way, at Sacramento or the O. R. & N.?

Mr. ELLIS: It could on some of the locals; I don't understand there is any movement that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Well, you don't know. Now when you ship to Salt Lake City you do it by Silver Bow?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, we leave that up to the shipper whatever way he wants to designate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would prefer to ship it by Portland, wouldn't you, than Spokane?

Mr. ELLIS: I have no preference; I altogether leave it to the shipper.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It makes no difference to your Company?

Mr. ELLIS: That is a matter I don't have to deal with. That is handled by the general office; I am simply after the tonnage.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I know; but as general agent of the Company seeking tonnage if one road had a thousand miles of track and your road had a hundred, and then you had another road by which the other road had a hundred and you had the thousand, you would try to route it over the thousand miles, wouldn't you?

Mr ELLIS: I leave it altogether to the consignor.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would not try to influence that movement at all?

603 Mr. ELLIS: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It makes no difference to you whether the road gets the large or small revenue out of the shipment; is that right?

Mr. ELLIS: I think I answer the question direct when I say I leave it to the shipper.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you go to the shipper to solicit business, for instance the designation we will say is Ogden, Utah, do you ask him immediately which way he wants it shipped, or do you route it yourself, unless he asks you to ship it a certain way?

Mr. ELLIS: He usually has his own mind made up, and he asks for one of our cards, whichever is the most handy for him to get.

Mr SEVERANCE: He would have his own mind made up when he would come to you, but I am speaking of times you go out and solicit business yourself?

Mr. ELLIS: I don't dictate the routing for them; they usually don't ask me, they have their minds made up.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Isn't there other stuff here at Seattle that goes into that region, in the Utah region?

Mr. ELLIS: Nothing that I know of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Any merchandise going there?

Mr. ELLIS: I don't know of any. An occasional shipment of salmon goes down there, but I don't think it amounts to more than one car a year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know anything about shipments of teas and spices and coffee, and so forth, into that country from Seattle?

Mr. ELLIS: I have no control of those at all; they are routed in the Orient.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am not speaking about stuff that is consigned there?

Mr. ELLIS: Nothing leaves here.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And stock jobbed out of Seattle?

Mr. ELLIS: I don't know of any shipments.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know of a concern here called the Crescent Manufacturing Company?

Mr. ELLIS: I do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Don't they consign goods to that country
604 down there, teas and spices, and coffee, and so forth?

Mr. ELLIS: They may make some small shipments; it does not come to my notice, if they do. I suppose they do ship there some small quantities.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They ship there over your lines, don't they; or do you know about it at all?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, we have no rails of our own in Seattle, and naturally that would be handled as non-competitive business, and I would not take much notice of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now in the case of passenger business you are endeavoring to get all the people you can to go to the East and South over your lines, aren't you?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As against the outside lines?

Mr. ELLIS: We are.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is a large part of your business, isn't it, owing to the fact that you are not well situated to handle freight out of Seattle?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, we naturally handle freight too. I think the earnings on freight are equal or more than that of passengers, taking everything into consideration.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That makes me think; how many cars a month on an average do you ship out of here?

Mr. ELLIS: Through the different gate-ways?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Are you asking for the O. R. & N.?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am.

Mr. ELLIS: If you will ask me a direct question as to what gate it goes through; we have various gate-ways.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, through Portland, we will say.

Mr. ELLIS: Five or six cars a month, or something like that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how much through Silver Bow?

605 Mr. ELLIS: Very little West; there wasn't but, I would say, about a hundred cars East bound.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I am speaking about East bound business; but you meant five or six cars both ways through Portland, did you?

Mr. ELLIS: No; there is practically nothing Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Practically nothing Southern Pacific; very little freight moves that way?

Mr. ELLIS: Except California business. I presume you mean competitive points in the East?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I mean competitive points in the East.

Mr. ELLIS: Yes, practically nothing Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But there is considerable California business?

Mr. ELLIS: Oh, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What class of business?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, North bound there is oranges and lemons, and commodities grown in California that might come up here, wheat, potatoes, and so on.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do they come all-rail?

Mr. ELLIS: They do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Always, or do they sometimes come by boat?

Mr. ELLIS: I don't think there is many—in the oranges I don't think there is much; I don't think there is any sweet potatoes——

Com'r LANE: Talk a little more distinctly, Mr. Ellis.

Mr. ELLIS: I don't think there is any sweet potatoes moving North bound by way of the steamers; they all come all-rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What about fruit?

Mr. ELLIS: Fruit; there is some fruit comes up by steamer I understand; I didn't see the report, I don't know just how much there is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Come up to Portland by boat and then by rail?

606 Mr. ELLIS: No; they come in by Pacific Coast Steamhsip Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By Pacific Coast Steamship Company?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, that would be fruit originating I suppose on rail lines in Southern California and trans-shipped at San Francieso?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, some of them take that route, and I believe they do ship that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it also moves all-rail?

Mr. ELLIS: Also moves all-rail, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You heard Mr. Lee's testimony here a few minutes ago, didn't you, about the matter of rates, passenger rates?

Mr. ELLIS: I did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is substantially as you understand it, isn't it,—the routing of passengers?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes, practically.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To competitive points in the East?

Mr. ELLIS: I heard a part of it. I was talking to Mr. Stubbs.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were probably learning something if you were talking to Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. ELLIS: No; I was talking to him about some other matter that has no bearing on the subject.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Ellis, if you didn't hear his testimony I want to ask you one or two questions. You route passengers from here to New Orleans, don't you?

Mr. ELLIS: We do; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Both ways, don't you?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you route passengers to other Mississippi Valley points both ways, don't you?

Mr. ELLIS: I do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you route passengers to Chicago both ways?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to Kansas City?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

607 Mr. SEVERANCE: How does the fare by El Paso compare with the fare by the direct route to Chicago?

Mr. ELLIS: The fare is higher, about Nine Dollars, I think, $9.35, I think, something like that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that so to Chicago?

Mr. ELLIS: I think so by El Paso; by the Sacramento route it is about One Dollar higher?

Mr. SEVERANCE: About One Dollar higher?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, there is a difference of a Dollar between going from here over the Southern Pacific to Sacramento, thence East to Ogden, and going direct to Ogden by the O. R. & N?

Mr. ELLIS: That is right; by the O. R. & N., or the Northern lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. LOVETT: What do you mean by routing passengers; you mean simply selling them tickets, don't you?

Mr. ELLIS: Beg pardon?

Mr. LOVETT: By routing passengers, you mean selling them tickets the way they want to go, don't you?

Mr. ELLIS: Certainly; we never dictate to passengers which way they want to go.

Mr. LOVETT: Every coupon agent throughout the United States does practically the same thing, doesn't he?

Mr. ELLIS I think so. It is our practice anyway; I can't say for the rest.

Mr. LOVETT: With reference to this lumber business to Utah points, about which Mr. Severance asked you, as a matter of fact that practically all goes by way of Silver Bow, doesn't it; doesn't the Northern Pacific take it up here to get the long haul for itself?

Mr. ELLIS: I think they do, for the reason it originates at points on the Northern Pacific, and if it is on the Great Northern, if it originates on the Great Northern they would naturally take it through the Spokane gateway.

608 Mr. LOVETT: They would naturally take it the long haul?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: The route by way of Portland, in view of the local that they would charge you from here to Portland, would make the rate higher that way, wouldn't it?

Mr. ELLIS: Some of the locals.

Mr. LOVETT: In other words, the Northern Pacific would not put in rates with the O. R. & N. by way of Portland?

Mr. ELLIS: Naturally where they would get the long haul the other way they would not.

Mr. LOVETT: Did you ever know of any traffic going that way?

Mr. ELLIS: By Portland over the Southern Pacific to Salt Lake, or Utah Points?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, or the O. R. & N. either; doesn't it all go the other way?

Mr. ELLIS: Out of the Sound, yes it does.

Mr. LOVETT: They would not take the higher-rate line rather than the low, would they?

Mr. ELLIS: No, they would not.

Mr. LOVETT: Don't you know that they don't publish any tariff at all on lumber to Utah points from the Sound by Portland?

Mr. ELLIS: That is the fact.

Mr. LOVETT: They are in the other way, and that is what you mean by saying you would have to pay some of the locals?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: With reference to this passenger business, the passenger business that you solicit in this territory for the Southern Pacific is as against the steamer lines, isn't it?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, steamer lines invariably take their own—there is quite a difference in their rate and there is very little competition.

Mr. LOVETT: What is your competition with on California business then, and passengers?

609 Mr. ELLIS: There is a great difference between the rates and passengers. In the summer time the passengers usually a great number of them, like to go by way of water, and in the winter time they prefer rail; it is optional with the passenger, we don't solicit.

Mr. LOVETT: The only competition the Southern has ever had on passenger business between California and the Sound territory is by water, isn't it?

Mr. ELLIS: Is water; certainly.

Mr. LOVETT: The O. R. & N. has never competed since you have known it on passenger business from this territory?

Mr. ELLIS: Not from the Sound; they have no through rates, I think.

Mr. LOVETT: To California. Just what business does the Southern Pacific do; does it do any freight business at all from this territory?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes; there is some business originates in the Mississippi river points, Memphis and South.

Mr. LOVETT: How does that get here?

Mr. ELLIS: On which the routes are equal by the Northern lines.

Mr. LOVETT: How does that get here?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, sometimes it comes over the Southern Pacific, delivered to the Pacific Coast Steamship Company at San Francisco, and some commodities bear a common rate and are delivered to the Northern Pacific at Portland; they come in that way.

Mr. LOVETT: What kind of business is that?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, that would be rice from New Orleans, and Cove Oysters from Biloxi, cotton linters from Texas, and Bananas from New Orleans, a car of rosin occasionally, a car of molasses occasionally, once in a while a car of hardwood.

Mr. LOVETT: What is the magnitude of that?

Mr. ELLIS: There is not a very heavy tonnage.

Mr. LOVETT: Well, do you mean a half dozen car loads a month?

Mr. ELLIS: About that; some months it averages more,

610 according to the time of the year and the disposition of the consumers.

Mr. LOVETT: Where does that come from you say, the Gulf coast country?

Mr. ELLIS: From Mississippi river points and South where common rates exist as against the Northern lines, Memphis and South.

Mr. LOVETT: What do you mean by the Mississippi river points?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, define territory by the tariff sheets, from Memphis and points South, down the Mississippi river.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About that traffic you have just been speaking of, that can move and does move both by the Sunset Route and by the Omaha gate-way, does it not?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at equal rates?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Which way does the most of it go?

Mr. ELLIS: I can't answer that question; I don't know just what the percentage of business is. The bananas in the winter time come over the Southern Pacific, the Northern Pacific under joint arrangement, and in the summer time they usually come by the way of Billings in connection with the Burlington and C. B. & Q.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now Mr. Ellis, the people out here dealing in the various commodities you mentioned, a half dozen or so, that come up from down South there in the Mississippi Valley, do the people out here at Seattle dictate that routing, considerable of it?

Mr. ELLIS: Sometimes they do on some commodities; the bananas are controlled pretty much in the South.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the United Fruit Company would route them, wouldn't they?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And these other things?

Mr. ELLIS: Rice is controlled to a great extent here.

611 Rosin is controlled here, and molasses and cotton linters.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is the class of business for which the companies maintain soliciting agents, isn't it, to procure the routing from the people here on the ground?

Mr. ELLIS: Well, it is the duty of a general agent to look after the traffic on his line as much as he can.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; that is to say, you know that a wholesale merchant here is importing commodities of that kind from Memphis and below on the Mississippi river, it is your business as general agent to endeavor to have that stuff routed over one or the other of your lines as against competing lines?

Mr. ELLIS: It is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is what you are here for and prior to the time you represented both lines, this Mr. Steeples was doing that for one line and you for the other?

Mr. ELLIS: No, I wasn't doing it at that time, because we had no traffic arrangement in here with the Great Northern at that time; we had no gate-way and no common rates prior to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That has grown up since, has it?

Mr. ELLIS: It has grown up since.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By mutual arrangement with the great Northern?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: You would solicit it for the line that would get the longest haul out of it, wouldn't you, Mr. Ellis?

Mr. ELLIS: On that business I would practically leave it to the consignor, to meet with his requirements.

Mr. LOVETT: As between the Sunset——

Mr. ELLIS: That is, as between the Huntington gate-way and Southern Pacific route, as against the Northern lines, I would try to influence it over——

Mr. LOVETT: Either of the other?

Mr. ELLIS: Either of the other two.

612 Mr. LOVETT: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That amounts to this, then; you would, as you say, try to influence it in favor of one or the other of your lines as against the Northern lines?

Mr. ELLIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you would not endeavor to influence him to ship by one of your lines as against the other?

Mr. ELLIS: No, I would not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Witness excused.

J. D. FARRELL called as a witness, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Farrell, I wanted to examine Mr. Ford, who is Vice-President and General Manager of the Pacific Coast Company about their matters, about their traffic, but I believe you are a director of that company, are you not?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Perhaps you can tell us what we want to know about it. How many ships has the Pacific Coast Steamship Company?

Mr. FARRELL: I think about twenty now.

Com'r LANE: Are you connected with the Pacific Coast Steamship Company?

Mr. FARRELL: I am director of the Pacific Coast Company, not of the——

Com'r LANE: Pacific Coast Company?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir; not of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

The COURT: What is the Pacific Coast Company?

Mr. FARRELL: That is the owner of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I was going to bring that out. The Pacific Coast Company is the name of it, is it?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that Company owns the stock of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, does it not?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

613 Mr. SEVERANCE: And controls its operation?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you name from memory the directors of the Pacific Coast Company?

Mr. FARRELL: Mr. Cannon, Mr. Keene.

Com'r LANE: Who is Mr. Cannon.

Mr. FARRELL: H. W. Cannon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of the Chase National Bank, of New York?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Fee, did you say?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir; Mr. Keene, Senator Keene of New Jersey; John Keene, Kane usually pronounced.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; John Keene?

Mr. FARRELL: J. N. Hill.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is J. N. Hill?

Mr. FARRELL: Son of James J. Hill.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He has some other title to fame, hasn't he; doesn't he hold some other official position or connection with the railroad?

Mr. FARRELL: That is fame enough, isn't it?

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is his official connection with the Great Northern,—Vice-President, isn't he?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes; I think he is a member of the Board, too.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of the Northern Pacific?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes; that is my understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Well, who else?

Mr. FARRELL: Mr. Tucker of Boston, a broker.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who is Mr. Tucker?

Mr. FARRELL: He is a broker; Tucker and Emery is the firm.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has he any connection of any sort, so far as you know, with any railroad company?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right; who is the next one?

Mr. FARRELL: How many have I named?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have named four; you have named Mr. Cannon, Senator Keene, J. N. Hill and Mr. Tucker.

614 Mr. FARRELL: Mr. Harriman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. E. H. Harriman?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, we know who he is; we won't stop for that.

Mr. FARRELL: And a new man whose name I don't recall, Amory I think is his name.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does he live?

Mr. FARRELL: I believe in Boston; he represents some New England interest; I think his residence is Boston; and myself.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Farrell; and what is your present business, Mr. Farrell?

Mr. FARRELL: Generally representing the Oregon & Washington Railroad Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Oregon & Washington Railroad Company is a Washington corporation that is controlled by the Union Pacific people, is it not?

Mr. FARRELL: It is an Oregon corporation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: An Oregon corporation?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But it is the Union Pacific, isn't it? That is to say, I mean it is building a connection for the Union Pacific, isn't it, into Seattle?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, I don't know who is furnishing the money; I guess it is generally understood to be the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, do you know who the stockholders are?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir, I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your position in that Company?

Mr. FARRELL: I am not an officer nor a director; I am in general charge of their affairs.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, do you make any reports of your doings to any person?

Mr. FARRELL: In a general way I report to Mr. Kruttschnitt.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman system, is he not?

615 Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you confer with anybody else?

Mr. FARRELL: Mr. Lovett and Mr. Stubbs.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lovett is my esteemed friend sitting here, counsel of the Harriman line?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, the same.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And with whom else do you *re*fer?

Mr. FARRELL: Mr. Stubbs and I have conferred with Mr. Harriman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then as a matter of fact, Mr. Farrell, this corporation you speak of is the Union Pacific line that is being built into here, isn't it?

Mr. FARRELL: Why it is so called, I understand.

Mr. LOVETT: You may let the record show that it is the Union Pacific enterprise.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, they own the stock, I suppose,—they or the Short Line.

Mr. LOVETT: One or the other.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One or the other; that is all I want. Now Mr. Farrell, about the Pacific Coast Company, you say they have about twenty ships?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who is the President of the Pacific Coast Company, Mr. Cannon?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Mr. Ford is the Vice President, is he not?

Mr. FARRELL: Vice President and General Manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do these ships ply?

Mr. FARRELL: Various points between Cape Nome and Mexico, Mazatland, Mexico, is the lowest point they go.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to what points do they touch along the Western coast of the United States, the Pacific coast?

Mr. FARRELL: All the principal Californian coasts, Seattle, Tacoma,

Everett, Bellingham, and Blaine, I think of the Washington coast; Victoria, Vancouver, of the British Columbia coast.

616 Mr. SEVERANCE: And they go to San Francisco?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes; and also to Alaska, Southeastern Alaska and Southwestern Alaska.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they go to San Francisco and San Diego?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they go into Coose Bay?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir; Humboldt and Eureka.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they don't go into Coose Bay?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the character of the traffic of these Companies; is it passenger or freight, or both?

Mr. FARRELL: Both. Many of the ships handle both freight and passengers, some freight exclusively.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have ships coming up here from San Francisco that handle freight exclusively, or are they both freight and passenger?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, the regular line is freight and passenger, but our irregular ships also handle freight North and South bound in addition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now what is the character of freight that is brought up here from San Francisco?

Mr. FARRELL: Fruit, vegetables, general merchandise.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you bring up from San Francisco to the Sound Port, traffic that originates in the East and is brought West over the Sunset Route and over the Santa Fe?

Mr. FARRELL: I was not aware that that was true to any extent, until I heard Mr. Ellis say that small quantities moved; I haven't any impression of that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have no knowledge about that?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And is the stuff in the way of freight and so forth, that you speak of that you bring up from San Francisco, are they commodities that originate in California?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or points East?

Mr. FARRELL: California very largely.

617 Mr. SEVERANCE: Southern California?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, yes, Southern California and middle, depending on the season, you know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And those fruits are brought in there by the railroads, the Southern Pacific or the Sante Fe and turned over to you?

Mr. FARRELL: To some extent. The lower Californian points, for instance San Diego, it is trucked down, you know, and brought in by the other little railroads that run out into the country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am speaking of San Francisco principally.

Mr. FARRELL: Oh, San Francisco; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you go to San Pedro, by the way?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you take on freight there that comes over the Salt Lake road?

Mr. FARRELL: That connection did not exist when I was actively connected with the company, and I can't say whether there is any such business or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you go to Santa Monica?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you take on freight at Santa Monica that comes in over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of freight?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, such as I have described, merchandise, fruits, vegetables in season.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Merchandise is rather general; do you mean general merchandise, manufactured goods and dress goods?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And everything of that sort, notions?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, general is what is commonly called merchandise.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do these shipments originate? They can't originate at San Pedro or Santa Monica?

Mr. FARRELL: I don't know.

618 Mr. SEVERANCE: They must come from the east, do they not?

Mr. FARRELL: I have no doubt, yes; they originate largely in Los Angeles; that is, the shipments are made from there, but just where the goods are manufactured I can't say.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you mean by that they are jobbed out of Los Angeles?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But there are shipments that pass through Los Angeles to the seaboard?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, through shipments, to a small extent, and some of it jobbed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is at Los Angeles?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the same is true at San Francisco?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Pacific Coast Steamship Co. then takes these commodities that are brought in by the railroads to these terminal points and delivers them here in the Sound?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Seattle and Tacoma?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you handle lumber?

Mr. FARRELL: In small quantities, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't make a call at Portland, do you, with your ships?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does the lumber originate you take down,—here at Seattle?

Mr. FARRELL: Largely at Seattle, yes, sir, Tacoma, Everett, Bellingham.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now these articles you speak of as merchandise, fruits, and so forth that are brought up from the south are consigned to wholesale merchants largely, are they not, here at Sound points?

Mr. FARRELL: And to interior eastern points to some extent.

619 Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, to Spokane you mean, or something like that?

Mr. FARRELL: Spokane and Montana points, and Idaho, and eastern Washington.

Com'r LANE: Do I understand, Mr. Farrell, you make a through rate with the Southern Pacific's connection at Santa Monica for freight carried to coast points farther north?

Mr. FARRELL: I don't get the question.

Com'r LANE: Do you make a through rate with the railroad company connecting at Santa Monica on freight?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, that is my recollection; it is a little more than three years since I had to do with that and I am a little bit rusty, but it applies from Los Angeles to various ports of call on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does your through rate extend east of Los Angeles?

Mr. FARRELL: I am not clear on that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would have to look up the tariffs?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I suppose you can furnish us tariffs on that?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: These goods that are brought up here by your line come off of the Southern Pacific there at San Francisco and brought up here consigned to jobbers, are sold and jobbed out by these wholesalers here at Sound points in all this territory that is contiguous; are they not?

Mr. FARRELL: No; in part they are.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I mean; that that is consigned to wholesalers here.

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, I think so, but a good bit of it is carried on by connecting boats to Alaska.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I know that, but I mean that that stops here.

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

620 Mr. SEVERANCE: This territory, so far as jobbing is concerned south and east of Seattle within the limits is competitive, isn't it, with Portland; that is, the jobbers of Portland are competing with the jobbers of Seattle in this country down back here in Washington or Idaho and Oregon.

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Montana?

Mr. FARRELL: To some extent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know, Mr. Farrell, the amount of the capital stock of the Pacific Coast Company?

Mr. FARRELL: It has $1,525,000 first preferred; four million second preferred; seven million common; it has five million five per cent. thirty year bonds.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What about the Pacific Coast Steamship Co.; what is its capitalization?

Mr. FARRELL: That is nominal, I think; two millions of dollars, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all owned by the other company?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And has the Pacific Coast Company any property other than the steamship stock?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What character of property?

Mr. FARRELL: Railroads and coal mines and real estate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where are the railroads?

Mr. FARRELL: The principal railroad is from Seattle to the coal mines in the county in which Seattle is situated; and another line about eighty miles in length from Port Oxford and San Luis Obispo.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long is that?

Mr. FARRELL: About eighty miles, I think now, is my recollection.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does that connect with any line of railroad in California?

Mr. FARRELL: With the Southern Pacific; that is a narrow 621 gauge road, however, the Southern Pacific being standard gauge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It connects with the Southern Pacific at what point?

Mr. FARRELL: San Luis Obispo.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, San Luis Obispo is not on the coast is it?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir, out twelve miles from the coast.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have a harbor on the coast?

Mr. FARRELL: Port Orford.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the terminus of your railroad that goes into the country?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, that is the water terminus.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean water terminus.

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is one of the ports of call of your steamships?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did you take traffic over your narrow gauge from the Southern Pacific at San Luis Obispo and bring it down to the harbor there to load it on your ships?

Mr. FARRELL: No; I think there is very little, if any of that.

Mr. SEVERENCE: What is the principal business, if any, on the line of the narrow gauge railroad?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, generally grain, wheat, oats, barley. Just now they are pretty active in handling oil. Then the return business is that ordinarily handled; merchandise, lumber, pipes, something of that sort.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say you have these two lines of railroad and you have certain coal mines?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Besides the line of steamships.

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you know where the stock is 622 owned?

Mr. FARRELL: It is owned in the east almost exclusively.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, do you know whether it is widely scattered?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or closely held?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes. I think there are about fifteen or sixteen hundred stockholders.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Fifteen or sixteen hundred?

Mr. FARRELL: That is my recollection.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you traffic contracts with the Southern Pacific and the other railroads which you operate in connection with?

Mr. FARRELL: I am not certain as to the Southern Pacific. There is a contract, has been for many years with the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern and Canadian Pacific, and the Pacific Coast Steamship Company is their ocean connection.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Under these contracts you make a through rate from the north here, do you not, to San Francisco and other Southern ports?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir; that is transcontinental.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Do you carry much stuff of that?

Mr. FARRELL: No, very little. It is largely a local business, local with the ports.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is very little, but is there some through business?

Mr. FARRELL: Oh yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Comes from the east, that comes out to the coast by these lines and goes down to San Francisco?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, small quantities.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of business is that, what kind of traffic?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, what I generally term as merchandise, manufactured articles from the east; then to the east is fruit, vegetables again, sugar and salt and such as that?

623 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Farrell, have you ever had any connection with the steamship lines across the ocean?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You represented the Great Northern, didn't you?

Mr. FARRELL: For a time, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What steamship lines are there up here on the north, say north of Portland, plying to the Orient?

Mr. FARRELL: The Canadian Pacific, a line of five ships; the Boston Steamship Company with five ships.

Mr. LOVETT: Is that the Boston Steamship or the Boston Towboat Company?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, they are two corporations, aren't they?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes; I don't know the difference; we call them the Boston Company. They have five ships. I think they are two corporations. And the Holt line I think it is called.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Great Northern?

Mr. FARRELL: I named those first. If I didn't I intended to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then there is a Japanese line here?

Mr. FARRELL: A Japanese line, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there a Dodwell line now?

Mr. FARRELL: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Used to be?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There used to be one from Tacoma and one from Portland, didn't there?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes. I never knew any Portland line; I know they did have a line at one time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Those lines that you have spoken of are all competing for the Oriental business from the Sound here including Vancouver?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

624 Mr. SEVERANCE: Then the other lines below here, the Portland & Asiatic, Pacific Mail, Occidental and Oriental and the Japanese line into San Francisco?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Those are the only ones, are they not?

Mr. FARRELL: I can't say as to San Francisco; there may be another line there that I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you ever visit the Orient in connection with the business of your line when you were representing the Great Northern?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, will you state how the business in the Orient is collected for the ships; they have representatives over there, don't they, these various lines?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How do they collect business for their ships; what kind of organization do they maintain over there?

Mr. FARRELL: Well, in a large part the agents are made up by firms, brokerage firms and shipping firms, that represent a number of steamship lines; others have their direct representatives, direct exclusive agents for freight and passengers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All of these lines of ships, both from San Francisco and from the Sound call at the same ports over there, don't they?

Mr. FARRELL: Very largely, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, there are certain principal ports?

Mr FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Like Yokohama, Kobe, Nagasaki, Shanghai and Hongkong?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, those are the principal ones; and then north China ports and Russian ports.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now these lines, both the San Francisco line and the Portland line and lines up here all reach these various ports in the Orient?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

625 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now do these agents or firms, whichever they happen to be, representing the respective lines at these ports collect any commodities from other points where they are shipped in there and assembled there by these agents to be loaded, or how is it handled?

Mr. FARRELL: The traffic largely originates at the principal ports, Kobe, and is brought in from the outside manufacturing points; Kobe originates a great deal of its trade; we obtain some from Nagasaki and Kioka, and other interior points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now there is plenty of tonnage to handle all that business, isn't there, at present?

Mr. FARRELL: I believe there is, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And there is rather keen competition among the agents in the Orient?

Mr. FARRELL: Very naturally there would be; I am not in touch with it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and the Great Northern at the time you were agent, did it have its big ships then?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far did they go, to Hong Kong?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that business is procured by these agents and firms that are representing the respective lines by personal solicitation of importers, isn't it, a good deal of it?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, I suppose that describes it generally; it is much the same, it is similar in this country or any other place.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Farrell, what steamship lines between Puget Sound and Asiatic ports were in operation in 1900 and 1901, the same that you have named?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir. The Dodwell line——

Mr. LOVETT: Running how many steamers?

Mr. FARRELL: I think they had four, they may have had five; three, and may be five.

626 Mr. LOVETT: Sailing about how often?

Mr. FARRELL: Three a little better than one a month perhaps; I think their regular line was three ships.

Mr. LOVETT: What other lines?

Mr. FARRELL: Nippon, Yusen Kaisha in connection with the Great Northern.

Mr. LOVETT: How many ships did it operate?

Mr. FARRELL: Your question was in 1900?

Mr. LOVETT: 1900, yes, or in the early part of 1901; I presume the conditions were the same in 1901 and 1900.

Mr. FARRELL: Yes. I am not certain as to whether they had in service at that time and operated these ships or not.

Mr. LOVETT: Sailing about how often?

Mr. FARRELL: I think about three weeks, though it may have been every fortnight.

Mr. LOVETT: And what other line?

Mr. FARRELL: I think those were the only two lines that year.

Mr. LOVETT: The Canadian Pacific was not operating then, was it?

Mr. FARRELL: Oh yes. I thought you meant from this port.

Mr. LOVETT: I mean from Sound ports.

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, the Canadian Pacific with five ships.

Mr. LOVETT: Sailing about how often?

Mr. FARRELL: The Empress line, so called. Every three weeks approximately, and the two other ships, I think were on an independent schedule at that time.

Mr. LOVETT: Were those the only lines operating from Sound ports in 1900 and 1901?

Mr. FARRELL: The only lines I recall.

Mr. LOVETT: Now what lines were operating out of Portland at that time, so far as you know, if any, besides the Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. FARRELL: I am not well informed as to the Portland service. They have had generally a line monthly service or better, I think.

627 Mr. LOVETT: Were you ever disturbed by any Portland competition, Portland line competitive for Asiatic business while you were in charge of the Northern Pacific Steamship Co.? Did you ever feel any competition there?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, there was competition.

Mr. LOVETT: By what line?

Mr. FARRELL: I don't know the corporate name, but that running in connection with the Oregon Navigation Company.

Mr. LOVETT: The Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. FARRELL: The Portland & Asiatic. Yes, there was competition.

Mr. LOVETT: You don't know how often the sailings were, do you?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir, I do not; it is my understanding they were then and are now running three ships, but I can't tell you the frequency of the sailings.

Mr. LOVETT: When did you first become connected with the Pacific Coast Company?

Mr. FARRELL: In 1898.

Mr. LOVETT: You have been connected with it ever since?

Mr. FARRELL: Until the close of 1903 actively; I have been a director continuously.

Mr. LOVETT: You have been a director since then?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, continuously.

Mr. LOVETT: You were president of the company for a while, were you not?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: During what period?

Mr. FARRELL: November 1898 until the close of December 1903.

Mr. LOVETT: When did you become connected with the Union Pacific, the Harriman interests?

Mr. FARRELL: February 1906.

Mr. LOVETT: February 1906?

Mr. FARRELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You are not a representative of any Union
628 Pacific or Harriman interest in the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, are you?

Mr. FARRELL: No, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Has either the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific, the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company a dollar's interest in the Pacific Coast Company so far as you know?

Mr. FARRELL: Not so far as I know, no, sir. I think Mr. Harriman has ten shares.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many?

Mr. FARRELL: Ten I think, maybe a hundred; I don't know; merely nominal qualifying shares.

Mr. LOVETT: You have not been in active charge of the business of the Pacific Coast Company in recent years, not since you were director?

Mr. FARRELL: Not since the close of 1903, only incidentally in an advisory capacity with Mr. Ford or Mr. Kendall; not actively at all.

(Witness excused.)

M. H. HAWKINS called as a witness, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?

Mr. HAWKINS: Seattle.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is your business?

Mr. HAWKINS: Assistant manager of the Crescent Manufacturing Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what kind of commodities do you deal?

Mr. HAWKINS: We manufacture spices, extracts, baking powders, Mapleine, importers of teas and coffees.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in what parts of the country do you sell your goods?

Mr. HAWKINS: We have for all of our commodities Idaho, California, Oregon, Montana, Washington; and mapeline shipments go as far east as New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and St. Louis.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you also do business in Utah?

629 Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir, Mapleine principally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you acquainted with the representatives here of the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Short Line and the O. R. & N.?

Mr. HAWKINS: I am with Mr. Rowley, Assistant Solicitor.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He works under Mr. Ellis?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, in Mr. Ellis's office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do these gentlemen come to you to solicit freight?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For what parts of the country?

Mr. HAWKINS: For New Orleans, that is westbound, New Orleans and St. Louis, and eastbound for St. Louis and Denver and Salt Lake.

Mr. SEVERANCE: New York?

Mr. HAWKINS: New York, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Utah points?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How often do you receive a call from the representatives of these people?

Mr. HAWKINS: Oh, I suppose about four or five times a year they would drop in.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Every once in a while?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And ask for your business, do they?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you give them business?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now when that business is going to points in the Mississippi Valley, or east, and you give it to them, do you dictate which way it shall go, whether it shall go by Sacramento and Ogden, or whether it shall go by the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. HAWKINS: We usually leave the routing open.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You usually leave the routing open?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they take the stuff at the station of the Northern Pacific here?

630 Mr. HAWKINS: They take it at Portland, or the Northern Pacific at Spokane.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or the Great Northern?

Mr. HAWKINS: The Great Northern, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you deliver it either to the Great Northern or Northern Pacific, whichever they tell you to?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Whichever place they tell you, and then they take it out at these gateways and take it on from there?

Mr. HAWKINS: Take it on from Portland or Spokane, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you import teas and coffees, do you?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of goods do you have that are westbound that you have spoken of?

Mr. HAWKINS: We frequently get coffees from the south, from South America by way of New Orleans, and baking powder material either from Philadelphia or from St. Louis and eastern points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do these gentlemen coming around soliciting business, solicit business on those commodities?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you give them a part of your business?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they handle it whichever route they please?

Mr. HAWKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: I believe we have no questions.

(Witness excused.)

Com'r LANE: We will now take an adjournment, and this hearing will be continued in Portland on Thursday morning in the Federal court.

631 PORTLAND, OREGON, January 24, 1907—10:00 a. m.

Com'r LANE: We will resume this morning the inquiry into the relations between the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, and the Southern Pacific System, and the effect of those relations, Mr. Severance acting for the Commission, and Judge Lovett and Mr. Cotton for the Southern Pacific and allied lines. Mr. Severance, you may call your first witness.

HENRY HAHN, being called as a witness and having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hahn, where do you live?
Mr. HAHN: Portland.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived here?
Mr. HAHN: Sixteen or seventeen years.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?
Mr. HAHN: Merchant.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Wholesale or retail.
Mr. HAHN: Wholesale grocery.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Wholesale grocery?
Mr. HAHN: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What firm are you connected with?
Mr. HAHN: Wadhams & Company.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you been in that business during the entire period of your residence in Portland?
Mr. HAHN: All but about one year, that was at the beginning; about sixteen years.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And where else have you been in business in Oregon aside from Portland, if anywhere?
Mr. HAHN: At Prineville, Crook County.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you still interests in that part of Oregon?
Mr. HAHN: We have, or I have.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the nature of those interests?

632 Mr. HAHN: Livestock, cattle business and sheep business.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hahn, in getting goods for your store from the east prior to 1901, what lines or road did they come over?
Mr. HAHN: Oh, they came over the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901,—so you will understand the reason that I use 1901, you will recollect of hearing of the acquisition of the stock of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific road, I presume, several years ago?
Mr. HAHN: I do.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That was the year. Prior to that will you state whether or not you and your firm were solicited for shipments of goods from the east by these different lines of road that you have mentioned?

Mr. HAHN: They were, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific, or the Oregon Short Line.

Mr. HAHN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company.

Mr. HAHN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Northern Pacific.

Mr. HAHN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Also the Great Northern.

Mr. HAHN: Also the Great Northern.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation as a part of the Union Pacific System had separate solicitors, did they not?

Mr. HAHN: Separate organizations, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Seeking to get business for their respective roads?

Mr. HAHN: For their respective lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At the present time, is there competition between these lines in the solicitation of business?

Mr. HAHN: Not that is apparent to us.

633 Mr. LOVETT: In what line?

Mr. HAHN: By the same solicitors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the same solicitors?

Mr. HAHN: By the same solicitors, yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Between what lines?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am speaking as between the Oregon Railroad & Navigation and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. HAHN: The Union and Southern, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Those roads are all represented by a single solicitor, so far as your observations go?

Mr. HAHN: Yes, so far as we are aware.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And there is no competition between one road as against the other for your business?

Mr. HAHN: No, sir, none that we know of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hahn, did you in those old days—I think you already stated you shipped over all these different lines formerly?

Mr. HAHN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Hahn, I wish you would describe briefly the character of the country in Eastern Oregon, where you were engaged in the cattle business?

Mr. HAHN: As to the nature of its production?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; the possibilities, and the cations of the people residing there.

Mr. HAHN: I didn't catch that last question.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the avocations of the people residing in that part of the state?

Mr. HAHN: Well, aside from the immediate river counties that adjoin the transportation lines, the country is almost wholly given up to sheep, cattle and horses; the live stock interests predominate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the extent of the country in a general way in miles, that is not reached by railroads?

Mr. HAHN: Oh, roughly speaking, I should say there were fifty thousand square miles of territory that is not reached by railroads.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do the people in that part of the state raise grain to any extent?

634 Mr. HAHN: For home consumption?

Mr. SEVERANCE: They raise only for home consumption?

Mr. HAHN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is by reason of the difficulty of transporting by wagon?

Mr. HAHN: They could not transport it by wagon; it would not be profitable.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is the country over there adapted to raising grain if transportation facilities were offered?

Mr. HAHN: Yes, certain parts of it. I should say that from my knowledge of what I have been over, and I have been over a fair share of it, that it would be safe to say that 25 per cent. of that country is subject and capable of raising ordinary grains,—wheat, barley, potatoes and stuff of that kind.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hahn, I will show you a map which I will have marked by the stenographer as Exhibit 1, and which I am sure must be a good map as it is the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's map—would you like to see it, Mr. Cotton?

Mr. COTTON: No; if you will just describe it by counties, I know the localities.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, I will call your attention to this map and to this country that lies between the Southern Pacific line on the west, the Oregon Short Line on the east, and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation line on the north, and will ask you if that is the country concerning which you have been speaking.

Mr. HAHN: And you want me to describe it by counties?

Mr. SEVERANCE: If you please. In general, is that the country you have been speaking of?

Mr. HAHN: That is the country, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now will you describe it by counties?

Mr. HAHN: Well, I would say Wasco, Crook, Lake, Klamath, Wheeler, Grant, Harney, Malheur, are the principal counties to which I referred.

635 Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Now is there any outlet by rail for that whole country except by the Southern Pacific, the Oregon Railroad & Navigation, or the Oregon Short Line, unless you go way south—well, that would be the Southern Pacific in there.

Mr. HAHN: None at present except those lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Except those lines?

Mr. HAHN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now that map shows certain branches, very few in number, one running down to Shaniko, and one from Arlington south.

Mr. HAHN: Yes, that is to Condon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One from Heppner, is it?

Mr. HAHN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Southeast?

Mr. HAHN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, are there any other branches built into that territory other than are shown on that map, so far as you know?

Mr. HAHN: Not directly into that territory, no, sir. There is a little road out from The Dalles, a short road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long is it?

Mr. HAHN: Oh, I think about—it reaches in there about fifteen or twenty miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago were those branches that now exist built?

Mr. HAHN: Well, the Condon road has only been built here lately, about a year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that road?

Mr. HAHN: The Condon road, the Condon branch.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does that run?

Mr. HAHN: From Arlington to Condon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long is that about?

Mr. HAHN: I think it is about forty odd miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; is that the middle one or the eastern one?

Mr. HAHN: The middle one.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the middle one of the three?

636 Mr. HAHN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago was the Columbia Southern built, the line down to Shaniko?

Mr. HAHN: I think that it is about three or four years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, who built that line, if you know?

Mr. HAHN: Well, Lytle and his associates, I don't know who they were. Originally Lytle and O'Reilly were known as the principal movers in the proposition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, that road is started down toward a fruitful country, isn't it?

Mr. HAHN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And started toward the country that you described as suitable for agriculture?

Mr. HAHN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there a lot of timber in that part of the state?

Mr. HAHN: Yes. There is the east slope of the Cascade Range and the spurs of the Blue Mountains are all covered with timber; this tier of counties in here (referring to Hahn's Exhibit 1 and indicating on same), Klamath, Crook, and that tier of counties has quite an extensive belt of timber which represents the eastern slope of the Cascade Range.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know Mr. E. H. Harriman?

Mr. HAHN: By reputation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know him by sight?

Mr. HAHN: No, sir, I never met the gentleman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never met him. Were you present at the Arlington Club in this city some years ago when he made an address here on the subject of the extension of the Columbia Southern road?

Mr. HAHN: No, sir, I was not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were not present at that meeting?

Mr. HAHN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was a matter of public knowledge, however, immediately afterwards, wasn't it?

637 Mr. HAHN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he at that time stated that he proposed to extend the Columbia Southern down to Bend, didn't he, or some other point?

Com'r LANE: You had better prove that by somebody else; this witness says he didn't hear the statement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He said it was common knowledge here. I will ask him what the common report was.

Mr. LOVETT: Why don't you introduce newspapers and almanacs?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you prefer to have me prove that by somebody else?

Mr. LOVETT: I don't understand we are here interested in that matter at all

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, we are interested in it.

Mr. LOVETT: The Commission can make the investigation as wide as it sees proper; I don't think we have a right to object.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Beg pardon?

Mr. LOVETT: As I understand, the Commission can make the scope of the investigation as wide as it sees proper; it is not a question of materiality so far as we are concerned.

Com'r LANE: I think that the evidence you now purpose introducing is too remote, Mr. Severance. If there are any statements or admissions that were made by Mr. Harriman they can be proved directly at least.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Very well. I misunderstood Mr. Hahn; I talked with him yesterday; I understood him to say that he was present when this statement was made, which was made to a large number of gentlemen, I understand, and I understood Mr. Hahn that he was present; that was a misunderstanding. Now, do you know anything, Mr. Hahn, of the number of people settling around on agency claims after these reports were made that Mr. Harriman purposed to extend that line down there?

Mr. HAHN: Yes; on the strength of the road being extended there was quite a settlement went in there and took up the govern-

638 ment lands on the agency plan, probably to the extent of,—oh, four or five hundred claims were taken up in there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Several hundred families still there?

Mr. HAHN: Yes; there must be at least somewheres about four hundred, between four and five hundred.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The road has not been extended down below Shaniko, has it?

Mr. HAHN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the mode of getting the productions of that region to market?

Mr. HAHN: Wagon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all, I think.

Com'r LANE: You may cross-examine.

Mr. COTTON: We have no examination, your honor.

(Witness Excused.)

E. NEWBEGIN, called as a witness, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Newbegin, where do you live?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long have you lived in Portland?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: About eight years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where did you come from when you came to Portland?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Seattle?

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business, Mr. Newbegin?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Agricultural implements.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of your firm?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: R. M. Wade & Co.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you deal in all kinds of agricultural implements?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I can't say that we do. We deal in that class of implements that is used in this territory, but not all kinds.

639 Mr. SEVERANCE: What kinds do you deal in?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, plows, harrows, wagons and drills, garden tools and such stuff as used on the farm in this territory.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have a very large warehouse across the river here, haven't you? It may not seem large to you, it seems large to me.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, that might depend on what would be called large; we have a warehouse.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, it extends from one street to the other.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Some people might call it large, but some would call it small; a farmer would probably call it large.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, it extends through from one street to the other, doesn't it?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, sir, it is a whole city block.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is the warehouse at which your office is located, isn't it?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at which you transact this business.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What railroad tracks, if any, come by your warehouse?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, the main lines of the Southern Pacific go by, and we have a switch of the O. R. & N. on one side.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Newbegin, you recall, do you not, the time that it first became public in 1901 that the Union Pacific had acquired the Southern Pacific stock?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I can't say——

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't ask you to give the date, but do you remember the circumstance?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I can't give the date, but like most anyone, I am familiar with the newspaper reports of such affairs; but I am not posted on it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand, but you knew at the time the report was made public five or six years ago?

640 Mr. NEWBEGIN: I probably knew it at the time, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Now prior to that time, Mr. Newbegin, over what line of road did you ship your goods from the east?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, we shipped most of our freight, that is my predecessor had been routing most of the freight Southern Pacific, and I followed his footsteps.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, by Southern Pacific, which route do you mean, both routes, or one.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: No, by Ogden; that is, the major part of it, of course not all of it; but the larger portion via Ogden via Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir. Did the Southern Pacific connect with some road east of Ogden at that time over which your goods came, aside from the Union Pacific?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I don't know in regard to the connection. We used to route our stuff by the Rio Grande to Ogden and some connecting line of the Rio Grande road, I think, from Ogden. I am not positive on those roads back there; I have never been east; it was the Rio Grande road and the Colorado Midland, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And thence over the Southern Pacific to Sacramento and up to Portland?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the Southern Pacific have a separate solicitor of traffic at that time?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did the other roads coming into Portland have solicitors for traffic?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: How is that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did the other lines of roads coming in here have solicitors of traffic?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I think they all did from the number of them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they were constantly calling on you soliciting business, weren't they?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes.

641 Mr. SEVERANCE: From what part of the east do you get your goods?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, we ship it from various parts. We ship some from Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Minnesota—different parts of the eastern states.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Newbegin, over what line are you getting your goods at present?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, we ship partly over the Union Pacific and partly the Northern lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Union Pacific do you mean via the Oregon Railroad & Navigation?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, the Oregon Short Line. Of course the Union Pacific gets in here now by the Oregon Short Line and the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you ship now over the Sacramento route?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you solicited to ship by that route by the agents of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you still called on by soliciting agents of the other lines?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Northern lines?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the O. R. & N.?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: The O. R. & N. and Union Pacific, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember, Mr. Newbegin, of the diversion of a shipment of yours at about the time this common ownership took place?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I don't know whether it was about the time that the common ownership took place, but I know it was about the time the Ogden gateway closed, they diverted some cars to us; if it was at the time of the common ownership, I don't remember distinctly about that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the fact about that diversion of cars?

642 Mr. NEWBEGIN: Why, we had some freight that we had ordered in the regular course of business and routed by the lines we had usually routed our freight, and before this stuff had moved the railroads had closed this Ogden gateway, and without consulting us they sent it around the Oregon Short Line and the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you had routed the commodities by way of the Rio Grande and the Southern Pacific, Sacramento route?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I would not say that it was the Rio Grande, but it was the roads connecting into Ogden; I don't know whether it was the Colorado Midland; I don't know which road it was; I don't remember. Of course it was so far back, we pay very little attention to those things and I have not had occasion to look it up.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you do remember it as routed here by way of the Sacramento route?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you say the Ogden gateway was closed and stuff diverted from the North——

Mr. NEWBEGIN (interrupting): I would not say that it was closed; I understand that it was closed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At any rate the shipment was diverted.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: At any rate, in place of bringing it around by Sacramento they brought it in by the Oregon Short Line.

Com'r LANE: You have not fixed that time; can you approximate that time?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you tell what that was?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: No, I could not tell from memory; I could not tell without referring to the correspondence.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Would you say it was five or six years ago?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I would say it was several years ago.

Mr. COTTON: You have your correspondence here in town, haven't you, Mr. Newbegin?

643 Mr. NEWBEGIN: I expect I could find it, yes.

Mr. COTTON: I wish you would kindly refer to it and find out the date.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I think I can give you the exact date.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, get the exact date, please.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I would be glad if you would do that.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes; I can get you the exact date, but I could not give it from memory.

Mr. COTTON: I understand the difficulty about that; that is the reason I want you to look up the correspondence.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What did you say, Mr. Cotton?

Mr. COTTON: I say, I understand the trouble of detailing from memory; that is the reason I want him to look up the correspondence.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you recall from memory whether that took place after you heard of the common ownership of these properties?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well now, I would not like to say, but I would judge so anyway; I would not like to swear that it was so, because I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Newbegin, were you present when Mr. Hahn was describing this country in eastern Oregon?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I think I came in just as he had finished; you were up here with a map; I don't know what was going on, I could not hear very well.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you under present conditions able to do business to a large extent in the country not reached directly by railroads in eastern Oregon?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I don't know as I quite follow your remark, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I say, are you now able to wholesale goods into the country not reached by railroads in eastern Oregon, and if so what means have you of getting the goods there?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: We are on the same basis with our other competitors.

644 Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand; your goods have to be taken in there overland by team.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: In some portions, yes, from the railroad they take it by team.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you ever been over in that country yourself?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: No, I never was over in there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have not. Could you look up the correspondence you think by this afternoon, Mr. Newbegin?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I will try. If you will excuse me as soon as I get through here I will go back and see if I can find it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, all right. Could you give any estimate as to the number of carloads of commodities per year that you shipped into Portland, Mr Newbegin?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: No, I don't know as I could; we never thought enough of it to look it up to see; we are more interested in getting new cars than we are the old ones; I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Several hundred at least?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well I would not like to say, Mr. Severance, because I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you do an active business in your line?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: We try to get our share, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. You may examine. I would like for you to come back with that data.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Newbegin, where does this freight come from that was diverted; where was it coming from when it was diverted?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well now, Mr. Cotton, I am in about the same fix with you as with Mr. Severance; I would have to look it up; I could not say.

Mr. COTTON: All right; I suppose you will find it, and with Mr. Severance's permission I will reserve my cross examination until after Mr. Newbegin looks this up a little bit.

645 Mr. NEWBEGIN: I think I can find the original orders, I am not sure. It may take me longer than I think for, because I don't know just the years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I will say for your assistance that this purchase was in 1901. Would you rather be excused until to-morrow morning or this afternoon?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Tomorrow morning will suit me better. I have some other matters I would like to attend to this afternoon.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; that will probably expedite matters, after refreshing his memory.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: If necessary, perhaps I can bring in the documentary evidence, if you would like to see it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had better bring it in; I think Mr. Cotton would perhaps like to see it.

(Witness Excused).

T. D. HONEYMAN, called as a witness, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is your business?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Wholesale and retail hardware.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in business, Mr. Honeyman?

Mr. HONEYMAN: About thirty years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Twenty years here in Portland?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Thirty years; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the same line of business?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From what points, Mr. Honeyman, do you import into Portland your stock that you handle?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Our goods originate in all the manufacturing centers in this country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That means the Atlantic Seaboard and the interior states?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, sir.

646 Mr. SEVERANCE: You remember of hearing several years ago of the acquisition of the stock of the Southern Pacific road by the Union Pacific, do you not, Mr. Honeyman?

Mr. HONEYMAN: I remember when the matter became public, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that time will you state whether there was any competition here at Portland between the soliciting agents of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Southern Pacific as well as the Northern Pacific or shipments from the east?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, there was competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was rather active at that time, Mr. Honeyman?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And over what lines did you ship your goods coming into Portland in those days?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Over all the transcontinental lines, the Southern Pacific, O. R. & N., Northern, and the Great Northern.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Southern Pacific do you mean both the Sunset route around by boat and rail by the south, and also the Sacramento route?

Mr. HONEYMAN: The Sunset route by boat and rail to the south?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. HONEYMAN: We shipped some goods via Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and also shipped over the Union Pacific, the Short Line and the O. R. & N.?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Northern road?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now at the present time, Mr. Honeyman, are you solicited for shipments via the Sunset route?

Mr. HONEYMAN: The details of solicitation, or the details of shipments I have turned over to employés.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To Mr. Hall?

647 Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you don't meet the solicitors at all yourself now?

Mr. HONEYMAN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now in those days was there also another method of shipment by way of Panama, thence by boats of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co.?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, that still exists.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That still exists, and you ship that way at times?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, we move large quantities that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were there soliciting agents working that line too who called on you?

Mr. HONEYMAN: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was routed east?

Mr. HONEYMAN: It was a rate, or the route was of common knowledge on account of the rates being much less than the railroads and it didn't need solicitation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Now were there also lines of boats coming around Cape Horn up to San Francisco and thence trans-shipped here via the O. R. & N.?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And still are.
Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And did you ship by that route at times?
Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, great quantities.
Mr. COTTON: Mr. Honeyman, how many lines of transportation are there competing here at the present time for your business; that is, over which you can ship? You have mentioned two water lines, have you not?
Mr. HONEYMAN: We have the American Hawaiian line and the Panama line.
Mr. COTTON: And the Northern Pacific?
Mr. HONEYMAN: The Northern Pacific.
Mr. COTTON: Great Northern?
Mr. HONEYMAN: Great Northen.
648 Mr. COTTON: Union Pacific?
Mr. HONEYMAN: Union Pacific.
Mr. COTTON: And Southern Pacific Sunset?
Mr. HONEYMAN: And I presume the Southern Pacific Sunset is still in existence.
Mr. COTTON: You don't know where you get your goods from, do you? That is, do you ship from the Atlantic seaboard at all?
Mr. HONEYMAN: Sunset from the Atlantic seaboard?
Mr. COTTON: Yes.
Mr. HONEYMAN: We do not, Mr. Cotton. The rates, the Sunset being the same as the northern lines, it is not to our advantage to ship Sunset, it is a long, circuitous route.
Mr. COTTON: Then the goods you ship from the Atlantic seaboard which might be in competition with the Sunset you usually bring in here by ocean; do you not?
Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.
Mr. COTTON: By the Panama line or the American Hawaiian line.
Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.
Mr. COTTON: Are your shipments by the Panama line and the American Hawaiian line large or small?
Mr. HONEYMAN: They are large.
Mr. COTTON: You are quite heavy ocean shippers, are you not?
Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.
Mr. COTTON: Comparatively?
Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.
Mr. COTTON: Have you any objection to telling relatively what proportion of your goods are received by ocean and what proportion by rail in this city?
Mr. HONEYMAN: I would be unable to tell that.
Mr. COTTON: From the Atlantic Seaboard?
Mr. HONEYMAN: I would be unable to tell that without referring to our figures, but the tonnage is a considerable item. Every pound that we can move that way we do.
649 Mr. COTTON: You move everything by sea you can from the Atlantic seaboard?

Mr. Honeyman: Therefore, you are not interested in the Sunset route as such?

Mr. HONEYMAN: No.

Mr. COTTON: Now from the railroad country in the interior,—Missouri, Chicago,—do you ship from Missouri, or only from Chicago?

Mr. HONEYMAN: From Chicago and points east. Very little this side of Chicago.

Mr. COTTON: Very little this side of Chicago.

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, very little this side of Chicago.

Mr. COTTON: Now, from that section of the country what competing lines are there?

Mr. HONEYMAN: The solicitation competition from that territory has always been done by the middle west lines, with the Missouri River lines.

Mr. COTTON: About how many of the Missouri River lines are soliciting your business from Chicago points here at the present time?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Well, from the number of solicitors that come into the store, I think that all the lines are represented, which would include the Burlington, the Great Northern, the Milwaukee——

Mr. COTTON: Rock Island?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Rock Island.

Mr. COTTON: Northwestern?

Mr. HONEYMAN: I think the Northwestern, yes.

Mr. COTTON: Illinois Central?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Illinois Central.

Mr. COTTON: And all the so-called Iowa roads are working for your business at the present time?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And they are routed either over the—are the Rio Grande soliciting business too?

Mr. HONEYMAN: I don't know, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: These Iowa roads route their business into this city either over the Northern Pacific, or the Great Northern, or the Union; isn't that right?

650 Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: You ship all three ways?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: The Great Northern reaches this city by what route?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Over the O. R. & N.

Mr. COTTON: It comes in over the O. R. & N. from Spokane?

Mr. HONEYMAN: From Spokane, yes.

Mr. COTTON: You do much shipping that way?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, we have given them quite a little business.

Mr. COTTON: And all of these roads have their solicitors, and they are all visiting you?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And as far as your business is concerned you have many ways of shipping besides the Harriman line, haven't you?

Mr. HONEYMAN: We have plenty ways to get goods in here.

Com'r LANE: Do you route your own business, or do you leave that to the consignor?

Mr. HONEYMAN: We route our own business with the exception of possibly some stuff that is controlled by some of the larger corporations who insist on making their own deliveries, referring to the U. S. Steel Co., for instance.

Com'r LANE: You route your own business with the exception of some of the large corporations, such as the U. S. Steel Co., who insist on the right to route their own business?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Com'r LANE: That is all, Mr. Honeyman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just one moment, Mr. Honeyman. In the old days when you were shipping as you said somewhat by the Sunset, and by the——

Mr. COTTON: I don't understand that the witness said he ever shipped by the Sunset.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He said he did.

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes; we shipped by the Sunset.

651 Mr. COTTON: In the old days?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what he said; I remember that brought out the question whether the Sunset was still in existence.

Mr. HONEYMAN: We ship by the Sunset when it is to our advantage; owing to conditions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I was going to ask you in the old days if the Sunset route and Southern Pacific into Portland did not compete by way of reducing rates as against the Union Pacific and its connections?

Mr. HONEYMAN: The Sunset route used to make low rates into San Francisco forced by steamer conditions to that point, and we used to take advantage of them by adding the steamer or rail local from San Francisco here which made a lower combination.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The soliciting agents of the Sunset and these other lines in the old days, and of the Sacramento route, all of them used to compete at times by way of reducing rates, didn't they, so you could get a better route by one line than by the other.

Mr. HONEYMAN: The published tariffs that were in effect to San Francisco made it to our advantage to ship——

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand that, but there were sometimes when shipments made to Portland,—and I don't mean recently but years ago,—when these competitive differences existed much less than published rates, were they not?

Mr. HONEYMAN: We never had any offers from the Southern Pacific officials better than——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Better than the published rates?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But that difference in the rates that you have spoken of existed, and enabled you to——

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, combination of rates.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, bettered you to ship that way?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: There was a time, Mr. Honeyman, in the 652 old days to which Mr. Severance refers, practically every transcontinental shipment coming in here except on a few of the lines came in at a rate less than tariff, isn't that so?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And are you referring to those old days when you are talking to Mr. Severance?

Mr. HONEYMAN: I was referring to those days, yes.

Mr. COTTON: But you say you did not receive any offer of a cut rate in those old days from the Southern Pacific?

Mr. HONEYMAN: I never had an offer from the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you did from the O. R. & N. as competing with the Southern Pacific and the Sunset Route?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Well——

Mr. SEVERANCE: To the best of your recollection?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Would I be compelled to answer a matter?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have already answered everything moved in here on low rates. I don't care whether you answer it if you don't want to.

Mr. COTTON: I would just as soon have him answer so far as I am concerned.

Com'r LANE: There was a time when that was universal.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that was universal.

Com'r LANE: I don't understand the witness to testify, however, that it was because of competition in rebates between the two lines that he shipped over the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let me ask the question in this way, Mr. Honeyman; when that combination existed which gave you a low rate over the Southern Pacific and Sunset Route, didn't the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company at its eastern connection with the Union Pacific meet that by a cut in the published rate in order to get business?

Mr. HONEYMAN: No; the rates were established from the 653 Atlantic to the California points to meet water competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand that.

Mr. HONEYMAN: And existed for a long time before the Northern lines followed suit. Ultimately they were forced to it and published the same rates. When they did that the business began to move north.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You stated in answer to Mr. Cotton a moment ago there was a time when nearly everything moved in there at less than a published tariff?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now that was a time when these roads were all competing for business, wasn't it?

Mr. HONEYMAN: But it did not necessarily apply between the O. R. & N. and the Sunset route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, I don't mean simply between them, but all the lines were competing for the business and were cutting the rates.

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At that time, weren't they?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Trying to get the business as against the Sunset, and as against the O. R. & N., and as against the Northern Pacific and all of them, each one trying to get the business?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, cutting the rates below the tariff.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To get the business.

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, that was all stopped by the Interstate Commerce Law.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is all.

(Witness Excused.)

O. O. HALL, being called as a witness, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Hall, where do you live?

Mr. HALL: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

654 Mr. HALL: Employed with the Honeyman Hardware Co.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what capacity do you work for them, sir.

Mr. HALL: I look after ther freight shipments.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been with them?

Mr. HALL: A little over four years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Before that time what was your business?

Mr. HALL: I was employed with the O. R. & N. Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you called on at your office, Mr. Hall, by gentlemen soliciting freight?

Mr. HALL: I am, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Quite frequently?

Mr. HALL: Not so much so as I was in the past. I shut them off a little.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they have been around?

Mr. HALL: Oh yes, they come around.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now when the contracting freight agents of the Harriman lines, so-called,—as that expression was used by Mr. Cotton a few minutes ago, I will assume to use it, when those gentlemen come around to see you do they solicit freight for the Sunset route or the Sacramento route or simply for the Harriman line?

Mr. HALL: They solicit for the Harriman lines; they don't mention which routing.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you ship a good deal of your stuff over the O. R. & N., don't you?

Mr. HALL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how does that come out from the east; take it from the Atlantic seaboard territory.

Mr. HALL: Well, by the various lines; that means all of them; and by all of them, I mean the majority of them; there might be some that we don't use.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, Mr. Hall, take the shipments to—I suppose you make shipments by the lakes, don't you, having heavy stuff to ship?

655 Mr. HALL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what ports on the lake does your stuff go?

Mr. HALL: You mean the western port?

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what upper lake ports do you ship from the east?

Mr. HALL: West Superior, Duluth, Chicago, Milwaukee.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And from thence how does your stuff move?

Mr. HALL: From the Northern ports it would move Great Northern and Northern Pacific; from the Chicago and Milwaukee ports ports it would move by some of the Iowa lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To Omaha?

Mr. HALL: To Omaha.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you sometimes also move stuff Duluth to Omaha by the C. St. P. M. & O.?

Mr. HALL: Yes, frequently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are solicited to ship by the Northern Pacific, are your not; their solicitor calls on you, doesn't he?

Mr. HALL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Great Northern?

Mr. HALL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Canadian Pacific; or don't they come in?

Mr. HALL: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Hall, you are solicited now by the freight agents of all the Iowa roads, are you not?

Mr. HALL: With the possible exception of one or two, yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And they ship over the Union Pacific, also over the Northern Pacific, don't they too?

Mr. HALL: If we route it that way, yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And there has been no limitation on the manner in which you can route your freight?

Mr. HALL: None whatever.

Mr. COTTON: What?

656 Mr. HALL: None whatever on the freight that we control.

Mr. COTTON: You route your freight in here anyway that you want to?

Mr. HALL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Now, when your stuff comes over the lakes and comes out here by way of the Great Northern, how does it reach Portland from Spokane?

Mr. HALL: By the O. R. & N.

Mr. COTTON: On the O. R. & N. line? If it comes out by one of the Iowa lines that delivers it at Omaha, it comes in here by way of Huntington?

Mr. HALL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: The Northern Pacific is actively engaged in business here and brings some stuff for you, doesn't it?

Mr. HALL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And there has been no limitation on any route you know of to your knowledge over which you can send your goods.

Mr. HALL: None whatever, to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the case of the Harriman lines you say they merely solicit business for the Harriman line; they route it all by way of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation in here, do they not?

Mr. HALL: They don't route any of it; I route the freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you bring it in that way; it does not come by Sacramento, does it?

Mr. HALL: It does not come by Sacramento, no, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you are not solicited by anybody representing the Harriman lines to allow it to come that way, are you?

Mr. HALL: We are not requested to let it come that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, sir; nor are you requested to let it come by the Sunset route, are you?

Mr. HALL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: You can ship Sacramento or Sunset if you want to, can't you?

657 Mr. HALL: Now, I don't know whether the rates apply to Portland; I think they do; I have a copy of the tariff, but I don't keep up on it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do your own routing, do you?

Mr. HALL: Yes, sir.

(Witness Excused.)

J. K. GILL, being called as a witness and having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live, Mr. Gill?

Mr. GILL: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived here?

Mr GILL: About 35 years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. GILL: Wholesale and retail stationery and books.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have the principal store of that kind in Portland, do you not?

Mr. GILL: Yes, we carry a large line of stock.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Gill, you remember prior to the time in common talk that the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific united, or the stock of one was owned by the other, which way your goods were routed out here from the east?

Mr. GILL: Why, they were routed a variety of ways. We have always shipped some goods by water and some by rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Some by water and some by rail?

Mr. GILL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And over what lines of rail did you ship in these days?

Mr. GILL: Generally by the Union Pacific and the O. R. & N., and sometimes by the—well, we used all the lines, but mainly the O. R. & N. and Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were you in those days solicited for shipments by the Southern Pacific and did you sometimes ship that way?

Mr. GILL: Yes, we sometimes shipped that way but not 658 frequently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, not frequently; the most of your goods came over the other roads?

Mr. GILL: More direct; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But in those days you were called upon and solicited for shipments that way, were you not?

Mr. GILL: Yes, we were occasionally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did your shipments that way come both by the Sunset route and by Sacramento in response to those solicitations?

Mr. GILL: Usually by the Sunset, by the American water lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Morgan line of boats and the rails?

Mr. GILL: Yes, we used that route mostly in those days when we came by the Southern route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now at the present time, are you solicited for shipments via that route by any representative?

Mr. GILL: Not to my knowledge. I don't meet as many of the solicitors; one of our men handles the freight; but I think we are seldom solicited to ship that way if at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know that you are solicited to ship that way at all, do you, Mr. Gill?

Mr. GILL: I don't know; my impression is we are not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the gentleman in your store who is met by these solicitors?

Mr. GILL: Mr. Montgomery, manager of our wholesale department would see more than I would, or the young man that handles the freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are still solicited for shipments by the other lines at times?

Mr. GILL: Why, by the lines of the middle west, the lines east of Omaha; we have solicitations from them frequently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And for the Northern Pacific and Great Northern?

Mr. GILL: Not so much from them; occasionally from the 659 Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, not often.

Mr. COTTON: You have always comparatively been a heavy ocean shipper, have you not, Mr. Gill?

Mr. GILL: Yes, that is true.

Mr. COTTON: By the Panama route until the American Hawaiian line recently giving better service.

Mr. GILL: Yes; formerly by the sailing vessels and later by the Panama lines.

Mr. COTTON: Are you still an ocean shipper?

Mr. GILL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Your Atlantic seaboard stuff comes in largely by ocean, doesn't it?

Mr. GILL: The heavy lines do, yes.

Mr. COTTON: And the other lines come what way?

Mr. GILL: Why, most of our stock originates in New England and

New York points, and if it does not come by water it comes mainly by the Union Pacific and the O. R. & N.

Mr. COTTON: And your manner of shipment has not changed now from what it was, but it has practically gone along in the same way, hasn't it?

Mr. GILL: Why I won't say, except we might perhaps,—I think we do ship a larger proportion of rail stock by the O. R. & N. than we formerly did.

Mr. COTTON: But that has not been a diversion from the Sunset route of the Southern Pacific particularly?

Mr. GILL: No, not at all.

Mr. COTTON: The Sunset route and Southern Pacific are still open to you if you wish to ship that way, are they not?

Mr GILL: Yes, we could ship that way.

Mr. COTTON: You don't know of any limitation upon your routing or manner of shipment?

Mr. GILL: No, I do not.

Mr. COTTON: That is all, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Gill, I think you stated in answer to my question that you did at times ship by the Sunset in the old days and by Sacramento?

Mr. GILL: I did, yes.

660 Mr. SEVERANCE: And you do not do so now?

Mr. GILL: No, I am not aware that we route any; occasionally a shipment may go that way that is routed by the shipper who pays the freight and has the right to route it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But when you route it yourself?

Mr. GILL: Oh, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But in the old days you did?

Mr. GILL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Owing to the solicitation of the agents?

Mr. GILL: That had something to do with it, no doubt, but usually the rate would affect it.

Com'r LANE: What other reason?

Mr. GILL: There might be a personal reason that might lead us to give a man a carload or shipment over his route when there was no other particular reason for doing it. We might be interested in that man and say Yes, we will give you this shipment; that is the only reason to which I referred.

Com'r LANE: Any difference in time?

Mr. GILL: Yes; it would take a little longer that way than by the all-rail routes.

Com'r LANE: So it would be an act of personal preference to give it to the Sunset route?

Mr. GILL: Yes; it would be some personal consideration or something like that; friendship perhaps; that would be all there would be in it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, sometimes, I suppose owing to congested conditions by the all-rail routes, the time made would be fully as short or shorter by the Sunset; isn't that so?

Mr. GILL: Well, that is true; that might happen, but that is an incident we never can foresee. We never route anything in any special way to avoid congestion, because the congestion does not arise until after the——

Mr. SEVERANCE: After the stuff is started?

Mr. GILL: Yes, and we don't know of it until afterwards.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all, Mr. Gill.

661 Mr. COTTON: You don't know how the distance compares from New Orleans to Portland as compared with the distance from New York to Portland, do you; you don't happen to remember?

Mr. GILL: I don't know in miles; I have been over it a great many times; of course it is very much longer by the Southern route.

(Witness excused.)

W. A. MONTGOMERY, called as a witness, was first duly sworn and testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live, Mr. Montgomery?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: In Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: I am in the stationery business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are in the company with Mr. Gill, are you not?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Gill just stated on the stand, Mr. Montgomery, that you meet the freight solicitors more than he does these days?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: That has been true during the last four or five years; yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Montgomery, are you at the present time solicited by agents of the Southern Pacific road for shipments by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say you are not?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And your goods chiefly come out by the O. R. & N., do they not?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Union Pacific?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You ship some over the Northern Pacific?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, some.

662 Mr. SEVERANCE: And some over the Great Northern?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: We have occasionally, but not as much as the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also by water?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, largely by water.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Largely by water; and to what points—by what lines do you ship by water?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: By the American Hawaiian nearly altogether.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That line comes from New York around the Horn or through the Straits to San Francisco, doesn't it?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then how do you bring your stuff up from San Francisco?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Well, the rate we have on that is taken by the American Hawaiian. It nearly all comes by the O. R. & N. or by the line of boats down there, but I don't know anything about it; it may come by several different lines so far as we know, because the rate is given us from New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The American Hawaiian gives you a net rate into Portland?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, they make us a rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it comes up by some boat, does it?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In no case by rail from San Francisco?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: I don't recall any case when it has come by rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you buy any goods in California?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Very few.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What class of goods if any do you buy in California?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: It would be merely shorts of lines that we handle from the east; that would be all; in our lines of books and stationery.

663 Mr. SEVERANCE: And how do they come up from San Francisco?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Sometimes by boat and sometimes by rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Sometimes by the O. R. & N. boats and sometimes by rail. That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Montgomery, the stuff which comes here from the east via the Great Northern reaches Portland over what route from Spokane?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Over the O. R. & N.

Mr. COTTON: It comes in over the O. R. & N. Now you say you ship largely by water at the present time in the American Hawaiian line?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: That is at less rates than the rail rates, isn't it?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And that is the cause of your making your shipments that way?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Are their rates stapled, or are they being cut from time to time in order to make cargoes?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: The rates have been staple so far as I know.

Mr. COTTON: You make your engagements in advance, do you, now?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And therefore you have to contract for space and agree to pay a current rate?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Now when the stuff comes in by the American

Hawaiian line at lesser rates than the rail rates, it reaches San Francisco and comes to Portland in what way?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: We have received it nearly altogether by boat.

Mr. COTTON: And those boats are boats belonging to the O. R. & N. Co.?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes.

664 Mr. COTTON: Yes. And therefore the O. R. & N. steamboat lines are the connection between Portland and San Francisco of the American Hawaiian lines?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Operating in opposition to all of the railroads in the country.

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And they are in direct and intense opposition, aren't they?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Well, so far as we are concerned, it would be because of their rates.

Mr. COTTON: They get your business most of the time?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, sir; heavy goods, I mean.

Com'r LANE: Is the rate you pay a through rate from the east of Portland, or is it the rate to San Francisco and you pay the local?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: No, it is a rate through to Portland.

Com'r LANE: Who pays the rate over the O. R. & N. steamship from San Francisco up.

Mr. MONTGOMERY: The American Hawaiian line.

Com'r LANE: Do you know what that rate is?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: I do not, no.

Mr. COTTON: Now, on your San Francisco stuff, some of it you say comes by rail and some by the O. R. & N. boats?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: I should have said altogether by boat. I referred to, I think I referred to one or two instances where it came by rail in case of some long delay perhaps, where the agents of the American Hawaiian had brought it that way; that had nothing to do with us, except I recall the case; but it would not form the rule.

Mr. COTTON: I mean your short orders.

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Oh, our short orders; I thought you meant the American Hawaiian shipments.

Mr. COTTON: No, no.

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Short orders we can take the boat or rail, whichever we choose.

665 Mr. COTTON: You say you are not separately solicited, or no Southern Pacific solicitor solicits you; what do you mean by that?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Not that I know of; I don't know that any solicitor has come to us representing himself to be for the Southern Pacific.

Mr. COTTON: Alone?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Alone.

Mr. COTTON: Are you solicited by many railroad men now for your business?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: I don't know that we are solicited by as many as formerly. We use the O. R. & N. in our business, because of the time concerned largely.

Mr. COTTON: You would prefer the O. R. & N. line so far as the rail, rather than shipping around by the Sunset or Sacramento, wouldn't you?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Well, we would almost have to use it.

Mr. COTTON: You would not route that way if they insisted on it, would you?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: The Southern Pacific?

Mr. COTTON: Yes, Sacramento.

Mr. MONTGOMERY: No, we would not.

Mr. COTTON: There is a substantial difference in time and always has been, hasn't there?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Yes, I think on the average there has been.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know of any limitation upon your routing or the manner in which you can route goods in this country by reason of any railroad restrictions of any kind?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: I do not.

Mr. COTTON: You are free to ship any way that you want to, aren't you?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: At least during the time that I have been acquainted with the road.

Mr. COTTON: That has been how many years?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: Oh, that has been practically since 1901; I knew about the route before, but Mr. Gill received more of that previous to that.

666 Mr. COTTON: But ever since that time you have known of no limitation of your routing goods in this city in any way whatsoever?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: No.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Whatever might be your action in case you were solicited to ship by the Sacramento route, you don't get any such request now, do you?

Mr. MONTGOMERY: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

EDWARD EHRMAN was called as a witness and after being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live, Mr. Ehrman?

Mr. EHRMAN: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived here?

Mr. EHRMAN: Twenty years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. EHRMAN: Wholesale grocer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you been in that business all the time you have been living here?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From what points do you procure the goods that you sell?

Mr. EHRMAN: From what points?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, from what points do you procure the goods you sell? From where do you ship them?

Mr. EHRMAN: Where do we ship them?

Mr. SEVERANCE: From where do you ship goods to your store?

Mr. EHRMAN: From all points east.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Atlantic Seaboard and the middle states.

Mr. EHRMAN: The Atlantic Seaboard west and south.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And has that been the case during all the time you have been in the business?

667 Mr. EHRMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the time the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific came under the same management, were you called on by solicitors of the Southern Pacific and of the O. R. & N. both?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did they ask for your business?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One against the other?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there now any solicitation for business by one of these lines against the other?

Mr. EHRMAN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What lines do you ship over, Mr. Ehrman?

Mr. EHRMAN: We use all the lines, the Union, Southern, Great Northern, and Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What goods do you get over the Southern Pacific now?

Mr. EHRMAN: Well, mostly goods originating in the south.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, originating in Texas?

Mr. EHRMAN: Texas and Louisiana.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Texas or Louisiana?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And California; do you get goods from California?

Mr. EHRMAN: We do some.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Fruits, canned goods?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you bring up commodities from San Francisco to some extent?

Mr. EHRMAN: To some extent, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how do they come, by boat or by rail?

Mr. EHRMAN: Well, they come both ways.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And has that always been the case, they always come both ways?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now the steamship service between here
668 and San Francisco is called now the San Francisco & Portland, being the same ships as the O. R. & N., formerly called the O. R. & N.?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do you ship over that line, or have you always shipped over that line more or less from San Francisco?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And have been solicited for business over that line?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are there other ships running up here from San Francisco?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Any other regular line?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, there is a regular line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of it?

Mr. EHRMAN: I don't know the name of it, I don't know the name of the line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know the name of the manager?

Mr. EHRMAN: No, sir, I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are there also independent boats, tramp boats?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And some business is done over them?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what parts of the Northwest do you wholesale goods, Mr. Ehrman?

Mr. EHRMAN: Well, through the states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you formerly ship goods from the east by the Sunset route?

Mr. EHRMAN: To a limited extent only.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that was largely by reason of active solicitation from their agents, wasn't it?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you do not ship that way?

Mr. EHRMAN: How?

669 Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you ship that way, now, except goods coming up from Louisiana and Texas?

Mr. EHRMAN: We would rather not; we don't care to ship that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No. I suppose you would not be able to tell, Mr. Ehrman, without reference to books, the number of carloads of stuff you get in here every year, could you?

Mr. EHRMAN: No, sir, I could not tell you that; our freight men might, I could not.

Mr. COTTON: You can ship by the Sunset if you want to?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: But you don't want to?

Mr. EHRMAN: We prefer not to, it takes longer.

Mr. COTTON: It takes longer?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Now you spoke about a regular line of boats; did you mean a regular line in addition to the O. R. & N. steamers?

Mr. EHRMAN: I think there is a regular line; they come here regularly, I think they are a regular line.

Mr. COTTON: Yes. Then in addition to that there are quite a number of tramp boats?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: You know of no limitation upon your routing the freight in any way whatsoever in this country, do you?

Mr. EHRMAN: No; the railroads usually respect our routing that we give them.

Mr. COTTON: You route any way that you want to; isn't that right?

Mr. EHRMAN: Yes, so far as I know.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you are sometimes, or used to be sometimes by personal solicitation induced to route a certain way?

Mr. EHRMAN: Well, that is mostly different connecting lines, the Omaha and Iowa lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, at present that is the case?

670 Mr. EHRMAN: No; it always was that way, I believe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I asked you about the Sunset routing before. That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Now, Mr. Ehrman, when you shipped by the Sunset why did you ship that way in the good old days? Do you want to say why?

Mr. EHRMAN: Well, I have no particular reason.

Mr. COTTON: Was that because of the personal solicitation of the agent, or what was it?

Mr. EHRMAN: Well, perhaps it was.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. L. A. LEWIS called as a witness, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?

Mr. LEWIS: I live in Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived there?

Mr. LEWIS: I was born here and lived here most altogether with the exception of a few years when I was away at college and school.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business, Mr. Lewis?

Mr. LEWIS: Wholesale grocer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of your firm?

Mr. LEWIS: Allen & Lewis.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that an old firm here?

Mr. LEWIS: Well, it is not a firm to-day, but it has been in existence for fifty odd years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Continuously?

Mr. LEWIS: Continuously, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lewis, prior to the acquisition of the stock of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific road were you solicited for freight shipments by agents of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also by agents of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes, sir.

671 Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you now solicited for shipments by these respective lines as against each other?

Mr. LEWIS: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do your goods come from?

Mr. LEWIS: They come from the east and the middle west and California largely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you formerly at times ship over the Southern Pacific in response to these solicitations?

Mr. LEWIS: I don't think we ever shipped very much, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you ship some that way?

Mr. LEWIS: I think there was, an occasional carload or so was sent in, of some goods from New York, or from Europe that would come by way of New Orleans.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; you do not ship that way now, or do you at times?

Mr. LEWIS: I think there is an occasional shipment from the south that comes by way of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you are not solicited for Atlantic seaboard shipments that way now?

Mr. LEWIS: Not to my knowledge, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What way does most of your stuff come in?

Mr. LEWIS: It comes in by the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern; that is, from the east, of course.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, and not by way of Sacramento?

Mr. LEWIS: Not to my knowledge, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what part of the country do you wholesale?

Mr. LEWIS: Oregon, Washington and Idaho, a little in California, and some to Alaska.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You ship down the line of the Southern Pacific towards San Francisco a part of the way, don't you?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far down?

Mr. LEWIS: Well, we don't ship much beyond Ashland.

672 Mr. SEVERANCE: How do you make your shipments up the Columbia River, by rail or water?

Mr. LEWIS: Why wherever there is water competition we ship it—well, we ship whichever way the shipper instructs us to, but we can ship up to The Dallas to-day by water and a part of last year we could ship up as far as Kennewick and Pasco, and those points on the Columbia River by water.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: The Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Union Pacific are your principal rail lines over which you ship at the present time?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: In fact, they always have been, have they not, Mr. Lewis?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: There has been no change for a number of years?

Mr. LEWIS: No; the Union Pacific has gotten the bulk, the greater portion of our business always.

Mr. COTTON: The Union Pacific has handled the bulk of your business always?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Now when your business comes in over the Great Northern it reaches Portland via what road?

Mr. LEWIS: Sometimes we order it around by way of Seattle and sometimes it comes through by way of Spokane and the O. R. & N.

Mr. COTTON: And there is no limitation upon your shipping that way, is there?

Mr. LEWIS: What do you mean by limitation?

Mr. COTTON: Well, I mean the O. R. & N. does not officiously undertake to restrict your shipments in any way, do they?

Mr. LEWIS: No; they don't like us to do it though, but there is no limitation on our ability to do it.

Mr. COTTON: You don't know of any limitation of your ability to ship by any of the old routes, do you?

Mr. LEWIS: No, sir. Well, except this Ogden gateway
673 that you hear about; I don't think that you can ship by that route to-day; I am not sure of that, though.

Mr. COTTON: But you never did ship that way, did you?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Some?

Mr. LEWIS: Some.

Mr. COTTON: And that was through the solicitation of the D. & R. G. and other eastern connections.

Mr. LEWIS: Yes; but occasionally when we would get "put out," what we would consider wrong treatment on the part of the Union Pacific, we would ship the cars around there.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; But other than that you don't know of any change which has taken place in the transportation or shipping conditions up here?

Mr. LEWIS: No, sir—that is, from the east?

Mr. COTTON: Yes, that is from the east?

Mr. LEWIS: No.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you say when you get "put out" with the Union Pacific you ship around by the Ogden gateway, you mean by Sacramento, don't you?

Mr. LEWIS: No; I mean Denver and Rio Grande road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And thence here over the Sacramento route?

Mr. LEWIS: No, thence here over the O. R. & N. We used to make a distinction between the Short Line and the O. R. & N. in giving them freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. LEWIS: I say we would occasionally make a distinction between the O. R. & N. and the Short Line in giving them freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, how? The Oregon Short Line doesn't reach Portland?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes; that is a part of the Union Pacific system. All goods that come over the Union Pacific come over the Union Pacific and then the Oregon Short Line, then the O. R. & N. to Portland.

674 Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand that, but the Oregon Short Line is a road that connects at Ogden with the Union Pacific?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co. does not reach Ogden, they only go to Huntington, don't they?

Mr. LEWIS: Yes; they only go to Huntington, don't they?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't understand your answer.

Mr. LEWIS: I may have said the Short Line; I meant to say the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, the Union Pacific.

Mr. LEWIS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Those were the days when they were separate, not during the reign of the Union Pacific.

Mr. LEWIS: No; that has been comparatively recently.

(Witness Excused.)

THOMAS MCCUSKER was called as a witness, and being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived in Portland?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Eighteen years, a little over.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. MCCUSKER: The real estate business now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in that business?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Since the 1st of December, one year ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that time what was your business?

Mr. MCCUSKER: For about sixteen years with the Southern Pacific, and about a year ago, in October, I believe, I was with 675 the Harriman lines as Assistant General Agent of the O. R. & N., the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was your position with the Southern Pacific road?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Contracting Freight Agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: During all the time that you speak of?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, a part of the time. First, I was handling claims and work in the office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years were you contracting freight agent prior to 1901?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I think I was Contracting Freight Agent for the Southern Pacific for thirteen or fourteen years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, during that time, Mr. McCusker, what were your duties?

Mr. MCCUSKER: As Contract Freight Agent they were to solicit freight for the Southern Pacific both via the Sunset Gulf line, the Sunset all rail, and the Southern Pacific via Ogden and Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now during those days prior to 1901, did you in soliciting freight by way of Ogden work in connection with any line leaving east from Ogden other than the Union Pacific?

Mr. McCUSKER: I worked with the Missouri Pacific, the Rock Island, Burlington and the Rio Grandes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What road was your strongest competitor for business into Portland when you were representing the Southern Pacific alone?

Mr. McCUSKER: We considered the Union Pacific and O. R. & N. the strongest competitors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What classes of goods did you solicit shipments of?

Mr. McCUSKER: All classes of merchandise.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And from what points?

Mr. McCUSKER: All points east; the Atlantic seaboard, Chicago territory, Pittsburg territory, Missouri River territory.

676 Mr. SEVERANCE: And in a general — who were the persons solicited for shipments; were they wholesale men here in Portland?

Mr. McCUSKER: Wholesale men and retail men.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did you also solicit shipments out of Portland?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To points competitive with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co. and Union Pacific?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: State what classes of Commodities were shipped out of here in competition with the Southern line?

Mr. McCUSKER: Hops and prunes, hides, and I don't know about the lumber shipments; that is, so far as the Union Pacific was concerned.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Speak a little louder, I can't hear you?

Mr. McCUSKER: I say regarding the lumber I don't believe that we solicited the lumber in those days in competition; in fact, I know we did not via Ogden; those were the principal commodities.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Hops and prunes?

Mr. McCUSKER: Hops, prunes, potatoes and hides, and things of that kind.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, is the production of hops large or small in this community?

Mr. McCUSKER: Large.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And whereabouts?

Mr. McCUSKER: Principally in the Willamette Valley. I presume 90 per cent. of the growth, that is the Oregon hops grown, Oregon and Washington hops grown perhaps are within the Willamette Valley.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is a very large traffic, isn't it?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir, quite a territory.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. McCUSKER: Quite a territory; yes, quite large; grown in Linn, Lane Counties, Marion County, Washington County, Polk County, and some in Multnomah County.

677 Mr. SEVERANCE: How did the hops, the shipment of which you solicited, move to the east?

Mr. McCUSKER: Largely Sunset; any Atlantic seaboard and European shipments went Sunset, Sunset Gulf.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Short Line and Union Pacific a competitor with you for that business?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And was it your strongest competitor?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, I considered it so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did they get their hops into Portland from the Willamette Valley?

Mr. McCUSKER: The boats of the O. R. & N. Company and of the Oregon City Transportation Company, and frequently via the Southern Pacific lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who would bring them into Portland?

Mr. McCUSKER: The shipments that originated in the valley were solicited not only by the O. R. & N., and Union Pacific, but the Northern, Great Northern, all lines. Hops were, an average year perhaps running,—oh, from seventy-five to a hundred thousand bales.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many carloads would that make?

Mr. McCUSKER: Well, it is a hard matter to tell in carloads; an average car would not exceed over 15,000, and that would be a pretty large car.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Fifteen thousand pounds?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many pounds in a bale?

Mr. McCUSKER: From 180 to 200, I think, in that neighborhood.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company had boats on the Willamette, didn't they?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far up did those boats run?

678 Mr. McCUSKER: When the water would permit, they would run to Corvallis.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is that?

Mr. McCUSKER: About ninety miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Ninety miles from Portland?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By rail or by boat?

Mr. McCUSKER: By rail. I don't know what the river distance would be.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you say they went up as far as Corvallis when the water would permit.

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At times, they were unable to get there.

Mr. McCUSKER: Oh yes, frequently unable to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then how far up would they go?

Mr. McCUSKER: Well, they would go to Salem, Dayton, Independence—they would go as far as they could.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, they always went as far as Salem, didn't they?

Mr. McCUSKER: Well, I could not say as to that; it is possible sometimes they would run only to Dayton.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Run what?

Mr. McCUSKER: To Dayton.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Dayton?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is Salem from here?

Mr. McCUSKER: 52 miles by rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, is the Willamette River in the center of this hop district?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, I should say it was.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So the hop district is tributary to boats on the river?

Mr. McCUSKER: Tributary to the boats; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is also tributary to the rail line of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the same hops could be shipped either way?

679 Mr. McCUSKER: Yes; that is, a good portion of it; it would have to be hauled to the river the same as it would the cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. McCUSKER: It would have to be hauled to the river the same as it would to the car.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand; but the river line of steamers and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company tapped the same territory to a large extent?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is the territory in which these hops are grown?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now when hops moved over the O. R. & N. they were brought to Portland by the boats and then put into cars here, were they not?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, by the boats, as I said, or rails; sometimes we brought them in, if they happened to be in our possession, and routed that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you had soliciting agents at work in the valley and you worked there yourself?

Mr. McCUSKER: No, I didn't work in the valley. The traveling freight agents and the local station agents solicit the valley business, but a great many of the shippers or dealers were located in Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And those shipments were solicited by you?

Mr. McCUSKER: A great many of them were solicited by me, but largely by our traveling representatives.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is in the valley?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But I mean as far as the shipments controlled by the men here in Portland?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were under your jurisdiction?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the O. R. & N. had agents actively at work soliciting the same traffic?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

680 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. McCusker, when those hops came into Portland by boat did they always go out all rail, or would they sometimes go by the O. R. & N. boats to San Francisco?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I don't think they went by boat to San Francisco; I don't remember of any going by boat.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They went east by the O. R. & N. and its eastern connections?

Mr. MCCUSKER: The O. R. & N., the Northern or Southern.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Well now, did you also route hops east by Sacramento?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you were soliciting for the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And from Ogden how would they move on to the east?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Via the Rio Grandes in connection with the Burlington, Rock Island, or Missouri Pacific, or Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, or the Union Pacific?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did these lines east of Ogden, such as the Rio Grande, the Missouri Pacific and Rock Island have soliciting agents here?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did you work with them in securing traffic,—through traffic, I mean?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I worked with them providing they were not soliciting against the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, that is what I mean, when they were soliciting business?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I frequently had to compete with the Rio Grandes or these other lines trying to solicit it by the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When they were working with the O. R. & N.?

681 Mr. MCCUSKER: When they were working—of course when they were working for or willing to ship via Southern Pacific, why I worked with them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your sole duty was to get all the traffic you could over the rails of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MCCUSKER: That was the point exactly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Either via Ogden or via the Sunset?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And without reference to what road it might move over after it reached Ogden?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now in a general way in soliciting business for the Southern Pacific, was there any difference made in the effort by you to handle orders by reason of the point of origin of the traffic; that is, would you endeavor to throw any class of business via the Sunset, and another class via Ogden, or how?

Mr. McCUSKER: The Atlantic seaboard business we tried to get via the Sunset Gulf.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So as to get the entire haul?

Mr. McCUSKER: To get the long haul on it; that was the object, yes, sir. If we could not get it via Sunset we would take it via Ogden, of course.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did Chicago business move in those days so far as the Southern Pacific's share of it is concerned?

Mr. McCUSKER: Via Ogden.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Via Ogden, and Sacramento, or not?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Com'r LANE: When was that?

Mr. McCUSKER: That was prior to the consolidation of the Southern Pacific with the Union Pacific?

Com'r LANE: For how long a period prior to that?

Mr. McCUSKER: Ever since my connection with the company.

Com'r LANE: A large body of freight moved that way?

Mr. McCUSKER: Considerable freight moved that way, yes sir.

682 Com'r LANE: The same rates you have via Ogden to Portland that way?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes; the same rates were in effect via Ogden as via all the other lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you would get that business at Ogden from what line?

Mr. McCUSKER: We would get it from the Rio Grandes or the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Rio Grande when it came that way would get it at Denver, I suppose, or Colorado Springs, from the Rock Island or Burlington or the Missouri Pacific?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And sometimes you got it also from the Union Pacific, did you not?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, were you under any instructions in those days to favor one line or the other east of Ogden in working for business?

Mr. McCUSKER: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not care which way it moved so long as you got the haul from Ogden to Portland?

Mr. McCUSKER: So long as I got the haul; I worked with all lines so long as I got the haul.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that was done with the consent of your superiors, wasn't it?

Mr. McCUSKER: Oh yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who was, or who were the parties representing the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company at Portland at that time, who occupied a position similar to yours with the Southern?

Mr. McCUSKER: Mr. A. A. Morse.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. A. A. Morse?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is Mr. Morse now?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I saw him in the building here a while ago in the room.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is his business at present?

683 Mr. MCCUSKER: Well, I don't know; he is special agent of some kind for the O. R. & N. He was General Agent, he was Contracting Freight Agent, and then became General Agent and has been succeeded by Mr. McCorquodale, and he is Special Agent of some kind, I don't know what his duties are.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of what company was Mr. Morse the General Agent?

Mr. MCCUSKER: The O. R. & N. and the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Union Pacific?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He was not an officer, not an official of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MCCUSKER: He was, yes, about a year ago, I believe—two years ago, rather. My connection—when I went from the Southern Pacific to the O. R. & N. he became General Agent of all the lines, and I became Assistant General Agent of all the lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, Mr. Morse, was then your immediate superior?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you were representing all the Harriman lines here?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the other gentleman you spoke of, Mr. McCorquodale?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes; he is the present General Agent of the O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And was he here in the days when you were connected with the road?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes; he has had several positions; he has been in the office, and, I believe, traveling freight agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For what road?

Mr. MCCUSKER: The O. R. & N., and I believe at one time he was connected with the Short Line when they were all separated, had separate solicitors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. MCCUSKER: For the Oregon Short Line when they had separate solicitors.

684 Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, as distinguished from the O. R. & N.?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes; and he was also at Spokane with this company, I believe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now at the time you were the Contracting Freight Agent of the Southern Pacific prior to the acquisition of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific, who was your immediate superior officer?

Mr. McCUSKER: Mr. E. P. Rogers, for a number of years, and Mr. C. H. Markham and Mr. R. B. Miller and Mr. W. E. Coman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now take them up backwards; who is Mr. Coman?

Mr. McCUSKER: Mr. Coman is now Assistant General Freight Agent of the Harriman lines in Oregon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Both lines?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Southern and O. R. & N.?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who is Mr. Miller?

Mr. McCUSKER: Mr. Miller is General Freight Agent of these lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what are the other gentlemen?

Mr. McCUSKER: Mr. Markham was General Freight and Passenger Agent of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is he now?

Mr. McCUSKER: He is now in Beaumont, Texas, connected with the McGuffey Oil Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, he has left the railroad service?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: After the two roads were working in harmony here, what position did Mr. Markham have here, if you remember?

Mr. McCUSKER: After——?

Mr. SEVERANCE: After 1901, yes.

Mr. McCUSKER: He left Portland and went to San Francisco, I believe, as Assistant Traffic Manager, and from there to 685 Texas as General Manager of one of the lines; then he severed his connection with the company and is manager of the McGuffey Oil Company now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know a gentleman here named Overbaugh?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is his first name?

Mr. McCUSKER: Charles, I believe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is his business?

Mr. McCUSKER: I believe he is now superintendent or assistant superintendent of the water lines. I saw from the papers——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you would simply know from the paper?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was he working for the paper or any of these companies when you were employed by them?

Mr. McCUSKER: He was Traveling Freight Agent for the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. McCusker, after the spring of 1901, when the two companies commenced operating together, when Mr. Stubbs took charge of the traffic of all of the lines in July, 1901, after that time was there any difference in your duties, or were you acting under any different instructions as to soliciting traffic?

Mr. McCUSKER: Not immediately afterwards.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When were you, if at all?

Mr. McCUSKER: I can't say just when, but some little time after that we were called in a meeting with Mr. Campbell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Ben Campbell?

Mr. McCUSKER: Mr. Ben Campbell, who was Traffic Manager, I believe, at that time here, or General Freight Agent of the O. R. & N. We were told to solicit Atlantic seaboard business via Sunset; that is, certain business where the local to New York would not be too great; and other business west of there, while I was not told to actively solicit that, at the same time I was told to influence it via the Union Pacific.

686 Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, were the same instructions given to the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's representatives?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At that time?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was any reason given why it was desired that the business should be divided in this way, Mr. McCusker?

Mr. McCUSKER: Well, the reason was that they wanted the most revenue for the least service, was about the way I figured it. They did not want to perform the long service for the same revenue that they would get for a short service, and they wanted the freight from the territory that would give them the best revenue for the system.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And by bringing it all the way Sunset from New York all the revenue came to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. McCUSKER: All except the local, which they would have to absorb from the point of origin.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And if it came by the Union Pacific of course they only got the routing west of Omaha.

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes. In the solicitation of that business, however, if the men did not want to ship Sunset, of course we did not try to force him to ship Sunset, to jeopardize his business; they would ship it the other way; but we were told to influence it that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, if you were unable to procure that business to move Sunset, then you were instructed to obtain it over or via the Union Pacific?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you were also instructed at that time to work the Southern Pacific Ogden route with the Union Pacific?

Mr. McCUSKER: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not solicit business by Sacramento in other words, is that the case?

687 Mr. McCUSKER: The Ogden gateway was closed to business for Portland via Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Via Sacramento?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: When was that done?

Mr. McCUSKER: That, I could not say the date, but it was after the consolidation of the lines; in fact I believe the divisions don't apply that way now today via Ogden and Sacramento to Portland on any business.

Com'r LANE: How did they close it?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I presume they closed it by withdrawing the rates, or the divisions rather.

Com'r LANE: Was that done?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes. We arbitrarily diverted freight by the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Union Pacific you mean——

Mr. MCCUSKER: By the Short Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Short Line.

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Com'r LANE: You mean that all the previous existing rates by way of Ogden and Sacramento were withdrawn?

Mr. MCCUSKER: The division was changed in some way, I don't know just what; but we had instructions not to solicit any business via Ogden.

Com'r LANE: Who gave you those instructions?

Mr. MCCUSKER: They came from Mr. Campbell, Traffic Manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you say solicit by way of Ogden; you mean from Ogden here by way of Sacramento?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I mean when I say via Ogden, we figured that Southern Pacific via Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is what you mean?

Mr. MCCUSKER: But then via Ogden was the gateway; Sacramento was not the gateway, Ogden was the gateway.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then the substance of it as I understand
688 it, is that the instructions given to all these gentlemen that were handling this matter of soliciting business were not to solicit business by way of Ogden, Sacramento to Portland, but Ogden direct by the Short Line?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes; anything west of the Atlantic seaboard was to come Union Pacific, Short Line and O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And not by Sacramento?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now prior to this amalgamation of interest, Mr. McCusker, was lumber shipped out of here into say the Rocky Mountain territory over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't think so?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know of lumber moving over it?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I don't think any lumber moved that way; not to my knowledge; I can't recall if it did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't remember that?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Campbell said the other day at Seattle that it did.

Mr. MCCUSKER: Well, I would not say that it didn't; it might have done so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What about the movement of wool from this region to the Atlantic seaboard; take the Willamette Valley wool.

Mr. MCCUSKER: The Willamette Valley wool we tried to ship via

Sunset, Sunset Gulf, solicit it that way, and tried to,—we competed for it strongly in that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I did not hear that. Mr. Stenographer, read that answer.

Answer read.

689 Mr. MCCUSKER: You understand that wool was sometimes brought to Portland to be baled here. Consequently, when it got here it might be a matter of competition for all hands.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, did the wool in the old days prior to the amalgamation move to the east both Sunset and Ogden?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I could not say; I presume that it did, yes; I could not say; that is, Valley wool, I mean.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; that is what I am talking about, the Valley wool.

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes. I could not say about Ogden, because the wool shipments were to Boston points and we tried naturally to get that via the long haul; I could not say whether it moved via Ogden or not; I presume that some of it did, but I would not swear to that.

Mr SEVERANCE: Did any live stock move from this region to the east?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Via the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. MCCUSKER: I don't think so. I don't think they would solicit that on account of the mountain haul and the extra distance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you don't remember of soliciting live stock?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, I never solicited any live stock.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I mean.

Mr. MCCUSKER: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. McCusker, was there any competition here in those days for passenger business between the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How was it on passenger traffic between here and San Francisco?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Now you understand that I was not in the passenger department.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, you were not in the passenger department.

690 Mr. MCCUSKER: No; I only know that there was the competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; but you were not soliciting passenger business?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, I was not in the passenger business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your work was confined to freight?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now do you remember whether years ago there was any competition between the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N. and its eastern connections in rates?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, there was competition between all lines regarding rates.

Com'r LANE: Now was that condition different in 1900 from what it was in 1896 or 1897?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir. The rates in recent years have been the same rate via all lines; the same tariff was applied. There was a time, but it is a number of years ago, that I hear them referring to what they call "old times," when there was a tariff to San Francisco proper. Using the combination from San Francisco to Portland, it gave the Southern Pacific an advantage of ten cents a hundred. It was a published tariff, however, and we handled considerable business both carload and less than carload on that rate.

Com'r LANE: From here there.

Mr. McCUSKER: From the east here; and of course vice versa on New York business. This was called the Sunset tariff or Southern Pacific tariff to San Francisco. Then by agreement or pressure brought by the other roads the tariffs were amended to correspond on all lines so that at the time of the consolidation there was no difference in favor of the Southern Pacific as against the others, and for sometime prior to that.

Com'r LANE: So that in 1901 when this consolidation took place the conditions as to tariffs were just the same as they are today?

Mr. McCUSKER: So far as I know, yes.

691 Com'r LANE: How many years before 1901 had that condition existed?

Mr. McCUSKER: Well a number of years; I could not say how long, but it must have been at least five, possibly more; I don't believe that that old tariff had been in effect for ten years or possibly more than ten, when that was straightened out. I can't give you the dates; of course they have got the tariffs on file; that could be obtained.

Com'r LANE: Up to that time was there considerable competition in rates between the Sunset Route and the Union Pacific for the Portland business?

Mr. McCUSKER: Well, up to that time I presume there was more or less—I presume you have reference to cutting the rates?

Com'r LANE: Yes.

Mr. McCUSKER: Possibly at that time there might not have been so much cutting of rates for the reason that ten cents differential took the business to the Southern Pacific. Then in order of course to meet that the other lines had to cut the rate or meet that competition prior to the readjustment of the tariff.

Com'r LANE: But they did not do that by filing a new tariff?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, they did subsequently, but not at that time. They filed supplementals, I believe, making a tariff change; there was some change anyhow; the tariff was readjusted. The cut rates, however, were in effect after the rates were all the same when they got actively engaged in competing for business.

Com'r LANE: Now did those cut rates exist up to 1901?

Mr. McCUSKER: No, I don't—well, possibly they did; yes. Yes, I guess they did. There was more or less cutting of rates, I could not say just how much.

Com'r LANE: That was as against the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific would cut a rate?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No; as against any line; the Northern 692 Pacific or the Great Northern; it was one road trying to get the business. It frequently happened that the line west, possibly the Union Pacific west, the Northern or the Great Northern did not cut the rate, but the trunk line or the Missouri River lines did cut the rate; but the solicitor who got that would offer the inducement over his connections.

Com'r LANE: Was the Union Pacific at that time in the same position that the Great Northern was and Northern Pacific as to the cutting of rates as against the Southern?

Mr. MCCUSKER: They were all on a par at that time, yes, sir. Rates were the same by all lines.

Com'r LANE: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there a large amount of potatoes raised here in the Valley?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in the days that these lines were competitive was there active solicitation for the shipment of those potatoes?

Mr. MCCUSKER: The shipments of potatoes from the Valley went via Southern Pacific into Texas and Louisiana, and down in there, and I presume,—I don't know, I could not say whether they were competing for that particular business, but I presume they were; that was as a rule solicited by the outside men.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the men that were up in the Valley?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now what about fruits to the east, apples?

Mr. MCCUSKER: We handled no fruits via Southern Pacific. Fruits coming from Southern Oregon went over other lines for the reason that they had to use refrigerator cars, and I believe the Southern Pacific's charge, or the charge via on the refrigerator cars was fifty dollars that way; it was more anyhow; it was enough to turn the business this way; and the service being a couple of days longer the shipper naturally wanted to get quick action.

693 Mr. SEVERANCE: On fruit?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes; no fruit could be shipped of course via the Sunset.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I see. Did no fruit go via Southern Pacific and Sacramento?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, I don't think so, unless local. You mean east?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, I don't think so; that is what I meant; I don't think it went that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You said the Sunset.

Mr. MCCUSKER: I say no fruit was taken that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand; But did any go via Sacramento and Ogden?

Mr. MCCUSKER: It is possible some did; I can't say.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know about that?

Mr. McCUSKER: No. Most of it went the other way though.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you stated what was said at a meeting by Mr. Campbell about endeavoring to throw the seaboard business obtained to the Sunset route, or that it could be done; what further instructions, if any, did you have as to the effort you should make with reference to that business, if the shipper objected to sending it Sunset?

Mr. McCUSKER: Our instructions were then to endeavor to get it for the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, did you after that time act under those instructions?

Mr. McCUSKER: We always acted on those instructions; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What difference or change was there in your duties after you became Assistant General Agent of all lines here?

Mr. McCUSKER: Then I solicited for all lines, still following those instructions of getting it Sunset or via the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you did not solicit for one line except to get the best haul; you did not solicit one line against the 694 other, but you tried to get it for your lines?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir, that is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all, as against the other lines.

Mr. McCUSKER: Against the Northern lines; in fact, the Missouri lines, or any line; we competed all the way to Omaha, of course.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that instead of the Southern Pacific standing alone here for business from the east and working indiscriminately with any other line with which it might connect and from which it could get business, it worked solely with the Union Pacific.

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they did not attempt to take business from each other, as you had formerly?

Mr. McCUSKER: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you have anything to do with soliciting Oriental business?

Mr. McCUSKER: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now what class of business was there moving between here and San Francisco for which you solicited?

Mr. McCUSKER: I really could not say now the business. There was occasional hides; of course the lumber went down there, but that was not against the O. R. & N.; schooners would take the lumber cheaper. These box shooks was one commodity.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Box shooks; now just state what box shooks are.

Mr. McCUSKER: Well, they are knocked down boxes; the boards to make a box before they are nailed up, in other words.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I knew what they were but I could not pronounce it; I wanted to have you explain it. Now, those were shipped from here to San Francisco.

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, and different points in California.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over your line of road?

Mr. McCUSKER: Yes, sir.

695 Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they also move to San Francisco over the boats of the O. R. & N.?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or by the boats of the O. R. & N.?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where were these articles made?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Right across the river, some of them; the Standard Box Company, and some of them right up here at Jefferson Street.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And was that business actively solicited by the O. R. & N. boats and yourself as representing the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I know it was solicited by me, and I presume it was by them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Because they got a part of it?

Mr. MCCUSKER: They got some of it. I know I was trying to get it away from them on certain shipments I remember of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you spoke of hides; where did the hides come from?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is from the packing houses here at Portland?

Mr. MCCUSKER: From the dealers here. They came in carloads and less than carloads from the country into Portland, and they were baled and shipped both to San Francisco and to the east from Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did those hides move from here to San Francisco?

Mr. MCCUSKER: They moved by rail and water.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were you soliciting that business as against the O. R. & N. boats?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now on shipments of hides; I have asked you about shipments of hides to San Francisco; now what about shipments of hides to the east; how did they move?

Mr. MCCUSKER: They moved via the rail lines and they moved via the Sunset.

696 Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they move via the O. R. & N. and the Union Pacific?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I presume so; they got their share of them; possibly more so than we did; we didn't get so much of them; we solicited them, however.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Solicited them from those people to whom they were brought in Portland, and who baled them?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you got some, did you, by that solicitation?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now after the common management here how were they solicited, if you know?

Mr. MCCUSKER: They were solicited via the Union Pacific, and I am not positive whether we solicited that via Sunset or not; I would not say as to that, but I presume that we did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you solicited it without caring which way it went as long as you got it?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No; we usually on Atlantic seaboard business we aimed to get the long haul.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To get it for the Sunset, if you could?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did some of the hides go to the Atlantic seaboard points?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are there paper mills up here in the Valley?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does the paper go?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Well, I think that that is local consumption; I never solicited that, because it is out at Oregon City and up the river?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had nothing to do with the paper?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, I had nothing to do with that.

Mr. COTTON: You say you had nothing to do with paper?

697 Mr. MCCUSKER: No, sir?

Mr. COTTON: Didn't solicit it?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He said it was out of town. The reason was because it was out of the city?

Mr. MCCUSKER: It was out of the city and the traveling freight agent, or sometimes the arrangement was made in the office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you don't mean by that then that your road did not solicit it, but that you personally did not?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, no; I mean that I personally didn't solicit it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One thing I forgot to ask you; which way did Cincinnati common points business move to Portland?

Mr. MCCUSKER: When it was Southern Pacific before the consolidation it moved by the Queen & Crescent, or the L. & N. to New Orleans, then to Portland via the Sunset all rail; that was our solicitation; some of it moved, however, via Ogden when we could get it the other way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If you could not what?

Mr. MCCUSKER: When we could not get it via the long haul we would take the short haul, take it at Ogden and Sacramento?

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did considerable business come out that way for those two roads?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What class of business?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Well, there was whiskey and merchandise of different classes, canned goods, I think vehicles sometimes in that neighborhood, I can't say; it was just the general class of merchandise that would come from that particular territory.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, was there any difference, so far as came under your observation, in the movement of that class of commodities from that territory after the amalgamation of the roads?

698 Mr. MCCUSKER: Well, the instructions were to get it via Union Pacific and Omaha.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did it largely move that way rather than the Southern route?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I think that any business that we had afterwards moved via that line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Any business that we had to my knowledge moved via the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think that is all I have to ask Mr. McCusker.

Com'r LANE: You desire to cross examine, I suppose?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Com'r LANE: We will adjourn at this point until two o'clock this afternoon.

PORTLAND, OREGON, Jan. 24, 1907,
2 o'clock p. m.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I want to excuse Mr. McCusker for a moment while I recall Mr. Honeyman.

Mr. T. D. HONEYMAN, Recalled as a witness, who testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: One thing I forgot when you were on the stand this morning, Mr. Honeyman. Have you in Portland an organization known as the Chamber of Commerce?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are a member of that organization are you not?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In a general way, what are the purposes of that organization?

Mr. HONEYMAN: To advance the interests of Portland commercially.

699 Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you a transportation committee in that Chamber?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Having charge of transportation matters affecting Portland?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Of matters affecting transportation?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of matters affecting transportation as affecting Portland?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you, from time to time, publish reports from that committee?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are a member of that committe, are you not?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will show you exhibit 2, and ask you if this is a report of your transportation committee?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The names signed at the bottom are the names of that committee?

Mr. HONEYMAN: That is sub-committee of the transportation committee.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And this report was gotten out by that sub-committee?

Mr. HONEYMAN: It was gotten out by the attorney for the sub-committee, J. N. Teal.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Looked over and signed by you gentlemen.

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That particular report was prepared by your counsel, Mr. Teal?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There are a lot of statistics in this report. Were those prepared by Mr. Teal?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And examined afterwards, I assume, by you gentlemen?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to the best of your belief this is an 700 accurate report, did you so consider it, when you signed it?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir. However that is a report dated July 1905, and then it was a subject of some criticism. There was some fault found with it.

Mr. COTTON: Will you please speak a little louder.

Mr. HONEYMAN: This was the original report gotten out by the sub-committee dated July 1905. It was a subject of some criticism, and if it is to be made a part of this record, there is a later report dated December 1905, that would not be quite so pessimistic. I merely suggest that as a protection to the committee.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think I have a copy of that other report. Mr. J. N. Teal you say prepared this data?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is this a subsequent report which I hand you?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, that is the subsequent report.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This report marked Exhibit 3 is the subsequent report to which you refer?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is signed by the same committee?

Mr. HONEYMAN: By the same committee.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also by Mr. Teal?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Also by Mr. Teal.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was that report prepared by Mr. Teal?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will offer it in evidence in connection with Mr. Honeyman's testimony, these two reports marked Exhibits 2 and 3.

Cross-examination:

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Honeyman, was Mr. Teal less pessimistic in December then he was in June?

Mr. HONEYMAN: The first report was a caustic arraignment of the road, Mr. Cotton, for the reason of lack of development through the State. As I remember, it was found fault with and crit-

701 icised as being unfair. The later report gives the roads credit for some new construction, and I think the whole thing has to be taken together to arrive at an understanding. I merely suggested that as a protection to the committee.

Mr. COTTON: In preparing these reports Mr. Teal largely does the work?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: You gentlemen have not taken time to go over them particularly or critically, have you?

Mr. HONEYMAN: No.

Mr. COTTON: How is that with reference to this railroad commission bill?

Com'r LANE: I don't think we will go into that now. That is outside of this matter entirely.

Mr. COTTON: The sentiments which are expressed in all these reports, are they always the sentiments of the transportation committee or of Mr. Teal only?

Com'r LANE: I think you can examine as to these two reports.

Mr. COTTON: That is what I am referring to now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the way I understood the question.

Mr. HONEYMAN: There is a good deal of difference of opinion that comes up in the committee meetings, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: The sentiments are not always those of the entire committee.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you mean the sentiments expressed in these reports, which the gentlemen signed?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you mean they have signed something they did not approve of?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I think Mr. Honeyman should understand the question.

Mr. COTTON: Did all these gentlemen signing the reports always approve of everything said therein?

702 Com'r LANE: Do you know, Mr. Honeyman, whether that is so or not?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Why, I think there are some things about it a little bit severe, Mr. Lane.

Com'r LANE: Well, speaking for yourself, do you approve and indorse all that is said in these reports?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Taking the two reports together I think that they present about as fair a statement to the Chamber when the report was made as we could possibly do, or get together on.

Com'r LANE: Do you know whether all of the other members of the committee are of that same feeling or not, or have they so expressed themselves?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Well, I could not say.

Mr. COTTON: This committe wanted a line through central Oregon?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And the December report was published to express the state of things as you understood it actually existed in December?

Mr. HONEYMAN: Yes, sir.

Excused.

Mr. THOMAS MCCUSKER, Recalled to the stand, and his examination continued:

Cross-examination.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. McCusker you stated that no live-stock, or practically none moved via Sacramento, because of the mountain haul and the extra distance.

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Kindly explain about that extra distance and the mountain haul?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I believe there is a law in Oregon regarding the unloading at certain points within certain time, of livestock, and to my knowledge I know I have not solicited any of the freight.
703 I do not beileve any one has; it is possible, but I do not know it. I know I was told not to solicit any livestock.

Mr. COTTON: That was long prior to 1901?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Now, what about the extra distance; how much farther is it to Ogden via Sacramento Route than by the O. R. & N. and the Oregon Short Line, do you know?

Mr. MCCUSKER: No, I do not. The mountain haul takes it a little bit longer; we figure it a couple of days against us on Chicago; at least two days.

Mr. COTTON: It is practically the increased distance from here to Sacramento, is it not?

Mr. MCCUSKER: It is possible that it is; that the extra mountain haul, you cannot make the time on the mountains that you can by the other route.

Mr. COTTON: How far is it from here to Sacramento?

Mr. MCCUSKER: It is about 680 miles, I should say, or in that neighborhood.

Mr. COTTON: And when you get through taking freight by Sacramento, you would get it to Ogden?

Mr. MCCUSKER: How is that?

Mr. COTTON: After you hauled freight down to Sacramento and then hauled it East you would get it at Ogden?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And that is as far as the Southern Pacific got it?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Just exactly as when the Union Pacific gets it today, taking it down on the O. R. & N. and the Short Line?

Mr. MCCUSKER: I think they get it by Granger, don't they?

Mr. COTTON: Don't they get it either way?

Mr. MCCUSKER: Possibly, yes, but I think they take it by Granger.

Excused.

704 W. C. TILLSON, Called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Tillson, where do you live?

Mr. TILLSON: Salem, Oregon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. TILLSON: Prune-packing and handling some grain and feed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your principal business however, is handling prunes, is it not?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the extent of your annual business in the shipment of prunes, Mr. Tillson?

Mr. TILLSON: I think our tonnage this year has been about four and one-half million pounds.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to what points do you ship?

Mr. TILLSON: We ship to a good many points in the United States, several in Canada, and quite a good many cars have gone for export.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you ship to all parts of the East?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Including the sea-board and also to Europe?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years have you been in that business?

Mr. TILLSON: About eight years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901 when the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific became more friendly than they had been theretofore, were you solicited for traffic?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the representatives of what lines?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh, practically all lines, the O. R. & N., the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, and the lines also East of the Missouri; they were all after business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They had agents up there all the time in the season?

705 Mr. TILLSON: They had their traveling freight agents around quite frequently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In those days, which way did you ship your prunes?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, we had no special route for shipping. We shipped wherever we could get the business facilities. Very often routing was given by the purchaser of the fruit. In many cases we did not have the routing. Where we had the routing we would ship wherever it was most convenient to ourselves.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And would these gentlemen who were soliciting freight assist you in getting facilities?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What routes did the commodities take to the East?

Mr. TILLSON: I think we done more shipping over the Union Pacific than any other one line, although we shipped a great many cars over the Rio Grande from Austin. We shipped quite a number over the Northern routes, that is, the Northern Pacific, but not but very little, if any, by the Sunset Route in those days.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you did ship some by the Sunset?

Mr. TILLSON: I think we did, a little.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you shipped a good many by Sacramento, and then Ogden, didn't you?

Mr. TILLSON: I don't think we ever routed any that way in those days, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did they move?

Mr. TILLSON: Where they go South they would take the Sunset Route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They went the Sunset Route?

Mr. TILLSON: Hold on, I think we have—yes, we did ship some that way too; yes sir, I knew we did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, you shipped by the Southern Pacific, South Sacramento and over the mountains East of Ogden.

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then by some other route or other from there on?

706 Mr. TILLSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Southern Pacific had a man there who was principally soliciting your business that way or by the Sunset?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To the exclusion of all of the other lines?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, since the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N. have been operating more or less together, what is the fact with reference to the work performed by the roads to secure shipment?

Mr. TILLSON: There is no soliciting done as far as the Southern Pacific and its allies go. At least we have not seen any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is no soliciting is there of the Southern Pacific as against the O. R. & N.?

Mr. TILLSON: No, none whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, which way do your prunes move at the present time?

Mr. TILLSON: Nearly all go by the Union Pacific, the O. R. & N. and the Short Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They come into Portland and go East by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, have you made any attempt to ship by other route since that?

Mr. TILLSON: We have had to get many cars routed by the buyers by other routes, and we have not succeeded in getting cars, and the result has been that we have ignored routing orders and shipped in any way that we could get the cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What roads were there that your buyers have routed over that you were unable to get the cars for?

Mr. TILLSON: Over the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you had any difficulty in getting cars to ship East from Ogden over the Rio Grande?

707 Mr. TILLSON: I don't think we have tried this year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to this year, the last five or six years?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, we used to route a good deal that way, but I do not remember routing anything that way for the last two or three years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you give any reason why you ceased to route that way Mr. Tillson?

Mr. TILLSON: Why we used to route that way?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. TILLSON: We were offered some special inducements, used to be.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. TILLSON: We used to be offered special inducements years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was common to all of the roads, was it not?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh yes, it was not special to us at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But why did you cease to route by the Rio Grande? Was there any trouble in getting cars sent in to ship that way?

Mr. TILLSON: I do not think so; we would not get a Rio Grande car if we were going to route that way, not often. We could ship in most any car on the Eastern road and route it that way, but it would not be necessary to get one of their cars for their haul would be no longer than quite a number of other roads that the fruit would pass over.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to a few years ago you used to route a good deal of stuff over the Rio Grande?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir, we routed quite a good bit that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you tell why you quit?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, I thought all things being equal in the way of transportation and cars that we had a more direct route and a little better service over the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your facilities seemed to be better that way?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

708 Mr. SEVERANCE: You had better luck getting cars?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Providing you routed that way?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you formerly ship any prunes to Portland by boat and thence over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes, we used to ship a good bit that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On what boats?

Mr. TILLSON: On the the O. R. & N. Boats when they were running.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were shipments solicited that way?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the O. R. & N.?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir, by their agents at Salem.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is their solicitation of that kind now?

Mr. TILLSON: No sir.

Mr SEVERANCE: How is the boat service on the Willamette River running in connection with Portland and the railroad lines running out of here as compared with what it used to be?

Mr. TILLSON: The service is just about the same as it used to be; I don't notice any difference.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As far as Salem?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes, have a daily boat as far as Salem all the year round.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that the O. R. & N.?

Mr. TILLSON: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, that is what I am speaking of.

Mr. TILLSON: No sir, the O. R. & N. is not running boats there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago did they quit running boats there?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh, I think it was two or three years ago?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to two or three years ago the O. R. & N. always ran boats from Salem and picked up commodities
709 there destined for the East and brought them into Portland in competition with the Southern Pacific Railroad, did it not?

Mr. TILLSON: Well I would not say how long ago they did quit.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But before they quit they did that?

Mr. TILLSON: As long as they were running I think it was a competitive line for freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With the railroad?

Mr. TILSON: Yes sir, they would issue through bills of lading the same as the railroads would.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the line of boats that is up there now?

Mr. TILLSON: The Oregon City Transportation Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the manager of that company?

Mr. TILLSON: I think Captain Graham, if I am rightly informed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the O. R. & N. run boats part way up to Salem now?

Mr. TILLSON: I am sure I do not know. They do not come to Salem; whether they have any boats on the Willamette at all or not, I do not know; they may run to Dayton possibly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does this Oregon City Transportation Company issue through bills of lading?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, I do not know whether they do or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your shipments do not go by water now?

Mr. TILLSON: No, I do not think they do. I remember shipping a car by them this fall, and they had the bill of lading issued here in Portland, and I do not think they do issue you through bills of lading.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where did that car go?

Mr. TILLSON: Went over the O. R. & N. from Portland to Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How are the rates on those boats?

Mr. TILLSON: The rate is identical with the rail rate, there is no difference.

710 Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you ever been informed by the manager of the boat line or by the railroad officials as to whether or not there is any arrangement or agreement to maintain those rates?

Mr. TILLSON: I was told, I think by Captain Graham, that the condition by which the O. R. & N. withdrew their boats was that their rates would be made identical with the railroad rate. I know they have been the same, and my recollection is that that is what he told me. There is no competition in rates whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were there any prunes brought in here from your country by the boats in the old days and shipped South to San Francisco by steamship?

Mr. TILLSON: I hardly think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know of any shipments that way?

Mr. TILLSON: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The boats of the O. R. & N. run in connection with that railroad?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you also shipped potatoes from that region?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To a considerable amount?

Mr. TILLSON: No, we have not been large shippers of potatoes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you have shipped some?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh yes, five or ten or twenty cars each year, possibly; somewhere along there in a small way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did you formerly ship those potatoes?

Mr. TILLSON: We have shipped a good many by boat to Portland and then by boat down, but now we are shipping entirely by rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you formerly, prior to the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific getting together, solicited for shipment of potatoes by the respective lines?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir, we were by the steamboat, but 711 I don't remember ever having been solicited by the railroad.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you were by the steamboat line?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you say potatoes are all moved by rail?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir. We cannot ship by water.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why is that?

Mr. TILLSON: I do not know. We made application for a shipment of some, only possibly a week ago, and the party told me they could not take them, they could not get them taken at Portland, but whether it was a temporary congestion which made it impossible or not, I do not know. At all events they refused the business, and said they could not handle them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been shipping potatoes entirely by rail when they went to San Francisco?

Mr. TILLSON: We have not shipped any by water for three years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you any longer solicited to ship them by water?

Mr. TILLSON: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was the rates originally in force at the time you shipped by boat, less than the rate by rail?

Mr. TILLSON: I think the rate used to be less by water. I know it did, but I think at the present time, if you could ship at all, it would be identical with the railroad rates; that is my understanding.

Cross-examination:

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Tillson, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern and the other roads are still soliciting your business, are they not?

Mr. TILLSON: We have had two or three calls, I think, from their traveling freight agents this year; that is the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern.

Mr. COTTON: As a matter of fact the Great Northern 712 and the Northern Pacific have had no cars to do business out of your country at all, have they?

Mr. TILLSON: We have not seen any of them, we have not had any at least.

Mr. COTTON: You have tried to get some and could not get them?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: From whom did you try and get those cars?

Mr. TILLSON: Throught the local agent at Salem, through the Southern Pacific Agent.

Mr. COTTON: And you were unable to get any Northern Pacific or Great Northern cars to ship in?

Mr. TILLSON: No, we would not get them.

Mr. COTTON: Did you ship at all by way of the Sunset Route?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: You are quite a heavy shipper now, are you not?

Mr. TILLSON: We ship quite a good bit, yes.

Mr. COTTON: Are you shipping that way now?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, they have not wanted freight that way from us for some little time. They prefer to route it the other way owing to some difficulty over their line, as I understood.

Mr. COTTON: But that has been very recently?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes, sir; the fore part of the season they were anxious for Sunset routing, but a little later they did not want it that way.

Mr. COTTON: That was after the earthquake?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh, yes; some physical conditions I understood.

Mr COTTON: After the earthquake?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh, yes sir, this fall, I mean. Owing to some physical difficulties, I understood.

Mr. COTTON: But that was some breakdown on the railroad?

Mr TILLSON: Something of that kind.

Mr. COTTON: You felt free to ship either way that you wanted to, didn't you?

713 Mr. TILLSON: Why we have been letting the roads, in our Atlantic seaboard shipments, in order to get the cars, letting them route them any way they pleased, so long as we could get the cars.

Commissioner LANE: Can you get the cars unless you do that?

Mr. TILLSON: We found we could get them a good deal more promptly if we did not interfere with the routing.

Mr. COTTON: What was the reason of that, do you know?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, I don't know; I am not running the railroad end of it.

Mr. COTTON: Sometimes they had cars one way and sometimes they had cars to go another way to the Atlantic seaboard.

Mr. TILLSON: Yes, very likely.

Mr. COTTON: Is not that so?

Mr. TILLSON: I presume it is.

Mr. COTTON: They were not insistent in either way?

Mr. TILLSON: I had the impression that when they got an eastern car they wanted home, they would rather send it home loaded than empty.

Mr. COTTON: And it all depended on where the car was going home to?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes, that is what I imagine.

Mr. COTTON: But they did not insist on your sending it one way or another, but would tell you from time to time that they had a car that was at home at Omaha, and tell you at times that they had a car that was at home by the other route, didn't they?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, now, I would give them a list of shipments I wanted to make; for instance, I had one to Kansas City, and I had one to St. Louis and one to Chicago, and the agent would say, "I can furnish you a car for Kansas City; here is a car I can give you for Chicago," but would not let me have that car for some other point, and we would load the car for whatever point it was necessary.

Mr. COTTON: Those were foreign cars as a rule?

714 Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Most of your cars are.

Mr. COTTON: And they were trying to get them home?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, now, I don't know; that was my supposition.

Mr. COTTON: That is what they told you; that they had a car that they had to get to Kansas City or some other point, and they asked you to load accordingly?

Mr. TILLSON: They would say: "Here, we can give you a car today for St. Louis," or "We can give you a car for Philadelphia," or wherever it might be, and if we had a load that would fit that car they would give it to us; otherwise we could not have it.

Commissioner LANE: Supposing you had the offer of a car for Philadelphia, could you route that any way you wanted to from Philadelphia?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, possibly, if we had insisted on it, but we did not insist. We ignored routing orders so far as they were given to us, and let the railroads route any way they pleased so long as they would furnish us the cars. Possibly if we had insisted on a particular routing, we would have gotten it; I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: That has just been this year, has it not?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: That is due to the car shortage.

Mr. TILLSON: I presume so.

Mr. COTTON: Prior to this year you had no difficulty about routing, did you?

Mr. TILLSON: Well sometimes. They were exceedingly anxious for Sunset shipments because they got the long haul; that was very natural. Yes, they wanted Union Pacific routing. I don't think that they made it an absolute condition on furnishing cars that we route that way, but they would insist rather strong on it.

Mr. COTTON: Sunset or Union Pacific?

Mr. TILLSON: Either Sunset or Union Pacific. For in-
715 stance, if we wanted a Great Northern car I think there would have been some trouble.

Mr. COTTON: Wouldn't they want a Great Northern car?

Mr. TILLSON: No, I mean if we wanted to route via the Great Northern or Northern Pacific.

Mr. COTTON: Why? Did you ever try to ship that way?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh yes, we had a good many orders, routing orders that went that way, and we soon learned that it was no use to insist on it if we would get good service.

Mr. COTTON: What service did the Southern Pacific furnish except to take the car to Portland?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, we did not route them that way, because we could not get the cars.

Mr. COTTON: You could not get a Great Northern car?

Mr. TILLSON: No, not without a whole lot of trouble and a whole lot of delay.

Mr. COTTON: Who furnished the Great Northern cars, the Southern Pacific or the Great Northern Company?

Mr. TILLSON: We would make our application through the Southern Pacific local agent.

Mr. COTTON: You are a fairly large shipper now by the Sunset, are you?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh, I don't know whether you would call us a large shipper. We handle quite a lot of fruit.

Mr. COTTON: Any substantial difference in your ability to ship by those routes now than what it was some years ago?

Mr. TILLSON: We have had very good service this year; that is, we have had cars furnished us as promptly I think as we could reasonably expect for our prunes. We really have no cause to complain of delay in furnishing cars this year for fruit shipments.

Mr. COTTON: Then while they have been able to furnish you cars for Eastern shipment, and have furnished those cars quite 716 promptly, the only thing they have done is to say to you from time to time where a car had to go, and that is about all?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Tillson, I judge from your testimony that if you want to ship to the East over the Great Northern you are required to get a Great Northern car in there in some way; is that right?

Mr. TILLSON: Well, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now you are on the Southern Pacific aren't you?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have any trouble in shipping on the Southen Pacific and O. R. & N. in any kind of a car?

Mr. TILLSON: No, they would give us those cars when it was possible.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is to say, if you want to ship off the Southern Pacific line onto any line except the O. R. & N., you would have to get a particular kind of car?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But if you were routing South or East over the O. R. & N., although it had to come down over the Southern Pacific to Portland to reach the O. R. & N., they would give you any kind of a car?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes, I think so. We used to have all sorts of cars I know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the old days when these two roads were competing one against the other, each agent did all he could to get cars to go over his particular line?

Mr. TILLSON: Oh, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But at the present time, while you say you have been giving pretty good service in the way of furnishing cars, the Southern Pacific has taken upon itself the routing of the cars?

Mr. TILLSON: Practically so, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the competition as to routing them
717 and the extra facilities furnished from time to time have gone up?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: In the earlier days when the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N. both had agents there, the O. R. & N. agent and the Southern Pacific agent both tried to get Northern Pacific and Great Northern cars in there for you for Great Northern and Northern Pacific shipment, did they?

Mr. TILLSON: I think the Southern Pacific did. I think their great effort was to go Sunset route.

Mr. COTTON: In the earlier days you had just as much difficulty in getting the Southern Pacific to put in an O. R. & N. car as you have now in getting them to put in a Northern Pacific or Great Northern car?

Mr. TILLSON: We used to ship then by water. We would ship then by the O. R. & N. boats.

Mr. COTTON: Cannot you ship by Mr. Graham's boats down to Portland now?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And out over the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir, but he can't issue, or won't issue, through bills of lading.

Mr. COTTON: Is that our fault?

Mr. TILLSON: Why it isn't the Southern Pacific's fault surely.

Mr. COTTON: Do the O. R. & N. boats issue through bills of lading over the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir, the agent used to give us through bills of lading; I know that.

Mr. COTTON: Over the Northern Pacific?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: On the boat?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And over the Great Northern on the boat?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir. I don't know how he did it. Possibly he got them issued in Portland, and gave them to us the next 718 day. I won't be sure, but I know he used to get us through bills of lading. I don't think he did issue them himself; I think he must have got them in Portland.

Mr. COTTON: What kind of a bill of lading or receipt do you get from Graham now?

Mr. TILLSON: I have not shipped but one car of prunes over his line this year, and he had the bill of lading issued in Portland, and I didn't get it for possibly ten days after the fruit was shipped.

Mr. COTTON: That was over what road?

Mr. TILLSON: That was over the O. R. & N. from Portland.

Mr. COTTON: Did you try to ship over the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific by way of his boat?

Mr. TILLSON: No; I wanted to over the O. R. & N., but I could not get a car. The reason for shipping that particular car that way was that I had a contract to get the goods out at a certain time and I could not get a Southern Pacific car, so I made the shipment by water, so as to be in contract time for the shipment.

Mr. COTTON: Prior to 1901 when you wanted to ship over the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific, how did you get your cars then?

Mr. TILLSON: I think they used to order them from their local agent in Portland.

Mr. COTTON: The local agents of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: But now you have been trying to get them through the local agents of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: But you don't get them?

Mr. TILLSON: We don't get them, but I will say this; we have not tried very hard this year, because we realized it was no use.

Mr. COTTON: The fact of the matter is you have had pretty good car service from the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific, haven't you?

719 Mr. TILLSON: So long as we could get the cars we didn't care whose they were or where they came from.

Mr. COTTON: But you have been able pretty nearly all the year to get cars to make your fruit shipments with pretty good regularity?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Have had, taking all things together, excellent service?

Mr. TILLSON: Yes sir.

Witness excused.

LOUIS LOCHMAN, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Salem.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Hop business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in the hop business in Salem?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Fifteen years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901 what was the fact up there as to whether you were frequently solicited for shipments of hops by representatives of different railroads?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes, sir, we were solicited by the representatives of all the different railroads; the transcontinental lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you solicited separately by the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company and its Eastern connections?

Mr. LOCHMAN: We were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you now?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lochman, how did you ship your hops to the East in those days, over what lines?

Mr. LOCHMAN: The Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and D. & R. G.

720 Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they move by Sacramento to Ogden and then over the Union Pacific or D. & R. G.?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did they move?

Mr. LOCHMAN: They moved over the O. R. & N. and Short Line and then by the Denver & Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did they come to Portland from Salem?

Mr. LOCHMAN: By the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By rail?

Mr. LOCHMAN: By rail and boat.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the O. R. & N. boats?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago did those boats quit running?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Two or three years ago I think, probably longer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you ship hops by the O. R. & N. now starting them by boat from Salem?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They go by rail now, do they?

Mr. LOCHMAN: We cannot ship them by boat from Salem over the O. R. & N. now; the boats are not running.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But I didn't know whether you could ship over the other line of boats that has been spoken of.

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes, we can.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you?

Mr. LOCHMAN: We do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what points do you consign hops that you ship down as far as Portland over that steamboat line?

Mr. LOCHMAN: New York and London.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How do they move to the East?

Mr. LOCHMAN: The hops that have been shipped by boat have nearly all gone by the Rio Grande lines and then the connecting lines from Denver East.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you made any effort to route cars directly from Salem by the Rio Grande?

721 Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you state just what success you had in doing so?

Mr. LOCHMAN: We have had no success.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What has been the trouble?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Well, the agent at Salem notified all parties in order to ship by Rio Grande lines it would be necessary to secure Rio Grande cars, and in their absence we had to go either Union Pacific or Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is any distinction made as to the kind of car you are compelled to use if you ship over Union Pacific or Southern Pacific?

Mr. LOCHMAN: The Southern Pacific Sunset cars went Sunset; Union Pacific went over Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But I am speaking at the present time. At the present time you can ship either on the Southern Pacific or Union Pacific in any car that happens to be in the yards, can't you?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But if you want to consign anything over the Rio Grande you must procure a Rio Grande car?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you by reason of that fact been able to make shipments over the Rio Grande?

Mr. LOCHMAN: We have not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you formerly make large or small shipments that way?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Large and small.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you have been in the business for fifteen years?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What soliciting agents are now in the field up there requesting consignments of hops?

Mr. LOCHMAN: You mean of trans-continental lines?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. LOCHMAN: The Rio Grande man is about the only 722 one except the local agent at Salem for the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The local agent at Salem represents both the Union and Southern?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How do your hops mostly move now?

Mr. LOCHMAN: By rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't move any hops to the East by Sunset?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No, they don't care to have the business apparently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you since 1901 shipped hops that way?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Very largely, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to what time?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Up to a year ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who routed them?

Mr. LOCHMAN: We did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did you happen to commence shipping by rail; who suggested it to you, if anybody?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Well there was no special reason. If the business was going to the Atlantic sea-board naturally the Southern Pacific wanted the long haul, and preferred to have them go Sunset. If we declined to ship them Sunset they were willing to take them for Omaha.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say at the present time it is going all rail?

Mr. LOCHMAN: All rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By all rail do you mean that it goes by Omaha?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I mean via Omaha or else Rio Grande line, what hops might be shipped by boat.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you don't ship by Sunset Route now?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who made that change in routing; was 723 it the railroad officials that changed it from Sunset? You said they preferred formerly to ship that way.

Mr. LOCHMAN: The agent at Salem notified us that they preferred to have the business go by Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Notified you to that effect?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Four or five months ago; at the beginning of the hop season.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it has gone that way, has it?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now in the old days of competition up there in the shipment of hops, what extra facilities, if any, were rendered you or what assistance was rendered you by the agents of the respective lines competing for the business?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Well up to a year ago we could go to work and ship hops in transit to any point north of Eugene; for instance, to Salem and consolidate them there, or we could ship them to Portland without paying a local freight, and consolidate them there, and get free storage.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where?

Mr. LOCHMAN: To any point for sixty days, on the line of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is it now?

Mr. LOCHMAN: That is all done away with now. We have to pay local freight and storage from the time the hops are put in the warehouse. The Southern Pacific say now they are acting purely as warehousemen.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They used to be a transportation company, didn't they?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Lochman, what facilities, if any, were formerly furnished you when you shipped Sunset? Were there any special facilities furnished you there?

Mr. LOCHMAN: We got thirty to sixty days free storage on the Southern Pacific dock at New York.

724 Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you still enjoy that privilege?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In fact your stuff don't go that way now?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Very little of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there any help furnished you in marking your hops and assisting you in getting out your shipments when these men were all competing with one another?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir, there was. It was not of any consequence, but if we wanted to make a shipment, and a competing line wanted the shipment the agent would say: "Well, I will come down to the warehouse and help you mark the bales and weigh them up," and the shipper would invariably give that particular line the business in consideration of that assistance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was the sort of competition that was in vogue there years ago?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that has disappeared as between the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N.?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far from here is Dayton?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Twenty or twenty-five miles I guess.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did the competition for business between the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company stop; it was about 1900 or later?

Mr. LOCHMAN: About that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Dayton is this side of Salem?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The O. R. & N. boats run as far as Dayton don't they?

Mr. LOCHMAN: They do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the other line runs further up?

Mr. LOCHMAN: As far as Corvallis.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is Corvallis from here?

Mr. LOCHMAN: About 100 miles up the river.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are these boats that are run by the other line pretty fair boats?

725 Mr. LOCHMAN: Very good.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It appeared at Seattle the other day that the O. R. & N. boat above Salem, I believe, was a skimming dish. These boats running up there now are not skimming dishes, are they; they are pretty good boats, are they not, that run up to Corvallis?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes, they take six, seven or eight or ten carloads of hops at a shipment.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is some stage of water in the Willamette River habitually?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know of any reason why there is not water enough to run the O. R. & N. boats up there as well as the boats of the other line?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No reason that I know of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: How long does this boat run up to Corvallis each year?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Until the water becomes so low.

Mr. COTTON: How long does the water stay high enough so it can run?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Probably until June or July; perhaps a little bit later.

Mr. COTTON: What period during the year?

Mr. LOCHMAN: That they run up there?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. LOCHMAN: From about December, depending a good deal on the volume of water in the river.

Mr. COTTON: Do they run a boat daily?

Mr. LOCHMAN: To Corvallis?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir, I think every other day, if I remember right.

Mr. COTTON: They give just as good service as the O. R. & N. ever gave, or a little better?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I wouldn't say so.

Mr. COTTON: Just as good?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Just as good.

Mr. COTTON: But they were running there when the O. R.
726 & N. boats were running for a while, were they not?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what became of the O. R. & N. boats?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I do not.

Mr. COTTON: Were they not worn out and lost?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know whether they are on the river now or not?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I think one is.

Mr. COTTON: It took more than one boat to keep up the route, didn't it?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what happened to the other boat?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I believe she sank.

Mr. COTTON: Did they wreck boats very frequently in the Willamette River?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Well they settle on a sand-bar or strike a snag and temporarily laid off until they pull them off with a line.

Mr. COTTON: Deep water navigation up there consists of a boat drawing about six or eight inches of water, doesn't it, up to Corvallis?

Mr. LOCHMAN: That is my understanding; yes.

Mr. COTTON: And it is rather of a skimming dish proposition, isn't it, most of the time?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No expert on the subject.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you want the impression to go out, Mr. Cotton, that the O. R. & N. is too poor to buy a new boat?

Mr. COTTON: I think that may be.

Mr. COTTON: Now, Mr. Lochman, in regard to this service; the O. R. & N. is running one boat today to Independence, isn't it?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. COTTON: Running up to Dayton?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

727 Mr. COTTON: The only boat they have left that is useful for that Willamette River business—it still is on the run, isn't it?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I suppose, to Dayton.

Mr. COTTON: Is the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern and the Denver & Rio Grande man up there now helping to weigh hops?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: He has stopped weighing too, hasn't he?

Mr. LOCHMAN: The Great Northern and the Northern Pacific haven't been up there soliciting business for the past two years to my knowledge.

Mr. COTTON: The Northern Pacific and the Great Northern have not been up there soliciting business for two years?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Perhaps more.

Mr. COTTON: Does the D. & R. G. man go up and help you weigh hops now?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir, he comes up there frequently and solicits business.

Mr. COTTON: The O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific continued the practice of helping you weigh up hops and gave you free storage and warehouse until about six months ago, didn't they?

Mr. LOCHMAN: They gave us free storage and free in transit movement.

Mr. COTTON: Until about the 20th of August of this year?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: When the new Interstate Commerce Act went into effect?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I don't know; I think that was the time.

Mr. COTTON: And the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific therefore continued these practices up until the 28th of August, which the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern discontinued two years ago. Is that right?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I didn't catch the question.

728 Mr. COTTON: Up until the 28th of August this free storage continued, didn't it?

Mr. LOCHMAN: It did.

Mr. COTTON: And stopped only then?

Mr. LOCHMAN: It did.

Mr. COTTON: That was the 28th of August, 1906?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: The Northern Pacific and the Great Northern have not solicited your business for about how long?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Oh, quite a number of years; three or four or five years maybe.

Mr. COTTON: And the D. & R. G. man—when did he stop?

Mr. LOCHMAN: He continues to solicit it by river shipments.

Mr. COTTON: Then these arrangements that you have referred to were not discontinued by virtue of anything which took place in 1901?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Which arrangements?

Mr. COTTON: This free weighing and all that sort of stuff.

Mr. LOCHMAN: I don't quite understand you, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: I say this free weighing and free storage——

Mr. LOCHMAN: I don't know what you mean by free weighing. We did our own weighing, but frequently a competing line would assist us in weighing up a lot of hops, but very rarely; it was not common practice, but occasionally happend.

Mr. COTTON: But the free warehouse and consolidation of shipments at given points continued up until this year?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And did not cease in 1901?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lochman, you said that the D. &

729 R. G. shipments came down to Portland by boat?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why is that necessary?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Because we could not ship it in Southern Pacific cars over the D. & R. G., couldn't get the cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you got to Portland where there was competition——

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Severance, there was another question I would like to ask Mr. Lochman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Very well; proceed now.

Mr. COTTON: You have shipped this year more or less by Northern Pacific and Great Northern?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: None at all?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir. Pardon me, Mr. Cotton; We did make shipments of probably four or five cars by boat to the Northern Pacific, but none by the Great Northern.

Mr. COTTON: I see. That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lochman, I was asking you at the time Mr. Cotton asked this last question about those shipments over the D.

& R. G. You say in order to make a shipment over that route you have been compelled to ship into Portland by boat?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you get into Portland where there is competition for the east between the Harriman lines and the Northern Pacific, you are able to get a car to go over the D. & R. G.?

Mr. LOCHMAN: When we ship our hops from points on the river, when we ship them right through to destination, and we control the routing then. In other words, we ship over the O. C. T. Co. boats right through to London, New York, Chicago or any other point, and send that receipt to the O. R. & N. Company, and it issues a bill of lading on the O. C. T. Company's receipt.

730 Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is because you get the stuff into Portland without putting it into the car?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you get here you can get a car?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir, I presume so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well that is what happens anyhow?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I presume they put them in a D. & R. G. car, but I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: Who did?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I say I should assume they used a D. & R. G. car if it is routed that way. They may have been put in a Short Line car and transported to Ogden and there transferred, and we ship them from the point of origin to destination and take no further interest in it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They went over the D. & R. G. line ultimately?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know about that?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir. They were routed that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You presume they went that way?

Mr. LOCHMAN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Whose bill of lading did they give you?

Mr. LOCHMAN: The O. R. & N. Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the cars were loaded here at Portland and went out over the O. R. & N. to Ogden?

Mr. LOCHMAN: I presume so, we never made any personal examination or supervision over that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have no difficulty in making shipments of that kind when you send them down by boat, do you?

Mr. LOCHMAN: None whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There was no refusal to send the business over the D. & R. G. road by the O. R. & N., was there?

Mr. LOCHRAN: No sir; we got our receipt at Salem billed to destination, and got the bill of lading.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You got your cars at Portland?

731 Mr. LOCHMAN: I don't know; I presume so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you could not do that at Salem?

Mr. LOCHMAN: No sir.

Witness excused.

J. R. LINN, a witness called and having been duly sworn, testified:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Linn, where do you live?
Mr. LINN: In Salem.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?
Mr. LINN: Buying hops.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is your market for hops?
Mr. LINN: All over the world, where they consume beer.
Mr. SEVERANCE: You ship a large amount of hops, don't you?
Mr. LINN: We ship a good many.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your firm name?
Mr. LINN: Catlin & Linn.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in business at Salem?
Mr. LINN: Fifteen years.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901, Mr. Linn, will you state whether there were solicitors up there for both O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific as well as other lines soliciting your business?
Mr. LINN: There was.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Are there now?
Mr. LINN: No.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Which ways in those days did your hops move to the East?
Mr. LINN: New York business principally went Sunset; Chicago business went Union Pacific, or over the O. R. & N. to Ogden, and then both Union Pacific and Rio Grande and other lines from Omaha, sometimes one and sometimes another.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And the eastern agents were those various lines connecting with the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific at 732 Ogden were there soliciting business, were they not?
Mr. LINN: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How does your business move now?
Mr. LINN: It moves about the same as it did before, except most all of our hops go Union Pacific or Sunset.
Mr. SEVERANCE: The last few months which way have they gone?
Mr. LINN: Union Pacific.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Who routes them?
Mr. LINN: We do. The Southern Pacific does rather at the present time.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I meant; that is to say, the Southern Pacific states to you the way they prefer to have the hops moved, don't they, whether Sunset or Southern Pacific?
Mr. LINN: They state to you the way you can move them.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, that is it?
Mr. LINN: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: It is not a matter of preference, but it is a matter of their permission to move them.
Mr. LINN: It is a matter of cars.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What way do they insist on moving them at present, or what way do they now say you can move them?
Mr. LINN: Well, they say you can move them any way you have got the cars; they don't dictate particularly; they say, "We have got a Milwaukee car here, they can go over the Milwaukee from Omaha," or "We have a Rock Island car," or something else, and they prefer it that way; they don't say they must go that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they give you to understand that they prefer to have it go that way?

Mr. LINN: We feel we get better service by letting it go that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You get better service by adopting the advice of the Southern Pacific agent?

733 Mr. LINN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And sometimes he advises that they go Sunset and sometimes he advises that they go Union Pacific.

Mr. LINN: He has not advised Sunset for several months.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But he did formerly at times?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you found from your experience that it is wise to take his advice?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To get the hops through to the East?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you have any difficulty if you wanted to ship—Suppose you wanted to exercise some discretion in the matter, as you possibly had, and wanted to ship over the Denver and Rio Grande, did you have any difficulty in getting cars?

Mr. LINN: We have not attempted it for the last year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have not?

Mr. LINN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you get plenty of Denver and Rio Grande cars?

Mr. LINN: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am asking you if you desired to ship over the Rio Grande road?

Mr. LINN: We have not tried because we thought it was useless.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You found it was useless. Formerly when there was competition between the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific, did you ship into Portland by water?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On the O. R. & N. Boats?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did your hops move to the east in that way, by O. R. & N. boats and then by the O. R. & N. railroad?

734 Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of course you do not ship by the O. R. & N. boats now, but do you ship by the other boats?

Mr. LINN: We have found it very handy to ship that way this year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the other boats?

Mr. LINN: By the boats, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what way does your stuff move to the east after it gets here when you ship by boat?

Mr. LINN. By Union Pacific and Illinois Central usually or the Northwestern.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Goes by O. R. & N. and Union Pacific?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And thence over some connecting road?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you ever ship any hops by steamer to San Francisco?

Mr. LINN: Never did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you deal in anything except hops?

Mr. LINN: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any representative of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and the Union Pacific up there looking after business except the Southern Pacific agent?

Mr. LINN: No one that I know of except occasionally when Mr. Loundsbury comes up there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Loundsbury lives in Portland?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is in charge of the district?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The business of both lines is looked after there by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. LINN: Very well.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: There has been a car shortage this year, has there not?

735 Mr. LINN: Yes sir, serious.

Mr. COTTON: And the difficulty about your shipping, as I understand it, has been that from time to time when you wanted to make a far eastern shipment, the company would tell you that they had a Milwaukee car?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And therefore would like to have you ship Milwaukee?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Another day they would tell you they had a Northwestern car and would like to have you ship Northwestern?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Another day a Rock Island car, and would like to have you ship Rock Island?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And another day, another Iowa line car?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: They did not constantly dictate to you or attempt to furnish cars only for one line, did they?

Mr. LINN: Not at all.

Mr. COTTON: They were furnishing you these cars and telling you those were the cars they had, and sometimes they told you two roads on the same day, didn't they?

Mr. LINN: No, I hardly think so.

Mr. COTTON: Didn't you ever try to ship two cars at once?

Mr. LINN: Oh yes.

Mr. COTTON: Wouldn't you sometimes send one over one road and the other car over another road?

Mr. LINN: Our rule was to leave the routing blank east of Omaha and they loaded them as they could.

Mr. COTTON: You didn't care where?

Mr. LINN: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: The rates were all equal, were they not?

Mr. LINN: All the same.

736 Mr. COTTON: It would make no difference to you of any kind, character or description?

Mr. LINN: No.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know Mr. Henshaw, the traveling freight agent of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Didn't he come up there occasionally?

Mr. LINN: Yes, occasionally.

Mr. COTTON: Did you ship by Great Northern and Northern Pacific at all?

Mr. LINN: We never have.

Mr. COTTON: Why?

Mr. LINN: I tried to once or twice years ago.

Mr. COTTON: And they refused rate from the valley into Portland?

—. ——.

Mr. COTTON: They wanted to make a Portland shipment of it?

Mr. LINN: They wanted to make a Portland shipment. That was in the days of intransit movement.

Mr. COTTON: You shipped down here by boat and ultimately they would go out over the O. R. & N. when they came down by boat?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Why is it that you shipped by boat?

Mr. LINN: This year, when we could get hops loaded onto the boat we got our bills of lading. They would get the cars when they got down there and take care of them in the warehouse until we could get the cars. We could get no documents on the railroad unless we got them loaded in the cars.

Mr. COTTON: They do not issue bills of lading when you store them in the warehouse?

Mr. LINN: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: They used to, did they not?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: That is what Mr. Lochman meant by saying that the railroad now, when you stored freight in the warehouse, was a warehouseman?

Mr. LINN: Absolutely.

Mr. COTTON: In former years, they used to issue bills of 737 lading when you put the stuff in the warehouse, and you could let it stay there for a season, if you wanted to?

Mr. LINN: No, when they issued bills of lading, the hops were ready to go. Sometimes they would let them stay there awhile, but they were supposed to be on the road.

Mr. COTTON: But you did not have to get them into a car?

Mr. LINN: No, not to get our bill of lading.

Mr. COTTON: And since the 28th of August you have had to put them in the car?

Mr. LINN: We have had to load them in the cars ourselves at our own expense.

Mr. COTTON: Do you remember what took place on the 28th of August?

Mr. LINN: Very well.

Mr. COTTON: That was the Interstate Commerce Act. It made a substantial difference to you hopmen, didn't it, in regard to privileges, consolidations, and things of that kind you formerly had enjoyed?

Mr. LINN: The new rules of the Southern Pacific did.

Mr. COTTON: And that took effect on what date?

Mr. LINN: The last of August.

Mr. COTTON: When your hops came down by boat, did they come down on the O. R. & N. boats or Capt. Graham's boats?

Mr. LINN: Capt. Graham's boats when they were above Dayton.

Mr. COTTON: And Mr. Graham would issue a through bill of lading?

Mr. LINN: No, a shipping receipt, which we would take to our agent in Salem or in Portland and get our bill of lading.

Mr COTTON: On Mr. Graham's shipping receipt, you could get a through bill of lading to destination?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And then you would stop worrying about 738 a car and let your stuff go forward whenever the car was furnished?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Was there any limitation on the route which the shipment would take?

Mr. LINN: No, we routed them usually.

Mr. COTTON: And the stuff ultimately went forward?

Mr. LINN: Pretty slow.

Mr. COTTON: Waiting for cars, was it?

Mr. LINN: Well, we are getting letters daily advising us to trace shipments which have not yet arrived that were shipped months ago.

Mr. COTTON: Is that due to lack of cars or facilities or what?

Mr. LINN: I cannot say.

Mr. COTTON: Those are D. & R. G. shipments?

Mr. LINN: We made no D. & R. G. shipments.

Mr. COTTON: The same delays prevail over all the roads. This act of 1901 which took place, this amalgamation, I believe it is called, did not produce this effect, did it?

Mr. LINN: We had better service years ago.

Mr. COTTON: On all the roads?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: That was before the car shortage?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And you had better service in 1895, didn't you?

Mr. LINN: Oh yes.

Mr. COTTON: And very good service in 1895?
Mr. LINN: Very good.
Mr. COTTON: I meant in 1905.
Mr. LINN: No, there was some shortage in 1905.
Mr. COTTON: How about 1904?
Mr. LINN: Not quite so bad.
Mr. COTTON: There was no limitation other than cars placed upon the route which you might want to select, was there?
Mr. LINN: Yes, I think so. There was several years ago.
739 The absorbing of the local rates in the Willamette Valley.
Mr. COTTON: By the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific?
Mr. LINN: Yes.
Mr. COTTON: Other than by the fact that the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern have ceased to absorb Willamette valley locals, there is no change in rates in any way whatsoever that you know of, excepting short cars?
Mr. LINN: That is all.
Mr. COTTON: That is all.
Com'r LANE: Is there any difference in your ability to get cars over the Denver and Rio Grande between 1900 and 1902, and subsequently?
Mr LINN: I think there was a little difference, yes.
Com'r LANE: Was it easier or harder to get a car in 1903 than it was in 1900 over the Denver and Rio Grande?
Mr. LINN: I cannot say as to the difference in those two dates, but it was always harder, when there were plenty of cars, to get cars over the Rio Grande than it was the Union Pacific.
Com'r LANE: Am I to understand that since 1901 there has been any change as to your ability to get cars for transporting your hops over the Denver and Rio Grande?
Mr. LINN: I cannot say exactly as to 1901, but I know it has been impracticable for us to try to ship hops over the Rio Grande for the past four or five years.
Com'r LANE: Before the last four or five years, how was it?
Mr. LINN: It was different. We could get cars.
Com'r LANE: The one difficulty you labor under is the getting of cars, is it?
Mr. LINN: Well, that is usually the worst; that is where we are handicapped.
Com'r LANE: What are the other difficulties?
740 Mr. LINN: Well, that is probably the only difficulty in getting a shipment off.
Com'r LANE: What percentage of your cars would you get over the Denver & Rio Grande prior to a period of four or five years past?
Mr. LINN: I think in 1900 and 1899 we shipped probably fifty to sixty per cent. of our hops from Ogden over the Rio Grande & Rock Island.
Com'r LANE: Why did you stop sending so many that way?
Mr. LINN: It was probable that we sent them that way on account of personal friendship for those people's representatives in this field.

That had something to do with it, and when they could furnish the cars so easily, we shipped the other way.

Com'r LANE: You do not understand, Mr. Linn, that owing to the taking effect of the Interstate Commerce law of the 28th of August, all the privileges you enjoyed, such as concentration and temporary storage, were withdrawn owing to any provision of that law or rule of the Interstate Commerce Commission, do you?

Mr. LINN: It has been given to us in that light.

Com'r LANE: Who gave it to you?

Mr. LINN: Southern Pacific officials; they intimated that that was the fact.

Com'r LANE: I notice that Mr. Lewis W. Hill, vice president of the Great Northern, also announced yesterday that the coal famine in the Northwest was due to the fact that the railroads were denied the right to sell coal commercially under the new Interstate Commerce law; overlooking the fact, singularly, that that law so far as doing business commercially was concerned, would not go into effect until May first, 1908. Any difficulty you experience, I suppose, now, is charged by the railroad men to the Interstate Commerce law, is it not?

Mr. LINN: that is one of the excuses.

Com'r LANE: Do you think the car shortage, if any exists
741 out here, is due to the Interstate Commerce law?

Mr. LINN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How are the rates on hops to the east compared with what they were six or seven years ago?

Mr. LINN: The rate was reduced from a two cent basis to a cent and a half basis last August.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that by all lines?

Mr. LINN: By all lines, but the minimum amount to be shipped was 20,000 lbs. to secure the carload rate; otherwise, the old rate of two cents applied.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Under the old rate, what was the minimum?

Mr. LINN: Any quantity; one bale.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has there been any other change in the rates in the last six or seven years?

Mr. LINN: Under the old rate, we had movement en transit for consolidation. We could ship from Eugene to Portland and consolidate; and to-day we must pay local freight to consolidate shipments. Any place we make a shipment we must pay local freight and warehouse charges and rehandling charges.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior, then, you had this privilege furnished you?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Similar to the milling en transit privilege?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But that was taken away?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And this lower rate was given you but in order to get your carloads as a rule you have to put this local carload rate in?

Mr. LINN: We do quite frequently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has there been any other change in the rates in the last few years?

Mr. LINN: Not materially, no. Years ago we had a cent and a half rate, I believe, or one and three-fourths when the price of hops was very low.

742 Mr. SEVERANCE: But rates did go up from what they were formerly to the two cent basis?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember how many years ago that was?

Mr. LINN: No. It must have been about 1896 or 1897, somewhere along there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not recollect just when?

Mr. LINN: No, I guess it was later than that; probably 1898. I can't say positively.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Linn, counsel was asking you about the routing of these cars east of Omaha. The Southern Pacific agent does not attempt to interfere with the routing east of Omaha, does he?

Mr. LINN: Never has.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But it is the routing from here to Omaha that he looks after?

Mr LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And he does not interfere as to that?

Mr. LINN: He requests.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He requests it?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He says, "I have got a car, Milwaukee and St. Paul car," or something of that sort, "and I want to move this stuff by the way of Omaha by the Union Pacific," and he requests you to have it moved that way?

Mr. LINN: If you bring in your shipping receipt any other way, he asks you, "Why?"

Mr. SEVERANCE: And endeavors to get you to change it?

Mr. LINN: We have changed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have changed upon the advice of the agent of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific occasionally have cars of their own at Salem?

Mr. LINN: Well, yes.

743 Mr. SEVERANCE: You see their own cars there, do you?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir. They use them for local business though mostly, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Haven't they moved any hops Sunset by their own cars?

Mr. LINN: I presume they have moved some this year?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do they ordinarily use foreign cars?

Mr. LINN: I rather think on Sunset shipments, they use Sunset cars. We have had no Sunset business recently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They use Union Pacific cars that way, too, don't they, or don't you notice the lettering of cars?

Mr. LINN: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would not be able to state that?

Mr. LINN: I was told by the agent some time ago that hops would have to be loaded in foreign cars from this date on, as they would need all their local cars, all our Southern Pacific cars for local business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that you would have to take foreign cars?

Mr. LINN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also take the advice of the agent as to the route they shall take after they leave the Union Pacific or Southern Pacific lines?

Mr. LINN: We allowed them to do the routing; we had no reason to ask for anything special.

Witness excused.

J. N. TEAL, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Teal, you live in Portland?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you a member of the bar of this city?

744 Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Honeyman was on the stand this afternoon, and his attention was called to Exhibits 2 and 3, being the reports of the transportation committee of the Chamber of Commerce of this city. These reports are signed by L. A. Lewis, A. H. Devers, Henry Hahn, T. D. Honeyman, Edward Newbegin, and S. M. Mears, and the second one signed by those same gentlemen and by J. N. Teal, counsel. Mr. Honeyman stated that those reports were prepared by you and that the statistics contained in those reports were prepared by you and submitted to the committee and signed by them. I show them to you and ask you if you prepared them.

Mr. TEAL: Yes. I am familiar with them. I prepared them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In this report of July, 1905, you gave a statement of the earnings of the O. R. & N. for a series of years together with other facts, charges, and the mileage of the road. From what source did you procure those figures?

Mr. TEAL: Official reports of the company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You also gave in this a statement of the cost of the Shanico road, that is, a road built by Mr. Lytle and his associates, running from a point of connection with the O. R. & N. down to Shanico, together with the earnings of that road and its surplus after paying interest on its bonded indebtedness for a period of four years, 1901, 1902, 1903, and 1904. From what source did you get that information?

Mr. TEAL: The information about the earnings came from the official records, principally from the records of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The report as to the cost of the road came from official sources, unnecessary to mention where.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You also describe in this report the character of the country lying south of Shanico, together with its production. From what source did you obtain that information?

Mr. TEAL: Both from personal investigation, personally
745 living there to start with in years gone by, and from reports or from perfectly reliable sources. I had reports perhaps from three different sources, all of which I think were absolutely reliable. I think events since have justified not only that report, but that a great deal more might have been stated about it than is contained in that report.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In this report, considering that proposed road from Shanico to Bend, you quote from a report or recommendation of Chief Engineer Kennedy. Who is he?

Mr. TEAL: Mr. Kennedy used to be chief engineer of the O. R. & N. Company; but a number of years ago there was a gentleman lived in this country by the name of Paul F. Mohr who conceived a plan for building out in that country and building a road, ferrying across the Columbia river and coming down the North Bank; and he had Mr. Kennedy make an examination of the country, and Mr. Kennedy's examination of that country did not extend out as far as the Bend country, and some say it did not go as far as Shanico but it covered a very large extent of country in between the river at Biggs Station and Shaniko, where the Columbia Southern has since been built.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Teal, you also state in this report as follows: "More than sixteen months ago, it was authoritatively announced by Mr. Harriman in the city of Portland that the road would be extended"—referring to the extension to Bend of the Shaniko road?

Mr. TEAL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE (continuing): "But nothing was done, and at the present time, at the request of your committee, an examination of the country has been made." That was a fact, was it, that it was so announced by Mr. Harriman?

Mr. TEAL: It was so announced by Mr. Harriman at a banquet at the Arlington club in this city.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has that road ever been built?

Mr. TEAL: It has not.

746 Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived in Oregon?

Mr. TEAL: Well, I will put it this way: since I was born.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were born here, were you?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you familiar with the country in eastern Oregon?

Mr. TEAL: Oh, I think reasonably so, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have been over it?

Mr. TEAL: Yes sir, a good deal.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have investments over there?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you tell me whether that country is of a character to produce large traffic if roads were built into it?

Mr. TEAL: Well, when you are speaking of that country, we better define what we mean.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean the country that is now without railroad facilities lying to the east of the Southern Pacific, to the south of the O. R. & N., and to the West of the Oregon Short Line.

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir, it is an empire.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have made quite an investigation, have you, Mr. Teal, into the question of railroad construction and development of the western country?

Mr. TEAL: I have tried to, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know of any other territory in the United States of equal extent and of equal richness that is without railroad facilities?

Mr. TEAL: Well,——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or in the west, we will say?

Mr. TEAL: No, I do not in the west. I do not know so much about the south.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know how far from the railroad some portions of that country are?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Take any point; what is the farthest point from the railroad over there?

747 Mr. TEAL: The best way to look at it is, taking what we call the southeastern Oregon country that consists in the neighborhood of probably 40,000 square miles of territory. There are counties out there that have 10,000 square miles in them. There are valleys in which you could pretty nearly lose a state like Rhode Island.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Fertile valleys?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, fertile valleys. There is lumber and every resource you can think of. The fact of the matter is, and there isn't a man in Oregon but what knows it, if that country had been properly developed, this state would have a million or a million and a half of people in it today.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Other portions of the west have been developed during these years by the extension of railroads and branches of railroads, have they not?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, Washington has almost doubled its mileage in the same time that we have been standing still; and at the same time, nearly doubled its population over us, too, although it is one-third smaller than this state.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know of any reason why branches of these roads have not been built in there, except that the whole system here is controlled by the same party?

Mr. TEAL: If you were to ask me to fathom the reason, in view of the earnings of certain of these systems in this state, why this state has not been developed, it is simply a matter impossible for me to answer. I do not understand that system of development.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Everything that comes out of that country at the present time, however it may get out, by team or pack train, or cattle being driven on hoof, has to find its ultimate market by rail over either the Southern Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, or the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Unless it is taken on the Columbia by water.

Mr. TEAL: Well, it would not go that way. The country I am speaking of, what we call the southeastern Oregon country,
748 outside of the Klamath country of course, gravitates toward the Short Line; that is, what they get of it. The Klamath country goes south, most of it, although they are building a road in there now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But it must go over one of those three lines of road?

Mr. TEAL: Oh yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And this country lies between those three lines?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N., and the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You said a moment ago that in view of the earnings of this road, it was incomprehensible to you why the country has not been developed. Do you mean developed by the construction of branch lines?

Mr. TEAL: I do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In making that statement as to earnings, are you aware of the fact, which has already been developed upon this hearing, that within the last few months, the Oregon Short Line has declared and paid a dividend of fifty per cent.?

Mr. TEAL: I am not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not take that into account?

Mr. TEAL: I do not consider the Short Line; I was not considering the Short Line at the time. That was not what was in my mind just at that time. It is a part of the system.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were considering the earnings of the O. R. & N.?

Mr. TEAL: That was what was in my mind. That is a part of that general system. The Short Line owns all of the stock of the O. R. & N., which is the same thing.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The earnings of the O. R. & N. are very large?

Mr. TEAL: The earnings of the O. R. & N. last year after 749 making every allowance that I know of that is made, and paying a dividend on the preferred stock which is required by their articles, paid twenty-five per cent. dividend on their common, outside of their earnings. I think that is reasonably fair for a country of this size.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the earnings were sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds, a dividend on the preferred stock, and twenty-five per cent. on the common?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir, and maintenance and a good many other things, too.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And still, that extension to Shaniko that was prophesied by Mr. Harriman several years ago has not materialized?

Mr. TEAL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To the best of your belief, Mr. Teal, are the statements of fact and the suggestions contained in these reports, Exhibits 2 and 3, signed by these gentlemen, and one of them signed by yourself, accurate and correct?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir, excepting one thing which I find I was a little inaccurate about.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was that?

Mr. TEAL: I refer to the fact that there had never been any adverse railway legislation in this State. I really had forgotten at the time that we did have a railway commission once?

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is sometime ago.

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago?

Mr. TEAL: Oh, several years; I could not just say when.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But aside from that, you think there are no inaccuracies in the statements?

Mr. TEAL: I do not think so.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Teal, who were the early directors of the O. R. & N., and where did they reside?

Mr. TEAL: Well, it depends; I suppose you want me to say——

750 Mr. COTTON: Well, from 1885 to 1893?

Mr. TEAL: Oh, I could not say, but I know that Mr. Ladd, Mr. Corbett, Mr. Failing and a number of those gentlemen were directors almost continuously for a number of years, and doubtless were so then.

Mr. COTTON: And they were largely the advisors of Mr. Villard and the other gentlemen who were interested in the O. R. & N. Company in those days, were they not?

Mr. TEAL: Well, I could not say as to that. Mr. Ladd, himself was very largely interested in the road at one time directly.

Mr. COTTON: They exercised a very decisive voice in its management; in other words, they were not merely nominal directors?

Mr. TEAL: No, for a long time, they were not, I think.

Mr. COTTON: And during that period these Portland gentlemen built a large number of the branches which the O. R. & N. Company has in the state of Washington?

Mr. TEAL: During that time the railroads built the branches.

Mr. COTTON: This Eastern Oregon country is no new discovery, such as it is?

Mr. TEAL: No, but Mr. Cotton, it is a decidedly new discovery since 1896, since this road went into the hands of a receiver.

Mr. COTTON: It has been there all the time has it not?

Mr. TEAL: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: When was the last branch line built by the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company or the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. TEAL: In this State?

Com'r LANE: Yes.

Mr. TEAL: Well, the only lines that have been built in this State from the O. R. & N. Company since 1897, that I now recall, was nineteen miles, which was built from La Grande to Elgin.

751 Mr. Lytle built the Columbia Southern out to Shaniko about seventy miles, which I think has been since acquired or controlled by the O. R. & N. Co. And either a year or two years ago there was forty miles built from Arlington out to Condon. I think that constitutes the additional mileage of the O. R. & N. in this state since 1897.

Com'r LANE: Was there a long period prior to the acquisition of this road by the Union Pacific in which no branch lines were built?

Mr. TEAL: Yes sir, it was very hard times.

Com'r LANE: Between what years?

Mr. TEAL: Oh, it is so far back now it is hard to give dates, but the road went into the hands of a receiver in 1894, July 1st. I think Mr. McNeill had charge of it, and I think it stayed in his hands for about two years, and prior to that time it was under the control of the U. P. as I remember, and I do not remember just when before that.

Com'r LANE: You say the last branch was built about 1897?

Mr. TEAL: Oh no, I was giving you the ones built since 1897. You see, we take them from about the time of the re-organization of the O. R. & N. in 1896, say in ten years.

Mr. COTTON: And from 1885 to 1897 what branches were built in this state by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. TEAL: I suppose the Heppner branch must have been built within that time. And I imagine the Pendleton branch to Walla Walla was built at that time.

Mr. COTTON: A line from La Grande to Elgin was under construction in 1891, was it not?

Mr. TEAL: Well, it may have been.

Mr. COTTON: And that was stopped when they stopped the Portland and Puget Sound line?

Mr. TEAL: I don't know as to that.

Mr. COTTON: The Shaniko line was built with O. R. & N. money, was it not?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, it was.

752 Mr. COTTON: As a matter of fact, Mr. Teal, there have been more railroads built, more branches of the O. R. & N. built in the last years, commencing with the Columbia Valley, the Arlington and Condon line and the extension of the Elgin line, under Mr. Harriman's administration, than was ever built in the form of branches under the old administration; is not that so?

Mr. TEAL: What was the first one you mentioned?

Mr. COTTON: Since Mr. Harriman's administration of O. R. & N. there have been more branches built in Oregon than was built under the old administration.

Mr. TEAL: Yes, all that we have now.

Mr. COTTON: What is that?

Mr. TEAL: I have given you all that I know of.

Com'r LANE: I do not get that clearly yet. What lines were built since the Harriman administration came in?

Mr. TEAL: Since the Harriman administration came in the line from Arlington to Condon, forty miles.

Mr. COTTON: The Shaniki line.

Mr. TEAL: Mr. Lytle built the Shaniko line.

Mr. COTTON: The O. R. & N. furnished the money, didn't it?

Mr. TEAL: Mr. Lytle furnished the brains and built it.

Mr. COTTON: Well, he did not.

Mr. TEAL: There might be a difference of opinion on that.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, a very substantial difference.

Mr. TEAL: At any rate Mr. Lytle built the road and we will say with O. R. & N. money, that is seventy miles.

Mr. COTTON: The man who furnishes the money usually furnishes the brains also.

Mr. TEAL: Then he is a sucker to let the other man have the road if he has put up the money for it. Then there was a road from Arlington to Condon of about forty miles.

Com'r LANE: From Arlington to Condon and Shaniko.

Mr. TEAL: But Mr. Cotton says the Elgin branch was built
753 before this, but I thought that was built since that time.

Mr. COTTON: No, the Elgin branch was not. That was built in 1891.

Com'r LANE: Then that is about 110 miles.

Mr COTTON: But the line from Elgin to Wallowa has been built since?

Mr. TEAL: I don't know. I did not know that it was built yet.

Mr. COTTON: It is under construction?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Practically completed?

Mr. TEAL: Well, I don't know how far along it is. About two years ago, I have reason to believe, there was very strong and urgent recommendations made from this end of the line for the building of roads, by the people in charge here; and I believe it was the result of those recommendations that the Elgin line is being completed, and I think it will be completed.

Mr. COTTON: The only branch which the O. R. & N. had prior to the Harriman administration was the Heppner branch and the line from La Grande to Elgin, was it not?

Mr. TEAL: In Oregon?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. TEAL: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And those are the only branches which were built in Oregon by any past administration, any former administration of the O. R. & N. property?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Including the time when it was administered by the Portland people?

Mr. TEAL: Well, they were directors, Mr. Cotton, but I will say yes, because I think Portland people have been about as slow in appreciating some parts of this country as Mr. Harriman has.

Mr. COTTON: It is not a country which appears on its surface to be blossoming with fruit and roses?

Mr. TEAL: Much of it is not.

Mr. COTTON: A good deal of it is not.

754 Mr. TEAL: A great deal of it is not.

Mr. COTTON: The first 25 or 30 miles immediately South of Shaniko are nothing but rocks?

Mr. TEAL: There are a good many rocks there, but I would not say it was all rocks. But it is not good railroad building in getting down there.

Mr. COTTON: And if that country can be developed in some other way as indicated in your report of December 1905, you think it would be better to develop it that way, would you not?

Mr. TEAL: If it will be developed in some other way. But the fact is, it is a matter of indifference how it is developed so long as the railroad goes into that country.

Mr. COTTON: In that report of July 1905, you seemed to quote Mr. Kennedy with reference to the Shaniko and Bend line?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Kennedy has been at great pains to write to you since that, that his letter which you quoted there did not relate to anything beyond Wasco, or a little bit beyond it?

Mr. TEAL: Well yes; I think someone had a talk with Mr. Kennedy, from my talk with him since, and he wrote to me.

Mr. COTTON: He wrote you quite a strong letter on the subject?

Mr. TEAL: No, it was not. When I saw Mr. Kennedy sometime afterwards he was considerably weaker then; as a matter of fact, Mr. Cotton, that states the truth. It was in connection with that line. I have Mr. Kennedy's origianl letter in my possession now.

Mr. COTTON: He simply said Wasco and beyond; he did not say how much beyond?

Mr. TEAL: No, he did not say how far beyond, or how little beyond.

Mr. COTTON: But he wrote you afterwards to the effect that he did not intend to mean even as far as Shaniko?

Mr. TEAL: I don't think he did. I do not think that report
755 intended to cover as far as Shaniko, of Mr. Kennedy's.

Mr. COTTON: Therefore, the idea, which you have conveyed in that report of July 1905, that Mr. Kennedy recommended the construction of the line beyond Shaniko, is not altogether right from Mr. Kennedy's standpoint?

Mr. TEAL: I do not think the report so states.

Mr. COTTON: I think it was quoted very largely for the purpose of indicating that Kennedy did so state?

Mr. TEAL: No, sir, that letter was quoted for the purpose of indicating that it was the policy of the old U. P. lines to build the branches out into this country.

Mr. COTTON: That it was the policy of the old line?

Mr. TEAL: So Mr. Kennedy stated.

Mr COTTON: They never did build any, did they?

Mr. TEAL: I don't know. Or do you mean out here?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. TEAL: No.

Mr. COTTON: And these lines, which you refer to in your report of December, 1905, you believe are under construction now?

Mr. TEAL: Many of them are. I know the Coos Bay line is under construction; I know the Elgin branch is under construction. I have every reason to believe and do believe that the line across the state in Southeastern Oregon will be constructed and the Klamath line is certainly being constructed and the North Bank road is being constructed, and the Tillamook road is being constructed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What North Bank road?

Mr. TEAL: The Hill road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Harriman is not assisting very ably in the construction of the North Bank road, is he?

Mr. TEAL: Not materially.

Mr. COTTON: The line across central Oregon and the Natron line and the line to Marshfield and the line across central Oregon and the Elgin extension are all Harriman lines, are they not?

756 Mr. TEAL: Every one of them, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did that Marshfield line get to be a Harriman line? About three months ago?

Mr. COTTON: No, it was constructed by the Oregon Western Railroad Company.

Mr. TEAL: It is a Harriman line as everybody knows.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, to be sure that I know what you were talking about, this autumn Mr. Harriman bought from Spreckles a Steamship line and a road from Marshfield called the Coos Bay, Roseburg and Eastern.

Mr. COTTON: That is an entirely different proposition. Mr. Teal, this is a line from the main line of the Southern Pacific at Drain to Marshfield, is it not?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does it connect with the line of Spreckles, or are they building the whole way?

Mr. COTTON: They are building all the way I understand.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is not intended as a connection?

Mr. COTTON: Oh, the Spreckles line has no road; it is just a few miles.

Mr. TEAL: The Spreckles road is but a few miles up to a coal mine.

Mr. COTTON: The Eastern Oregon country is very spotted, runs good and bad in spots?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, much of it is.

Mr. COTTON: The best country in Eastern Oregon lie- at Burns, Klamath and Lake Counties; is not that so?

Mr. TEAL: You are speaking of the Southeastern Oregon country?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. TEAL: You know there is a very good country in Crook County, but you are eliminating that now.

Mr. COTTON: If a line were built from Ontario to Klamath through Burns and down through Klamath and Lake Counties, forming a connection with the Oregon Short Line, and a connec-

757 tion with the Southern Pacific, that would tap much of the good country in Southern Oregon, would it not?

Mr. TEAL: It would tap a great deal of good country, Mr. Cotton and I think it would really tap the best part of that country, excepting of course the Klamath country, which is just as rich as it is.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I say, going down from Ontario through Burns, Lake, Klamath and down that country and over to Natron.

Mr. TEAL: And then going down South?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. TEAL: Yes, it would.

Mr. COTTON: That line as you understand, is under construction?

Mr. TEAL: No, I understood it was coming to Portland, not to California.

Mr. COTTON: But that is an extension across the Lake country to connect with it?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, but I understood you were going to start from Natron and work out through the Burns and Harney country and down the Malheur River to Ontario.

Mr. COTTON: And build a branch up to Burns?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, I hope so.

Mr. COTTON: And then a branch south to Klamath?

Mr. TEAL: That is already being built.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How much of this is under construction?

Mr. TEAL: This Klamath country line is under construction, and it depends upon what you call under construction. I believe when they are really expending their money in good faith, laying out road, acquiring rights of way, etc., that means under construction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are they laying any rails or grading down there?

Mr. TEAL: I understand they are.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They are grading on the Marshfield line?

Mr. TEAL: Yes sir.

758 Mr. SEVERANCE: And they are grading on the Natron line?

Mr. TEAL: Yes and on the Klamath line.

Mr. COTTON: And they are building from Ontario how far west?

Mr. TEAL: I think they have acquired that road, Mr. Cotton. That was built by a man from Montana out to Vale, but I think it belongs to the Short Line now.

Mr. COTTON: And you have reason to believe that they are making very extensive surveys through central Oregon at the present time?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir, I absolutely believe Mr. O'Brien when he tells me anything that he knows of his own knowledge, and he has reported that officially.

Mr. COTTON: So those lines are under construction. Now, about the Elgin branch?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you say under construction when they are making surveys. There have been a great many surveys all over United States.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Teal, please explain what you mean by that.

Mr. TEAL: I think it is but fair, because they have got enough sins to answer for anyhow, to say that the road was constructed out to Vale, and they now own it; and I know Mr. O'Brien would not have told me officially what he did unless it was so, and I know the Klamath line is under construction, and I know the Coos Bay line is under construction and that the Elgin line is under construction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I was not intimating in any way that Mr. O'Brien had stated to you anything that was not so, but I was merely getting at what you meant by the words "under construction."

Mr. COTTON: In saying that the Klamath line is under construction, Mr. Teal, you mean grading.

Mr. TEAL: Yes, actual work, and I presume they are now working.

Mr. COTTON: And by "under construction" on the Marshfield line you mean grading.

759 Mr. TEAL: Doing everything that is possible to construct the road.

Mr. COTTON: And by "under construction" with reference to the Elgin extension you mean grading?

Mr. TEAL: I do.

Mr. COTTON: And upon the Klamath and Natron line?

Mr. TEAL: They are constructing there, I understand, which I consider a part of this Eastern Oregon line?

Mr. SEVERANCE: What about the main line across the state?

Mr. TEAL: I think that will be a part of the main line.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know how the distance compares from Natron to Klamath with the distance from Klamath to Burns?

Mr. TEAL: I should think it would be shorter from Natron to Klamath than from Klamath to Burns.

Mr. COTTON: It is pretty nearly the same distance.

Mr. TEAL: Well, I was going to say it must be very nearly the same distance.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know how far it is from Burns to the present terminus of the Vale line?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, I have not been over there for a long time, but I should think 60 to 70 miles, somewhere along there.

Mr. COTTON: And that line forming the extension of the Vale line to Klamath you understand they are surveying?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know anything about the line to Pilot Rock and south of Pendleton?

Mr. TEAL: Well, yes and no. I mean I have not been up there since they started but I understand there is a road in process of construction from Pendleton to Pilot Rock.

Mr. COTTON: By the O. R. & N.?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Then at the present time there would seem to be some railroad activity in the way of construction in the 760 State of Oregon by the Harriman lines?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: To quite a considerable extent?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know about how many miles that would represent that is under actual construction? What would you say the mileage is now under actual construction in this state by the Harriman lines?

Mr. TEAL: Well, I think as I remember it is about 60 miles from Elgin to Joseph the way they run; it may not be that far. I do not know how they run going to Pilot Rock, but probably 25 or 30 miles from Pendleton. It must be eighty miles almost from Drain to Marshfield any way they can make it.

Mr. COTTON: Going down to the Umpqua straight across, and then down the coast it is longer, is it not?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, I understand. That was about as short a way as they could make it.

Mr. COTTON: They follow the line down the Umpqua River to the coast and then down the coast?

Mr. TEAL: That would make it perhaps 90 miles.

Mr. COTTON: The road across the state, if it is built, the line from Natron to Klamath, how far along is that?

Mr. TEAL: I do not know how far along it is in point of construction?

Mr. COTTON: I mean in distance?

Mr. TEAL: I should think it must be 160 miles or maybe more.

Mr. COTTON: It must be more, because——

Mr. TEAL (interrupting): I do not just know the mileage. They go up the mountains there and have to wind down again, but it is some place between 160 and 200 miles in distance, I should think.

Mr. COTTON: And then the Vale line actually constructed is how many miles?

Mr. TEAL: Probably twenty miles.

Mr. COTTON: That makes 355 miles under actual con-
761 struction at the present time without counting the Central Oregon line at all.

Mr. TEAL: Yes, if that addition is correct, which I have no reason to doubt.

Mr. COTTON: And the Central Oregon line on which they are surveying has a mileage of about how much?

Mr. TEAL: About 350 to 400 miles.

Mr. COTTON: So altogether at the present time the Harriman lines have under construction or under survey with a very fair prospect of construction, in this state in the neighborhood of over 700 miles of railroad?

Mr. TEAL: I believe so.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Teal, this 90 miles to Marshfield is Southern Pacific, is it not?

Mr. TEAL: We call it the Harriman system. Yes, it goes off the Southern Pacific because they connect at Drain, and that is in the direction of Central Oregon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But that is west to the Pacific Coast from Drain?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, that is going to the coast.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The 160 miles is Southern Pacific, is it not, running down from Natron?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That runs in a southeasterly direction to avoid the mountains.

Mr. TEAL: I beg pardon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that a line that could be continued on down and connect around the mountains with the Southern Pacific farther along the line?

Mr. TEAL: Oh yes, unquestionably it will; I imagine that is one purpose of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Affords an easier grade than the present grade over the mountains for through business.

Mr. TEAL: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The 20 miles was already built and was bought.

Mr. TEAL: That is my understanding. I know it pur-
762 ported to have been built by Mr. Parker, a Montana man.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And 25 miles from Pilot Rock to Pendleton is O. R. & N.?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the 60 miles of O. R. & N. is where?

Mr. TEAL: That is from Elgin out to the Wallowa country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that there is really under construction by the O. R. & N. 85 miles and by the Short Line about 20 miles and the Southern Pacific is building to reach Coos Bay about 90 miles, and 160 miles is being constructed by the Southern Pacific to get around the mountains, which could be used if desired as a part of the line across the state.

Mr. TEAL: Well, that really could be used for two purposes and certainly will be. That will open up the Klamath country and bring the trade here which we do not get now. I would consider that a valuable line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, undoubtedly, but so far as now constructed, or actually under construction, leaving out of question the surveys, this large empire as you call it in central and eastern Oregon is as yet unpenetrated by railroads?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: Is there any disposition to block development to the north?

Mr. TEAL: No it was not blocked at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are speaking of the Hill line?

Mr. TEAL: I do not know what is in your mind. Do you mean the North Bank route?

Com'r LANE: I wanted to know if it was the policy pursued here, owing to joint ownership of these roads by Mr. Harriman, which prevents this territory being opened by others.

Mr. TEAL: Oh, it is a notorious fact, I suppose known to everybody, that knows anything about the circumstances, that 763 there has been one continuous fight down the Columbia River against Mr. Hill's efforts to get to this city; being blocked by the Harriman interests.

Com'r LANE: The Northern Pacific comes into this town, does it not?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, but it comes in by a roundabout way.

Com'r LANE: Has Mr. Hill been trying to get into eastern Oregon country?

Mr. TEAL: There are rumors that he has.

Com'r LANE: But nothing directly or positively has been done?

Mr. TEAL: No.

Com'r LANE: I suppose the only lines that you have to develop — this state at all are the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company or Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. TEAL: Those two interests at the present time, yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: What about the Gould lines from the south?

Mr. TEAL: They are not in yet.

Mr. COTTON: They are being constructed are they not?

Mr. TEAL: Towards us?

Mr. COTTON: Well, being constructed across California.

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: You have approached them on the subject of constructing into Oregon, have you not?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir, we have encouraged them every way we could.

Mr. COTTON: There is no reason in the world why they cannot come into this country if they want to, is there?

Mr. TEAL: Well, if you have the other things, if you have the money to build with there is not. We have encouraged these other roads, but it is not with any feeling at all, we have encou-
764 raged the O. R. & N., we are delighted to see any of them build that will open up the country.

Mr. COTTON: The North Bank road hasn't anything to do with this interior Oregon country, has it?

Mr. TEAL: I do not know. I do not want to say anything I ought not to say—I do not know whether it has or not.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Hill has been trying to impede the construction of the Harriman lines north just as much, hasn't he?

Mr. TEAL: I think so.

Mr. COTTON: And equally or more successful if anything, I should say.

Mr. TEAL: I doubt that; I think you have done pretty well up there. But I do not draw any distinction at all.

Mr. COTTON: There isn't any such friendly feeling between those two gentlemen as would cause either of them to keep out of each other's territory.

Mr. TEAL: I do not think they would fall on each other's necks if they saw each other.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the road you speak of as the North Bank road, the construction of which Mr. Harriman has been trying unsuccessfully to block? Where does it come from and where does it go to?

Mr. TEAL: It comes from Spokane, I believe down to the Columbia, and then down the north bank of the Columbia River, and crosses on the bridge at Vancouver, thence into Portland on a water level, and builds from Vancouver to the Sound.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say Mr. Harriman has been endeavoring to obstruct the construction of this road?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But he has not been successful?

Mr. TEAL: No, sir, only to a degree.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is the line Brother Cotton referred to that Mr. Harriman is trying to construct where Mr. Hill has been throwing rocks on the tracks?

765 Mr. TEAL: Well now, he is over in Hill's territory. You see, this country is all divided up; so when Mr. Harriman gets into Mr. Hill's territory at Seattle, Mr. Hill does not feel happy.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is the line Mr. Harriman has under construction that Mr. Hill is trying to stop?

Mr. TEAL: Between Portland and Seattle.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does that run; up the Columbia or down the Columbia River?

Mr. TEAL: It goes down the Columbia on the North Bank and then goes on over.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know where the line of the Milwaukee & St. Paul is projected through to the Sound?

Mr. TEAL: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That does not come into Oregon?

Mr. TEAL: I am afraid not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Hasn't it been publicly announced where it went?

Mr. TEAL: Oh yes, sir, it has been. It is supposed to go across, I think, a little above Pasco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In Washington?

Mr. TEAL: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And across Idaho?

Mr. TEAL: Oh yes, it has got to cross Idaho.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But does not come down south?

Mr. TEAL: I am afraid not; not yet.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Gould line that Mr. Cotton seems desirous of having come up through here is being built from San Francisco, is it not?

Mr. TEAL: It is being built to San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Ogden.

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is called Western Pacific?

Mr. TEAL: The Western Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But the only road or the only owner of roads now here who could readily throw branches into this territory is Mr. Harriman?

Mr. TEAL: Yes, sir.

(Witness excused.)

766 ALEXANDER KERR, called as a witness, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:—

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live, Mr. Kerr?

Mr. KERR: In Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. KERR: Wholesale grocery business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in the business?
Mr. KERR: Since 1893.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of your firm?
Mr. KERR: Wadhams & Kerr Brothers.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901, Mr. Kerr, were your shipments from the East solicited by the Southern Pacific and Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company representatives?
Mr. KERR: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Separately?
Mr. KERR: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: They are not so soliciting now, are they?
Mr. KERR: No sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do your goods come from chiefly?
Mr. KERR: From the East and South and the Pacific Coast.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you bring goods up from San Francisco to some extent?
Mr. KERR: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How do they come?
Mr. KERR: By boat and by rail, both.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Have they always come both ways, more or less?
Mr. KERR: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901 was your trade solicited by the boat line and the rail lines from San Francisco?
Mr. KERR: Well principally by the boat line; it was cheaper by boat.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But the railroad asked for your business;
767 came around and tried to get it, and you did ship some that way, didn't you?
Mr. KERR: Very litte; principally by boat at that time.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What way does your stuff come from the East now?
Mr. KERR: We ship some around the Horn and some by the Union Pacific and some Northern Pacific.
Mr. SEVERANCE: The commodities that come around the Horn by ship are trans-shipped at San Francisco, are they not?
Mr. KERR: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you formerly occasionally bring shipments around by the Sunset Route?
Mr. KERR: A few, but principally imports from France.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That was during the days when this business was actively sought by the Southern Pacific, wasn't it?
Mr. KERR: We do still. I think we occasionally now ship from France a shipment or two from France of mushrooms, peas, and articles of that kind by Sunset. That is my recollection.
Mr. SEVERANCE: From New York?
Mr. KERR: We got a through bill of lading, as I understand it.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Well does it come by New York and then around by boat to the Gulf or come direct to the Gulf from France and then up?
Mr. KERR: I can't tell you; I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Years ago when the Southern Pacific was soliciting business as against the O. R. & N., did you occasionally ship by Sacramento?

Mr. KERR: Very seldom. Our principal shipments were at that time with the Union Pacific. In fact almost exclusively.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you did ship some that way?

Mr. KERR: Very little.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But now you don't ship any that way?

768 Mr. KERR: Not that way, no sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Goods are not routed that way any more, are they, coming over the Union Pacific from the East; they are not routed around by Sacramento, but all sent by the Short Line?

Mr. KERR: The Union Pacific, you mean?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. KERR: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that equally so when they come over Rio Grande, or don't you ship over that line?

Mr. KERR: We don't ship over Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you use to ship over Rio Grande to some extent?

Mr. KERR: Occasionally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that at the present time you get practically all your goods by the Union Pacific and Short Line or by the Northern Pacific?

Mr. KERR: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Northern Pacific is still soliciting business?

Mr. KERR: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Harriman lines as a system solicit business?

Mr. KERR: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But not separately as parts of the system?

Mr. KERR: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Is the Great Northern also soliciting?

Mr. KERR: Yes, sir, but we do not use them very often.

Mr. COTTON: You have not given them much business?

Mr. KERR: None at all.

Mr. COTTON: For that reason they simply dropped coming to see you?

Mr. KERR: That is practically correct.

Witness excused.

769 H. M. HALLER, called as a witness, was first duly sworn and testified as follows:—

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Haller, where do you live?

Mr. HALLER: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived in Portland?

Mr. HALLER: Eleven years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. HALLER: Manufacturer's agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you in business by yourself, or are you a firm?

Mr. HALLER: I am Treasurer of the Kelley-Clarke Company, and Manager of the Portland office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does the company have offices aside from Portland?

Mr. HALLER: Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, San Francisco and New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What line of manufacturer's goods do you handle?

Mr. HALLER: Principally groceries.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is your business in Portland a large or a small business?

Mr. HALLER: The railroad companies tell us it is rather large.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I don't want to have you embarrassed, Mr. Haller, but you are one of the largest shippers into Portland?

Mr. HALLER: Well, the railroad companies could answer that more definitely than myself. I have not inquired into other people's business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you give any idea how many cars you ship a year?

Mr. HALLER: Oh, we ship a few hundred, and we route a few hundred more for the grocery jobbers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Out of those several hundred cars that you ship yourself, aside from the several hundred that you route, do you route them yourself, or are they routed for you?

Mr. HALLER: We route them ourselves.

770 Mr. SEVERANCE: From what point of origin do your cars come?

Mr. HALLER: They come from about 25 or 30 states.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Through the East and West?

Mr. HALLER: Beginning with Maine and going down to Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, California and all through the middle West, and New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Haller, prior to 1901 was your business solicited by the Southern Pacific agents, in Portland, as distinguished from the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Co.'s agents?

Mr. HALLER: To some extent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the other lines also have solicitors who called on you, like the Northern Pacific?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir, all the lines who had representatives in Portland called on us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At the present time are you solicited for business via Southern Pacific or Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company as one against the other, or do they have a common solicitor?

Mr. HALLER: We are not solicited for business by the Harriman system, because we give them all of our business, and there is no occasion for them to come to us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been doing that?

Mr. HALLER: For several years, for several reasons.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years?

Mr. HALLER: We have been giving them all of it for a little over four years that I have had charge of the office here, and practically all of it before that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what way does the stuff move that comes in here by the Harriman lines for you?

Mr. HALLER: We route it by different lines east of Chicago; use a few of the lines between Chicago and Missouri River and the Union Pacific. Sometimes we route cars by Pullman in connection with the Rock Island, that is near Denver.

771 Mr. SEVERANCE: When they come out to Denver by Rock Island how do they come West?

Mr. HALLER: Union Pacific, that is the way we route them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Haller, did you formerly, in the days when the Southern Pacific and O. R. & N. were competing with each other, route some cars by way of Ogden and Sacramento and up?

Mr. HALLER: Very few cars. The time was a little slow.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you did give them some business, in response to their solicitation?

Mr. HALLER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No business comes that way now?

Mr. HALLER: No, I don't think any business comes that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you informed after the consolidation of these lines as to which way goods would be brought in here?

Mr. HALLER: No; we never have any railroad man to dictate to us, or even intimate to us, how we shall route our freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't think you caught what I mean. I mean goods coming over Union Pacific; was there anything said to you as to how they should reach Portland, over what line?

Mr. HALLER: No, we always route the cars clear through to Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you got information along in 1901 or thereabouts that thereafter these shipments would come over the Short Line exclusively instead of around by Sacramento?

Mr. HALLER: I don't know what time we discontinued shipping by Sacramento. We never were heavy shippers that way, on account of the length of time it took to come around. Mr. McCusker, who was on the stand this morning used to solicit our business for the Southern Pacific, and I believe that about five years ago he didn't come in the office as often as he had previously, and I asked him one day why he had not been after more of our business, and he 772 said that it was coming by Granger and the Short Line, that is, shipments to Portland, instead of around by Sacramento, on account of it being a longer haul and the mountain haul.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So he didn't come to ask for it any more by the other route? That was your conversation with him five years ago?

Mr. HALLER: I think it was about five years ago, somewhere along about that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you formerly ship some goods by the Sunset Route from the Atlantic sea-board?

Mr. HALLER: We shipped some from the Atlantic sea-board and some from the Southeast, from Georgia, and we have also shipped Eastbound by Sunset.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of commodities did you ship East?

Mr. HALLER: Canned fruit, canned salmon and evaporated prunes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you shipped them by Sunset to New York?

Mr. HALLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to what other points in the East?

Mr. HALLER: Most of the prunes we shipped East were either for export or to New York City.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Haller, you still continue to ship that way?

Mr. HALLER: We shipped one or two cars that way this Fall, and we offered the Sunset a couple more, but they told us that the congestion was such from San Francisco South that they could not promise good time. But they did solicit our business for New York right up to the time the congestion became bad in Southern California.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Solicited New York business by way of Sunset so as to get the long haul?

Mr. HALLER: Yes sir, and also solicited East bound business from Atlanta, Georgia; Biloxi, Mississippi; and Atlanta points.

773 Mr. SEVERANCE: From Atlanta points do shipments move both ways both by Sunset and via Omaha?

Mr. HALLER: Yes sir, they have moved by Omaha for the reason that the Louisville & Nashville were not satisfied with the short haul to New Orleans and refused to turn the business over to the Sunset, but brought them up to St. Louis and the other roads stole it; that is what we call it in railroad parlance, stole it, took it away from us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What about goods originating west of New York City? Did Sunset formerly absorb the local into the seaboard to get the business around by New Orleans or Texas; goods originating East of Buffalo and Pittsburg?

Mr. HALLER: We never made any shipments Sunset except from New York City, Baltimore or Virginia points, and Atlanta, Georgia.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never shipped from interior points in New York?

Mr. HALLER: No interior points in New York by Sunset.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From points on the Mississippi River South of Memphis the rates by Sunset and Omaha are the same, aren't they?

Mr. HALLER: South of the Ohio and East of the Missouri?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, or along the Mississippi Valley?

Mr. HALLER: Well in a part of the country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Take New Orleans for instance.

Mr. HALLER: Yes sir, they are the same to Portland from New Orleans, but not the same from some of the Southeastern points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Southeastern you mean in what states?

Mr. HALLER: I mean Atlanta. We have moved business via Richmond and several other small lines, getting the goods into Cincinnati and through to Peoria or Chicago at a lower rate than we could get them around from Atlanta to the Mississippi 774 River over the Southern Railway Company. They had an arbitrary local down there, and it raised the rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From New Orleans they are the same?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you have shipped both ways from New Orleans?

Mr. HALLER: Yes sir, shipped by Sunset and by the Illinois Central care of the Great Northern and Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: was there ever much difference in the time from New Orleans one way or the other?

Mr. HALLER: Well on account of moving a good many cars we watch such matters very close. In the Winter time we prefer to move the goods by Sunset on account of there not being so much danger from snow blockades and freezing of canned goods. In the Summer time a merchant will prefer to have molasses to come through the territory of the Northern lines so that it will remain in the barrels. It is pretty hot down through Arizona.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have had shipments coming out from there besides molasses?

Mr. HALLER: We have shipments from Texas and Louisiana.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do they come both ways?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The rates are the same?

Mr. HALLER: There are some of those small points down there where the rice mills are that there is a local and you cannot always figure on the rate being the same. After they get on to the main line of the road they are the same. Of course you understand the rates cannot always apply over the Sunset up to this point, and then further east, like in Spokane where we ship and in some of those points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But ordinarily speaking, through that territory and points on the main line of the road, commodities can 775 move either way, by Omaha or Sunset to Portland at the same rate, and do move both ways.

Mr. HALLER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That would include rice.

Mr. HALLER: It includes rice, molasses and canned goods.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you do any oriental business?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you ship anything to the Orient from Portland?

Mr. HALLER: A few canned goods.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Portland Asiatic line?

Mr. HALLER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do they come in here from the east or from the south?

Mr. HALLER: They originate in Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They are local?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, they are canned here.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you import anything from the Orient?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, we bring some goods in from China and Japan, Singapore.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what points do you ship them, to the coast?

Mr. HALLER: Some of them go through to New York, some to Denver, some to Salt Lake and some to Montana points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And over what lines of steamships do you bring them from the Orient?

Mr. HALLER: We have brought them in over three different lines, the Portland & Asiatic, the Boston Steamship Company and Hill's steamboat line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you a house in San Francisco?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you import by San Francisco also by the Pacific Mail?

Mr. HALLER: Very little.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The goods that come in by Portland & Asiatic move to the east over the O. R. & N. when they go east?

776 Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir, except those going to the Sound move east over the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are goods consigned from the Orient right through to Boston or are they rebilled at Portland?

Mr. HALLER: If we have sold them we route through to Boston. If we have not, we stop them here until we sell them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have a warehouse here, have you?

Mr. HALLER: We do not control a warehouse at this time; we did for seven years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of goods do you bring from the Orient? Do you bring matting?

Mr. HALLER: No, we bring peanuts, rice, sago, tapioca, pepper, pineapple, and I think we have brought in a few pieces of hard wood.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you import goods from the Orient, Mr. Haller, where is the steamship routing determined; is it done by some representative of yours in the Orient or do you do it here?

Mr. HALLER: That is generally handled by our Seattle office. They have a manager of the foreign department there who looks after this.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does he give instructions to your representatives of the east as to how the commodities shall be routed?

Mr. HALLER: We will instruct our agent in Japan to route goods Portland & Asiatic when we want to handle them at Portland, and by one of the Northern lines when we want to handle them at Seattle.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But that routing is not fixed in the Orient, but is determined at Seattle, is it? What I want to get at is this: You have agents in the east who make your purchases for you, don't you?

Mr. HALLER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the east I mean the Orient?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do those gentlemen who make the pur-

777 chases for you route the goods through, or are they instructed as to the steamships?

Mr. HALLER: It depends on how we buy them. If we buy them f. o. b. we route them. If we buy them c. i. f. they route them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How do you buy most of your stuff over there c. i. f. or f. o. b.?

Mr. HALLER: We buy peanuts c. i. f., pineapples f. o. b.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in that case when bought c. i. f., do your agents there route them, or the person you buy them from?

Mr. HALLER: Our agents as a rule, I think. I am not positive.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have agents at most of the ports of call in the Orient?

Mr. HALLER: We have at two or three points in Japan, a couple in China, Manila, Singapore, Rangoon and Bombay and on around through the Isthmus, Southern Europe and also in Northern Europe, England, Liverpool and London.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Haller, you say you ship at the present time almost entirely by Union Pacific?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: There is no reason on the part of the railroad company which compels you to ship that way, is there?

Mr. HALLER: No, we do not take any dictation from them.

Mr. COTTON: You are free to ship any way you want to by any of those routes?

Mr. HALLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: You do not know of any limitation upon your ability to ship here?

Mr. HALLER: No there is none, we have reasons, several of them, for shipping Union Pacific.

Mr. COTTON: But I mean there is no reason why, except your personal reasons, why you should not ship any way you want to?

778 Mr. HALLER: We can ship any way we want to.

(Witness excused.)

Com'r LANE: We will take an adjournment until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

Adjourned until 10 o'clock January 25th, 1907.

PORTLAND, OREGON, January 25, 1907,
10:00 a. m.

Com'r LANE: Are you ready to proceed, gentlemen?

E. NEWBEGIN was recalled and further testified as follows:

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Newbegin, in testifying yesterday you did not mean to say that the Ogden gateway was closed to the Denver & Rio Grande via Huntington, did you?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: No, I didn't say that.

Mr. COTTON: I did not so understand you, but just understood that the Ogden gateway was closed.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: What I mean by that was, Mr. Cotton, that the gateway was closed for bringing cars via Sacramento.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; but the Ogden gateway via Huntington is still open?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Now, I don't know enough about the railroads back there, whether you come via Ogden to come to Huntington, I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, you come from Ogden and come by the Short Line to Huntington in connection with the D. & R. G.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I am not familiar with the railroads up there and I don't want to testify about that; I know nothing about them except in a general way.

Mr. COTTON: Well, the D. & R. G. still interchanges business with the O. R. & N.?

779 Mr. NEWBEGIN: With the O. R. & N.?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I don't know as to that.

Mr. COTTON: You don't know whether that is closed or not?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Not now. I do know this, that you can't ship cars via Ogden to Sacramento.

Com'r LANE: You can?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: You cannot.

Mr. COTTON: But you don't know whether you can ship by the O. R. & N. and the D. & R. G. or not?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: At this time?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I could not say, no.

Com'r LANE: I didn't so understand him to testify.

Mr. COTTON: But he said the Ogden gateway was closed.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: What I refer to as the Ogden gateway, and I think you know what I referred to, is this; that today you cannot ship a car via Ogden via Sacramento to Portland, trans-continental freight.

Mr. COTTON: With my road I did not regard that as closing the Ogden gateway, that is the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well the stockholders of the Southern Pacific might.

Mr. COTTON: That is a different matter; that is a matter that is very easily explained why it is closed; if your Honor would like to know about that feature it is very easily explained.

Com'r LANE: I presume you will put on some railroad officials while we are here; is that your intention?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I intended to call Mr. Miller and he will explain that.

Mr. LOVETT: It is not our intention to call any witness, your Honor, anywhere.

Com'r LANE: Did you intend to call them?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I intend to call Mr. Miller; he can explain that, of course.

780 Mr. COTTON: Now, Mr. Newbegin, you stated some transaction about the diversion of a car or cars; when did that take place?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, when I left here yesterday, when the court excused me I was the happiest man in the room; I thought I had something easy; and I went over to the office and got two young men to help me and we started in to find records. Well, like anything that you never expect to use again, when that thing transpired I never had any idea I would be called to testify on it any more than a man expects his daily transactions of today to be put on the witness stand five or six years from now, and I could not find anything positive. The only thing I could find was this; that in 1902, the fall of 1902, I think it was September and October, we had two cars by Ogden via the Rio Grandes into Portland by the Southern.

Mr. COTTON: Sacramento?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, Sacramento; and that leads me to believe, now I would not want to swear positively, because if any of you gentlemen would go back five or six years it would be very hard to place those things, that the diversion of the cars happened in the winter of 1902-3; that is to say that we ordered the goods in November or December, and they were shipped after the first of 1903 and were diverted and came into Portland over the O. R. & N., when our intention was that they should come by the Southern Pacific.

Mr. COTTON: The reason given you was that the Sacramento-Ogden gateway was closed, there were no longer any rates.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: We had been shipping largely Southern Pacific, and as I recall it now, after picking up a piece here and there yesterday, I got after the Southern Pacific for diverting cars before that, and they made an exception in my case, and I think that is the reason why these two or three cars came in in September; and on the strength of those cars coming in in September, we gave 781 them some freight to come Southern, and that came, I think, over the O. R. & N. in 1903.

Mr. COTTON: Now you can ship by the D. & R. G. and the O. R. & N., or any other line,—the Northern Pacific or Great Northern, down into the Willamette Valley, can't you?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: How is that now, Mr. Cotton?

Mr. COTTON: I say, you can ship from the east via the D. & R. G. at Huntington or the Northern Pacific and Portland, or the Great Northern and Portland down into the Willamette Valley on Southern Pacific points, can't you, today?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I will say that shipments as a rule via the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific to the Willamette Valley are not satisfactory.

Mr. COTTON: What is the trouble?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: You will have to ask somebody that knows more about it than I.

Mr. COTTON: Well, where does the trouble occur?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, they usually try to transfer it to a boat, or something of that kind; anyhow they happen to make it uncomfortable for you,—so uncomfortable we always route ours Union Pacific so as to have no trouble.

Mr. COTTON: Who makes it uncomfortable?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I would not like to say because I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: Don't the Northern Pacific control their own traffic out of here? If they don't want to send it by rail and prefer to send it by boat that is their business, isn't it?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I don't know; they might think they control it, but there might be conditions which they have no control over.

Mr. COTTON: Well, if the route is open by rail, who transfers—do you suppose the Southern Pacific goes to an N. P. car and puts it on a rival boat line?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: That would be a matter, I should think, the railroad men could speak of better than I.

Mr. COTTON: Well now, would you imagine that——

782 Mr. SEVERANCE: Well now, I don't suppose we want a mere speculation, your Honor?

Mr. COTTON: Well, he is speculating the other way, as if we were interfering with it.

Com'r LANE: I will let him answer.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I will say this; in making our shipments in the Willamette Valley we find it to our advantage to ship by the Union Pacific in preference to the Northern anyway.

Mr. COTTON: Why?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Because with them we get better service.

Mr. COTTON: Where does that bad service occur, from Portland into the Valley by way of boat, or from Portland into the Valley by way of rail?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, that is hard to say. We might say that the objection to transferring goods from rail to boat might have something to do with it; we might say, Mr. Cotton, that the objection in regard to claims might have something to do with it,—that is for damages.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; claims against whom, the Southern Pacific?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Either the Southern Pacific or the Great Northern. For instance if we have a claim against the U. P. or the O. R. & N., it is easier to get it fixed up than it is the Southern Pacific or the Great Northern.

Mr. COTTON: I see. Recently you have been shipping over the Union Pacific?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, largely with them.

Mr. COTTON: Is that a matter of your preference, or compulsion?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I judge it is our preference; we usually pay the freight.

Mr. COTTON: You don't know of any limitation upon your ability to ship other than by the Sacramento route, do you?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: No.

Mr. COTTON: And therefore your shipments this way are 783 just a matter of your own convenience and because you think you get better service that way.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: That is all, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Newbegin, prior to the time that the Oregon Railroad & Navigation and Southern Pacific interests were together, I believe you testified yesterday that the bulk of your business came via Sacramento?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at about the time you speak of, 1902 or 1903 you were unable to ship at all to Sacramento, but the shipments had to come via the O. R. & N.?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I think the railroads could fix the date very easily, because they know just as well as I do—no, they know a great deal better than I do just when Mr. Harriman, or whoever had charge of that, ordered that gateway closed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, but it is a fact you can't ship that way now?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: It is a fact you cannot ship a car from the east; that is, unless it has been changed recently; to my knowledge you can't ship a car via Ogden via Sacramento to Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I thought. Now you say,—Mr. Cotton asked you if it was not a matter of preference with you to ship by the Union Pacific; that preference arises out of the fact that it is more comfortable for you, and you get better service than if you attempt to ship over some other line; isn't that it?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Just at this time the Union Pacific route is open and the Great Northern is closed, and we naturally ship the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Certainly; but so far as shipments up into the Willamette Valley are concerned, when you ship over some line other than the O. R. & N., do your cars go through?

784 Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes; certainly they go through. If we ship Northern Pacific or Great Northern they will go through as far as Albany and Salem, because there are boat connections; you can transfer to boat from here. For instance, if a car came over the Great Northern you can transfer it to the boat.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is not what I am speaking of; do the cars themselves come through, or do they have to transfer to boat here at Portland.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Now, Mr. Severance, I would not say but my understanding is most of the shipments are transferred to boats here; I don't know positively, I don't want to swear to these things because I am not posted.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, transferred to boats——

Mr. NEWBEGIN (interrupting): I will say this: we usually ship our cars now for the Willamette Valley by the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line and O. R. & N., care of the Southern Pacific, because we think we get better service.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the cars go right through all rail?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, all rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is no transfer to boat?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Not if they come Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I mean if they come Union Pacific; that is all, I guess.

Mr. COTTON: When they are transferred here to a boat, to whose boat are they transferred?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I guess that does not matter much, because it is just the same, whether it is Mr. Graham's boats or yours.

Mr. COTTON: Well, going up into the country above Salem it is Mr. Graham's boat, isn't it?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I would not say, I don't know; but it does not make any difference, the rates are the same, and as I understand it you have a working agreement; I don't know it, but that is what I have been told, it is generally reported.

785 Mr. COTTON: But if your car goes to Albany it don't go by boat, does it,—the Northern Pacific car?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Sometimes of the year it could go by boat.

Mr. COTTON: I mean don't they actually; or have you made any shipments that way?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: As I stated awhile ago we usually ship by your lines, Mr. Cotton, because we think——

Mr. COTTON: How long ago, Mr. Newbegin, did you make shipment by the Northern Pacific to Albany?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I could not say.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any recollection of how long ago it was?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: The last recollection I have very vividly was we had a claim against the Great Northern amounting to about $35, and we had so much trouble getting that claim—it was a just claim, and in getting it adjusted we always felt that you folks, I don't say that you did, I can't swear that you did, I can't say, but we always felt, that is, I felt as manager for our firm that you folks didn't get after the Great Northern as much as you should to pay their part, in order to let us feel that your line was the way to ship the freight and we had such a time getting that claim we said in the future we would ship the way that we would have no interference.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know where the loss occurred?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: You could not tell whether the freight was damaged between here and Salem, or between Council Bluffs and Huntington, could you?

Mr. COTTON: No. It was not between Council Bluffs and Huntington when it came in on the Northern.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: You could not tell whether it was between Portland and Salem; it was damaged in the car; you could not tell where it was damaged.

Mr. COTTON: Possibly the railroads might have had some record as to rough handling, or something of that sort?

786 Mr. NEWBEGIN: That I don't know; I don't know where it was damaged.

Mr. COTTON: Do you remember the number of your claim?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: No.

Mr. COTTON: Have you any papers that would indicate this claim of $35?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Excuse me; don't ask me to look up any more papers five or six years old.

Mr. COTTON: How old is it? Possibly we have a system and we could find it in our office.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: I think it would be five or six years, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: Because of that claim and the difficulty you had in getting it paid you stopped shipping by the Northern lines substantially?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Well, I don't know; I would not want to swear it was because of that claim alone, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: I mean because of that and other little difficulties.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, I mean to say this: We thought it was policy and we would get better service all around to ship that way.

Mr. COTTON: Do you ship any stuff in and out of Portland over the Northern Pacific?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: In and out of Portland?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: How do you mean; do you mean on the northern lines?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Why, I think so.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I mean through stuff from the east; do you have through stuff from the east coming in here over the northern lines to Portland?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Sometimes.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I mean now——

787 Mr. NEWBEGIN (interrupting): Yes, I think we have got three or four cars on the northern line now that we wish were on your line, too, just now, because we would get a little better service.

Mr. COTTON: The bulk of your business, however, comes in over the Union Pacific to Portland?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The blockade on the Northern Pacific is occasioned by the snow blockade now, isn't it?

Mr. NEWBEGIN: We don't have quite as much trouble on the Northern Pacific as there is on the Great Northern, but it is the snow blockade, I understand; I don't know.

(Witness excused.)

FLETCHER LINN called as a witness, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Linn, where do you live?

Mr. LINN: In Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. LINN: I am manager of the Oregon Furniture Mfg. Co.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You manufacture furniture here in Portland?

Mr. LINN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And ship it out from here?

Mr. LINN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you bring commodities in from the east?

Mr. LINN: Not very much now, no, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Principally outgoing shipments?

Mr. LINN: Nearly all outgoing.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Previous to 1901 how did you ship from here to San Francisco, if you ship that way at all?

Mr. LINN: Previous to 1901?
Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.
Mr. LINN: Well, we shipped by rail or boat.
Mr. SEVERANCE: At that time was there competition as 788 between the boat and the rail lines; were they each soliciting business from here to San Francisco; I mean did they have solicitors out?
Mr. LINN: Well, I don't recall whether they did at that time or not.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, several years ago; I won't put it in 1901.
Mr. LINN: We never had much soliciting done for freight in California at all, and I could not state.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Isn't it a fact, sir, that these two lines were trying to get your business, the boat line and the rail line, from here to San Francisco and California points?
Mr. LINN: Not that I recall, no, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you ship both ways?
Mr. LINN: We shipped principally by rail, not very much by boat.
Mr. SEVERANCE: But some by boat.
Mr. LINN: Very little; the rates were about the same and we shipped altogether by rail; it was more convenient for us.
Mr. SEVERANCE: The rates were about the same, were they?
Mr. LINN: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Now has there been any change made recently in freight rates from Portland to San Francisco by boat?
Mr. LINN: Yes, there is on furniture.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I mean, on your goods. What change was there?
Mr. LINN: Well, the rate has been made so large by boat we can't ship by boat any longer.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there some change made in the method of computing the weight?
Mr. LINN: Yes, it was formerly taken by weight and not by measurement.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Now by measurement?
Mr. LINN: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And that increases the freight rates how much by boat?
789 Mr. LINN: Well, it is about four times the rate by rail.
Mr. SEVERANCE: About four times the rate by rail on furniture?
Mr. LINN: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you have to move everything now——
Mr. LINN: By rail.
Mr. SEVERANCE: By rail. That is all.
Mr. COTTON: No change in the rail rates?
Mr. LINN: I think there has been a slight increase in the last three years.
Mr. COTTON: Well, but I mean within the last—when the steamship rates were made?
Mr. LINN: No, I think not.

Mr. COTTON: The rail rates remained the same?
Mr. LINN: Remained the same.
Mr. COTTON: And prior to this change you shipped largely by rail, didn't you?
Mr. LINN: Yes.
Mr. COTTON: And the rail rates have not gone up?
Mr. LINN: No.
Mr. COTTON: Therefore, the raise in the ocean rates has not affected your shipments?
Mr. LINN: It has affected us, because we can't get service to get our goods out, and the result is we can't ship them at all now.
Mr. COTTON: That is, you can't get the service on the rail?
Mr. LINN: We can't—that is, for carload business; we have to ship everything for less than carload lots.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?
Mr. LINN: You can't get cars to load full cars; we have to haul everything and ship it in less than carloads.
Mr. COTTON: You don't know, Mr. Linn, anything about ocean conditions and the demand for lumber from here to San Francisco, do you?
Mr. LINN: Not—Oh, I know there is a big demand for 790 space; we can't get space by steamer very well at all.
Mr. COTTON: There are other lines of steamers besides those of the O. R. & N. running.
Mr. LINN: Well, there are a couple of lines; I don't know just who are the owners of them.
Mr. COTTON: The raise was common to all the ocean lines, wasn't it?
Mr. LINN: Yes, sir.
Mr. COTTON: It took place how long ago, sir?
Mr. LINN: About,—I think four or five months ago perhaps.
Mr. COTTON: Four or five months ago?
Mr. LINN: Yes; perhaps not so long.
Mr. COTTON: I thought it was only about thirty days ago.
Mr. LINN: No; it is longer than that; I know it has been three months.
Mr. COTTON: Three months?
Mr. LINN: Yes; because we have claims that are that old.
Mr. COTTON: That is all, is it?
Mr. SEVERANCE: Just one question. You say you can't get cars to ship to San Francisco to ship in carload lots and you have to ship l. c. l.?
Mr. LINN: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How long has that been the case?
Mr. LINN: Four or five months.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Since the time these steamer rates went up?
Mr. LINN: No; it was before that.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Before that?
Mr. LINN: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you formerly shipped carload lots to San Francisco?

Mr. LINN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom did you get the information that you would be obliged to ship l. c. l.?

Mr. LINN: We simply can't get cars. We order cars and we can't get them; we have to get them out some way or other,
791 and we have to notify our customers the only way we can get them out is in a wagon load at a time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Com'r LANE: Is there a general car shortage in this system out here?

Mr. LINN: It seems to be at our place; I think there is a general shortage, but I think there are general conditions that make it a little worse where we are located.

Com'r LANE: What are those conditions?

Mr. LINN: Well, we are on the west side of the river and do not have access to the terminal grounds at the present time, and there are few cars on that side.

Com'r LANE: You don't find that there is any difference between your condition and anybody else's condition?

Mr. LINN: Well, not on this side of the river; I think people who have access to the terminal grounds get more than we do.

Mr. COTTON: How far is that factory from the terminal grounds?

Mr. LINN: It is about three miles in a direct line.

Mr. COTTON: How far does a car have to go from the terminal grounds in order to reach your factory, how far does it have to travel?

Mr. LINN: I judge about eighty miles; forty miles out and forty miles back; still on California business there is no—it is a direct route.

Mr COTTON: Yes, but you know there has been an embargo against California shipments at various times this year on the Southern Pacific line owing to the congestion of traffic down there, hasn't there been?

Mr. LINN: Well, that has been principally at Oakland and San Francisco. We have found trouble getting cars for any part, but as I stated, I think it is due to the location of our factory at the present time, a pure shortage in that district.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What tracks is your factory on?

792 Mr. LINN: On the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Southern Pacific?

Mr LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well then what has the location of your factory got to do with the failure to get cars?

Mr. LINN: Well, we are on the west side of the river on the branch, not the main line of the Southern Pacific. Most of their business comes in on the main line into the terminal grounds, and of course that is where they have most cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They have a connection, haven't they?

Mr. COTTON: Forty miles from town.

Mr. LINN: It is about forty miles out and forty miles back; it is a haul of about eighty miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, your rates are just the same as they are from any other part of Portland, are they not?

Mr. LINN: Just the same, yes.

Mr SEVERANCE: And still they won't set cars over there for you to ship carload lots to California?

Mr. LINN: Well, we have not been able to get them recently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Rates are much higher l. c. l. than carload lots, aren't they?

Mr. LINN: Yes, much higher of course.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How much higher, do you remember?

Mr. LINN: I should judge almost double.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far do you have to team to get to their tracks where they will allow you to put a little in cars occasionally?

Mr. LINN: About three miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is an expense you have to pay yourself?

Mr. LINN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that has been going on for four or five months, you say?

Mr. LINN: Yes, about five months, I should judge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

793 Mr. COTTON: Can't you ship carloads from Portland as well as anybody else?

Mr. LINN: From what point do you mean?

Mr. COTTON: Well, the——

Mr. LINN: Terminal grounds?

Mr. COTTON: Yes, the terminal grounds.

Mr. LINN: Yes, we can.

Mr. COTTON: You can ship all the carloads from there you want to, can't you?

Mr. LINN: We will ship them if they will give us the cars.

Mr. COTTON: Well, but I mean just the same as any other Portland merchant.

Mr. LINN: Well, I don't know; we can't get cars; I know that others do get them.

Mr. COTTON: Well, but I mean from the——

Mr. LINN: Terminal grounds?

Mr. COTTON: Yes, from the terminal grounds.

Mr. LINN: Yes; we would like to get some cars right now, if we could get them.

Mr. COTTON: There is no difference between you and anybody else, is there?

Mr. LINN: Well, I don't know; I think there is, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: What?

Mr. LINN: From what I gather I think others are getting cars at the terminal grounds; that is the excuse given us, that if we had access to the terminal grounds we could get the cars more readily. We don't get them. I know we have not had any there for four months.

Mr. COTTON: Have you asked for any at the terminal grounds?

Mr. LINN: Yes, we have an order in now. At the terminal grounds?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. LINN: We will take them whenever we can get them.

Mr. COTTON: Have you any orders in at the terminal grounds?

794 Mr. LINN: No, we have not, but I will get them in pretty quick, I think, after this interview,

Mr. COTTON: Well, but you have been insisting upon these cars being delivered to you around here eighty miles?

Mr. LINN: No, we have not, Mr. Cotton; we have ordered the cars and we have called up, I think, every department of the Southern Pacific in the course of a few days, and if they could have provided them one place or another we would have been glad to have taken them; I think they know that.

Mr. COTTON: You have always ordered them on your own track down there?

Mr. LINN: We didn't order them any place particularly, but we ordered cars.

Mr. COTTON: Well, but that was understood, wasn't it?

Mr. LINN: Well, I suppose it was perhaps understood.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; and that service switching around there eighty miles for you has always been done free, hasn't it?

Mr. LINN: For switching around?

Mr. COTTON: Yes; they have charged nothing for delivering cars around there to you?

Mr. LINN: Yes, they would for California business, I suppose. Oh, do you mean taking a car in for California?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. LINN: No, we only pay switching charges. Where we deliver to local parties, have a car shipped from there in to dealers in the city we pay ten dollars for it.

Mr. COTTON: But on a car going out of town you pay no switching charges?

Mr. LINN: No.

Mr. COTTON: You have not asked for any cars here at the terminal grounds, have you?

Mr. LINN: No, I have not; but I don't think I would have gotten them if I had.

795 Mr. COTTON: Well, suppose you try?

Mr. LINN: I will try, as I say, from now on.

Mr. COTTON: You have read the Oldsmobile song, haven't you? Suppose you try and see what occurs?

Mr. LINN: But I have filed a good many complaints. I think your officials will say that I have had it up with them pretty actively.

Mr. COTTON: I expect you have. Everybody else has been pressing for cars. I expect most probably they have not felt very much like hauling a car eighty miles to save you a wagon haul into the city of Portland; that is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Still years ago, you did not have that trouble, did you?

Mr. LINN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: How long have you been out there?

Mr. LINN: We have been shipping from there about two years.
Mr. COTTON: Yes; that's all.

(Witness excused.)

H. WITTENBERG, being called as a witness and having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?
Mr. WITTENBERG: I am a manufacturer of crackers and confectionery and biscuits.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of your firm?
Mr. WITTENBERG: Pacific Coast Biscuit Company.
Mr. SEVERANCE: At what place do you do business, and where do you have a factory?
Mr. WITTENBERG: Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Sacramento, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years have you been in business?
Mr. WITTENBERG: About 28 years, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your connection with the business; what is your official connection?
796 Mr. WITTENBERG: I am the general manager.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Of the whole system?
Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived in Oregon?
Mr. WITTENBERG: Forty-four years.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you familiar with the country in Eastern Oregon?
Mr. WITTENBERG: Fairly so.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And Central Oregon?
Mr. WITTENBERG: Fairly so. I have tramped through there when I was a boy, parts of it.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the nature of that country so far as its adaptability to settlement is concern l?
Mr. WITTENBERG: I think it is a very good country. It consists of grazing, farming, fruit lands, and mineral. I think it is one of the finest sections of the Northwest if given transportation facilities, and it has suffered for that for many years,—ever since we have lived in Oregon.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And still suffers?
Mr. WITTENBERG: And is still suffering, regardless of many promises that have been made.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What promises have been made?
Mr. WITTENBERG: We have had promises for many years that people in charge of the railroads here would give us roads to develop that section of the country, and we are still hoping that that will be carried out. Farmers, cattlemen, mining people are compelled to haul their product or drive as far as two hundred miles, making it impossible to raise many products that might be raised in that section of the country. Take it in the country towards Bend, I will merely cite an instance; we are promised an extension of that line——
Mr. SEVERANCE: Promised by whom?

Mr. WITTENBERG: By the Harriman interests. About two years ago or three years ago word was sent out here if a fund of $300,000 would be raised in the city of Portland or in the state of Oregon, if that many bonds would be taken, there would be 797 no question but what the road would be extended. Quite a number of the citizens of Portland got together; I was in the crowd; and in 24 hours we raised $300,000, and so notified the Harriman interests. We have never heard of that road being extended.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The extension stopped when you got the money subscribed, did it?

Mr. WITTENBERG: It was stated that it was necessary for the people of Oregon to show that they had faith in this section of the country so as to enable the people in the east to say to the eastern capitalists that these people had faith in this section, therefore they would take no chance in coming out and building those roads, or that road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The impression was given to you then, or the statement was made to you that it was necessary to raise this money to build this extension from eastern capitalists?

Mr. WITTENBERG: To show our faith in this country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, and that had to be done in order to induce eastern capitalists to put up money.

Mr. WITTENBERG: That is natural, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There was not any suggestion made that the O. R. & N. had money enough in the treasury to build that line without assistance?

Mr. WITTENBERG: There was a statement made that the people had money, but they wanted the people of Oregon to show faith in the enterprise.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I see; and you showed your faith?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you did not get the road?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It appeared here yesterday from the examination of Mr. Teal that certain branch lines are under construction. I think Mr. Cotton included a line that had recently been bought, or built by somebody else running from the Oregon Short Line, a line running southeastwardly to a point in connection with the Southern Pacific, and I think another line which I believe is 798 an extension of the present branch of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation—Arlington, is that the one?

Mr. COTTON: No; Elgin.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I mean Elgin.

Mr. WITTENBERG: That road, I believe, is under construction, Mr. Severance. There is quite a number of branches that the Harriman lines have under construction, or contemplated construction; that has been the case for several years. The great difficulty has been that the gentlemen who represent, or who are at the head of the Harriman lines have given the people of Portland and the State of Oregon a great many promises which, up to this time, have not been carried out.

Now, these lines have been surveyed and some contracts have been let and grading is being done, but it is being done, in my opinion, in such a slow manner as to make it possible that some of us will reach old age before they are completed, and that possibly our children may reap the benefit of the development that will be made in future years, but that at present citizens of this community can virtually look forward to no immediate results from a business point of view from those lines that are being contemplated except where it has been an attempt to head off some competition. There was never so much energy expended as in the north bank road. I assure you that the Oregon people are alive and heading that off if possible, and if the same efforts had been made on the other lines contemplated, we would have had several or many miles of railroad in the interior of Oregon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, if they had spent their money and time in building roads instead of trying to prevent somebody else building roads?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I agree with you.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Now, Mr. Wittenberg, what do you know about the situation over here in the Deschutes Valley?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, I know nothing about that, Mr. Severance, except from hearsay.

799 It is stated that the Harriman lines are objecting to the Hill lines going up the Deschutes River. I don't know what the facts are about that. I don't blame the Harriman lines trying to prevent competition; of course that is natural, but sometimes it may be short sighted.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now prior to 1901, Mr. Wittenberg, did the Southern Pacific and O. R. & N. each have their solicitors coming around to get your business?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were they active?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Very active indeed; both so far as the Short Line freight is concerned, as well as between here and San Francisco. And I wish to state on that point, so far as San Francisco is concerned, we had a splendid water line soliciting business between here and San Francisco to and from, as well as Southern Pacific lines. Since that time the water lines between here and San Francisco have reached such an obsolete state that even they cannot give us sailing dates, and we have not as good transportation facilities by water between here and San Francisco as we had thirty years ago. Steamships between here and San Francisco thirty years ago were better and more in number. They had regular sailing dates 25 years ago, and twenty years ago we had three days sailing dates, five days sailing dates; fifteen years ago we had three-day sailing dates, and today there are times when there is not a steamer for two or three weeks; there have been those times; and the rate is made between here and San Francisco which today is higher than it has ever been for many years, and on top of that they merely state they cannot take the freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have there been any recent increases in freight charges by steamer between San Francisco from Portland?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Today the rates on some articles have gone into effect to exceed the old rate by eighty per cent.

800 Mr. SEVERANCE: This new rate is effective today, isn't it?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Got it just in time for this hearing?

Mr. WITTENBERG: The rate on our line today has been advanced eighty per cent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On your line of goods?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes; from 25 cents to 45 cents.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is the rail rate?

Mr. WITTENBERG: So far the rail rate is the same; I don't believe it will stay that way very long.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How does the rail rate now compare with the steamer rate?

Mr. WITTENBERG: The rail rate on our line of goods is 28 cents in carloads by rail and 45 cents by steamer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you don't know what is going to happen from the railway?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Only what I might suspect or surmise.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, Mr. Wittenberg, I would like to ask you with reference to the manner in which you are required to pack your goods that you ship by the Southern Pacific from here to California.

Mr. WITTENBERG: That is by all lines, Mr. Severance; the classification is the same, and the method of packing is the same.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is all right; between here and California points how do you pack your goods?

Mr. WITTENBERG: They are all in crates or packages.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the rule as to similar goods coming by the transcontinental lines from the east?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, up to a year and a half ago, about a year ago, I think, they were compelled to pack them in a similar manner; but the eastern companies, the large companies petitioned the railroad people to permit them to pack their goods loosely in cars without crates or packages, which made a difference of 30 per cent. in their freight bills. I will state further that up to a year ago, 801 or a little more, that the freight rate on our line of goods from the east in carload lots was $2.20 on less than carload lots. That was reduced to $1.90 in carload lots, and $2.20 in carload lots; that was again reduced to $1.65 in carload lots; with the additional accommodation of permitting the eastern railways,—the eastern manufacturer, to place his goods in cars without a crate or box, making an additional reduction, if you please, of at least 30 per cent. That applied westbound but not eastbound. On a request of my own after considerable effort we made it eastbound as well as westbound, but it was impossible for the coast men to ship east and do business in our line in the middle west; people in the east will not use the coast goods, while coast people will use eastern products.

I will state further another petition was made recently; I don't believe it is in effect at this time; it has not gone into effect, or I think it goes into effect today at Spokane,—an additional reduction of 15 cents per hundred pounds. The petition is made to put that reduction into effect; whether it has gone into effect or not I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: These petitions are addressed to all the trans-continental roads, aren't they?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, they emanate generally from some one line and other lines take them up. The petition to-day is to the Harriman lines, to San Francisco. Those rates have been reduced really one-half from the east as to what they were a year and a half ago, while we on the Pacific Coast here are confronted with the increase of eight per cent. between here and San Francisco, making it a hardship for manufacturers of the northwest to compete with the eastern manufacturer in San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, in your line the goods manufactured in the east are quite largely concentrated, aren't they?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Fairly so. Chicago is a very large manufacturing point in our line.

802 Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. And there are certain other large manufacturers?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are their names?

Mr. WITTENBERG: The National Biscuit Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the principal one, is it?

Mr. WITTENBERG: That is, by a great percentage. They perhaps control 60 per cent. of the production of the United States.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now these manipulation rates by giving them a reduction and raising your rates has had the tendency of enabling them to compete more favorably in your immediate territory?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Certainly, sir. They do and have been granted these rates regardless of the fact that they were all underselling us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If you know, how is the passenger service between here and San Francisco by boat as compared to what it formerly was?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I think it is abominable. There is no comparison either by boat or by rail as regards San Francisco. The passenger accommodations of people going and coming from Portland to the east, or going from here to San Francisco, or coming from San Francisco, does not compare with any other location in the United States, unless it might be in some unsettled district. We have not got a through line from here to the east over the Harriman system; we have a stub from here to Green River; we are liable to lay there twelve hours before we can get through connections to the east. If we are coming from the east to Portland we are thrown off with our baggage at Green River and asked to take the first train out that we can get, while the Overland Flyer to San Francisco goes on. Therefore, people either go to San Francisco or they take the Northern Pacific or Great Northern to Seattle; people who desire to go to Seattle will not come through Portland if they know the situation at Green River. Portland is left off of the map so far as first class accommodations to the traveling public are concerned. The 803 same condition exists between here and Spokane. A train is run out of here at 6:15 with possibly one hundred first class passengers and with a little coal oil can or charcoal stove to serve meals for that hundred passengers and one darkey to do it.

As I have told the people of the Harriman lines, when the north bank road was built they would be running first class trains, but I didn't suppose they would until then.

But that is the condition. I make that trip quite frequently, and there are not any accommodations or service between here and Spokane, except as I have stated, in the way of dining cars. I think every member of the Harriman line will agree with me that that is the fact.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, Mr. Wittenberg, there are through sleeping cars from Chicago to Portland, are there not?

Mr. WITTENBERG: There is one sleeper that runs between here and Chicago over the Short Line; that is one of the fast trains; the one that leaves here at 9:15 or 9:30 in the morning, if you reach Green River in time and catch the Overland from San Francisco you make connection and go on with that train; if you happen to be two hours late you are liable to wait until the next train comes along.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Com'r LANE: Has the service ever been any better?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes; we had better service some years ago; we had better connections some years ago than we have at the present time, Mr. Lane. When the line was operated by the Union Pacific as a through line to Portland, Portland had far better arrangements, if you please, than she has today. The Portland merchants had southern Idaho and Idaho business under that regime, but since the Oregon Short Line has entered into the possession of the stocks of this road, it seems to be that everything must be submitted to 804 the Short Line, and if it is satisfactory to the Salt Lake and the Short Line why we get into Idaho, and if it is not we are handicapped.

I will say I fought for eight years for a reduction into Idaho, and after eight years I did get the reduction.

Mr. COTTON: One of your principal difficulties is that you can't sell goods at Boise City, Idaho, isn't it?

Mr. WITTENBERG: We are selling there, sir; we have sold for many years, Mr. Cotton. We have paid a differential there as high as sixty cents a hundred pounds to get in there as against Salt Lake, a difference of 50 miles, or 90 miles of mileage.

Mr. COTTON: How long has the Southern Pacific run dining cars?

Mr. WITTENBERG: How long?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Between here and San Francisco?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Oh, seven or eight or nine years, Mr. Cotton, maybe.

Mr. COTTON: Seven or eight or nine years, dining cars?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well now, I may be mistaken about that; I have eaten in a buffet there and I get it mixed with the dining cars.

Mr. COTTON: But they are running dining cars now, aren't they?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: How long have they been running these dining cars?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Mr. Cotton, I can't give you that date; for several years.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; it is not over four though?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Possibly not, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: How many trains did the Southern Pacific run between here and California for years?

Mr. WITTENBERG: How many trains per day?

Mr. COTTON: Yes; passenger trains?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, sir, at first they ran one passenger train.

805 They ran that train until it was absolutely impossible to store the people that would get into the cars; they were packed in like sardines.

Mr. COTTON: When was that please?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, that may be three or four years ago.

Mr. COTTON: Three or four years ago?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Possibly a little more than that.

Mr. COTTON: Oh yes, I think it is.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Possibly it is, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: They have been running two trains to my recollection for the last eight years.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, you see, Mr. Cotton, I can't remember just the years.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, I know, but I would like to have you remember the years approximately?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I will try to, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: They have been running the two trains for about eight years, haven't they?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Possibly.

Mr. COTTON: And haven't they been running dining cars on both of the trains for about four years?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No, sir; on one train they have run dining cars for about four years, but on the other train they run the buffet cars.

Mr. COTTON: Now, what do they run on both trains?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Diners on both?

Mr. COTTON: Diners on both; so they have increased the dining service on both trains?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: How long have they run observation cars on Southern Pacific lines between here and San Francisco?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Ever since myself and the transportation committee made a big howl to get you to put it on.

Mr. COTTON: How long ago did you howl about that?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I think about two years, maybe.

Mr. COTTON: So for two years past they have been running

806 an observation car between here and San Francisco, which formerly they did not run?

Mr. WITTENBERG: That is correct, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Is that right?

Mr. WITTENBERG: But it was after a terrible effort on our part.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; but you commenced this effort away back prior to 1891, didn't you?

Mr. WITTENBERG: 1891?

Mr. COTTON: 1901.

Mr. WITTENBERG: No.

Mr. COTTON: The demand was just as great then?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, but we were unable to get it.

Mr. COTTON: You were unable to get it, but you have gotten it since within the past two years?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Is that a pretty good car?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: It is rather a fine car?

Mr. WITTENBERG: We are delighted about that car; it is similar to what they run on every other first class line.

Mr. COTTON: No, it is a little different from what they run on every other one.

Mr. WITTENBERG: No; it is not as good a car as they run out of here on the Northern Pacific Coast Limited.

Mr. COTTON: You think not?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Well, we differ as to taste.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, you don't take a bath on a car.

Mr. COTTON: No, I don't.

Mr. WITTENBERG: And I don't either.

Mr. COTTON: And I don't care about getting shaved particularly, either.

Mr. WITTENBERG: I do.

Mr. COTTON: Then cutting out the bath and the shaving why you think it is a better car, don't you?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No.

807 Mr. COTTON: You don't?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No.

Mr. COTTON: Now that car has been running for two years? Now recently the Southern Pacific has put on the third train, hasn't it?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes; and Mr. Cotton, I was very much disappointed on getting on that train the other day, about a month ago or five weeks ago, to find that they didn't have an observation car on it.

Mr. COTTON: No, they don't, because they haven't observation cars enough to go around; they run them on the longest daylight run too.

Mr. WITTENBERG: That is why I claim we ought to have enough; the way they make money we ought to be able to get a car.

Mr. COTTON: That may come in the course of time; but that is a faster train than you ever had before?

Mr. WITTENBERG: By two hours; they ought to cut it down six more.

Mr. COTTON: There has never been a train that made the run before that train was put on in much less than thirty-six hours?

Mr. WITTENBERG: If we ever get a good steamship line, Mr. Cotton, it will beat that line hollow.

Mr. COTTON: You never had a train on there before this one that made the trip in less than 36 hours, though, did you?

Mr. WITTENBERG: That never was the fault of the patrons of the road?

Mr. COTTON: What?

Mr. WITTENBERG: That wasn't the fault of the patrons of the road.

Mr. COTTON: No, but I am asking you the fact.

Mr. WITTENBERG: It is a fact that this train makes better time than the O. R. & N. or Southern Pacific ever did on their roads.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; that is during the whole 28 years you have lived here, and during the whole time that the roads were run?

808 Mr. WITTENBERG: You will concede that that is the fact.

Mr. COTTON: Yes. Now you speak about the rates from the east; if the rates to Spokane were reduced to the rates to Portland, what effect would that have on your business?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Not any.

Mr. COTTON: It would not affect your business at all?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No.

Mr. COTTON: You manufacture here?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And the Iowa road to Spokane don't benefit you any, or do they pay a higher rate on crackers to Spokane than they do to Portland?

Mr. WITTENBERG: From the east?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes; but very little.

Mr. COTTON: Very little.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Very little.

Mr. COTTON: So you practically are competing against that rate now?

Mr. WITTENBERG: We have a factory at Spokane, Mr. Cotton; it would not make any difference.

Mr. COTTON: Oh, you have a factory at Spokane?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And you have a factory at San Francisco, do you not?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, we did have; not at present.

Mr. COTTON: And the main reason you wish to ship to San Francisco is on account of the burning down of your factory there?

Mr. WITTENBERG: We have shipped there, sir, for fourteen years to San Francisco.

Mr. COTTON: Your crackers go on the steamers by weight or measure?

Mr. WITTENBERG: By weight.

Mr. COTTON: By weight. Do you know what happened to some of the O. R. & N. steamers, as to whether any of them were lost between here and San Francisco; the Elder, for example?

809 Mr. WITTENBERG: The Elder was lost but found again.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; but she stayed under water for how long?

Mr. WITTENBERG: A long time. I believe the O. R. & N. Co. and Harriman lines gave her up.

Mr. COTTON: They gave her up as a total loss to the insurance companies, didn't they?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I think so, which was found to be wrong.

Mr. COTTON: And about the St. Paul?

Mr. WITTENBERG: The St. Paul was lost.

Mr. COTTON: The St. Paul was lost?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I will state in that connection, Mr. Cotton, that I realize that the O. R. & N. Co. lost several steamers and were very unfortunate; yet we people in other lines of business lose our business; they are burned out and they immediately rebuild; the O. R. & N. Co. has not shown that disposition.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; but their steamers were actually lost, shipwrecked or fired or something of that kind?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, some of them were.

Mr. COTTON: Now, you spoke about a fund of $300,000; were you a subscriber to it?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I was.

Mr. COTTON: That fund was a subscription to Columbia Southern bonds, wasn't it?

Mr. WITTENBERG. Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Those bonds paid five per cent.?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And you were to take the bonds at ninety?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I have forgotten; something like that at any rate.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; you were to take the bonds at ninety, five per cent. bonds, and they were to be guaranteed by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. WITTENBERG: They were to be listed by the O. R. & N.

810 Mr. COTTON: They were to be listed by the O. R. & N.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Then they were to be Columbia Southern five per cent. bonds at ninety, guaranteed by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. WITTENBERG: That was Mr. Harriman's proposition.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; well, what you understood to be Mr. Harriman's proposition?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Harriman didn't make it to you?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Then they were Columbia Southern fives to be taken by you at ninety and to be guaranteed by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. WITTENBERG: That was the proposition.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what O. R. & N. bonds sell for?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Why, I am not in that business; I could not tell.

Mr. COTTON: They are fours, aren't they, and they sell for about one hundred and ten.

Mr. WITTENBERG: I could not tell you that, Mr. Cotton; we were simply accepting a proposition that was made to us.

Mr. COTTON: What you understood was made?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes; I will say in that respect that that is the trouble here; we seldom know what we might expect after what we have understood might be done.

Mr. COTTON: Well, but you never got that understanding——

Mr. WITTENBERG: That is the great difficulty.

Mr. COTTON: You never got that understanding from Mr. Harriman, or any Harriman officer, did you?

Mr. WITTENBERG: People very close to Mr. Harriman.

Mr. COTTON: Who were the people very close to Mr. Harriman?

811 Mr. WITTENBERG: I decline to give the parties' names at this time unless I am compelled to.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I would like to know who they were. They were not employés of the O. R. & N. Co., were they?

Com'r LANE: This is the foundation of the evidence that has previously been given, isn't it?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Com'r LANE: Well, you are entitled to it.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Mr. Wilcox and Mr. Ladd.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. T. B. Wilcox?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And Mr. William Ladd?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes; and Mr. A. L. Mills.

Mr. COTTON: They are not employés of the O. R. & N. Co., are they?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I could not tell you whether they are directors or not.

Mr. COTTON: Did you have any difficulty in summoning up courage enough to think that the eastern Oregon country was good enough to subscribe to Columbia Southern at five, ninety guaranteed by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No, at a moment's hesitation; I am ready to do it again.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I should think you would.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes; I would like to see some of the Harriman people have as much confidence.

Mr. COTTON: I think if it had been five at ninety they ought not to have had any trouble in subscribing to it, when the fours were selling at a hundred and ten.

Mr. WITTENBERG: No; but when you are offered a hundred and forty, if you are offered one hundred and forty for ninety would you take it?

Mr. COTTON: Why certainly I would.

Mr. WITTENBERG: So were we, and we would not offer a hundred for them if they were offered to us at ninety.

Mr. COTTON: No; but it didn't take very much faith to 812 make that kind of subscription, it seems to me.

Mr. WITTENBERG: It took a good deal of courage on the part of the eastern people possibly to accept it, because to this date they have not accepted our proposition, nor have they built the line or put up the money themselves.

Mr. COTTON: I should think they would not accept that proposition.

Mr. WITTENBERG: But they could build the line, Mr. Cotton?

Mr. COTTON: That is different. We are talking about this fund. When you were a boy what part of eastern Oregon did you live in?

Mr. WITTENBERG: In the Blue Mountains.

Mr. COTTON: Well, where?

Mr. WITTENBERG: A great many parts of them; I was only there three years.

Mr. COTTON: Whereabouts in the Blue Mountains?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Canyon City, Granite, Sumpter, out to Baker, down on the north fork of the John Day; that about covered it.

Mr. COTTON: Have you ever been in the Prineville-Bend country?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Not in to Prineville; but I know a great deal about that country as we traveled it very extensively with our people; I know the kind of country it is.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I mean personally.

Mr. WITTENBERG: I have not been to Bend personally.

Mr. COTTON: Have you been to Prineville?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Have you been to Shaniko?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I didn't go beyond Wasco.

Mr. COTTON: How far is Wasco from the river?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well now, I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: Fourteen miles? Ten, isn't it?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I know it is more than that.

Mr. COTTON: I think it is ten.

813 Mr. WITTENBERG: No, it is more than that.

Mr. COTTON: How much more?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I don't know. I had a mill at Wasco, but I never was over there.

Mr. COTTON: How far is Wasco from the Columbia River and the main line of the O. R. & N.?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I could not tell you; I think it is somewhere near twenty miles possibly.

Mr. COTTON: Somewhere near twenty miles?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Maybe more than that.

Mr. COTTON: Maybe more than twenty; and how long is the Columbia Southern railroad?

Mr. WITTENBERG: The Columbia Southern road?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. WITTENBERG: About seventy miles.

Mr. COTTON: Then you penetrated in that territory twenty miles on a railroad seventy miles long?

Mr. WITTENBERG: A very short distance.

Mr. COTTON: Have you ever been into Lake and Klamath Counties?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Have you ever been in to Burns?

Mr. WITTENBERG: On account of the hard way of getting there, Mr. Cotton, I have never gone there.

Mr. COTTON: Have you ever been in to Burns?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Not to the town of Burns; I have been down as near as Canyon City.

Mr. COTTON: How far is Canyon City from Burns?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well now, you would have to give me a map; it is 28 years since I was there.

Mr. COTTON: 28 years ago. Let's see the map.

Mr. WITTENBERG: The country has not changed much in that time, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: You say the country has not changed very much?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Not very much. It is so hard to get in and out of there people don't go there.

Mr. COTTON: Then all of the people of Portland have known about this beautiful country for the last 28 years?

814 Mr. WITTENBERG: What is that, Mr. Cotton?

Mr. COTTON: All of the people have known about this beautiful country for the last 28 years.

Mr. WITTENBERG: I don't understand that question.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I say everybody in the state has known about this beautiful interior country?

Mr. WITTENBERG: We have all heard of the Malheur and Burns country, but it is so hard to get in and out of that very few go there. We pay our traveling men for staging it.

Mr. COTTON: How far is Canyon City from Burns?

Counsel here exhibits map to the witness.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Wait until I find it, Mr. Cotton. I will try and get hold of it for you.

Mr. COTTON: There is a scale on the map here some place, I think.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Now here is Canyon; now let's find Burns. Burns is down here; it is south.

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Now let's see what is this scale here. It is about three inches. How much is the scale? It don't state. I should judge that would be seventy-five miles, wouldn't it? There you are right there (indicating on map).

Mr. COTTON: Yes; I think it is about seventy-five miles from Canyon City.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Is that a fact?

Mr. COTTON: I think so, just about. Canyon City now is about how far from the end of the Sumpter Valley Railroad?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Why possibly 25 miles, isn't it Mr. Cotton? Somewhere near there; maybe not quite that far. That goes to Whitney, doesn't it?

Mr. COTTON: Yes; or Austin. Then notwithstanding the fact Canyon City is now about 25 miles from the end of the railroad, you have not renewed your acquaintance with it for 28 years?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I have not, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And other than having been to Canyon City,

815 Pendleton and some railroad points, you have not penetrated into Central Oregon?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I have been down, as I say, as far as Canyon and the territory between Canyon and Pendleton, if you please, and between Canyon and the Columbia River. I came out on horseback from Canyon City to the Columbia River.

Mr. COTTON: But you have never been to Lake, Klamath, Burns, Crook or any of those counties?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No. That is what we call Stein Mountains there around Burns; that is cattle raising country. I never was down there. You can't raise anything else there, Mr. Cotton, because you can't get it out.

Mr. COTTON: Stein Mountains are a little south of Malheur and Lake Counties, aren't they?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, just a little.

Mr. COTTON: How far, about how many miles?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I could not tell without looking at the map.

Mr. COTTON: Suppose you look at the map; can you tell me how far south of Burns the Stein Mountains are; I am always interested in Oregon geography.

Mr. WITTENBERG: I wish you would study it and give us more service.

Mr. COTTON: Especially with a gentleman who knows the country.

Mr. WITTENBERG: That is sarcasm. The Stein Mountains? Does that show on here?

Mr. COTTON: I am sure I don't really know where the Stein Mountains are.

Mr. WITTENBERG: You may give me the wrong map.

Mr. COTTON: No. Don't you know where the Stein Mountains are unless they are marked?

Mr. WITTENBERG: The Stein mountain country is in southeastern Oregon. Now I can find that, I don't doubt, if it is on this map.

Mr. COTTON: Well, but couldn't you locate the country even if it was not exactly marked on the map?

816 Mr. WITTENBERG: It is in this section of the country here (indicating on map); that is, it is in southeastern Oregon, but I don't think it is on this map; I don't find it.

Mr. COTTON: I will tell you where it is; it is right down in here where those rivers are (indicating).

Mr. WITTENBERG: Now, I am glad to know that.

Mr. COTTON: Right down in there.

Mr. WITTENBERG: I know they drive cattle down to Winnemucca.

Mr. COTTON: They drive cattle from Burns to Winnemucca through the Stein Mountain country?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And do you know how far the Stein Mountains are from Burns?

Mr. WITTENBERG: According to your statement here they are not very far.

Mr. COTTON: Here is Burns.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Burns is here, and if they are here I should judge it would be about 150 miles (indicating on map).

Mr. COTTON: 150 miles, a nice morning's walk.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, for a railroad man.

Mr. COTTON: I mean driving cattle, for example.

Mr. WITTENBERG: No; it was not a pleasant walk, Mr. Cotton. It was a very disagreeable drive.

Mr. COTTON: You have never been in the Bend country, have you?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No, sir, not as far as Bend.

Mr. COTTON: Have you ever been along the Crooked River?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know where the Crooked River is?

Mr. WITTENBERG: No. The most of those rivers up there are crooked.

Mr. COTTON: There is a Crooked River, isn't there?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I don't know about that.

Mr. COTTON: Near Prineville?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I could not tell you that.

817 Mr. COTTON: Your geography knowledge is a little limited, isn't it?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, that part of the country, except so far as a general knowledge of the country is concerned. I don't know what the mileage is, Mr. Cotton, but I know about what the country is.

Mr. COTTON: Then you have been talking about this beautiful country in times past, and for a number of years it merely is a hearsay proposition.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, from such a source that it is not what you would call hearsay; it is our own people who travel through there all the time.

Mr. COTTON: And did they ever describe this country to you piecemeal, or just simply in a general way?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, both.

Mr. COTTON: Well, is there any particular part of that country that you feel that you are familiar enough with to tell us from these hearsay statements what it is like?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, I will take the Bend country.

Mr. COTTON: The Bend country?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I will take the Bend country, if you wish, from Shaniko to Bend.

Mr. COTTON: From Shaniko to Bend, going south from Shaniko what is the character of the country, taking the first twenty miles.

Mr. WITTENBERG: I will not say the first twenty miles, but will give you, if you wish, a general description of the country. Will that be satisfactory?

Mr. COTTON: Yes; go ahead.

Mr. WITTENBERG: We have there both farming country, it will be farming country when it is irrigated, and which they are trying to do now—to irrigate. We have there fruit country which will be a first class fruit country irrigated. We have there range country. At the present time there is,—that is all range country. That is the description of the country itself, and of higher altitude than that on the Columbia River.

Mr. COTTON: Frosty, isn't it?

818 Mr. WITTENBERG: It is the same as all eastern Oregon country.

Mr. COTTON: They have frost every month of the year——

Mr. WITTENBERG: That is on the highest altitude the same as all eastern Oregon.

Mr. COTTON: At Bend?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Possibly it is.

Mr. COTTON: Isn't Bend located right in the heart of this proposed country you are going to irrigate?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I don't believe, Mr. Cotton, they have the frost, Mr. Cotton, every night in the year.

Mr. COTTON: Every month, I said, not every night; I didn't mean to say night if I did; I meant every month, I may have misspoken myself; do you know?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I am positive there is not a frost every night at Bend.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what the altitude of Bend is?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I do not; I think I did; 3500 feet.

Mr. COTTON: And near the Cascade Mountains——

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what the character of the country is between Shaniko and Bend?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Well, as I have already described it here, sir.

Mr. COTTON: It is all fine agricultural country?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Not all of it, sir, but a great portion of it is susceptible of cultivation.

Mr. COTTON: The first twenty miles is practically nothing but rocks?

Mr. WITTENBERG: That may be, sir; so would it be the case in the gorge of the Columbia River, but beyond it there is beautiful country.

Mr. COTTON: Where does this beautiful country commence?

Mr. WITTENBERG: In southeastern and eastern Oregon.

Mr. COTTON: The only beautiful country down there, Mr.
819 Wittenberg, I will tell you, is along this Crooked River that I thought possibly you might know something about?

Mr. WITTENBERG: That may be the place, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: Along Crooked River the country is very beautiful. That is all, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Thank you.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Wait; just one question; you were asked about the speed of trains between here and San Francisco, do you remember whether there were faster trains here in 1893 and 1894 than there are now?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Not on the Southern Pacific between here and San Francisco. The speed there has been twenty miles an hour, and this fast train is cutting off two hours of that time which will make it, I presume twenty-one miles an hour, or twenty-two.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is pretty fast.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Let me see; it is 34 hours, 772 miles, Mr. Severance, is the time, and I assure you we could leave here and make it in 26 hours without hurting anybody and giving us plenty of time to cross the mountains, and we hope that the Oregon people will give us that service.

I want to say before leaving the stand that personally I have nothing but the kindliest feelings for the local management of the Oregon lines. I consider them friends of mine, and I know they are a splendid set of gentlemen; but the only great trouble that I find in this entire matter is that the source of the administration, if you please, headquarters are too far from the work or operations; the field of operations; that is the great trouble we have here. So far as Mr. Miller, Mr. Cotton, Mr. Coman and the other gentlemen is this line,—Mr. Stubbs, if you please; he lives a great way from us; why, I believe they are doing everything reasonable. Possibly they are handicapped by people at the other end.

820 I want to say one thing further in that respect, if you permit me; that one difficulty we labor under is that we don't believe here in this section of the country that we get as good treatment as the people of California do and that may be owing to some of the people not living with us all the time. We hope that that will improve as time goes on.

Mr. COTTON: Are you through?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; this was a voluntary statement. Go ahead, Mr. Cotton.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Wittenberg, the road as between here and California has been very considerably improved in the last year or two,—new steel?

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And the service, in so far as there has been an improvement, has been improved practically within the last four years.

Mr. WITTENBERG: Yes; the greatest improvements have been made in the last two or three years, I think. You continue your work there and you will finally get a good line. I feel, Mr. Cotton, that the great trouble between here and San Francisco, is that on account of it being a single line and only operated by one organization, we don't get quite as good service as we would if there was a double line.

Mr. COTTON: Did you have better service or worse service when Mr. Huntington had the road than you have now?

Mr. WITTENBERG: It was always the same; there never was but one line.

Now, you know Mr. Cotton, we have to depend on the powers that be for our service. The Harriman lines are the logical people to whom we must look in the country in which we operate. There is no use for blaming anybody else for not coming into a country surrounded by another corporation. How can they improve that country? We must depend on the people in charge to meet the wants of the people of that country, and what is done by that corporation is done either under their own ideas or under their policy.

821 An effort made by the people who live in that country to demand it, if they can't enforce their demand—and we can't expect the Great Northern lines or the Northern Pacific lines to give us splendid service between here and San Francisco; neither can we depend on you to give us first class service between here and Seattle where you have no lines; but in the fields in which you operate we feel that from the money you earn in this community, which you will admit was between five and six millions, we feel we are entitled to a portion of that earnings to be spent in our section of the country, either in the bettering of conveniences to carry on your business and our accommodations, whether that may be the furnishing of more cars, if you please, to take our goods, or more passenger cars to take us to and fro on the lines. But I don't believe you will ask the community here to blame the Northern Pacific lines for lack of service between here and San Francisco.

Mr. COTTON: Any other suggestions, Mr. Wittenberg?

Mr. WITTENBERG: I will say this, Mr. Cotton, that I believe that if the railroad people who are in charge of Oregon's interests, if you please, and their own interests, will assist in developing the undeveloped country, that they will not only make business for themselves, but they will give people an opportunity from the eastern states to come out here and live in the pursuit of happiness and wealth under more favorable circumstances than that in which they now live, and I believe it will be a great benefit to the railroad country as well as ourselves.

Permit me to say, Mr. Cotton, that the jobbers of Portland and the manufacturers of Portland have a very small territory in which to operate, and when that territory is blocked and obstacles thrown in the way of development, it is a pretty hard proposition for the jobbers and people of Portland.

And I will say further, Mr. Cotton, if the jobbers and 822 manufacturers of Portland would get together and not permit this policy to be maintained they would get better results. If they would not accept the promises of the Harriman lines or any other railroad lines, but would demand such work, or some effort, or some demonstration of their ability or their lack of ability to develop this country, it would also lead to something different from what we have to-day.

Com'r LANE: That is all Mr. Wittenberg.

(Witness excused.)

OTTO BREYMAN, called as a witness, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Breyman, where do you reside?

Mr. BREYMAN: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. BREYMAN: Manufacturer of saddlery goods.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in business in Portland here?

Mr. BREYMAN: About fifteen years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From what part of the country, Mr. Breyman, do you import your raw material?

Mr. BREYMAN: Leather we get largely from San Francisco, from California, and hardware, hames, and other things we get from the Atlantic seaboard largely

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the time that the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N. became interested together, prior to 1901, was the competition for your shipments between San Francisco and Portland by boat and rail?

Mr. BREYMAN: There was, yes, sir; we shipped largely by boat at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. BREYMAN: About five years ago we shipped largely by boat leather.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How do you ship now?

Mr. BREYMAN: Rail altogether.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why?

Mr. BREYMAN: We have no steamer service.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long has that been the case?

823 Mr. BREYMAN: Well, some little time; several years; I would not say; it has been worse this last year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Worse the last year.

Mr. BREYMAN: The last two years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Been gradually growing worse?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, we have not made any attempt the past year to ship any leather to California. The only shipments we have by boat is the American Hawaiian shipments and Panama shipments.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you bring goods around from the Atlantic seaboard by the American Hawaiian lines?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, sir, some.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then they are trans-shipped at San Francisco?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Aside from that you have given up trying to ship by boat from San Francisco?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On account of the poor service, you say?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, sir, entirely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How were the rates years ago on your goods between San Francisco and here?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, rates on leather used to be 25 cents per hundred pounds, and the company also carried the insurance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How are they now?

Mr. BREYMAN: We made a contract every year with the O. R. & N. Company steamers to handle our leather, and in that contract they had an insurance clause, I believe. We paid 25 cents a hundred, and I think at one time we paid as low as twenty cents; but I would not be positive, it is so long ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are your rates by rail?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, from San Francisco it is 31 cents now; from Benecia it is the same; and I think it is 36 cents from Santa Rosa,—I think it is, I would not be positive.

824 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now do you ship from the east somewhat by rail?

Mr. BREYMAN: We do now, yes, sir. We would ship by water if we had the steamers between San Francisco and Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean from the east.

Mr. BREYMAN: We would ship by water if we had steamers from San Francisco to Portland, after we get our freight around the Horn.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you ship by rail rather than send it around by the Hawaiian line now?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On account of the poor service.

Mr. BREYMAN: We have shipments down in San Francisco today, I think about eight cases to it, that we have to be delivered here; we haven't got it all here yet; we have had two shipments or part shipments from San Francisco, and it has been on the road since June by steamer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From New York?

Mr. BREYMAN: From New York; and it is down in San Francisco today; a part of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Breyman, you formerly shipped by water, did you?

Mr. BREYMAN: I never have to any great extent, for the reason that during the old Panama line the freight was handled in such bad shape; we have shipped more or less by the Panama line in the past.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are your rates from the east all rail?

Mr. BREYMAN: On common saddlery hardware $1.75, less than carload lots; we never ship carload. We never asked for a carload rate because no jobber in Portland saddlery and hardware could use it hardly; they don't ship in large enough quantity.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Which way do goods come when they come all rail?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, when I have the business I always have favored the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line of late 825 years, the last few years; I have given some to the Northern Pacific, considerable; I aim to divide it up between the companies.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you formerly ship some by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. BREYMAN: I used to patronize the Sunset route a great many years ago, not to any extent; in the winter time I did in shipping shoe dressing, I wanted to keep from being frozen; and do now in fact.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you ship by Sacramento?

Mr. BREYMAN: No, sir, we shipped by the Sunset route; that was in connection with the Morgan line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I understand, but you don't ship that way any more?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, not much; one shipment came in this fall.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do any solicitors come around and solicit you to ship that way?

Mr. BREYMAN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Southern Pacific don't solicit your business now as against the O. R. & N. any more?

Mr. BREYMAN: No, they do not.

Mr. Severance: The Southern Pacific don't solicit your business now as against the O. R. & N. any more?

Mr. Breyman: No, they do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Breyman, there have been several witnesses on the stand who were interrogated about this eastern Central Oregon country; have you ever been out there?

Mr. BREYMAN: I lived in Prineville for five years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you pretty familiar with that country?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, I have not been there for about—I lived there when I was a boy and have ridden over a great deal of that country on horseback. My father was in business there and I used to go out after his cattle and ride the ranges over that country both around Prineville and Bend and all through there.

826 Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of country is it?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, a big part of it is very rocky, rough rimrocks, some parts of it, and valleys along the water; along the Crooked River it is nice coutry.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is a good deal of good country?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes; take it around what we call the haystacks; I understand they are irrigating a great deal of that land now that used to be nothing but sagebrush and down towards Bend and beyond it is quite fertile on the south of Prineville; and what they call the desert there, I don't know whether they irrigate that or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Breyman there has been several witnesses here who testified concerning certain promises held out by the Harriman people to extend the Columbia Southern line down to Prineville; did you ever hear any of those promises made by any one connected with the Harriman system?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, I have heard it generally stated in the papers, it has been published in the papers, and so forth, that the line would be extended; I heard it stated up in the Arlington Club; Mr. Harriman was present and said he would extend the line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You heard Mr. Harriman say that in the Arlington Club?

Mr. BREYMAN: I heard him state that publicly; I don't think there was anything private about it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago was it that he made that statement?

Mr. BREYMAN: Oh, I presume a year and a half ago; it might have been two years; I don't think it was over two years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think that is all.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Breyman, you don't know whether the steamers are coming up here from the south partly filled or not, do you, at the present time?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, I would judge not, from the fact that I have gone to the office here and telephoned down to the Ainsworth dock and tried to find out about our freight, and were always 827 informed that the steamers were loaded, and that was the excuse given that our goods were held in San Francisco.

Mr. COTTON: This freight you paid of 25 cents where the company carried insurance, was in force, say ten years ago?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, it was probably ten years ago, yes.

Mr. COTTON: Now a great many years ago you shipped somewhat by the Sunset; you ship just about as much now as you ever did, don't you?

Mr. BREYMAN: No, I don't think I do, not as much as I used to.

Mr. BREYMAN: Forest was built since I left there.

Mr. COTTON: Well, Forest is down where the road begins to climb the rimrock right west as you come over to Albany and Eugene.

Mr. BREYMAN: Oh yes; I have been down through there.

Mr. COTTON: It is practically at the end of the Crooked River Valley, isn't it?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And how far is that point from Prineville, how many miles?

Mr. BREYMAN: I presume it is about twenty miles, isn't it—in that neighborhood.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I would say not quite so far.

Mr. BREYMAN: Not quite, eighteen or twenty miles.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; so this valley is about eighteen miles long and from a quarter to a mile wide?

Mr. BREYMAN: That is the valley; it is; but now the country around the haystacks has a plateau on top of the expanse there.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; but Haystack is quite a ways from the Crooked River.

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: How many miles?

Mr. BREYMAN: I should say four or five or six miles away from the river.

828 Mr. COTTON: Going south from Shaniko, that is rocky country all the way down Antelope Creek.

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, that is rocky through there; the Valleys are very narrow in there.

Mr. COTTON: It goes down probably twenty-five miles practically nothing but basaltic rock except in the creek bottoms.

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes; around what you would call Shaniko that is the case.

Mr. COTTON: Extending south from Shaniko to Prineville, except in little creek bottoms——

Mr. BREYMAN: That land on the Hay Creek there on those plateaus I have been told is good farming land; I have been told they are taking it up.

Mr. COTTON: That is south?

Mr. BREYMAN: That is southwest of that.

Mr. COTTON: That is beyond this 25 mile district?

Mr. BREYMAN: Oh yes.

Mr. COTTON: But the first district for 25 miles this side of Shaniko is practically nothing but rock.

Mr. BREYMAN: Steep canyons and rock; yes, sir, that is correct.

Mr. COTTON: Railroads would be very expensive and very difficult to build and nothing to carry out of the country for the first 25 miles?

Mr. BREYMAN: From Shaniko out?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, I don't know about that, the country from Shaniko; I understand the line which was surveyed was to go near Hay Creek, wasn't it; isn't that where the survey was laid out?

Mr. COTTON: Well, then, Hay Creek is more than 25 miles from Shaniko; I am just talking about the first twenty-five miles.

Mr. BREYMAN: That is rough country, yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Canyons?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Basaltic rocks?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, correct.

Mr. COTTON: Then you come down to Hay Creek and 829 there is a ranch down there and there is not very much else in that immediate neighborhood, is there?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, because the company there owns most of that land; they use it for grazing.

Mr. COTTON: Although they try to raise grain on the hill?

Mr. BREYMAN: They never did, because they didn't want to raise grain; they used it for sheep business.

Mr. COTTON: Then you go on another 25 miles and you come to this Crooked River Valley?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, that is right.

Mr. COTTON: Then going south from the Crooked River Valley you strike what is known what is desert; that is when you go southeast?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: How wide is that desert?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, from Prineville over to Lakeview it is about 120 miles, isn't it?

Mr. COTTON: Yes; and how long is the desert?

Mr. BREYMAN: I don't know; I could not say.

Mr. COTTON: Well, about a hundred miles, isn't it, east?

Mr. BREYMAN: I presume so; but I understand they are irrigating a great deal of that land below Prineville on the desert, aren't they?

Mr. COTTON: No, that is over to Bend, just along the foot-hills. This desert then is about 150 miles wide and 100 miles long, and then lying north of it is the Crooked River Valley?

Mr. BREYMAN: Then there is the Ochoco Valley in there.

Mr. COTTON: That is coming up towards Howard?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, Ochoco Valley is going towards Howard.

Mr. COTTON: How wide is the Ochoco Valley going from Prineville up in the direction of Howard?

Mr. BREYMAN: The Ochoco Valley would not average over a quarter to a half mile, I presume?

Mr. COTTON: From a quarter to a half mile, and about how long?

830 Mr. BREYMAN: From Prineville up to the Blue Mountains there what is the distance, 25 miles, isn't it?

Mr. COTTON: Yes; 25 miles; that is practically an extension of the Crooked River country.

Mr. BREYMAN: That is one of the branches of it.

Mr. COTTON: So that but for the Crooked River Valley, the Ochoco Valley and a little country around Hay Creek——

Mr. BREYMAN: The Haystack country.

Mr. COTTON: And the Haystack country—how large is that?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, there is quite a bit of country around there.

Mr. COTTON: About what is the size of it?

Mr. BREYMAN: I presume it must be ten miles long, isn't it?

Mr. COTTON: Ten miles long and about how wide?

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, if you come down—well, that would take you down towards Deschutes and that country.

Mr. COTTON: Let's take the Haystack country; let's take one country at a time.

Mr. BREYMAN: Well, the Haystack country is at least ten miles wide probably; yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Ten by six miles, and that takes in what; the Haystack country is what some of the gentlemen have referred to as Agency Plains?

Mr. BREYMAN: That is the same country.

Mr. COTTON: That is the same country. Now we have the desert pretty well fixed.

Com'r LANE: What is that desert now?

Mr. COTTON: The desert is south of Prineville. We will point the desert out to you on this map; that is a part of this beautiful section down there.

Mr. BREYMAN: I understand they are irrigating it down to Bend.

Com'r LANE: Is it like the Yakima country?

Mr. BREYMAN: It is not as productive as that country.

831 Mr. COTTON: Now the country that they are irrigating——

Mr. BREYMAN: Here it is; here is Prineville (indicating on map); here it is right here, down this way.

Mr. COTTON: Runs all the way from Prineville down to Lakeview; it is a desert; now they are irrigating a little bit of that over near Bend, do you know how many acres?

Mr. BREYMAN: No, sir, I do not know anything about it; I don't know how many acres; here is Prineville and here is the desert, what they call the desert, the country here extending this way.

Mr. COTTON: It runs all the way down 150 miles; all in that country is practically what you call the desert.

Mr. BREYMAN: I don't know whether it is the desert, or not; I don't think so.

Mr. COTTON: Well, most of it.

Mr. BREYMAN: They use it—this country in here isn't desert, this country in here isn't desert; there is desert in there (indicating).

Mr. COTTON: Well, but I mean you have described the Crooked River country.

Com'r LANE: What do you mean by desert? I have seen a great many deserts in this western country.

Mr. BREYMAN: Gray sand, juniper brush, and yellow sage.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it productive when water is turned on it?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Does it produce bunch grass?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, bunch grass. The desert south of Prineville has always been considered one of the favored ranges for cattle in the winter time, on account of the bunch grass which grows up there; it grows up that high (witness indicating).

Mr. SEVERANCE: Indicating two and a half feet.

Mr. COTTON: Gray sand and juniper brush.

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, high, sandy.

Mr. COTTON: Very high and very sandy.

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, sir, rocky.

832 Mr. COTTON: No water on it at all down there.

Mr. BREYMAN: No water.

Com'r LANE: No streams run through there, do they?

Mr. BREYMAN: No.

Mr. COTTON: Except the Deschutes; the Deschutes river goes along here (indicating on map).

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, along the edge of it, I guess.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, the Deschutes river goes along the edge. By the Deschutes they are irrigating some in the vicinity of Bend, are they not; you understand that from Newspaper reports?

Mr. BREYMAN: Yes, they are.

Mr. COTTON: During all the time you lived at Prineville the old residents regarded that Bend desert country as very cold, didn't they?

Mr. BREYMAN: It was always considered cold, yes, sir; it was cold.

Mr. COTTON: You know that up and around the Sisters that they have right within a few miles of Bend some irrigating plants up there, and the only thing you can get for horses is barley hay.

Mr. BREYMAN: I don't know anything about that; I have never been down there.

Mr. COTTON: Were there ever any farms over on this desert?

Mr. BREYMAN: Which way, on the desert?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. BREYMAN: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: When you were a boy?

Mr. BREYMAN: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know whether there are any there now?

Mr. BREYMAN: On the desert?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. BREYMAN: No, I do not. In fact when I left there, Mr. Cotton, there were very few farms anywhere; the country was used entirely for grazing purposes.

Mr. COTTON: But the Crooked River country was always pretty well filled up, wasn't it?

833 Mr. BREYMAN: We never raised a great amount of wheat there.

Mr. COTTON: No; raised alfalfa?

Mr. BREYMAN: Raised alfalfa and rye for feeding cattle.

Mr. COTTON: I think that is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There was no way to get wheat out, was there, except to team it along there?

Mr. BREYMAN: No; but there was some home consumption there; they raised it for home consumption.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, but that is all. That is all, Mr. Breyman.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Breyman, has there been any change in the rail rates to and from San Francisco on your commodities recently?

Mr. BREYMAN: On leather, I could not say as to that Mr. Cotton; I have never looked it up.

(Witness excused.)

H. W. GODDARD, called as a witness, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Goddard, where do you live?

Mr. GODDARD: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. GODDARD: Transfer company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in that business?

Mr. GODDARD: About a year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that time what was your business?

Mr. GODDARD: Railroad service for a number of years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years did you say you have been in the transfer business?

Mr. GODDARD: About a year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that time you had been in the railroad service?

Mr. GODDARD: I had been in the railroad service for a number of years.

834 Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to a year ago?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What company?

Mr. GODDARD: The Oregon Steam Navigation Company and the Oregon Railway Company, Southern Pacific, C. B. & Q.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When were you employed by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. GODDARD: From 1890 to 1896.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was your business at that time?

Mr. GODDARD: It was in the traffic department.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were you a solicitor of freight business?

Mr. GODDARD: No. I was not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, in whose office were you?

Mr. GODDARD: In the office of Mr. E. P. Rogers, Assistant General Freight and Passenger Agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now Mr. Goddard in those days—when was it, up to 1896 or 1897?

Mr. GODDARD: 1896.

Mr. SEVERANCE: After that what company were you with?

Mr. GODDARD: The C. B. & Q.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, during the time that you were employed by the Southern Pacific and up to 1901, were the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific with the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company's extension competitors for its business into Portland from the east?

Mr. GODDARD: Between what times, Mr. Severance?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, just state at what times they were competitors for the business?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, I would not have any knowledge of it except during the time I was with it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, were they at that time?

Mr. GODDARD: They were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; and were the O. R. & N. boats competing with the Southern Pacific rail lines from here to San Francisco?

835

Mr. GODDARD: They were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What class of goods were competitive for those two lines between here and San Francisco, that is the boat line and the all rail line?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, we were after all the business there was.

Mr. COTTON: Excuse me; I didn't understand up to what period you are testifying—1896?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, 1890 to 1896.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, 1896.

Mr. GODDARD: Each company, I presume was after all the business there was in sight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Well, were they dry goods, groceries?

Mr. GODDARD: General merchandise.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Hops; did hops move both ways, or only one way?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, I think very little, if any local movement of hops?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I mean did any of the hops move to the east by water from San Francisco?

Mr. GODDARD: I think not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or did they move by rail?

Mr. GODDARD: By rail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they moved both ways, didn't they; that is, by the Sunset route and the Sacramento route?

Mr. GODDARD: Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Ogden, O. R. & N. and the Northern Pacific, and all lines.

Mr. GODDARD: Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What about the boat lines in those days on the Willamette.

Mr. GODDARD: There were two lines, the O. R. & N. Co. and the Oregon City Transportation Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were they competing for through business from the Willamette Valley to the east with the Southern Pacific; that is, bringing commodities into Portland by boat and thence sending it on?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, I don't think they would be called as competing; they worked in connection with them.

836

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you don't understand my question. The Willamette boats of the O. R. & N. were working in connection with the O. R. & N. railroad, weren't they?

Mr. GODDARD: Hops would be brought into Portland, for instance over the Oregon City Transportation Company and O. R. & N. boats and shipped out Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Shipped out Southern Pacific or O. R. & N.

Mr. GODDARD: Or O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Either way, yes. Ordinarily if the Southern Pacific were going to send the hops they would load them direct on the cars, wouldn't they, take it at competitive points like Salem, for instance?

Mr. GODDARD: I think I recall cases where hops were brought from Salem by boat and thence shipped Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was not east?

Mr. GODDARD: No, it was not east.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They would usually go out by rail from Salem?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But if they were not going over the O. R. & N. they were brought in here by boat ordinarily?

Mr. GODDARD: That would depend where they were originating probably.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, say they originated at Salem?

Mr. GODDARD: Probably most of the hops originating at Salem were in the warehouse at Salem, and then in that case they would come by rail direct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They would come by rail direct.

Mr. GODDARD: Either Southern Pacific or by way of Portland to the other rail lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To the other rail lines; and the Southern Pacific would bring them in, but the O. R. & N. kept solicitors up 837 there soliciting that business as against the Southern Pacific?

Mr. GODDARD: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now when you were the agent of the C. B. & Q. you worked in connection with all lines, I suppose, didn't you?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, sir. I was not the General Agent, I was Assistant General Agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you were the soliciting agent?

Mr. GODDARD: Assistant General Agent, yes, for the Northwest territory.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And where did you work, here in Portland or in this Northwestern country?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, my headquarters were and with jurisdiction over all the Northwest here.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did you go out in the country more or less?

Mr. GODDARD: Occasionally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Looking up business?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you solicited traffic for the C. B. & Q., to what points, at what point did you endeavor to route it so far as your line was concerned, coming,—westbound traffic, we will say?

Mr. GODDARD: We would endeavor to route it our longest haul which was——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Denver?

Mr. GODDARD: Either Denver or Billings.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Denver or Billings. And from Denver, up to the time the Ogden gateway was closed, that is the Sacramento route, I mean, from Denver west you routed it anyway that you could get it, didn't you?

Mr. LOVETT: If the Commissioner please, I would like to make a point here that we should have made before. I have not understood in this investigation that we had any right to object to the form of questions, but this investigation being conducted by the Commission in its own way that it was for the Commission
838 to determine the form the questions should take. I don't think in my limited practice I have ever heard witness led so——

Mr. SEVERANCE: I beg your pardon, Judge; I will change the form of the question; I am perfectly willing to.

Mr. LOVETT: I want to make a statement now so I won't be misunderstood. In my practice I don't think I ever heard witnesses led quite as much by counsel as they have been in this investigation from the very beginning. As I say, I assumed that was for the Commission to determine as the Commission was making its investigation without formal parties, but if we have any right to object to the form of the question——

Com'r LANE: At any time you desire, Judge. Of course if you consider a witness being misled to say something he does not intend to say, I am very glad to have you make objection.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And I am very glad to have my attention called to it.

Mr. LOVETT: Of course, it is not considered proper in court to lead your own witness. But as I say, this investigation is being conducted by the Commission in its own way, without formal parties, and I have not made objections; but I want to call the attention of the Commissioner to the form of the question; I don't care to obstruct the proceedings by constant objections to the form of the questions, but I would like to call the attention of the Commission to the form in which the questions have been put.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I might say in response to Judge Lovett's suggestion that I am very glad he made it, if he thinks the forms of the questions objectionable. We had subpœnaed here some thirty-five or thirty-six witnesses; we had two days at the outset in which to examine them; I have tried to be very direct with the witnesses because of that fact, and am rushing through as fast as possible; I didn't intend to transgress the ordinary rules in the exami-
839 nation of witnesses, but I will endeavor to adopt my friend's suggestion; it may take a little longer.

Mr. LOVETT: In New York and also in Chicago the same form was followed. I did not object there because at the outset they were officers of our company, and I thought that we would not present any technical objections there; but this same course has been pursued with all witnesses, and I think more frequently than intentionally. Counsel has rather argued his case to the witnesses.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, that has been quite unnecessary; at least,

I think the witnesses have sufficiently argued it; but I did not intend to do so, Judge Lovett.

Mr. COTTON: I think in response to some of these questions that really Mr. Goddard has assented to a good many propositions that I don't think he means to state as the facts at all.

Com'r LANE: Well, I have given plenty of opportunity for cross-examination, and I supposed when a witness might be led into anything inadvertently it will be brought out by you.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, of course, it is not my intention to have the witness state anything that is not so; you know that, Mr. Cotton, very well.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; but a man very frequently answers yes to a question without thinking of the premises.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, in deference to the suggestion I will change the form of my question. You say that you endeavored to secure traffic as far as possible over your own line when you were soliciting for the C. B. & Q., and that would be Denver and Billings; now assuming you were able to route traffic by C. B. & Q. as far as Denver, what way would the commodities come on to Portland from Denver?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, either via the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line, or via the Rio Grande and Salt Lake.

840 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, up to the time it was spoken of here by a number of witnesses as the closing of the Sacramento or Ogden gateway, did the traffic move at times via Sacramento?

Mr. GODDARD: Why years ago it did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is what I mean. Latterly, how did it move from Ogden and Salt Lake to Portland?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, we didn't solicit very much business that way; we were after other hauls which were a little more profitable.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, you were after the Billings haul; I understand, but I am asking now about the freight that came by Denver.

Mr. GODDARD: It is a hard matter for me to answer that question, because we never solicited any routing west of Denver; we asked for our own routing up to that point, and it was immaterial to us how it moved west.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you are unable to state how it moved west?

Mr. GODDARD: At present, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't remember?

Mr. GODDARD: No, I don't remember.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: When was the Billings route opened?

Mr. GODDARD: It was before I went with the Burlington, but I think it was about 1894.

Mr. COTTON: 1894?

Mr. GODDARD: 1894.

Mr. COTTON: And it has been competing for business into this country in connection with the Northern Pacific ever since?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And as the C. B. & Q. agent you preferred to have the freight come by Billings, routed by Salt Lake and Denver, of course, the haul was very much longer?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, sir.

841 Mr. COTTON: Did you regard that as in restraint of trade?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, I think that is an immaterial question.

Com'r LANE: There is no value to his answer to that.

Mr. COTTON: No, I don't really think so. You did try to work the business by Billings as hard as you could?

Mr. GODDARD: We were after our longest haul always.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, and undertook to obtain it that way from anybody from whom you solicited it, if you could get it?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: If you could not get it that way you would of course be glad to have it come by Denver rather than some other way?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Now, when it came out by Denver to Salt Lake when the Sacramento gateway was still open, it might have reached Portland either by the Short Line or by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And you were indifferent which way it came?

Mr. GODDARD: Entirely so.

Mr. COTTON: The merchant was largely indifferent too, or did he prefer the Union Pacific route?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, we never entered into that any more than we had to,—the question of routing west of our line.

Mr. COTTON: How much longer was the Sacramento route in time than the route from Salt Lake here direct?

Mr. GODDARD: Why, I think under normal conditions probably about four days.

Mr. COTTON: About four days more?

Mr. GODDARD: Four or five days.

842 Mr. COTTON: Did any merchant wish to have his freight come over that way at equal rates?

Mr. GODDARD: We never had very many requests to send them that way.

Mr. COTTON: You used to work freight via Omaha also in connection with the Union Pacific.

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: In other words, if you could not get it via Billings you would take it via Denver, and if you could not get it via Denver you would take it Omaha?

Mr. GODDARD: Omaha, St. Paul,—we competed through all the gateways.

Mr. COTTON: Any gateway, aiming however always to get the longest haul possible for your road?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: In fact you had a gateway at Omaha, one at Denver, one at Billings, one at St. Paul——

Mr. GODDARD: And one Kansas City, and one St. Louis.

Mr. COTTON: One at Kansas City and one at St. Louis. Now in 1896 when you were working for the Southern Pacific Company the boat lines,—the O. R. & N. boat lines and the Graham line, did I understand?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, the Oregon City Transportation Company.

Mr. COTTON: Were working in connection with the Southern Pacific line, were they not, bringing freight to Portland and turning it over to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, the Southern Pacific received hops and prunes from them at Portland.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, the steamboat lines touch at various points along the river, don't they, of production?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Little low places, farm houses,—any old place?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, they have a good many landings.

Mr. COTTON: And the roads in the winter time in that section of the country are very muddy?

Mr. GODDARD: Very bad.

843 Mr. COTTON: Yes; the haul to a station is almost impossible at times.

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, I should think so. I never was in the country very much, but I know the general character of it, and the roads were very muddy.

Mr. COTTON: Therefore, the boat lines picked up the stuff which was adjacent to the river and the rail lines picked up the stuff which was adjacent to the rail lines; that was about the situation, wasn't it?

Mr. GODDARD: I think so.

Mr. COTTON: There was not very much hauling from one to the other, that is from the river to the rail or from the rail to the river?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, I don't think there was.

Mr. COTTON: And when the O. R & N. boat lines would pick up a shipment of hops which anybody wanted to have go out over the Southern Pacific they would bring it to Portland and let it go out over the Southern Pacific away back in 1896?

Mr. GODDARD: I don't recall of any case where a shipment routed over the O. R. & N. boat line routed Southern Pacific at Portland was diverted; I don't recall it.

Mr. COTTON: The O. R. & N. boat lines did actually bring in hops from the Willamette Valley to Portland to go out over the Southern Pacific lines?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: That was quite frequent, wasn't it?

Mr. GODDARD: No, I could not say it was quite frequent.

Mr. COTTON: Well, it was often done?

Mr. GODDARD: It was the occasional case.

Mr. COTTON: From any landing where anybody wanted to ship that way the boat lines would take it, wouldn't they?

Mr. GODDARD: The greater portion of the hops I think came down over the Oregon City boat line boats.

Mr. COTTON: Well, the Oregon City boat line worked that way, didn't they?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

844 Mr. COTTON: And handled quite large quantities of hops?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, all the that were tributary to the river.

Mr. COTTON: Therefore, if that present arrangement continues at the present time, it is nothing new, is it?

Mr. GODDARD: I don't know what the arrangement is in effect now.

Mr. COTTON: Well, I say if it does continue now, it is no new thing, is it?

Mr. GODDARD: It might be the same as they had done before.

Mr. COTTON: And do you know how long before 1896 the Oregon City Transportation Company did business in that way with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, I think most of the time I was engaged with the Southern Pacific.

Mr. COTTON: How long was that, sir?

Mr. GODDARD: Six years.

Mr. COTTON: Six years that is, from 1890?

Mr. GODDARD: 1890 to 1896.

Mr. COTTON: And they worked in harmony with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. GODDARD: I would not make a positive statement of that but I know it was during the latter portion of the time and possibly during the whole time.

Mr. COTTON: Both lines bringing stuff into the city of Portland, potatoes and truck like that from the river.

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Working in competition with each other for that business?

Mr. GODDARD: Doubtless.

Mr. COTTON: That is all, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Goddard, when the O. R. & N. boats brought in hops as you say they did infrequently, and the hops went out over the Southern Pacific, did the Southern Pacific absorb the boat charge into Portland?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

845 Mr. SEVERANCE: And the freight charge was what,—the Portland rate?

Mr. GODDARD: Well, there was a flat rate on hops on the entire territory covered by the river points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, so that the rate to the east from Portland was the same as from Salem?

Mr. GODDARD: As from Salem, or any river landing.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or any river landing. That was both lines to the east, wasn't it,—the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N.?

Mr. GODDARD: By all lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Now in answer to Brother Cotton you said these instances were infrequent, as I understood you, that the hops came in by boat and went out over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. GODDARD: The two boat lines of course were competing for the business tributary to the river. The O. R. & N. Co.'s boats, I presume, solicited for their own line, but if they didn't get the haul clear through they would be willing to take it to Portland and make delivery to the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Southern Pacific absorbed their charge for the local haul, is that right?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes, sir; the river charges were absorbed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Did the Graham boat line work in harmony with the Northern Pacific too?

Mr. GODDARD: I don't remember about that, I don't recall.

Mr. COTTON: Well, do they now?

Mr. GODDARD: I don't know; I am not familiar with it now at all.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know how far this blanket freight rate on hops extended through the Willamette Valley, how far south it went?

Mr. GODDARD: I think it covered the entire Oregon lines.

Mr. COTTON: The entire lines of the Southern Pacific in Oregon?

846 Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Say as far down as they raised hops, Eugene, and Roseburg?

Mr. GODDARD: Yes; say as far down as Medford; I think there was some hops originated there.

Mr. COTTON: The same rates from all points to the east on hops?

Mr. GODDARD: I know it did; that covered the intermediate rates in Oregon.

Mr. COTTON: That same system prevails now, doesn't it?

Mr. GODDARD: I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: A common blanket rate from Ashland to Portland on hops to all eastern points?

Mr. GODDARD: I don't know what the present situation is.

Mr. COTTON: Well, but I mean in olden days.

Mr. GODDARD: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

(Witness Excused.)

GEORGE H. KELLY: called as a witness, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Kelly, where do you live?

Mr. KELLY: Eugene.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is Eugene from Portland?

Mr. KELLY: 123 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What line of railroad are you on, if any?

Mr. KELLY: The Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. KELLY: I am in the lumber business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in that business?

Mr. KELLY: 21 years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long at Eugene?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I have lived right near there and there in the lumber business for the last ten years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of your firm?

847 Mr. KELLY: Booth Kelly Lumber Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many mills, sir?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir, we operate four mills in Lane County.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Four mills?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where are they?

Mr. KELLY: There is one at Saginaw, one at Coburg, one at Springfield and one at Wendling.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On what line of roads are these mills located?

Mr. KELLY: They are all on the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is the nearest mill from Portland?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I would say about 120 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is the one that is farthest from Portland?

Mr. KELLY: About 145 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are they on the main line?

Mr. KELLY: One of them is on the main line and the others are on the branches, on the Woodburn and Natron and the Wendling branch.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far off of the main line are these mills that are on the branches?

Mr. KELLY: Well, the Springfield mill is a mile from the main line; the Wendling mill is 18 miles from the main line, and the Coburg mill is seven miles from the main line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your annual cut at these mills?

Mr. KELLY: Well, when we run full time about a hundred million feet.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what parts of the United States do you ship?

Mr. KELLY: Well, practically all over the United States except a little part of New England and the south.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has there been any change in the rates on lumber from your points to any destination within the last two or three years?

848 Mr. KELLY: Well, in some,—there has been some change in rates east of Sacramento, between Sacramento and Ogden, and there has been some change in California rates, and there is another one contemplated now that we just received notice of. We used to have rates to Arizona; they were withdrawn.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I want to ask you about these Arizona rates; what was your rate to Arizona points?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I think it was a mining timber rate, and I think it was about $16 a thousand feet, if I recall; something like that; it was a per thousand foot rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was that rate withdrawn?

Mr. KELLY: Well, eight or nine years ago, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Eight or nine years ago.

Mr. COTTON: Prior to 1901?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Kelly, is there any difference in the rates that you pay on different classes of lumber and timber that you ship?

Mr. KELLY: Not to eastern points but to California points they make a distinction between kiln dried machine lumber and rough green lumber and railroad ties.

Com'r LANE: What is the purpose of his testimony, Mr. Severance?

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the first place I want to show that they make a distinction between rates so as to prevent the shipment of ties for instance down in the territory where other lines of railroad are being constructed, and I want to show also the efforts made to reduce shipments to new territory reached by the O. R. & N. and Colorado points, and others, as against shipments to the south.

Com'r LANE: A change in the policy that has been effected recently?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Com'r LANE: Well, you may proceed.

Mr. LOVETT: Is there any contention that that situa-
849 tion was effected by the relations of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is my understanding; if it is not correct,—that is my understanding,—undoubtedly he will state the facts. You say there is a difference in rates on ties and other timbers.

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now does this difference exist as between ties and other timber of the same character, except as to length?

Mr. KELLY: That is all the difference that there is. For instance a standard railroad tie is seven by eight, eight feet long; that is, that is the generally accepted standard. Now that tie, if it goes to a Bay point, San Francisco or a Bay point, takes a rate of five dollars a thousand, while a piece double that length, seven by eight, sixteen feet long or any other length would go $3.10,—not $5 a thousand but $5 a ton; but the longer lengths would take the rate of $3.10 a ton.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long has that been the case.

Mr. KELLY: Well, I could not say. The distinction was made in Interstate Commodity tariff No. 7, I don't recall the date of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About how long?

Mr. KELLY: It is not an old tariff; I think probably a couple of years, maybe less than that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Within a couple of years?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now prior to that time had there been any such distinction?

Mr. KELLY: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know of any reason, sir, in the nature of any commodity shipped, or the difficulty of handling it, or anything of that sort, to account for this distinction?

Mr. KELLY: No. A tie is about the lowest grade forest product except a mining timber, and it will go in any kind of a car, 850 where a long timber might require a special car; it is easier handled and would be just as easy transported as anything else, if not easier.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has that new rule, or rather that change of rate putting one at a higher rate than the other, had an effect on your business?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What effect?

Mr. KELLY: Well, we can't make deliveries of any ties in San Francisco or stock in territory where the Western Pacific are trying to buy ties.

Com'r LANE: How long since that rate was put in?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I could not just give the date, but I would say within the last two years; it is Interstate Commodity Tariff No. 7. It is a new tariff.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Kelly, have there been any efforts made by the representatives of the Southern Pacific road to induce you to change the direction of your shipments to points?

Mr. KELLY: Well, previous to 1901 everything that we shipped went south via Sacramento and Ogden, and since that time it all goes north via Portland and Ogden.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why?

Mr. KELLY: Well, the rates were withdrawn south via Sacramento and Ogden, and the shipments were all diverted this way.

Mr. LOVETT: Shipments to what points?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Shipments to what points, Judge Lovett suggests?

Mr. KELLY: Well, to Colorado or any of that interior mountain country. Previous to 1901 we did not ship anything east of Denver; that is, we used to go down into New Mexico and down through there sometimes in connection with the Santa Fe, but after the amalgamation of the Union Pacific with the Southern Pacific the rates were extended on through to Chicago via Portland, but they never had that rate via Sacramento and Ogden.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, what way do you mean the rates were withdrawn into Arizona? Do you mean you can't ship there 851 at all, no rates on what you ship?

Mr. KELLY: Well, there is a rate in there now; I think it is about 67 cents a hundred most of the points to Nogales for instance; that is, the clearing point between Arizona and Old Mexico; the rate is 65 cents a hundred, $13 a ton, from our mill; now we can't ship beyond that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was your former rate there?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I think it was about $16 a thousand feet as I recall; it has been a good many years ago since we shipped in there. It was a per thousand foot rate instead of per ton rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In case of green timber how much does it weigh?

Mr. KELLY: 3300 pounds to the thousand feet.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you give an estimate, Mr. Kelly, of the extent of your traffic that now moves to Colorado points by way of the O. R. & N. that formerly moved by the Southern Pacific via Sacramento?

Mr. KELLY: Well, that varies, owing to market conditions. A man always tries to sell where the market is best. Now a couple of years ago the market was very bad in Colorado on account of the coal strike, and we shipped scarcely anything in there, and I think there is just about ten per cent. of our cut goes into Colorado; about seven million feet, I think, we shipped in there last year, and that all goes via Portland, that formerly went the other way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are there any other points outside of Colorado points that are affected by this diversion of shipments around by the O. R. & N. that formerly went by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. KELLY: Yes; everything in Utah south of Ogden.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you give an estimate of the extent of that traffic from your mills?

Mr. KELLY: Well, we never have had a very large business in Utah.. It is the Portland mills that had that territory largely, 852 and we never shipped in there much; I suppose maybe we shipped three million feet a year in Utah.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then you say seven millions to Colorado, three millions in Utah, which would be about ten millions of feet in those two states.

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any other traffic that is affected by this change aside from that of these two states you have mentioned?

Mr. KELLY: No. You see before the Harriman people got the Union Pacific we shipped everything into Southern Utah, Colorado, California, Arizona and New Mexico.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was your sole market.

Mr. KELLY: That was our sole market; and after the consolidation of the lines why we began to ship east then and go clear to the seaboard.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you mean by that you made up what you lose in the California and Arizona markets by creating a new market east?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, very much more in quantity of output. Our output is very much more than it was then, and some years it is a very much better market. We prefer the California market to any other, but still our shipments have increased. In 1903 we shipped about thirty per cent. of our cut east,—in 1904 I should say 30 per cent.; in 1905 forty per cent., and in 1906 fifty per cent. went east via Portland.

Com'r LANE: You have not been embarrassed then by the changes effected in 1901?

Mr. KELLY: No; while we have in a measure lost some territory we have gained more territory.

Com'r LANE: Your field is widened?

Mr. KELLY: The field is widened, but we don't consider the market probably quite so good. The best of lumber going to California is $2 a thousand higher now than lumber going east; so a man would prefer to sell in California.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Explain that. How do you mean, that the best is $2 higher?

853 Mr. KELLY: Well, the market is better down there and the supply is—the California market is better.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean by that taking the rate and the market value of lumber both into consideration?

Mr. KELLY: Your lumber brings you $2 a thousand more now under present conditions in California than it does if you ship east.

Com'r LANE: That was not so up to two years ago.

Mr. KELLY: Only in places. San Francisco usually is the lowest lumber market there is on the coast; that is a kind of a dumping ground for everybody; but the last year it has been about one of the best markets, and of course the prices of lumber in interior California is fixed by the price of lumber at Bay points, and that is made a good market all over the state.

Com'r LANE: So when these changes were effected, conditions were different in California the price was better.

Mr. KELLY: Yes, as regards Bay points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is the difference in regard to your shipments now in California?

Mr. KELLY: Well, practically 40 per cent. last year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How was it prior to these changes in the rate, the adjustment of the rates?

Mr. KELLY: Well, prior to 1901 I would think probably more than eighty per cent. in California and Arizona.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: You say in former years eighty per cent. of your output went to California?

Mr. KELLY: To California and Arizona.

Mr. COTTON: Your output then was about how much per year?

Mr. KELLY: Well, it was since 1901 we have increased our output about 35,000,000 feet.

Mr. COTTON: Every year?

Mr. KELLY: No; I say about 35 million is the increase in our annual output since 1901. We probably cut—we ship probably 60 million feet.

854 Mr. COTTON: And of the old 35 million feet, or of the old 25 million feet, about eighty per cent. went to California?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And a large part of that was Southern Pacific company material, wasn't it, or a substantial part?

Mr. KELLY: Well, it is yet; a good deal of our material is Southern Pacific material.

Mr. COTTON: And about how much of this eighty per cent. of the 25 million was company material in those days?

Mr. KELLY: Oh, I suppose twenty per cent. of it.

Mr. COTTON: Twenty per cent.?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Then there was only about sixty per cent. of 25 million feet that went to California for commercial usage?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: How much are you shipping now to California, or would you ship on rates if you could get the cars?

Mr. KELLY: That is pretty hard to say, because a man would take on a lot more business if he could get the cars. This week I have 1640 carloads of lumber sold in California outside of company material.

Mr. COTTON: Then the rates have not prevented you now from getting to California; there is nothing in the rate adjustment which prevented you from getting there now?

Mr. KELLY: Not until this new rate goes into effect that they have given us notice of.

Mr. COTTON: Your old rate was $3, wasn't it?

Mr. KELLY: $3.10 a ton to Bay points.

Mr. COTTON: $3.10 a ton for how many miles?

Mr. KELLY: Oh, I think something about seven hundred.

Mr. COTTON: 700 miles; that is considerably less than half a cent a ton a mile, and over the Siskiyou mountains?

855 Mr. KELLY: Yes, it all goes over the Siskiyou.

Mr. COTTON: And they have brought empty cars north to take away the business?

Mr. KELLY: Well, at times they do, and at times they don't; there haven't been any empties coming north lately?

Mr. COTTON: There haven't been any empties moving any place; isn't that right Mr. Kelly?

Mr. KELLY: Well, we have had a great many empties from the other way. We have had good car service except in 1903 and this year.

Mr. COTTON: Now this year, Mr. Kelly, what would have been the effect on your business as you have observed it if a car pool had not existed between the O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific Company, and you had not been able to get cars over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. KELLY: Well, that depends; we always haul in the direction we think we are going to get cars. Now we always figure we are going to get a car shortage in the fall of the year, and when we used to sell lumber — we used to sell Mr. Schwerin lumber we always took that into consideration, and so did he, that he would furnish cars, and so did he, that he could furnish cars in the fall of the year; and our business now is best with railroads, because they will hustle to get you the equipment.

Com'r LANE: Do you find a difference in getting cars between orders you have for railroads and orders you have for other shipments?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, you can't get a car for anything now only for railroad business; you can't get a car for commercial business north or south.

Com'r LANE: The railroads always furnish you with plenty cars to move their material, do they?

Mr. KELLY: No, not plenty, but then you stand a lots better chance. For instance, the Harriman people are building something like six thousand refrigerator cars. We took on that business, because we thought during the scarce time of cars we would get the cars.

Com'r LANE: Where are they building them?

856 Mr. KELLY: At McKeesport, Pennsylvania, and Chicago; they are scattered all around. Pierce Steel Company and the American Car Company.

Com'r LANE: So that in the end these extra facilities they furnish you with cars would tend to relieve them?

Mr. KELLY: Well, refrigerators won't do any good. They let you ship laths.

Com'r LANE: You can ship shingles in the refrigerators in the northwest, can't you?

Mr. KELLY: We don't manufacture shingles.

Mr. COTTON: How far are your mills south of Portland?

Mr. KELLY: From 120 to 140 miles.

Mr. COTTON: They make a common rate from these points east, do they not, the same as the Portland rate?

Mr. KELLY: Well, to most territory; I don't know anything about the Portland rates over the Northern roads in the territory, but into the territory of the Harriman lines we have the same rates.

Mr. COTTON: The same rates as Portland?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And that condition of things has prevailed for how long?

Mr. KELLY: Oh, I think five years, something like that.

Mr. COTTON: What?

Mr KELLY: Five years.

Mr. COTTON: About five years?

Mr. KELLY: I would think about five years.

Mr. COTTON: Formerly your rates on the Northern Pacific extended to a limited western territory, didn't they?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir; we very seldom get anything east of Denver; if we did it was something we had to absorb a differential on.

Mr. COTTON: Since 1901, since what has been termed the amalgamation you can ship to any states in the east?

857 Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: What is your rate, $5 to Missouri River?

Mr. KELLY: Fifty cents a hundred.

Mr. COTTON: Fifty cents; I mean ten dollars a ton.

Mr. KELLY: Ten dollars a ton.

Mr. COTTON: What is your rate to Chicago?

Mr. KELLY: Fifty cents plus a switching charge of $2.00.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just the same as Chicago to the Missouri River?

Mr. COTTON: The same as to the Missouri River.

Mr. KELLY: Yes, just the same.

Mr. COTTON: And you pay no more than the Portland mills do?

Mr. KELLY: Just the same rate.

Mr. COTTON: Just the same rate; and you are largely shipping in Union Pacific and O. R. & N. cars east, aren't you?

Mr. KELLY: Well, we catch any kind of cars; we get a lot of foreign cars.

Mr. COTTON: Well, they are cars that come to you from the north?

Mr. KELLY: Nearly all the car supplies come from the north now.

Mr. COTTON: And that has been the case practically all this year?

Mr. KELLY: Yes; we get no cars from the south except prior to the first of July we got a good many cars from the south, and along in December of 1906 we got a good many cars from the south; since then we have had no cars from the south.

Mr. COTTON: If you had been working on the cars from the south say since about the first of July, you would have had to shut down long ago, wouldn't you?

Mr. KELLY: We would have been out of business long ago.

Mr. COTTON: You also sell company material to other railroads besides the Harriman lines, don't you?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, and nearly—well, all the great systems
858 in the north nearly, the St. Paul, Northwestern, Rock Island, Illinois Central.

Mr. COTTON: You get their cars down there, do you, for their material, or what kind of cars do you get for them?

Mr. KELLY: Well, most any kind of a car that will go home that way. Now take the C. & N. W. material, we ship a great deal of that; we have had their contract for a great many years and take most any kind of a car that will go east over the Union Pacific.

Mr. COTTON: Your shipments now, amount to about how many million feet per year; that is, say east of this old territory, east of Colorado?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I presume about forty million feet.

Mr. COTTON: About forty million feet?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: That is more than your former total business?

Mr. KELLY: Well, it was more than our business when we first went into business.

Mr. COTTON: Well, more than your business in 1901.

Mr. KELLY: No.

Mr. COTTON: What was your business in 1901?

Mr. KELLY: Well, about sixty million,—sixty to sixty-five millions.

Mr. COTTON: About sixty millions?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Now, forty million feet of that goes into entirely new territory that was opened up as a result of the rates given by the O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific north?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Your Colorado shipments were about seven million feet per year?

Mr. KELLY: I think that is about what we shipped in there last year; yes.

Mr. COTTON: And in former years what did you used to ship, that is prior to 1901?

Mr. KELLY: Into Colorado?

859 Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. KELLY: Well, that is hard to say; but not so much though as we have shipped this year, because we didn't have the output, but about the same percentage of our cut, I think went in there.

Mr. COTTON: There has been no adjustment in the rates to keep you out of business in any way, has there, at all? That is, the rate adjustments rather have been to increase your business than decrease it?

Mr. KELLY: Yes; as I say the only places where we have lost territory has been the territory across between Sacramento and Ogden and in Arizona; that is the only place where we have lost territory.

Mr. COTTON: And that was on ties, wasn't it?

Mr. KELLY: No; we ship all kinds of material in there across Nevada. It is nearly all a low grade of building material.

Mr. COTTON: Why did you lose territory in between Sacramento and in the Ogden territory?

Mr. KELLY: Well, those rates all across Nevada were increased.

Mr. COTTON: When?

Mr. KELLY: Oh, I don't know; it has been several years ago. It is an $8 rate from the state line all the way across to Ogden now.

Mr. COTTON: And how long ago was that increased?

Mr. KELLY: Oh, I could not say.

Mr. COTTON: And your rates into Arizona, how are they?

Mr. KELLY: Well, they are so high that we don't ship anything into Arizona except an occasional car of flooring we ship to Nogales, but we ship through there on south.

Mr. COTTON: That raise took place about eight years ago, or thereabouts?

Mr. KELLY: I think so; yes, it was a good many years ago, I know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901 when you routed your stuff to Colorado, for instance, by the Southern Pacific around by Sac-
860 ramento, how did it move from Ogden and over what line?

Mr. KELLY: Omaha D. & R. G., and occasionally a car by the Midland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How does it move now?

Mr. KELLY: North Northern Pacific Denver business. Of course we have some local business at local points on the Rio Grande line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you sell business to the Denver & Rio Grande and Western Pacific?

Mr. KELLY: In former years we sold a great deal of material to the Denver & Rio Grande, but lately we have not. We always try to give roads traffic and get some of their purchasing agents' business in that way, but we have sold the Rio Grande in the last two years a few small orders, but not much; we don't have the business that we used to have.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why is that?

Mr. KELLY: Well, we don't give them any traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You spoke in response to something asked you by Mr. Cotton about some new rates; what are the new rates?

Mr. KELLY: To California points?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. KELLY: The tariff has not been published yet, but the notice was to the effect that the five dollar rate would be the minimum to any California point.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did you get that notice?

Mr. KELLY: Oh, I think it was Wednesday.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Wednesday?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: From whom?

Mr. KELLY: From R. B. Miller, the General Freight Agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And is that on the same class that now pays $3.10?

Mr. KELLY: The same thing, yes, sir. It is an advance from $3.10 to $5 as the basis.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When is that to become effective?

Mr. KELLY: The circular states the 15th of March, but the 861 traffic officials state that it will not go into effect so soon as that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What traffic officials?

Mr. KELLY: Mr. Miller and Mr. Coman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, Mr. Miller personally does not agree with Mr. Miller's circular?

Mr. KELLY: Well, they found out that the time was too short to give shippers a chance to clean up business that was sold under the old rate. It would put a man out of business if they forced him to it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I see; so you don't know the exact date that that will go into effect?

Mr. KELLY: I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now when you ship material to those other roads in the east that you have mentioned as customers of yours, are you restricted in any way as to the kind of cars that you shall load for shipments?

Mr. KELLY: No, only this way, that they want a car to go home the way it came out; for instance, if a car came out over the St. Paul they would want it to go back that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say you sell a good deal to the Chicago & Northwestern?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of cars do you load?

Mr. KELLY: Well, a car that came out over the St. Paul they would not want it to go back over the C. & N. W.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you ever ship to the Northwestern and the Chicago Northern & St. Paul in Union Pacific and Southern Pacific cars?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, frequently.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long since you quit selling to the Denver & Rio Grande?

Mr. KELLY: Well, we sold them a little last year and a little the year before, just a little business at Denver; we have an office in Denver and our Denver people pick it up; it don't amount to much.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of cars do you ship their material in?

862 Mr. KELLY: Well, we catch any kind of a car that comes west over the D. & R. G.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Cotton asked you whether you had lost any business by reason of the rate adjustments; do you know of any that you have lost other than the traffic in ties to the Gould people aside from your California and Arizona business and Sacramento points east.

Mr. KELLY: No, only this Rio Grande business; we used to have lots of that; we had both for the Rio Grande Western and the Denver & Rio Grande; but of late years we haven't had that.

Com'r LANE: As I understand, they cut off the entire sales to the Western Pacific by the rate down there?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes; that is what I understood, that the rates were prohibitive from here to San Francisco Bay.

Mr. COTTON: Oh, no.

Com'r LANE: Well, that is a discrimination in the tariff.

Mr. COTTON: Not San Francisco Bay.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Bay points, I understood; let's have that understood; that is what I understood him to say; what did you say about it?

Mr. KELLY: The tariff to Bay points reads rough green common lumber $3.10 a ton; then the tariff on railroad ties puts them in with cross-arms and material of that kind; cross-arms, ties and so on, $5.00.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well now, you said something on your direct examination with reference to the effect that had on you making sales to the Western Pacific?

Mr. KELLY: Yes. They are wanting to buy ties delivered at Stockton, which is practically a Bay point, and it takes a $3.50 rate, but they can't get in there.

Com'r LANE: Now is that the general classification of ties?

Mr. KELLY: No; a tie should be classed under rough common green lumber. There is nothing any rougher or any more common than that.

863 Mr. SEVERANCE: Well what is greener?

Mr. KELLY: And nothing greener.

Com'r LANE: Is that a general classification that obtains over all the roads?

Mr. KELLY: That is the only tariff I have ever seen that classification in. The tie is just as cheap a commodity as goes, and usually moves just the same as other lumber; and other roads shipping out on eastern shipments don't make any distinction between plain lumber and rough lumber; it goes so much a ton anyhow.

Com'r LANE: Is that same distinction made in shipping from Portland east over the Short Line?

Mr. KELLY: No, sir.

Com'r LANE: It is only from here down to California.

Mr. KELLY: From here to Bay points in California.

Com'r LANE: From here to Bay point in California; what is the reason for that?

Mr. KELLY: Well, they don't give any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you inquired?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom?

Mr. KELLY: Why from different ones of the traffic officials. The way we came to get on to the thing, in the first place we sold the Western Pacific a big lot of ties supposing that a tie was rough green common lumber and shipped a great many thousand of them and got stuck for $2,200 on them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You discovered your definition was wrong, did you?

Mr. KELLY: My definition was wrong, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When applied to Bay points?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you went out of the Western Pacific traffic then on ties?

Mr. KELLY: No; we have got to deliver them a lot more yet, but then we are trying to make them make a delivery to some 864 other point; we are going to wait until they build their road to Marysville, and then deliver them there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you are not making any further new contracts with the Western Pacific?

Mr. KELLY: Not with the Western Pacific, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what they charge from Puget Sound to San Francisco Bay points on ties, what the freight rate is?

Mr. KELLY: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: By water?

Mr. KELLY: I don't know a thing about Puget Sound rates.

Mr. COTTON: Don't you know that it is much higher than $5

Mr. KELLY: No, I don't know anything about charter rates from Puget Sound.

Mr. COTTON: You know there are steam schooners that are operating in connection with mills from Coos Bay?

Mr. KELLY: No, I don't know that.

Mr. COTTON: Tillamook?

Mr. KELLY: No.

Mr. COTTON: The mouth of the Columbia River?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, I know that.

Mr. COTTON: Grays Harbor?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: South Bend?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And Puget Sound?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I am not familiar with conditions on the Sound.

Mr. COTTON: And they all go to San Francisco Bay points, don't they?

Mr. KELLY: Why, there are steam schooners, I presume, operating out of these ports.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; and there is a tie supply at all these places?

Mr. KELLY: Naturally, yes; wherever they make lumber they make ties.

865 Mr. COTTON: And you don't know what the rates are, whether they are higher or lower that the $5 rate,—the rate these steam schooners make on common rough green lumber from Portland at the present time?

Mr. KELLY: About nine dollars and a half.

Mr. COTTON: $9.50 a ton?

Mr. KELLY: A thousand feet.

Mr. COTTON: A thousand feet?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: How much is that a ton?

Mr. KELLY: A thousand feet of lumber would weigh 3300 pounds and that would be about——

Mr. SEVERANCE: About $5.00.

Mr. COTTON: About $5.70, wouldn't it?

Mr. KELLY: $5.70, yes.

Mr. COTTON: Now that is on the common green lumber on which you pay $3.10?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: They charge $5.70 from Portland by the steam schooner?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And presumably the same or more on ties, or do you know?

Mr. KELLY: It is the same rate on all classes of lumber.

Mr. COTTON: And how long has this $5.70 rate by steam schooner prevailed?

Mr. KELLY: Just very recently charter-rates have gone up. Most of the time the water rate is lower than the rail rate; it has been down as low as $4 a thousand feet when the rail rate was unchanged.

Mr. COTTON: The rail rate from Portland for a long time past has been how much?

Mr. KELLY: $3.10 a ton.

Mr. COTTON: From Portland?

Mr. KELLY: Oh, from Portland?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. KELLY: Oh, $5.00.

Mr. COTTON: $5.00; and how long has the $5 rate on 866 green lumber and ties and everything from Portland prevailed?

Mr. KELLY: I don't know.

Mr. COTTON: About how many years.

Mr. KELLY: I don't know anything about that.

Mr. COTTON: Well, it has been a long time past, hasn't it?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, it has been a great many years.

Mr. COTTON: And the Portland mills, therefore, on common green lumber have had to pay $5 and you pay $3.10?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: But you get your lumber transported to the east and all points east for the same rate that the Portland mills pay?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And then you have had the advantage, therefore, of the difference between $5 and $3.10 on your common green stuff?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: To California Bay points?

Mr. KELLY: To California Bay points; that is, the Portland mills for years had a lower water rate than they have now; the water rate was less than half as much as it is now.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, I know that.

Mr. KELLY: But this condition now where the Valley mills have an advantage over the Portland mills has only been of very recent date?

Mr. COTTON: But you have an advantage even on this $5 rate now of 70 cents, haven't you; that is, when they raise their rate in March?

Mr. KELLY: Yes, but charters will all go down in the summer time, and when they go down in the summer time then we won't have any advantage.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, but we may have to put ours down.

Mr. KELLY: Well, they are easier to put up than down, I have found.

867 Mr. COTTON: Well, we have found it harder to get them up than to put them down.

Mr. KELLY: I don't know; they just send out a notice that they are going to raise them.

Mr. COTTON: We have given you a pretty good long time notice.

Mr. KELLY: Mr. Lounsberry came up the other day and said "We are going to raise the rates," and wanted to talk it over; I asked if he had made his mind up to change; he said yes; I said then there was nothing to talk about.

Mr. COTTON: He told you they were going into effect?

Mr. KELLY: The other day we got a notice, and we got another notice we would not be permitted to ship anything south of Ashland, so the cleaning up process would take a long time under those conditions.

Mr. COTTON: And does that condition exist now about shipping below Ashland?

Mr. KELLY: It was still in yesterday.

Mr. COTTON: How long ago was this, how many days?

Mr. KELLY: Several days ago, the first of the week.

Mr. COTTON: It hadn't been all the time—on and off during the car congestion in California?

Mr. KELLY: It was mostly off.

Mr. COTTON: If you had been doing business and depending on shipments to Colorado, Idaho, Arizona and elsewhere, you would have turned your toes up pretty long ago, wouldn't you?

Mr. KELLY: Well, we pretty nearly did. We got Mr. Stubbs out here and he restored the $3.10 rate and we got a new lease on life.

Mr. COTTON: I mean this last year, you would have had no cars at all practically?

Mr. KELLY: Not since July.

Mr. COTTON: That is, from the south.

868 Mr. KELLY: We have had practically no cars from the south since July.

Mr. COTTON: You could not get any at all?

Mr. KELLY: Practically none.

Mr. COTTON: The empties were not coming back at all from San Francisco, were they?

Mr. KELLY: No; you could not even get them for company material.

Mr. COTTON: You could not even get them for company material to the south?

Com'r LANE: This embargo south of Ashland was due to the fact you could not get any cars?

Mr. KELLY: No; it was the congestion of lines down there.

Com'r LANE: Yes; they could not handle the business?

Mr. KELLY: Could not handle the business.

Mr. COTTON: Cars could not be unloaded, you understood?

Mr. KELLY: The cars could not be unloaded and every side-track was full.

Mr. COTTON: And they have been compelled to do that at various intervals from time to time during the summer in order to get a chance to clean up?

Mr. KELLY: Yes. This last embargo was on account of fuel.

Mr. COTTON: But you have had an advantage and have for some months past, of the $3.10 rate on common green stuff which you ship south as against a higher rate from Portland?

Mr. KELLY: Except ties.

Mr. COTTON: Except ties, and on ties you pay the same as the Portland rate.

Mr. KELLY: The same as the Portland rate.

Mr. COTTON: And the proposal now is to make it all $5?

Mr. KELLY: That would be the minimum, as I understand it.

Mr. COTTON: And that does not go into effect, they have 869 just simply given you a preliminary notice that it may go into effect March 15th?

Mr. KELLY: Well, the notice does not read that way.

Mr. COTTON: Well, but it tells you that it will—that is not a tariff; they haven't sent you a tariff yet, have they?

Mr. KELLY: No.

Mr. COTTON: It is just a typewritten notice or printed notice?

Mr. KELLY: A typewritten notice.

Mr. COTTON: A typewritten notice to give you warning that there may be a raise of these rates, so you may clean up your business accordingly; isn't that it?

Mr. KELLY: Well, it says there will be a raise.

Mr. COTTON: Yes; that is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One other question. Mr. Cotton was interrogated with reference to water rates from Portland to San Francisco; do those rates vary frequently.

Mr. KELLY: Oh yes; water rates are up and down all the time; they are not fixed. They are higher now than I have ever known them since I have paid any attention to them, and they have been down as low as four dollars on the Columbia River, four dollars a thousand feet. At the time the $3.10 rate was put in by Mr. Markham, the water rate then was about—the charterers varied; steam schooners were getting, I think, about $5.50 and sailers about $5.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean $5.50 a ton or thousand feet?

Mr. KELLY: No, thousand feet. Everything that goes by water goes by the thousand feet, and everything that goes by rail except mining timbers goes by the ton, and this $3.10 rate was just a compromise so as to cover the water rate at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: When was that $3.10 rate put in and why was it made?

Mr. KELLY: It was put in to let the Valley mills ship in to Bay points.

870 Mr. COTTON: When?

Mr. KELLY: Well, it was when Markham was General Freight Agent here, I don't know just what year it was.

Mr. COTTON: That was about 1901, or prior?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I think it was prior to 1901, but I would not say positively.

Mr. COTTON: And has been in ever since, hasn't it?

Mr. KELLY: No, sir.

Mr. COTTON: It was taken out for a short period; how many months was that?

Mr. KELLY: Well, I think it was about six months, something like that.

Mr. COTTON: About six months, and raised to $5?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And then restored again?

Mr. KELLY: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Supposed to have been made in competition with the water movement from Portland, wasn't it?

Mr. KELLY: That was the basis of the rate; when it was put in it was supposed to just equal the water rate at that time?

(Witness excused.)

Com'r LANE: We will take an adjournment at this time until quarter past two.

PORTLAND, January 25, 1907—2 o'clock p. m.

J. F. MEYER, called as a witness, and having been duly sworn, testified:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Meyer, where do you live?

Mr. MEYER: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. MEYER: Car service agent for the O. R. & N. Company and the Southern Pacific Oregon line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far South do the lines you speak of as the Oregon lines of the Southern Pacific run?

871 Mr. MEYER: To Ashland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just a little ways this side of the boundary, is it not?

Mr. MEYER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you state in a general way what your duties are, Mr. Meyer?

Mr. MEYER: General handling of equipments and movement of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By handling of equipments you do not mean of course that you are the superintendent. You have not charge of trains, have you?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But have you charge of the distribution of cars?

Mr. MEYER: In a general way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, just what do you mean by a general way?

Mr. MEYER: Well, we have chief dispatchers that distribute cars on their respective districts, and when they have not got equipments they call on me.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you occupied that position, Mr. Meyer?

Mr. MEYER: On both lines?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. MEYER: Since July 1st, 1904.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to July 1, 1904, what was your position?

Mr. MEYER: Car service agent of the O. R. & N. line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For how long a period had you occupied the position?

Mr. MEYER: Ten years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who was the car service agent of the Southern Pacific then?

Mr. MEYER: I think it was Mr. Richards in San Francisco; I presume so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why do you presume that; don't you know?

Mr. MEYER: Well, that is right. He was there; superintendent of transportation, was his title.

872 Mr. SEVERANCE: He had charge then separately of handling the cars on the Southern Pacific as far north as Portland?

Mr. MEYER: At that time, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You assumed that additional duty on the 1st of July, 1904?

Mr. MEYER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of an organization have you in your office; that is, how do you handle the business, in a general way?

Mr. MEYER: I don't quite understand.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of records do you keep and what track do you keep of cars and what methods have you of distributing cars, and on whose requisition are they distributed?

Mr. MEYER: We call on our connections for equipments. The records of the cars themselves are kept in the auditor's office. The movement of individual cars, etc., is kept in the auditor's office. In the general supply of equipment we call on our connections for them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What do you mean by connections?

Mr. MEYER: Well, our connections like the Short Line, for instance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What other connection?

Mr. MEYER: Well, our immediate connection; that would be the extent of it; the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You call on them for cars for what purpose?

Mr. MEYER: For return loading to their line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Don't you send any of your equipments over other lines?

Mr. MEYER: We do, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, take a concrete example, take the mill of Mr. Kelly, who was on the stand just before lunch. He stated that he shipped a large amount of lumber to Southern California,

873 Colorado and Utah points. What method or rule, if any, have you with reference to furnishing equipments to Mr. Kelly?

Mr. MEYER: Conditions have a good deal to do with that.

Mr. SEVERENCE: Well explain; I want to get at the facts. You know better what to say than I do what to ask you.

Mr. MEYER: Well, take it at that time we endeavored to fill orders of that kind, where they go East, with foreign equipments. At this time when we are short of cars for our own business, we undertake to take care of that business with foreign cars and use our own cars for our own business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In doing that do you make any discrimination by reason of the lines that the traffic is routed over?

Mr. MEYER: We say to shippers that a Milwaukee car, if the load is East of Council Bluffs, should go over the Milwaukee.

Com'r LANE: You say that whether the car comes in empty or loaded to you, do you?

Mr. MEYER: That is the general rule. That is the rule. I believe that is common in railroad law, and has been in effect all the time.

Com'r LANE: Is not that general rule that the car should go back by the gateway that it came only when it comes to you empty?

Mr. MEYER: In other words you mean to say that we can take a Milwaukee car that comes to us loaded and deliver it to the Great Northern?

Com'r LANE: Yes.

Mr. MEYER: That is right.

Com'r LANE: If it comes to you empty, you are to send it back by the same gateway that it came?

Mr. MEYER: That is the idea, yes sir.

Com'r LANE: Do you know whether you were the first to enforce that rule out here?

Mr. MEYER: Which, returning the empty in that way?

874 Com'r LANE: Yes, the rule that the car shall return by its own gateway?

Mr. MEYER: No, I cannot say for that.

Com'r LANE: What effect have you found in the management of this bureau that the pooling of your cars has had so far as the supply of your own line with equipment is concerned?

Mr. MEYER: I think it has had a very decided effect to the advantage of the business. It makes freer movement of cars.

Com'r LANE: How far does your jurisdiction extend?

Mr. MEYER: It goes to Ashland, Oregon on the South, on the Oregon line and goes to Huntington on the East on the Navigation line.

Com'r LANE: Who is your superior?

Mr. MEYER: Mr. Buckley, General Superintendent.

Com'r LANE: Does he have general charge of all the equipments of all the associated lines?

Mr. MEYER: He is general superintendent, I report to him on the same territory.

Com'r LANE: Suppose that you have—I do not know that this is entirely within the scope of this inquiry, but I want to understand this system that you have here, because it has not been in effect elsewhere to the extent, nor is it perfected, I believe as it has been on your system.—When you find that you are in need of cars within your territory this side of Ashland, and that you have no cars yourself that you can draw in that territory, do you telegraph Mr. Buckley and he then draws cars directs cars to be moved from some other part of the system to you?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Com'r LANE: You do not follow that rule?

Mr. MEYER: No sir, I call on the immediate connection myself for cars.

Com'r LANE: That is to say you would call upon the Union Pacific for instance?

Mr. MEYER: No, I would call on the Oregon Short Line; that is our immediate connection.

875 Com'r LANE: And supposing they have none, would they pass that word along to the Union Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: I presume so.

Com'r LANE: You do not have any superior officer directing the car service, who, as it were, keeps his eye on the equipment of the whole system to whom you can report and through whom you can obtain diversion of cars from the Southern Pacific to California or from Omaha to Oregon, if it is necessary?

Mr. MEYER: Not myself.

Com'r LANE: You just simply make your demand upon your immediate connection?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: But you do tell Mr. O'Brien, do you not, from time to time—the General Manager—that you are not getting cars?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And then Mr. O'Brien corresponds with whom?

Mr. MEYER: Mr. O'Brien will correspond with either Mr. Bancroft or the Short Line, or Chicago?

Mr. COTTON: Who is at Chicago?

Mr. MEYER: Mr. Kruchschmitt.

Mr. COTTON: And Mr. Kruchschmitt has jurisdiction over all the Harriman lines?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Only he communicates generally, that is, when it is a general readjustment of the matter other than the connections, he does that through Mr. O'Brien?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: Well now, to whom do you report the number of cars that you have upon your system? Supposing you have a surplus of empties in your division.

Mr. MEYER: I generally confer with the General Superintendent or the General Manager on it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of what line?

Mr. MEYER: Of our own line, right here, Mr. O'Brien or Mr. Buckley.

876 Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not get any cars from the Northern Pacific at Silver Bow?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you send any other — their line that way, Northern Pacific cars?

Mr. MEYER: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any embargo placed against the Northern Pacific at that point?

Mr. MEYER: So far as we are concerned?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. MEYER: To go by Silver Bow?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. MEYER: We have never furnished any equipments to go that way. We have never furnished cars to go by Silver Bow.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never have?

Mr. MEYER: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is within the last two years?

Mr. MEYER: At any time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is not free interchange of cars between the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern and yourselves for through business, is there?

Mr. MEYER: In what way?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean this: that you do not permit your cars freely to go on Northern Pacific lines, nor their cars to come freely onto your lines?

Mr. MEYER: We let our cars go to the Northern Pacific when we are in shape to, and have supplied for equipments.

Mr. COTTON: How many cars does the Northern Pacific owe you at Portland to-day?

Mr. MEYER: I could not say how many there is to-day. The last checks we had it was something like 800 to 1,000 cars.

Mr. COTTON: That you have furnished the Northern Pacific at Portland 800 to 1000 cars more than they have returned to you?

Mr. MEYER: Yes.

877 Com'r LANE: Yes, the Northern Pacific has a surplus of foreign cars. Have you any demand for cars from Puget Sound to Portland?

Mr. MEYER: We have some demand for cars between here and Tacoma.

Com'r LANE: That is all, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you furnish your own equipments for through routing to the East over the Northern Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: You mean O. R. & N. Cars?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, or Southern Pacific. Suppose commodities originating in the Willamette Valley, say a hop shipment that the shipper desires to route to the East over the Northern Pacific to Portland. Do you furnish your own equipments in case the Northern Pacific is unable to send any car?

Mr. MEYER: Not generally speaking, we do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you furnish your own equipments when the car is routed East over the O. R. & N. and Union Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir, we furnish our cars for that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you furnish your own equipments if the car is routed by way of the Gulf and Sunset Route?

Mr. MEYER: All of these associated line cars you know move almost in any direction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, by the associated lines, you mean the Southern Pacific, the O. R. & N., the Short Line and the Union Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you treat all of the equipments belonging to any one of those lines as though it belonged to a single system?

Mr. MEYER: They are at home on any part of the associated lines; a Union Pacific car is at home on the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they are at home on the Southern Pacific and on the Short Line?

Mr. MEYER: I believe so, yes sir.

878 Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you place any restrictions upon the use of your equipment or movement over the Denver and Rio Grande from Ogden?

Mr. MEYER: No sir, not excepting as business demands. That is, in other words, if we have a congestion or are short of equipments or cars we naturally load them for our own trade.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What do you mean by your own trade?

Mr. MEYER: In other words we try to equalize the delivery and interchange of cars at the different junction points.

Com'r LANE: Is not that an extremely dangerous line of policy for the originating road to follow out? The road upon which a great volume of traffic originates? You do not figure upon there being a perfect equipoise between Eastern and Western business?

Mr. MEYER: No, we cannot get it down to an exact interchange but we hold it pretty close. We tried to direct the car shortage, when the shortage of cars is on.

Com'r LANE: There is more business that originates on these lines than Eastern business comes in, is there not?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir, our preponderance of tonnage is East bound.

Com'r LANE: Suppose that you followed out that rule of policy and deny a man a car, which goes off your line, unless you can get a car from a foreign line. Are you not hampering his business?

Mr. MEYER: If they get the other car to take its place it is an even proposition.

Com'r LANE: Then you get a perfect equality?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: But supposing you do not get a car?

Mr. MEYER: We would soon run out of equipments over here to take care of our business.

Com'r LANE: How can you get the car then, if you do not haul empties?

Mr. MEYER: We always do haul empties.

879 Com'r LANE: Then how many empties, or what is the proportion of empties that you would haul to the West for your East bound business?

Mr. MEYER: Our proportion of empties that we haul is pretty close on to twenty or thirty per cent.

Com'r LANE: Are those largely foreign cars?

Mr. MEYER: Well, they are largely foreign cars, yes sir; a good many foreign cars.

Com'r LANE: They must be nearly all foreign cars I suppose if they are destined for East bound business beyond your own line?

Mr. MEYER: Not necessarily. As I say, we use a good many associated line cars in East bound through business.

Com'r LANE: You let them go off your line freely excepting in times of congestion?

Mr. MEYER: That is the idea, yes sir.

Com'r LANE: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Meyer, do you permit the movement of cars from the Willamette Valley to the East over the Rio Grande from Ogden as freely as you do over the Union Pacific from Ogden?

Mr. MEYER: Will you repeat that, please.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I asked you if you permitted the use of cars from the Willamette Valley region East on the Southern Pacific as freely when the shipper desires to route over the Rio Grande from Ogden as you do when he desires to route over the Union Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: From the car standpoint, I do; that is, to the extent of cars that we get, you understand.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am not speaking of the cars you get. You have some cars of your own?

Mr. MEYER: We have some few.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Southern Pacific has cars?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And those cars are supposed to be used in the transportation of traffic, are they not?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you use those cars in transporting traffic over the Union Pacific, and the Southern Pacific, the Short Line and the Union Pacific?

880 Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you use them as freely if the traffic is routed by the Rio Grande from Ogden?

Mr. MEYER: We use them for Rio Grande business, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you use them as freely as you do for Union Pacific business or do you try to get the Rio Grande to send in cars?

Mr. MEYER: We try to get the Rio Grande to send in cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So you do discriminate as between the Rio Grande and the Union Pacific in the use of Southern Pacific cars going East?

Mr. MEYER: No, I would not say that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What do you mean by your answer?

Mr. MEYER: I say that when we have a good supply of cars there are no restrictions on any associated line cars moving East over the Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Suppose there is some shortage of cars; then do you impose a restriction on the Rio Grande when you do not on the Union Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: I cannot say that we do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you never done it?

Mr. MEYER: No, I do not recall that we have ever done that.

Com'r LANE: Your policy is to keep your cars at home on your own line and not let them get abroad?

Mr. MEYER: Yes, that is the idea.

Com'r LANE: And you treat the Union Pacific as your own line?

Mr. MEYER: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: And you treat the Denver and Rio Grande as a foreigner?

Mr. MEYER: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: But, if the Union Pacific——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Cotton, can not we proceed a little more orderly, without the interruption?

Mr. COTTON: Yes, I think we can.

881 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Meyer, I show you Meyer Exhibit 1. Did you issue that circular?

Mr. MEYER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I offer that Meyer Exhibit 1 in evidence, which I will read into the record. This is headed:

"Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company. Southern Pacific Lines in Oregon. Car Service Department. O. R. & N. Circular No. 287, S. T. Company Circular No. 86.

PORTLAND, OREGON, August 6, 1906.

To Dispatchers, Agents, Conductors:

Effective at once and until further notice, you will not permit any cars to load with D. & R. G., R. G. W. and Western Pacific Railway Company material shipments, also commercial lading, excepting cars that belong to those lines, or that route that way. We have taken up with them the necessity of furnishing cars for this business. This action becomes necessary because our own company material shipments, that is O. R. & N., O. S. L., U. P. and S. P., have not been billed promptly. It is desired that you explain this fully to all concerned in such a way that they cannot take exceptions. Also that we will not accept cars which are loaded for the above lines, excepting as indicated. If you are not certain as to the routing take it up with this office, although a rate card should be on all foreign cars. Acknowledge receipt on enclosed card.

J. F. MEYER,
Car Service Agent."

Mr. Meyer, do you think, having your recollection refreshed by that circular, that you made no distinction or discrimination, or have not made any at any time, between D. & R. G. and Union Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: I will say that when that circular was issued, it was issued through a misunderstanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who had the misunderstanding?

Mr. MEYER: That was a misunderstanding.

882 Mr. SEVERANCE: Between whom was the misunderstanding?

Mr. MEYER: Well, in a general way, when I get out instructions of that kind, I confer with our general superintendent, and other heads of departments, and issue these circulars. When this circular was issued, I found it was not the right thing, that it was a misunderstanding on my part in issuing it, the way I did issue it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With whom was the misunderstanding?

Mr. MEYER: And I think that circular was recalled, the portion of it anyway, within a very few days after it was issued.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you said it was the result of a misunderstanding. A misunderstanding between you and whom?

Mr. MEYER: With the General Manager and General Superintendent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What did you think the General Manager had said to you, which it turned out he had not said to you? What did you understand he said to you to make you issue this circular?

Mr. MEYER: The discussion generally came up on that proposition as it is in the circular, and I understand it that way; I understood that was the kind of circular I should issue, but it seems, after I did issue, it, that it was wrong.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you understood Mr. O'Brien, did you, that that was the kind of circular you should issue?

Mr. MEYER: Yes, or from Mr. Buckley, whoever it was that mentioned it. We were in conference together, and having some discussion on the subject.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And this circular was issued, was it, immediately after this conference?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir, or soon after; I don't know whether it was issued immediately after.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it usual or unusual for you to misunderstand your instructions, Mr. Meyer?

883 Mr. MEYER: Well, that is a very unusual thing that I misunderstand anything of that kind.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact that circular was withdrawn because of the protest of the Rio Grande people, and not because you had had a misunderstanding as to your instructions?

Mr. MEYER: Not to my recollection.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you sure of that?

Mr. MEYER: Quite sure of it.

Mr. COTTON: You have all four on the circulars there, have you not?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes sir, the originals of two, and copies of the other two.

Mr. COTTON: Let me look at the copies. (Examine- the copies.) They are all right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will show you exhibit- Meyer 2, Meyer 3 and Meyer 4, and ask you to state whether those are the supplements and the order canceling the first circular?

Mr. MEYER: I think they are right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: These being identified, I will read them in evidence in their order. Exhibit 2 is headed the same as the other, Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, Southern Pacific Lines in Oregon. Car Service Department. O. R. & M. Circular No. 287, S. P. Company Circular No. 86.

PORTLAND, OREGON, August 9, 1906.

To Dispatchers, Agents, Conductors:

Referring to the above circular, that portion prohibiting cars to load with commercial business via Rio Grande is hereby cancelled. Commercial shipments may be taken care of the same as heretofore. Acknowledge receipt on enclosed card.

(Signed) J. F. MEYER,
Car Service Agent.

884 Exhibit 3 is headed the same as the other is and is dated

PORTLAND, OREGON, August 15, 1906.

To Dispatchers, Agents, Conductors:

Instructions contained in above circular are hereby modified to the extent that only O. R. & N., O. S. L., U. P. and S. P. and other cars belonging to the Harriman line apply on shipments of R. G. W. and R. G. and Western Pacific Railway Company material shipments. Acknowledge receipt on enclosed card.

(Signed) J. F. MEYER,
Car Service Agent.

The last one, Meyer Exhibit 4 is dated the 29th of August and is headed the same as the others. It is addressed

To Dispatchers, Agents, Conductors:

Effective at once circular changes. O. R. & N. No. 287, S. P. No. 86, Supplement- No. 1 and No. 2, hereby cancelled. The matter of furnishing cars to load with R. G. W., D. & R. G. and Western Pacific Railway Company material should be handled the same as prior to issue of above circular. Acknowledge receipt on enclosed card.

(Signed) J. F. MEYER,
Car Service Agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom did you receive instructions to make the first modification of that order of yours?

Mr. MEYER: I think I got that from the general manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. O'Brien.

Mr. MEYER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom did you get instructions——

Mr. MEYER: I want to add to that answer. I want to supplement it a little bit; that is my recollection. It may be that after the circular was issued—well, that is about the way of it as near as 885 I can remember, that I got the instructions from the General Manager or the General Superintendent, I don't remember which one.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom did you receive instructions pursuant to which you issued the second supplement?

Mr. MEYER: I think the same source and the further fact that we were a little bit easier on some equipments.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom did you receive your instructions which resulted in cancelling this circular, which you did under date of August 29?

Mr. MEYER: Well, I cannot say positively, but the supply of cars was getting a little bit easier about that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now Mr. Meyer, you said a little while ago that you issued that original circular under a misunderstanding. Was that misunderstanding removed by the General Manager between the dates of the issue of the circular and the date of the first supplement?

Mr. MEYER: I cannot say off hand.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you state now what that misunderstanding consisted in? What did you include in your first order that was put in there under a misunderstanding?

Mr. MEYER: Commercial shipments.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Commercial shipments?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It was not necessary however, to prohibit the loading of shipments of material to be used by the D. & R. G., R. G. W. and Western Pacific in any cars except the cars belonging to those lines, was it?

Mr. MEYER: That was about the idea, but from the fact that we had taken up with the Rio Grande the necessity of furnishing cars for their company material shipments, we thought that so long as they wanted their material, it would be only right for them to furnish their equipment for it. We had a very heavy com-

886 pany material shipment of our own to take care of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, do you know anything about the Western Pacific, whether that is under construction or not?

Mr. MEYER: I understand so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You speak of it here in your circular; what was the nature of the material shipments that were to go down there that you desired to regulate by this order?

Mr. MEYER: I suppose it was everything in the line of material required in the construction of a railroad in the way of ties and lumber.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know anything about the Denver and Rio Grande people coming up here and being here at the time and protesting against this discrimination?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never heard of that?

Mr. MEYER: Only as hearsay.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I asked you if you knew anything about it. Did you hear of that from Mr. O'Brien?

Mr. MEYER: I heard of Mr. Schlacks being out here.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is his position in the Rio Grande?

Mr. MEYER: I believe he is general manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He was here about this time, was he not?

Mr. MEYER: I don't know whether it was at that time or later.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact sir that because of the representations of Mr. Schlacks made here, either at the time or shortly after you issued that circular that you withdrew?

Mr. MEYER: No, I cannot say as to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From what portion of the country here, were material shipments moving forward for use on the Rio Grande and and the Rio Grande Western and the Western Pacific?

887 Mr. MEYER: I guess pretty much all those mills in this territory have orders in there. I cannot remember what mills it was moving from.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you notify those mills that were selling material to the Rio Grande or the Western Pacific, before you issued this circular?

Mr. MEYER: Before I issued the circular?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you have any consultation with them to ascertain whether or not it would interfere wich their business?

Mr. MEYER: No sir, I do not as a rule deal with the mills direct myself at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did anybody else at your instance have any consultation with those mills to find out whether they would be incommoded by this rule before it was issued?

Mr. MEYER: Not that I remember.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you give a preference in furnishing cars to material shipments for the four Harriman lines as against commercial shipments?

Mr. MEYER: No sir, not excepting in cases where it is required—well, we do not; ordinarily speaking we do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you hear the testimony of Mr. Kelly this morning in that regard?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is your impression that Mr. Kelly is mistaken about that, is it?

Mr. MEYER: No sir, that part of it that he testified to, as to the car material shipments going to Chicago, we do give that preference; that is a little out of the ordinary of railroad material.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But he testified as to other railroad material. You desire to say, do you, that commercial loading from these mills here has the same privileges and the same rates and the same service as you give to material that is going from the same mills for use by the Harriman lines, in their own construction?

888 Mr. MEYER: Yes sir, ordinarily we do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that always so?

Mr. MEYER: Ordinarily, we do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is not my question, what you ordinarily do, I asked you if it is always true?

Mr. MEYER: Always, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your jurisdiction is over the Southern Pacific in Oregon. How do you distribute cars as between commercial loading on the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon and materials desired by the O. R. & N. or the Union Pacific; which gets the preference?

Mr. MEYER: There is no preference, generally speaking.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There are a good many times, are there not, when you are unable to furnisb all the cars that are demanded?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir, but they are supposed to take their turn, generally speaking; commercial orders take turns with railroad orders.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who puts in the railroad order?

Mr. MEYER: It is all put in with the agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where?

Mr. MEYER: The order for cars is placed with the agents.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Suppose the Union Pacific has bought some materials to use in construction, out here at a mill in the Willamette Valley. With whom does the Union Pacific communicate with reference to cars?

Mr. MEYER: Sometimes communicates with our office, but most of the time it is placed with the agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean the local agent?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean that the Union Pacific people in Omaha telegraph direct to the agent at such and such a place to get cars?

Mr. MEYER: As a rule they have an inspector in this territory, and he places the order with the agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is your understanding that in no
889 case does the Union Pacific get any preference in the order in which they receive cars over any other customer of the mill?

Mr. MEYER: Not now, no sir, and it has not for some time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, how long ago?

Mr. MEYER: Well, the general rules is that we do not do that, generally speaking.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know of instances where you have done it?

Mr. MEYER: I cannot recall any right now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know, as a matter of fact, that you have at times given a preference to the railroad, and that they have received cars out of their order? Don't you know that is so, Mr. Meyer?

Mr. MEYER: Only as it was on some rush shipments, some important shipment.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who decides whether the shipment is important? The mill owner or the railroad company?

Mr. MEYER: We generally get that from the railroad company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Suppose the purchaser of commercial loading is putting up a big building somewhere; he might think that his shipment was important, might he not?

Mr. MEYER: I presume so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But if in the judgment of the Union Pacific railroad its shipment was important it would take precedence would it not?

Mr. MEYER: Well, I think we give the commercial men as much benefit as we do the railroad company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am not asking you about benefits. I am asking you whether as a matter of fact, if the railroad company announces that it has a shipment that is "important" as you put it, it does not get the cars in preference to the commercial loading as it was practically testified to this morning by Mr. Kelly?

Mr. MEYER: We try to take care of the orders in their turn.

890 Com'r LANE: You have no system of car apportionment here?

Mr. MEYER: No, sir, only as the business demands it.

Com'r LANE: How do you distribute your cars? According to the demands put in by shippers?

Mr. MEYER: Yes, sir.

Com'r LANE: You do not divide up your mills and manufacturing establishments, and give each one its proportion in turn?

Mr. MEYER: We try to take care of the loads ordered in the order in which it is supposed they are received. Of course individual orders are not placed with me; the individual orders are placed with the agent.

Com'r LANE: But you have no way in which you appraise the capacity of the mill by a certain number of cars each week?

Mr. MEYER: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who places the orders ordinarily with the agent for the shipment out of the mills; that is the commercial shipments?

Mr. MEYER: Who places it with the agent?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. MEYER: I suppose the mill does.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have had a good deal of trouble this year with car shortage, have you not?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But irrespective of that trouble you do not remember any case now excepting in the case of material for refrigerator cars, where the railroad company has been given any preference over commercial shipments?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not remember any of them?

Mr. MEYER: I do not remember any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, in this circular, Meyer Exhibit 1, you say the action becomes necessary because our own company material shipments—that is, the O. R. & N., O. S. L., U. P. and S. P. have not been filled promptly. Do I understand that you have no 891 central authority over the distribution of these cars, except Mr. Kruppschmitt?

Mr. MEYER: We take care of the local business out here. When it comes to a matter of not knowing what to do it is referred to the general superintendent or general manager and he in turn, I presume refers it to Mr. Kruppschmitt.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have frequent conferences with the General Superintendent, Mr. O'Brien here about the matter of distribution, of course?

Mr. MEYER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have a set of printed rules applicable to the Harriman system cars, the handling of cars among the lines of the Harriman System?

Mr. MEYER: Will you please repeat that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know there are in existence among all the roads a regular set of car service rules; you are familiar with them?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir general car service rules.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, have the officials of the various Harriman lines a set of rules governing the handling of the equipment of those lines?

Mr. MEYER: Do you mean all the associated lines?

Mr. SEVERANCE: What do you mean by the associated lines?

Mr. MEYER: The Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, O. R. & N., Oregon Short Line, and Sunset Lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have they printed rules?

Mr. MEYER: No printed rules, no sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you no rules?

Mr. MEYER: Not with this associated line equipment.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But have you not any kind of organization, any printed or written or typewritten instructions that are general instructions, applicable to the handling of business?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then by associated lines you mean this, do you not, Mr. Meyer—if I am not right, correct me—that you as 892 an official of the Southern Pacific and of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, are instructed to treat all the cars of the Harriman System—that is, the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company and Southern Pacific System—as though the whole of them together constituted one system; you treat them all as your own cars?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As distinguished from the cars of outside lines?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you make no distinction in the handling of that equipment by reason of the fact that it may belong to one line or the other?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Meyer, an associated line car is at home no matter what its initials may be, wherever it is on an associated line; is that it?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Before that arrangement took place an O. R. & N. car was at home on the O. R. & N.?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: A Southern Pacific car on the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: A Short Line car on the Short Line, and a Union Pacific car on the Union Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And the car service rules govern and regulate the movement of all these cars between the several associated lines?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: If you turned over an O. R. & N. car to the Southern Pacific before this arrangement took place, the Southern Pacific could not load that car for California, could it, they would have to return it to you at Portland?

Mr. MEYER: Treat it as a foreign car, yes sir,

Mr. COTTON: If you received a car from the Oregon Short
893 Line at Huntington you could not turn it over—you could not use it on your own line except as a foreign car?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: And you could not turn it over to the Northern Pacific at Wallula, or the Great Northern at Spokane?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: Or to the Southern Pacific at Portland?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: But you can now.

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And the same of course is true of Union Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Whenever you find an associated line car bearing any initial you treat it just exactly as they treat an O. R. & N. Car?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And you draw no distinction between the O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific lines in Oregon?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: Referring to these circulars, the first one is dated August 6th. At that time do you know what rate the company was making, the O. R. & N. and Oregon Short Line, on D. & R. G. and Denver Pacific Company material?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: You don't know what rate of charge they made?

Mr. MEYER: You mean freight rate?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: Was that company material regarded and treated as commercial lading?

Mr. MEYER: I think so.

Mr. COTTON: You refer here to D. & R. G. Company material, and also to commercial lading in your circular. August 6th
894 you say "Effective at once and until further notice you will not permit any cars to load with D. & R. G., R. G. W. and Western Pacific Company material shipments," and also commercial lading, excepting in certain cases. Did the agent know the difference between commercial lading and D. & R. G. material?

Mr. MEYER: Excepting as it would be classified or billed perhaps or something of that kind.

Mr. COTTON: You do not know what freight rate was made on D. & R. G. Company material at that time, do you?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Com'r LANE: Is that 1906?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Com'r LANE: Have you a classification now for company material, D. & R. G. material?

Mr. COTTON: It was taken out on the 29th of August.

Com'r LANE: You do not have any particular rate on Company material as distinguished from any other material on a foreign line?

Mr. COTTON: We did have up to the 29th of August half a cent a ton a mile, was it not, Mr. Miller?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Com'r LANE: You have not had it since?

Mr. COTTON: No, sir, and we have not got it now. Now, on August 9th, Mr. Meyer, your attention was called to the fact that your circular of August 6th was too broad and included commercial lading as well as D. & R. G. Company material?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: From some source, you have forgotten where, and you then issued that circular three days later?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: On the 15th of August, four days after, you issued this circular, and I will read it and ask you to tell me what it means:

"Instructions contained in the above circular are hereby 895 modified to the extent that only O. R. & N., O. S. L., U. P. and S. P. and other cars belonging to the Harriman lines must not apply on shipments of R. G. W., D. & R. G. and Western Pacific Railway Company material shipments."

What did you mean by that? That you could use other foreign cars?

Mr. MEYER: That we would use other foreign cars on the return movement home.

Mr. COTTON: By that you meant that if you had a foreign car on your line, any foreign car, which loaded back to the D. & R. G., they could load it with D. & R. G. Company material?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And it did not relate solely to D. & R. G. cars themselves?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: Now on the 29th of August you issued this circular:

"Effective at once, Circular O. R. & N. No. 287, Southern Pacific No. 86, Supplements 1 and 2 is hereby cancelled. The matter of furnishing cars to load with R. G. W., D. & R. G. and Western Pacific Company material should be handled the same as prior to the issuing of the above circular."

Do you know what freight rates that D. & R. G. W. commenced paying on that day?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: You don't know anything about that?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: On the 29th of August you allowed D. & R. G. Company and D. & R. G. Western and Denver Pacific material to move in any kind of a car exactly the same as commercial shipments?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Without any distinction of any kind, character or description?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: Was there a new tariff in effect that day respecting that material?

Mr. MEYER: I do not know.

896 Mr. COTTON: Prior to the issuance of any of these circulars you had applied to D. & R. G. Company to send you empty cars to load with their company material?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: But they had not been able to furnish you the cars?

Mr. MEYER: They could not furnish them.

Mr. COTTON: And you had furnished them at Ogden more cars than you had received from them?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And they owed you cars?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir. Our deliveries there were in excess of receipts.

Mr. COTTON: And these cars, which you had delivered to them had been largely loaded with their company material?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And you thought it was about time for them to hustle up a few cars of their own?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And for the purpose of bringing about that result you issued these circulars?

Mr. MEYER: That is it.

Mr. COTTON: You keep an account. If you should load cars here and not get any empties from the East about how long would this road operate taking the ordinary quota of cars, which it is necessary to do its general business?

Mr. MEYER: Well, we would operate about thirty days, probably.

Mr. COTTON: And at the end of that time you would not have a car on the road?

Mr. MEYER: We would not have a car left on the Navigation line.

Mr. COTTON: Therefore, it is necessary for you to receive at all times empty cars?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And you keep track at Huntington, do you not, of the number of empties, which you receive from the Short 897 Line, and the number of loads you deliver?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And whenever they begin to owe you too many cars you call on them for cars, do you not?

Mr. MEYER: That is right.

Mr. COTTON: You owe them quite a bunch of cars now, don't you?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Of course this applies both ways; you keep track both of empties and loads?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: How many cars do you owe the Short Line at Huntington now?

Mr. MEYER: Approximately perhaps 300 or 400.

Mr. COTTON: Do you keep track with the Northern Pacific?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: You deliver cars to the Northern Pacific at Portland?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: How many cars does the Northern Pacific owe you at Portland at the present time?

Mr. MEYER: Approximately about 800.

Mr. COTTON: In other words they have received 800 more cars from you than they have given back?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: How long a time is that for?

Mr. MEYER: That is beginning about last March, February or March, and up to—I have not checked it up very lately, but up to the 15th of November, along in there.

Mr. COTTON: From February or March up to the present time they have gradually fallen behind in returning cars to you until they now owe you about 800?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you mean now, or the 15th of November?

898 Mr. MEYER: The last checks I made was about that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So you do not know just what it is now?

Mr. COTTON: Do you know about what it is now?

Mr. MEYER: I think it must stand pretty close to the same figure yet.

Mr. COTTON: They have not equalized very much?

Mr. MEYER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: Do you deliver cars loaded to the Great Northern at Spokane?

Mr. MEYER: We do.

Mr. COTTON: For delivery to Seattle?

Mr. MEYER: In their own equipment at the present time.

Mr. COTTON: Do you receive cars from the Great Northern at Spokane connecting from the East?

Mr. MEYER: Do we receive cars from the Great Northern?

Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. MEYER: We receive some cars.

Mr. COTTON: Loaded and empties both?

Mr. MEYER: Only loaded.

Mr. COTTON: But you load back cars that way?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: Only their equipment?

Mr. MEYER: Foreign cars that route that way also.

Com'r LANE: Not your own?

Mr. MEYER: Sometimes we let our own cars go to the Great Northern when we have a supply of them.

Mr. COTTON: You equalize there and keep track of course?

Mr. MEYER: We aid to equalize at Spokane.

Mr. COTTON: In other words there is a free interchange of cars except where somebody begins to get very much in your debt?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Or when you get in debt to somebody else?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

899 Mr. COTTON: And then, as gentlemen say, you try to square up a bit?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: That is what you mean by this occasional stopping of free interchange?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: That has been going on for some months, has it?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: You have not given them any number of Union Pacific or associated line cars for a long time, have you?

Mr. MEYER: We have tried for a long time to equalize the interchange of cars; more particularly at this time when we are so short. In other words we cannot send too many of the cars off the line, because we would not have any left for our own business.

Com'r LANE: Do you know whether there is any rule by which you can compel the Northern Pacific or the Great Northern or any other line with which you connect to return cars to you. As a practical railroad man, what would be your suggestion on that point?

Mr. MEYER: Well, I don't think that is hardly practicable. I believe in the pooling of equipments.

Com'r LANE: You think it would be a good idea to extend the system that you have over all of the associated Southern Pacific lines, to the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific and all other lines?

Mr. MEYER: I believe in the general pooling of all equipments; I believe that is the proper thing to do. In fact, there is an association started in Chicago now among some of the lines.

Com'r LANE: Is there any method you have to suggest by which, except by the increase of per diem, that you could get these cars returned to you?

Mr. MEYER: No, I do not know of any plan that would work it out.

Com'r LANE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Some question was asked you about Silver Bow. Is that in your jurisdiction?

900 Mr. MEYER: No.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what interchange of equipment takes place between the Oregon Short Line and the Northern Pacific at Silver Bow?

Mr. MEYER: I do not.

Mr. COTTON: But you interchange freely between Northern Pacific here do you not?

Mr. MEYER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were asked about the reason for the issuance of these circulars and you stated it was because you were hard up for cars. During your administration have you been compelled to issue any similar circular as referring to other railroads; that is material shipments of other lines than the D. & R. G. and allied lines?

Mr. MEYER: We have instructions out now, not to load any of our cars to the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am asking you if you had at any time prior to the issuance of this circular of the 6th of August ever issued such a circular with reference to the material shipments to any other railroad?

Mr. MEYER: I cannot recall any now, but no doubt we have issued them from time to time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any recollection of any such thing?

Mr. MEYER: No, I cannot recall it now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had you ever, prior to that time, or have you since, issued any circulars directing that commercial loadings should not be made where a car was routed over a certain line, unless it was made in the cars of that line?

Mr. MEYER: Will you please repeat that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you ever issued any other circular like this one of August 6th prohibiting commercial loading where the cars were to route a certain way, otherwise than in cars of that line? For instance, here you won't allow commercial loadings over 901 D. & R. G. unless they furnish D. & R. G. cars. Did you ever apply that rule to any other railroad?

Mr. MEYER: We had a rule in effect of that kind here some number of years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Applying to what road?

Mr. MEYER: With the Oregon Short Line, practically the same thing. A carload that came west over the Union Pacific could not go over the D. & R. G. and vice versa. We were confined to equipment routed D. & R. G. for D. & R. G. loading.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But that is not what this circular says. How long ago did you have that regulation?

Mr. MEYER: That has been several years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, how long ago?

Mr. MEYER: Oh, off-hand, perhaps five or six years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Wasn't it longer ago than that?

Mr. COTTON: Have you the circular in your office now, Mr. Meyer?

Mr. MEYER: I don't know; I think perhaps I could find it, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you at any time, since 1900 or 1901, five or six years ago, or six or seven years ago, ever had any such rule in force?

Mr. MEYER: Similar to that one?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, as applied to Union Pacific. You say you had one that applied to Union Pacific, have you had such a one in the last six or seven years?

Mr. MEYER: Excepting as I said a minute ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But, Mr. Meyer you testified a moment ago that five or six years ago you issued similar instructions so that you would not furnish cars for Union Pacific shipments unless they were U. P. Cars or that routed that way, and the same as to the Rio Grande. Now are you sure about that sir; have you done that within five or six years?

Mr. MEYER: Well, it might be longer than that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Don't you know it was before the Union Pacific bought the Short Line that that was done?

902 Mr. MEYER: That might be; I could not say off hand.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.
Mr. COTTON: Mr. Meyer, will you look and see if you can find that circular?
Mr. MEYER: Yes.
Mr. COTTON: Prior to this pooling arrangement where every car was at home on the associated lines, did you ever issue wires or circulars or directions against the Short Line similar to this D. & R. G. circular?
Mr. MEYER: I cannot recall it positively.
Mr. COTTON: Will you look and see?
Mr. MEYER: Yes.
Mr. COTTON: That is all.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Witness excused.

R. H. JENKINS, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?
Mr. JENKINS: Portland.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?
Mr. JENKINS: Chief Clerk in the Freight office of the Northern Pacific.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you occupied that position?
Mr. JENKINS: Since the 1st of September of last year, last September.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that what was your business?
Mr. JENKINS: I was a year with the Northwestern Improvement Company.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And prior to that?
Mr. JENKINS: Prior to that I was with the Harriman lines, the O. R. & N.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What position did you fill with the Harriman lines?
903 Mr. JENKINS: Various positions. I was at one time freight solicitor for the Harriman lines, on the Street and I was again Chief Clerk in the General Agent's office.
Mr. SEVERANCE: When were you freight solicitor on the street?
Mr. JENKINS: From about 1898, up to about two years and a half ago, I think.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to two years and a half ago, did the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N. have separate solicitors out?
Mr. JENKINS: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Have they since that time?
Mr. JENKINS: No, sir, I think not.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Which company did you work for when you were freight solicitor?
Mr. JENKINS: The O. R. & N. Co.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What were the instructions or directions after 1901, as to the soliciting of traffic on the Atlantic seaboard and from the country West of the Atlantic seaboard, given to the agents of the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. JENKINS: As to what route they should move over, do you mean?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. JENKINS: Well, the impression we gave was that is was desirable that Atlantic seaboard business should move by Sunset Route if possible. If not, handle it by Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And as to shipments originating West of the Atlantic seaboard?

Mr. JENKINS: Those were to move by Union Pacific if we could get them that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What change was made in the personnel of the soliciting agent at the time you say they ceased to have separate solicitors?

Mr. JENKINS: I came off the street and went into the office as chief clerk for Mr. Morse. Mr. McCusker went on the street when I went into the office.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He went on the street for both lines do you mean?

904 Mr. JENKINS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was it you went into the office, and McCusker commenced to solicit for both lines?

Mr. JENKINS: About two years last November. I think it was in the fall of the year about November. I was in the office about a year before I quit the O. R. & N. Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Jenkins, it appears, by some of the testimony here that the Ogden gate-way was closed as to shipments by way of Sacramento. When was that?

Mr. JENKINS: I do not remember just the time. I should say along in 1902 somewhere.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It was while you were still with the Southern Pacific or the O. R. & N. Company?

Mr. JENKINS: While I was still with the O. R. & N. Company, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Witness excused.

W. C. McBRIDE, called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:—

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?

Mr. McBRIDE: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. McBRIDE: General Agent for the D. & R. G.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been employed by the D. & R. G.?

Mr. McBRIDE: About ten or twelve years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of business do you transact for your Company at Portland?

Mr. McBRIDE: The duties incidental to a general agent's business; the securing of freight and passenger traffic, etc.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of traffic do you work for here?

905 Mr. MCBRIDE: All classes of traffic, freight and passenger.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Moving both ways?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Both ways.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you give me an idea how the business of the D. & R. G. compares now with what it was prior to 1901 out of Portland and the Willamette Valley?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I could not give any per cents. I might illustrate it in other ways. Have you reference to figures?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, if you have any figures; if not give us percentages.

Mr. MCBRIDE: I can only from memory, illustrating it by taking two years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Go ahead.

Mr. MCBRIDE: In the year 1900 from the Willamette Valley we secured in round numbers 27,000 bales of hops, or the equivalent of 320 carloads, of which about 280 cars went by Sacramento and Ogden and about 40 cars came by Portland and the O. R. & N. and Short Line. In the year 1902, or one year after the so-called consolidation we secured less than 30 carloads of hops from the same territory.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did they move?

Mr. MCBRIDE: By the O. R. & N. and Oregon Short Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is your business now from the Willamette Valley?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Nothing to be compared with what it was in 1901 and prior.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any difference in the extent of the soliciting you did for business in 1900 and in 1902; that is, do you still solicit that territory?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Oh, certainly, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Any less actively than you did before?

Mr. MCBRIDE: No sir, more so; or at least as much.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It appears by your statement that the 906 bulk of the traffic in hops that you secured at that time was routed over the Southern Pacific by Sacramento. Does any traffic go that way now from the Willamette Valley?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Not Sacramento and Ogden; no sir; not to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is the division line, if you know, on the Southern Pacific as to the traffic moving to the East, if there is any division?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Ashland, if I understand.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, from Ashland this way?

Mr. MCBRIDE: From Ashland North it moves via Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the distance from Ashland to Portland?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I think it is about 340 miles; but I am not positive.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know the distance from Portland by the Southern Pacific route to Ogden?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I should think it was in round numbers about 1350 miles; in that neighborhood.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know the distance by O. R. & N. and Short Line?

Mr. MCBRIDE: About 890 miles, or something in that neighborhood.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say that all traffic that originates North of Ashland goes by Portland?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what part of the Willamette Valley are the bulk of the hops raised, taking Salem as an example?

Mr. MCBRIDE: In the vicinity of Salem.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Salem is 90 miles from here?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Salem is 53 miles from Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And so that it appears the Southern Pacific Company secures 53 miles to Ogden instead of 1300 miles to Ogden, as formerly?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember when the Ogden gateway was closed, and have you a circular about it?

907 Mr. MCBRIDE: To all intents and purposes it was closed in the early summer, if I recollect right, of 1902. It was closed permanently, however, locked, on September 1, 1902.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you a circular with you?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I have a circular.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you let me have it? Was this circular which you have handed me, issued at that time?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I presume so, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the original of it?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir, I took that from my file.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From the files in your office?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will read this into the record. It is headed:

Southern Pacific Company

(Oregon Lines).

TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT,
PORTLAND, ORE., Sept. 1, 1902.

Circular No. F-48.

Closing of Sacramento-Ogden Route on Oregon Lines Business.

To agents and others interested:

An understanding has been reached with Rio Grande lines to handle all business to and from points on the Oregon lines of this Company interchanged with Rio Grande Western Railway at Ogden via Portland and Huntington, and effective today, the Sacramento-Ogden route is closed for such business.

Joint tariffs of these Companies issued, Nos. 33-U and 35-U, also Transcontinental Freight Bureau Tariff will be so amended, and on and after this date agents will not accept for shipment via Sacramento any business when routed via Ogden East in connection with the Union Pacific or Rio Grande Railways.

W. E. COMAN,
General Freight Agent.

908 Mr. SEVERANCE: How is business of the Rio Grande affected otherwise than the hop business since 1901; I mean the business out of Portland?

Mr. MCBRIDE: In about the same ratio, East bound business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901 did Rio Grande business solicited by your people here move over both the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific via Sacramento?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there, or was there not, any competition between the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N. to secure the business prior to 1901?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I was not here, Mr. Severance, prior to 1901, and I cannot speak as to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were not personally in charge?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I was not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did you come here?

Mr. MCBRIDE: In August, 1902.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was your personal knowledge of those figures obtained from the records in your office?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You keep a set of records in your office, do you?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of which you are the custodian; they are in your charge, are they?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you solicit lumber shipments in the Willamette Valley?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is your lumber traffic now?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Very light from that territory.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What makes your difficulty in getting traffic there now?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Adverse influence of the Harriman lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Adverse influence, how exerted and by whom, representing the Harriman lines?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Agents; through local favors.

909 Mr. SEVERANCE: What about the furnishing of cars to move traffic over your line, Mr. McBride?

Mr. MCBRIDE: At certain times they are restricted, but not often.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember of the issuance of this circular on the 6th of August which I called Mr. Meyer's attention to?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How soon after that was issued did you hear of it?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I heard of it right away, probably the same day or the day after; immediately.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there any representative among the general officers of the D. & R. G. here at the time?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Not at the time the circular was issued.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How soon afterwards?

Mr. MCBRIDE: The circular was issued on the 6th of August and our Vice-President came here some time during the latter part of the month; I can't recall the date.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know of your own knowledge of any representations made by him to the O. R. & N. or Southern Pacific people with reference to that circular?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I have heard that the——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you present at any interview?

Mr. MCBRIDE: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You keep track of the destination of traffic from its origin. Is that part of your business?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Such as moves to our line, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you a pretty fair knowledge of the movement of all traffic, the way it goes?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Oh, generally speaking.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How are hops usually moved to the Atlantic seaboard?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Under normal conditions the bulk from the Valley I would say would go by Sunset.

Mr. SEVERANCE: During what years have they moved by Sunset since you have been in Portland?

910 Mr. MCBRIDE: More or less every year; less this year than prior.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This year how have they generally moved?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I believe the bulk, probably a large percentage of them, will go through Portland, and East by O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you secure any traffic at Portland that comes in by boat from the Willamette Valley?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What class of traffic?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Hops.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What percentage of hops that you move come in here by boat?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Thus far this season the largest per cent.; I should say 75% as an estimate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what point are those hops destined that you have shipped, or are now shipping, over that line? That is, I mean what territory?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Various points through the East. Recent shipments have been consigned to New York, and some to London.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How do they, as a rule, move East after leaving your lines at Denver or Colorado Springs?

Mr. MCBRIDE: By the Rock Island; the application of rates over the Southern Pacific lines South of Portland apply East of Colorado common points via Union Pacific and Rock Island only.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think that is all.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Schlacks was here about the first of September?

Mr. McBRIDE: He was here the latter part of August, to the best of my recollection.

Mr. COTTON: By the latter part of August you mean about what day in the month?

Mr. McBRIDE: Well I could not say. Probably somewhere from the 18th to the 28th or 25th, in that neighborhood. I am 911 not prepared to give the exact date he was here. He was here several days.

Mr. COTTON: You do not know exactly, but your impression is that it was after the 18th?

Mr. McBRIDE: I would not say positively.

Mr. COTTON: It was certainly after the 9th?

Mr. McBRIDE: It was while the circular was in effect on company material.

Mr. COTTON: But long after it had been taken out on commercial lading?

Mr. McBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: There was no difficulty about getting it out on commercial lading, was there?

Mr. McBRIDE: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: That you understood?

Mr. McBRIDE: I understood that with Mr. Meyer.

Mr. COTTON: That was a pure mistake?

Mr. McBRIDE: I didn't understand that that was a mistake.

Mr. COTTON: You didn't so understand?

Mr. McBRIDE: I didn't understand that it was issued through an error, no sir.

Mr. COTTON: Did you talk to anybody about it?

Mr. McBRIDE: I talked to Mr. Meyer about it.

Mr. COTTON: You didn't talk to Mr. O'Brien?

Mr. McBRIDE: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: It was in for three days and then taken out?

Mr. McBRIDE: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: But you were about the only person you knew of that talked about it?

Mr. McBRIDE: I don't know of anyone else excepting our purchasing agent; our special timber agent was here at the time looking after our company shipments.

Mr. COTTON: But he didn't get his end of it out, did he?

Mr. McBRIDE: No sir; it affected him more than the commercial end.

Mr. COTTON: You could get out the part that really af-
912 fected you, the commercial loading, without any apparent difficulty, except bringing it to the attention of Mr. Meyer?

Mr. McBRIDE: Of Mr. Meyer.

Com'r LANE: Did they haul any empties for the D. & R. G. to take East bound business?

Mr. McBRIDE: Yes sir; at certain times, when it was necessary. We have done it.

Mr. COTTON: Now in that connection, Mr. McBride, yau have a record of the movement of stuff you have delivered to the Short Line at Ogden in the last year, have you not? That is, destined for this country?

Mr. McBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And, as a matter of fact, the D. & R. G. lines have delivered to the O. R. & N. during the last year 9,000 tons of freight?

Mr. McBRIDE: I know the D. & R. G. does not deliver freight to the O. R. & N.

Mr. COTTON: But I mean freight that originated on, and was delivered by, the D. & R. G. to the Short Line?

Mr. McBRIDE: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: And afterwards delivered by the Short Line to the O. R. & N. Of such freight there has been about 9,000 tons delivered to the O. R. & N.?

Mr. McBRIDE: I can't recall the number of tons.

Mr. COTTON: That is about it, isn't it?

Mr. McBRIDE: I don't reduce it to tons in my figures.

Mr. COTTON: Pounds, carloads, anyway?

Mr. McBRIDE: I could not say as to the amount. Your figures might not coincide with mine. I don't figure the tonnage.

Mr. COTTON: How do you figure?

Mr. McBRIDE: I figure in carloads.

Mr. COTTON: Well how many carloads; what deliveries in carloads have been made of that kind at Huntington to the O. R. & N.?

Mr. McBRIDE: For what length of time?

Mr. COTTON: During the year 1905?

Mr. McBRIDE: I could not say, sir, off-hand.

913 Mr. COTTON: Approximately.

Mr. McBRIDE: I could not even approximate.

Mr. COTTON: Would you say that Mr. Miller's figures of 9,000 tons delivered to us by you, and 110,000 tons delivered by us to you were out of the way or not?

Mr. McBRIDE: If they are taken from Mr. Miller's records I would say they were correct.

Mr. COTTON: I mean from your knowledge of the business.

Mr. McBRIDE: The East bound movement certainly is very much heavier than West bound.

Mr. COTTON: From your knowledge of the business you would think about 10,000 tons one way and 110,000 tons the other way would be about the relationship, would you not?

Mr. McBRIDE: I would not want to say until I checked it up; I could not.

Mr. COTTON: From your general knowledge of the business you would think it was about that, would you not?

Mr. McBRIDE: I would say so.

Mr. COTTON: Did you furnish empties to us to equalize that shipment?

Mr. McBRIDE: No sir, our deliveries were to the Short Line. We furnished the Oregon Short Line a great many thousand tons.

Mr. COTTON: Yes, but those cars didn't come out here, did they?

Mr. McBRIDE: They came to the Oregon Short Line.

Mr. COTTON: And the Short Line had to haul them out here empty in order to get your traffic, didn't they?

Mr. McBRIDE: I don't know what the Short Line does with them. We turned them over a large number.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what the interchange between your road and the Short Line is, as to the relative relationship of each?

Mr. McBRIDE: I don't know in tons, no sir.

Mr. COTTON: In carloads, for 1905?

914 Mr. McBRIDE: No, I do not. I don't keep track of the amount of tonnage moved into the Oregon Short Line's territory, but I know it is quite heavy on account of the coke in Montana.

Mr. COTTON: That coke moves in what class of cars?

Mr. McBRIDE: As a rule in box-cars.

Mr. COTTON: And that goes up to Butte, Montana, doesn't it?

Mr. McBRIDE: To Anaconda and Butte.

Mr. COTTON: It doesn't go out on the Short Line west of Pocatello?

Mr. McBRIDE: No sir, but the cars are on the Short Line.

Mr. COTTON: About how far is it from Butte to Huntington?

Mr. McBRIDE: 264 plus 326 miles.

Mr. COTTON: But you know, as a matter of fact, don't you, that under the car service rules the Short Line could not deliver these cars to us at Huntington, but must return them to you at the point at which they received them?

Mr. McBRIDE: I am not positive as to that. As to the relations between the Short Line and the D. & R. G. on that thing.

Mr. COTTON: You have a gate-way open at the present time, have you not, via Huntington and Ogden?

Mr. McBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And that route is how much shorter than the route around by the way of Sacramento from Portland or the Willamette Valley?

Mr. McBRIDE: Oh, it is probably 450 miles, roughly speaking.

Mr. COTTON: Is the train service on the Southern Pacific faster than that on the O. R. & N. and the Short Line?

Mr. McBRIDE: No sir, I would not think so. Do you refer to the freight service or passenger?

Mr. COTTON: Freight service.

Mr. McBRIDE: You mean as between here and Ogden via the different roads?

915 Mr. COTTON: Yes.

Mr. McBRIDE: I should think the O. R. & N. would be the shorter route and the service better.

Mr. COTTON: About how many days shorter would you think?

Mr. McBRIDE: Probably two days under ordinary conditions, probably three.

Mr. COTTON: Are there any grades down there in the Siskiyou Mountains and over the Sierra Nevada Mountains on the Ogden route?

Mr. McBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And the other way it is practically a water level, with the exception of the Blue Mountains, isn't it?

Mr. McBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: The rates are the same, are they not, as they are by the Sacramento gate-way?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir, to my knowledge.

Mr. COTTON: You still have joint rates?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Through bills of lading and through loading?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: From Portland and points in the Willamette Valley?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Would you say that this route via Ogden and Huntington is a better or worse route than the route via Sacramento?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I would say it was a better route.

Mr. COTTON: And it has been open to you during all this period of time?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And freely?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: For any business you could get out over it?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: You have not been embarrassed in getting 916 business here by the difficulties of the Sacramento gate-way?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Not particularly by the closing of the Sacramento gate-way; no sir.

Mr. COTTON: Have you been at all by the closing of the Sacramento gate-way?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I would not say that we have been embarrassed by the closing of the Sacramento gate-way, no sir.

Mr. COTTON: Wherein, if at all, has your embarrassment existed in the movement of freight from Portland?

Mr. MCBRIDE: As I said, the attitude of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. COTTON: From Portland. I am taking it from Portland alone now.

Mr. MCBRIDE: I will say it was the influence of the O. R. & N.

Mr. COTTON: That is among the merchants and shippers here?

Mr. MCBRIDE: I am speaking of East-bound. You say the movement of freight from Portland.

Mr. COTTON: Well the movement of freight from Portland. The influence of the O. R. & N. on mill men and people of that kind, you think?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: And that is the same reason which you think prevails in the Willamette Valley?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: But other than this adverse influence of rival agents, the transportation facilities which have been given you whenever you got the business have not been impaired or hampered in any way whatsoever?

Mr. MCBRIDE: No sir, after we have secured it, and it is in transit it moves freely.

Mr. COTTON: That is all, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. McBride, the traffic originating in the Willamette Valley; the only one of the Harriman lines which 917 comes in immediate touch with it is the Southern Pacific at the point of origin. That is right, is it?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have the assistance of the agents in the Willamette Valley to secure the routing of traffic over the Rio Grande East of Ogden?

Mr. MCBRIDE: The assistance?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. MCBRIDE: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the attitude of the agents at the initial points in the Willamette Valley in that regard?

Mr. MCBRIDE: They look upon us as a competitor.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To whom do the shippers in the Willamette Valley have to apply for their cars?

Mr. MCBRIDE: To the local station agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are those the same agents that look upon you as a competitor?

Mr. MCBRIDE: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Before the Southern Pacific and O. R. & N. were working together were the Southern Pacific agents in the Willamette Valley——

Mr. COTTON: Mr. McBride was not here then, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, you were not here then—what was your talk with Mr. Meyer about this circular of August 6th? Mr. Cotton brought out the fact that you talked with him.

Mr. MCBRIDE: Why, if my recollection is right, I spoke to Mr. Meyer about it, and he said that in a day or two that would be withdrawn. So I was very glad of that, and that is about the extent of our conversation. He stated that they would withdraw it so far as commercial business was concerned right away, and he did; it was only in effect three days I believe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there anything said to you by him as to its having been put in through some misunderstanding?

Mr. MCBRIDE: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Witness excused.

918 R. D. MILLER, Called as a witness, having been duly sworn, testified:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?

Mr. MILLER: Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. MILLER: Railroading.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With what corporations are you affiliated?

Mr. MILLER: Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company and Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in what capacity?

Mr. MILLER: As general freight agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of both roads?

Mr. MILLER: General Freight Agent of the Navigation Company and General Freight Agent of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are the duties of a general freight agent?

Mr. MILLER: On the lines of the Navigation Company the duties of General Freight Agent are to look after freight traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what way look after it; solicit it, or have it solicited under him?

Mr. MILLER: The business is solicited under his instruction. He makes the rate and is generally responsible for the freight traffic conditions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, generally the duties of General Freight Agent on any line of road?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir, I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That answer of yours is a general one?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is the duty of a General Freight Agent is it not, to secure all the business he can and get all the revenue he can for his road, so long as it is done in a proper manner?

Mr. MILLER: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You occupy that position on the O. R. & N.?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

919 Mr. SEVERANCE: And also on the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MILLER: The Southern Pacific lines in Oregon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you owe to the O. R. & N. the duty of securing all the business and traffic you can for it, and to the Southern Pacific the duty of securing all the business and traffic you can for it.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The long haul; is a long haul as a rule more profitable or less profitable to a railroad company than a short haul?

Mr. MILLER: It would all depend upon the condition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What would you say, taking a shipment from here to Chicago; would it be more profitable to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company to share in that haul to the extent of 1300 miles or to the extent of 50 miles?

Mr. MILLER: That would depend altogether on what it earned for the respective hauls.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, come down to a concrete fact. Take a shipment from Salem, which I am told is 50 miles from Portland. What does the Southern Pacific get, what percentage of the through rate for bringing in a shipment from Salem destined for Chicago?

Mr. MILLER: What kind of freight?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Hops.

Mr. MILLER: Carloads or less.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Carloads.

Mr. MILLER: The Southern Pacific would earn from Salem to Portland——

Mr. SEVERANCE: What does it actually get; what is credited up to it by that kind of shipment?

Mr. MILLER: It would earn its local rates.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How large is that, how much?

Mr. MILLER: About 20 cents per 100 pounds.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the through rate from Salem to Chicago?

Mr. MILLER: $1.50 for carloads.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In carload lots?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

920 Mr. SEVERANCE: So that the Southern Pacific Company secures on a shipment of hops to Chicago 20 cents out of $1.50?

Mr. MILLER: Approximately 20 cents.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the through rate on hops to New York City?

Mr. MILLER: $1.50.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just the same as to Chicago?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that whether the shipment goes to Chicago or New York, if it comes by the Southern Pacific to Portland from Salem and then on to Chicago or New York the Southern Pacific's revenue consists of 20 cents per hundred, and the revenue of the lines East of Portland consists of $1.30.

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When those hops moved to Chicago by way of Sacramento route to Ogden, what proportion of the through rate did the Southern Pacific get?

Mr. MILLER: Well, applying the $1.50 cent rate via Sacramento from Ogden to Chicago, when that route was open for the traffic in question, the Southern Pacific would earn from Salem to Ogden approximately 60 cents per hundred.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If the hops originated at Portland and were moved through to Chicago or New York by the Southern Pacific, what would the Southern Pacific Company get out of the through rate if they went by way of Sacramento and Ogden?

Mr. MILLER: About 60 cents a hundred.

Mr. SEVERANCE: A large amount of hops are shipped from Portland, assembled here and shipped out of Portland, are they not?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERENCE: Under whose instructions was the Sacramento route closed? I see the circular is signed by Mr. Coman, but who gave the orders to close it?

Mr. MILLER: The circular was issued by Mr. Coman. I do not know who issued instructions to him to close it.

921 Mr. SEVERANCE: What was your position at that time?

Mr. MILLER: General Freight Agent of the O. R. & N. Co.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you not a party to the negotiations that led to the closing of that route?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir, I was.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Between whom were the negotiations conducted?

Mr. MILLER: As with Mr. Coman, I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, with yourself?

Mr. MILLER: The discussion in regard to the matter was participated in by myself—I am wrong about that. I don't know that I had any discussion with anyone pertaining to closing the Sacramento route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were at that time only an officer of the O. R. & N., were you?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You must have hailed that order with delight which gave you all the business. Now don't you know from whence the order proceeded?

Mr. MILLER: I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know whether that order was issued under the instructions of Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. MILLER: I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know nothing about it?

Mr. MILLER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And have never been told who directed that order?

Mr. MILLER: I don't think I was ever told.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Never have had any information on the subject?

Mr. MILLER: Not as to who issued the order cancelling the route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have no information—never have been told anything about it, except that Mr. Coman signed the order. Is that so, Mr. Miller?

Mr. MILLER: I think probably that is true.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do?

922 Mr. MILLER: I do not recollect who issued the instructions to close that route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had you done anything toward getting it issued?

Mr. MILLER: Had I done anything towards what?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had you aided in the movement to eliminate the Sacramento route in any way, and have all the traffic move by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. MILLER: No, I was not responsible for it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is not what I asked you. Did you do anything to secure the issuance of the order?

Mr. MILLER: I did not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had no conversation with any person in authority on the subject?

Mr. MILLER: I don't recall any conversation that I had on that subject.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you have any correspondence with any person on the subject?

Mr. MILLER: I think not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then so far as that particular matter was concerned, you had nothing to do with it, and knew nothing about it until it came out. Is that so?

Mr. MILLER: As to that I don't recollect.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is one of the things you can't remember, is it, whether you knew anything about that before it was issued?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir, I don't recall the circumstances connected with that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You think the chances are, that that came as a beautiful surprise to you, don't you Mr. Miller, that increase in your business?

Mr. MILLER: Well, prior to that time, prior to the issuance of that order, the traffic was influenced to move by the Portland route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By whom?

Mr. MILLER: It was solicited by the representatives of the Union Pacific and the representatives of the Southern Pacific influenced so far as they could the movement of that business via Portland.

923 Mr. SEVERANCE: Was it more profitable to the Southern Pacific to have the hop business go by the O. R. & N. rather than by Sacramento?

Mr. MILLER: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Take hops that originate in Portland, from which point you state a good many hops were shipped; is it more profitable to the Southern Pacific as a railroad company to have the O. R. & N. and its connections get all the revenue, or to have the Southern Pacific get 60c. of the revenue for taking the stuff from Portland to Ogden?

Mr. MILLER: The hops taken from Portland originate on Southern Pacific territory in Oregon, and are brought in there largely by the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They are brought in also by boat?

Mr. MILLER: To some extent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To quite a considerable extent, are they not?

Mr. MILLER: No, I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now consider yourself for a moment, Mr. Miller, not as an officer of the O. R. & N., but as an officer of the Southern Pacific; just step over to the other end of the State. In that case, as an officer solely of the Southern Pacific, do you say it is better for you to get no revenue out of hops that originate at Portland, or to get 60c. out of the $1.50 rate to Chicago—speaking solely as a Southern Pacific man?

Mr. MILLER: A very large part of the hops shipped from Portland had previously paid tribute to the Southern Pacific Company. Hops that might move from Willamette points to Portland that would not pay tribute to the Southern Pacific Company, it would, of course, be of advantage to the Southern Pacific Company to secure the hops to Portland that were brought to Portland by river, by boat.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is better for you than to get no revenue, of course?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

924 Mr. SEVERANCE: Well now, move over to the other side of the State, and take your position as general freight agent of the O. R. & N. It is much to the interest of the O. R. & N. to have those hops move that way rather than by the Sacramento route, isn't it?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Because otherwise it would get no revenue.

Mr. MILLER: Except as they received it on the river.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now which would you say was the better—the river rate is the same as the railroad rate into Portland, isn't it—the local rate?

Mr. MILLER: Substantially the same, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now is it better for the O. R. & N. Co., do you think to get the 60c for the through rate or the local rate for bringing the hops into Portland and having them sent thence over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MILLER: I think you will have to re-state that question.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Which is the more profitable for the O. R. & N.; to get its proportion of the through rate of taking the hops from Portland on to Ogden or to take its local on the boat into Portland and let them go forward over the Southern Pacific; which would be more profitable?

Mr. MILLER: I think it would be about a stand-off, as between the earnings on the river to Portland and the earnings of the Navigation Company from Portland to Huntington.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you don't think there would be any additional profit to either line in taking the hops forward, over the above the local into Portland. That is right, is it?

Mr. MILLER: Well no, I don't quite follow your question.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I tried to make it clear. In either case you have a local into Portland. If they come in by O. R. & N. boat, we will say, the O. R. & N. gets that local. If they come 925 in by rail the Southern Pacific gets the local. Now, whichever line ships them through to Ogden gets 60c., and the local rate in is 20c. Now, you say that that 20c. includes in itself all the profits that there is in the 60c. haul, so that it is just as well for either one of these roads to get the small local rate into Portland, and not participate in the through haul?

Mr. MILLER: I don't think that question is put in a way that I can answer it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, I think it is. I will put it again though, if you can't understand it.

Mr. MILLER: No, I don't understand it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, take the situation as it existed here when the O. R. & N. ran boats up the river to Salem. They got 20c. then for bringing hops down Portland.

Mr. MILLER: Approximately 20c.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, whatever it was, and at Portland hops become competitive as between the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific. Now, if the Southern Pacific takes them they have to absorb that local, which leaves them 40c. to haul them to Ogden. The O. R. & N. has to absorb it, or pay it, if they haul them, and they get 40c. more. Now, if they come in over the Southern Pacific there is the expense of that local, leaving 40c. more for moving them to Ogden. Now, do I understand you to say that that 20c. includes, over and above the expense of handling, all the profits there is in the 60c. haul, and that there is no profit in the 60c. for the balance of the haul?

Mr. MILLER: Oh, there is probably a profit in the balance of the haul for either line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now we have that established. There is a profit then for either line hauling from Portland to Ogden after having absorbed this local of 20 cents. That being the case, how is it possible, Mr. Miller, for you as a general freight agent whose duties are to secure for his line all the business possible and all the revenue, to act at the same time for both the O. R. & N., who want to 926 get this revenue, and for the Southern Pacific who wants to get it or who ought to want to get it? Can you explain that?

Mr. MILLER: Well let us take this shipment you refer to from Salem to Chicago. I assume that the proportion received by the Southern Pacific Company from Salem to Portland for its haul of 53 miles is just as compensatory under the conditions as would be its proportion of the through rate for the haul from Portland to Ogden via Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now let us take the other side of it. Suppose the Southern Pacific brings it in here and the O. R. & — Co. takes it forward.

Mr. MILLER: That is the case I just referred to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, suppose the boats bring it into Portland, the boats of the O. R. & N., and the Southern Pacific takes it the same rule applies?

Mr. MILLER: In that case the O. R. & N. would earn this proportion of the through rate, which would be the local rate and the Southern Pacific would earn the remainder.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you think each are making something?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But it is the duty of an officer of a railroad company, is it not, to make all the money he can for his company, irrespective of what other companies may do? Now can you explain to the Commissioner how it is possible for you, having a duty to the Southern Pacific to earn all the money you can for that Company, and admitting that there is a profit in the through haul to Ogden, to perform at the same time a like service for the O. R. & N., which is competing for the same business? And that is not only applicable to you but to all officials who are joint officials of the two lines. Can you explain that?

Mr. MILLER: Well, as I answered your question a few moments ago, I assume that the proportion of those through rates which are earned by the Southern Pacific Company to Portland for the shorter haul are just as remunerative, under all the circumstances 927 and conditions, as would be its proportion of the same through rate from Portland to Ogden via Sacramento.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you mean by that, Mr. Miller, that as much net revenue will result to the Southern Pacific from the haul that it would have in here and getting the local 20 cents, as it would receive if it had the same shipment from Salem and brought it on to Ogden and earned the 60 cents.

Mr. MILLER: That is what I am assuming, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, is it so, do you believe that.

Mr. MILLER: I am not in a position to state the fact.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you believe that to be true?

Mr. MILLER: I think so.

Com'r LANE: Is that generally proved of all.

Mr. MILLER: Taking the run from Portland to Ashland, I think that is true.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that usual in railroading, that all the money is made out of the short haul and no money made out of the long haul?

Mr. MILLER: No that is not true in all cases.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is only a rule that applies to the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILLER: I don't think so at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact that the traffic man knows everywhere that the profit in the business consists in the long haul, so that you get revenue and only have the same terminal expenses as you have on the short haul.

Mr. MILLER: It all depends on the conditions under which the freight is transported.

Com'r LANE: Perhaps you have peculiarly remunerative rates in Oregon.

Mr. MILLER: Possibly that is so.

Com'r LANE: That short haul might be a better rate for you than the long haul, if you had a very large rate for your short haul.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the same rule works both ways; so that you think it would be better for the O. R. & N. to have the South-
928 ern Pacific take its profit on the long haul to Ogden, that is, you think the O. R. & N. could make more money if it could turn over the traffic at Portland and have it taken around by Ogden, by receiving its revenue on its little dinkey boat line from Salem to Portland.

Mr. MILLER: The O. R. & N. Co. would lose whatever what might be its profit for the haul from Portland to Huntington.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well there is no profit in that, is there? The profit is all exhausted when it gets the boat haul into Portland, the same as in the case of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILLER: No, the O. R. & N. is competing on the Willamette River with other companies who would carry it from Salem to the Southern Pacific if the O. R. & N. Co. did not; and it is better for the O. R. & N. Co. to secure the River haul to Portland for delivery to the Southern Pacific than to receive nothing at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is very interesting but it has nothing to do with the question. Are not you bound from your argument to take the position that the profit has all been earned by this little haul into Portland.

Mr. MILLER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the position you take as to the Southern Pacific. You say there is no additional advantage to the Southern Pacific in getting that long haul to Ogden, don't you? Don't you claim that, answer yes or not, answer.

—. I cannot answer yes or no without explaining.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Say yes or no and then explain.

Judge LOVETT: Answer the question in your own way Mr. Miller.

Mr. MILLER: I would say yes sir, but in referring to hops from Salem to Portland, which is a short haul, I would add that hops originate a good deal farther south where the revenue to Portland is several times as great as it is from Salem to Portland. The rates from Salem to Portland are relatively low because of water
929 competition. From points south of Salem they are higher according to the distance. Now in answering your question as to the relative advantages in the movement via Portland and via Sacramento, to the Southern Pacific, we must take into consideration the higher rates which the Southern Pacific Company earns from points south of Salem, from the Rogue River and other points in comparison with the rates from points nearer Portland where the rates are low.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Take hops brought in here by this Independent River Line so that neither the Southern Pacific nor the Oregon Short Line (O. R. & N.) gets any revenue until the hops land in Portland. It is a fact is it not that the Graham Line brings in hops?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you see any particular advantage to the Southern Pacific, taking yourself as an officer of the Southern Pacific alone, can you see any advantage to the Southern Pacific road in being excluded from that traffic and having it all forced over the O. R. & N.

Mr. MILLER: It is not all forced over the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As between the two it is all forced over the O. R. & N.

Mr. MILLER: No sir it is not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am talking about shipments that go by Ogden to the East. I will put this question so definitely that you will not misunderstand it. Take the case of Hops that are brought into Portland by this River line, not controlled by either one of the Railroads; can you see any advantage to the Southern Pacific Railroad to have those Hops move by rail east of Chicago over the O. R. & N. rather than the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILLER: The Southern Pacific would lose the earnings on the business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that any advantage to them? Are the earnings any advantage?

Mr. MILLER: I think that is made up in other directions.

930 Mr. SEVERANCE: But I ask you, would that be of any advantage.

Mr. MILLER: I would answer that question in this way, that while the Southern Pacific Company might lose revenue on a very small or limited volume of business moving to Portland by boat, it would more than make up that loss in other directions as a result of the business moving from its rail points via Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is a matter of opinion isn't it?

Mr. MILLER: That is a matter of what?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of opinion.

Mr. MILLER: Very largely a matter of opinion.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But that is an opinion you would not hold if you did not occupy this dual position, is it not? You would try to get all the business you could of every kind for the Southern Pacific, wouldn't you.

Mr. MILLER: I think I would hold the same position if I was other than a joint officer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You think that would not make any difference; when it comes to a matter of opinion your opinion would be just the same.

Mr. MILLER: I think it would be just the same.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But your actions would not be the same; you would try to get that business wouldn't you? If you were competing against the O. R. & N. and the business was going to move by way of Ogden and you were representing the Southern Pacific line you would go after that business and get it if you could would you not.

Mr. MILLER: Not necessarily.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would not.

Mr. MILLER: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If you were interested only in getting traffic for the Southern Pacific, would you.

Mr. MILLER: I would, provided there were no other conditions to consider.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For a good many years, Mr. Miller, traffic did move that way when they were separate lines and separate officers with the Southern Pacific and the O. R. & N., didn't it?

931 Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at that time there were not any special conditions that you know of that prevented the Southern Pacific from wanting to get all the business it could, were there?

Mr. MILLER: No I think not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in those days if you had been an officer of the Southern Pacific you would have been pretty hot after that business?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir, provided——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, provided you were not also an officer of the O. R. & N.

Mr. MILLER: No sir, provided the arrangement for the interchange of traffic with the Navigation Company at Portland was different from what it is today.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well it is pretty easy——

Com'r LANE: What does that mean, sir? What is the arrangement?

Mr. MILLER: The arrangement between the Southern Pacific Company and the Navigation Company, and the Short Line and Union Pacific Companies on traffic moving via Portland is that the Southern Pacific shall receive for its haul to Portland, or from Portland on traffic other than lumber when destined to Eastern points, 40% of the west of the Missouri proportion of the through rate subject to its local rate as its maximum.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who made that arrangement?

Mr. MILLER: I think that arrangement was made by Mr. Sproule who is the freight traffic manager of the Southern Pacific at San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who was acting for the O. R. & N. in making that arrangement?

Mr. MILLER: Mr. Campbell was Traffic Manager at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they were both of them acting under the orders of Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir I think they both reported to Mr. Stubbs at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then as a matter of fact, Mr. Stubbs held
932 one railroad in one hand and the other in the other, his hands being represented by Mr. Campbell in the one case and by Mr. Sproule in the other, and Mr. Stubbs agreed with Mr. Stubbs on that division; is that true.

Mr. MILLER: You will have to ask Mr. Stubbs about that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And I have no doubt Mr. Stubbs, who is a very charming and able gentleman, thought he was doing the best thing he could for both companies.

Mr. MILLER: I am satisfied that Mr. Stubbs——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Forgetting that they had been at times two railroads.

Mr. MILLER: I am satisfied Mr. Stubbs felt that way, if he had anything to do with it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have there been any other negotiations carried on in that same way between the O. R. & N. and the Southern Pacific with reference to divisions.

Mr. MILLER: The statement I made covers everything I made except lumber and its province.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One other thing I forgot to ask you. Were there not some other people concerned in that negotiation other than Campbell on one hand and Sproule on the other? Didn't the poor Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line have any representatives?

Mr. MILLER: I don't know whether the Short Line and the Union Pacific were represented at any conference between Mr. Campbell and Mr. Sproule when those divisions were fixed or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say this was a division of the through rate to the Missouri River. The Union Pacific and the Oregon Short Line make up a part of that through line don't they.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But Mr. Campbell was only an officer of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Co. was he?

Mr. MILLER: That is correct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Mr. Sproule of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILLER: That is true.

933 Mr. SEVERANCE: Did these gentlemen assume to divide up that through rate without any representation of the Union Pacific, which has a thousand miles to Ogden, and the Short Line which has several hundred miles to Huntington.

Mr. MILLER: I do not know what they assumed; I had nothing to do with fixing the divisions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As a matter of fact, that division was made by Mr. Stubbs, was it not?

Mr. MILLER: I do not know whom it was made by, other than I assume it was made by Mr. Campbell and Mr. Sproule.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You assumed that the Union Pacific and the Short Line have nothing to say about it.

Mr. MILLER: I do not assume anything about it at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who represented those roads then?

Mr. MILLER: I do not know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never heard of anybody except Campbell and Sproule figuring on it?

Mr. MILLER: I never heard them figuring about it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did you find out that they made the division.

Mr. MILLER: Mr. Campbell informed me of the divisions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did Mr. Campbell tell you that he and Sproule made it.

Mr. MILLER: No, I do not think he did although he may have done so. I was Assistant General Freight Agent of the O. R. & N. Co., at that time, and issued the Division Sheets in accordance with the instructions which I received from Mr. Campbell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are the divisions on lumber and its products.

Mr. MILLER: As I recollect, on lumber the Southern Pacific received south of Portland 25% of the west of the Missouri River proportion of the through rate subject to its local rates as a maximum on traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Would not get as big a per cent. on that?

934 Mr. MILLER: No, because it is a lower grade of business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who made that deal?

Mr. MILLER: That was made at the same time as the arrangement on the other traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Union Pacific and Short Line did not figure in those negotiations so far as you know?

Mr. MILLER: I do not know whether they did or not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That includes all the traffic does it? These two percentages cover all the traffic originating on the Southern Pacific and moved to the East over the Union Pacific, Short Line and Navigation Company lines.

Mr. MILLER: I think so; that is, to the Missouri River and beyond.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is a division on the rate to the River.

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When were those deals entered into? When was that division made?

Mr. MILLER: I think that was in 1902, possibly the latter part of 1901.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It appears by the testimony, Mr. Miller, that a good many Hops have been shipped to the sea board by the Sunset Route.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have a pretty hard struggle between that route and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and its Eastern connections for that business.

Mr. MILLER: That business for the Atlantic seaboard is divided about equally, as between the Sunset Gulf Route and the routes via Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who makes that division.

Mr. MILLER: The shippers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The shippers?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, half the shippers want to route one way and half the other way.

935 Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you hear some of those shippers testify that you had refused at times to take it one way or the other?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that so?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir depending upon the car supply and when we could furnish equivalent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a matter of fact that you move that stuff forward about as you please, and you decide which way to move it, when you say which way you can do it most comfortably and easily on account of the car supply.

Mr. MILLER: No I do not think that statement is altogether correct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is not that a fairly accurate statement?

Mr. MILLER: No, I do not think it is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far off is it?

Mr. MILLER: Well the Hop business for the Atlantic seaboard and for Europe is solicited for the Sunset Gulf Route. Failing in our efforts to secure that business for the Sunset Gulf Route, then we undertake to secure it for the Union Pacific Route via Portland. Out of the business that moves to and via the Atlantic seaboard about 50% is secured for the Sunset Gulf Route and about 50% moves via Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say it is solicited. You mean that you have men out soliciting the business, do you?

Mr. MILLER: We have men out and our Local Agents solicit the business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they endeavor to send it via the Sunset Gulf Route.

Mr. MILLER: For the Atlantic seaboard.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And as an officer of the O. R. & N., leaving out your position now as General Freight Agent of the Southern Pacific, you regard that as a very good thing for the O. R. & N., to have the Sunset Route get the business, don't you? You prefer to have it go that way, as an O. R. & N. man?

936 Mr. MILLER: The seaboard business via the Sunset Route, and all the other business—business for all other territories—moves via Portland; yes I think it is a good thing for the O. R. & N. Co.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You think that is a good thing for the O. R. & N. Co.?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is you prefer to have the O. R. & N. excluded from any share of the business through to the seaboard. You think as an O. R. & N. traffic man that that is a good thing for them to get no revenue out of the business to the seaboard?

Mr. MILLER: Provided all the other business for the other territory moved via Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And so you gentlemen have parcelled out the business of the country, have you, in that way; instead of competing for the business, you decide to have all the seaboard business if possible go by Sunset, and the other way by Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that right?

Mr. MILLER: We solicit and endeavor to influence the movement of seaboard business via Sunset, and business for other territories via Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then there is no very hot competition here between Sunset Route or Southern Pacific on the one hand and the O. R. & N. on the other as to the routing of competitive traffic, is there?

Mr. MILLER: The conditions are highly competitive.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean as between those two companies. Do you mean that they are highly competitive when you are acting for both of them?

Mr. MILLER: No, there are other competitors in the field.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand there are, and we are very thankful for that; but as between these two roads for both of which you are acting there is no competition, is there, Mr. Miller? You try to throw the business to one section one way, and to the other section the other way?

937 Mr. MILLER: There is competition in this sense, that all that business can move by either route, and it remains with the shipper as to whether he shall consign it by one line or the other.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But as you said awhile ago, your agents and solicitors try to get it to go one way or the other.

Mr. MILLER: But we are not always successful in having it move the way we want it to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You control it to the best of your ability.

Mr. MILLER: We endeavor to control.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that on business to the seaboard there is absolutely no competition between the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company on the one hand and the Southern Pacific on the other.

Mr. MILLER: Except in the sense I spoke of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well that is not competition is it? The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company stands back and lets the Southern Pacific get it if it can, and if it cannot get it, then it tries to get it away from the other line.

Mr. MILLER: I think that statement is true.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the reverse is the case as to all interior businesss.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all Mr. Miller.

Mr. COTTON: In years gone by which way did the Hops move to the Atlantic seaboard; via Sunset or Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLER: They moved both ways.

Mr. COTTON: Largely by what route?

Mr. MILLER: By the Sunset Route.

Mr. COTTON: That route is controlled by the Southern Pacific all the way to the Atlantic seaboard is it not?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Any revenue accruing as the result of those shipments all goes to the Southern Pacific.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir 100% of it as I understand it.

938 Mr. COTTON: Does it take a greater or less percentage now of the business than it did before?

Mr. MILLER: I think there must be very little difference between what the Sunset Route is handling now and what it did prior to this year?

Mr. COTTON: And that is true with the adverse car conditions on the Sunset?

Mr. MILLER: The adverse car conditions have had something to do with it. Much of the business that would have moved via Sunset has moved via Portland because of the car situation.

Mr. COTTON: But prior to this year, and the car shortage conditions existing this year how did the business go; via Sunset or Union Pacific?

Mr. MILLER: A great deal of it went via Sunset; some of it went via Portland and the Union Pacific; and in fact other lines via Portland.

Mr. COTTON: The proportion of movement, has been changed materially from what it was prior to 1901, or has it remained about the same.

Mr. MILLER: I think perhaps the movement via Portland—the percentage to the seaboard via Portland has been somewhat in excess of previous years, but due to those causes, the car conditions.

Mr. COTTON: I am excluding this year and the car shortage cutting out this year, and then I am going back and taking the years of 1895, 1894, 1893 (1905-1904-1903?) and comparing them with years prior to that.

Mr. MILLER: Substantially the same.

Mr. COTTON: Are both routes free to shippers?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: What efforts do you put forth to retard the movement either way?

Mr. MILLER: We do not retard it either way.

Mr. COTTON: Don't you try to force the shipper by failing to give him cars, or hampering his facilities and to divert that business from the route which you do not favor to the one which you do favor?

Mr. MILLER: We do not.

939 Mr. COTTON: And if a shipper should express a desire to one way or the other, would you accommodate him or not.

Mr. MILLER: We would.

Mr. COTTON: You have some connections at Denver?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And you have some connections at the Missouri River.

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.

Mr. COTTON: Are they represented in this territory by traveling men?

Mr. MILLER: They are.

Mr. COTTON: And they are trying to pull the freight over what route?

Mr. MILLER: By the Portland route.

Mr. COTTON: And the Great Northern tries to take it by what gateway?

Mr. MILLER: Via Portland.

Mr. COTTON: And what gateway to the north.

Mr. MILLER: Spokane.

Mr. COTTON: And the other roads.

Mr. MILLER: Via Portland.

Mr. COTTON: And what other gateway towards the East.

Mr. MILLER: Via the Northern Pacific and the Rio Grande lines.

Mr. COTTON: The Northern Pacific goes out by what gateway? Wallula?

Mr. MILLER: It goes out by Tacoma.

Mr. COTTON: You have no through rates via Wallula with the Northern?

Mr. MILLER: I think so.

Mr. COTTON: You have with the Great Northern via Spokane.

Mr. MILLER: No through rates at the present time to points north and south from Portland, but some traffic moves to Portland on the application of local rates.

Mr. COTTON: There are how many agents in this country soliciting business by way of the Huntington gateway and repre-

940 senting what roads? That is, over whom you have no control af any kind, character or description.

Mr. MILLER: The Rio Grande lines, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Burlington, the Northwestern, the Milwaukee, the Illinois Central, the Chicago-Great Western.

Mr. COTTON: Are they all represented here in towns?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Residing here in Portland.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Having offices here?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Trying to attract as much attention to themselves and their roads as they can?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Working the Willamette Valley?
Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.
Mr. COTTON: As far south as where?
Mr. MILLER: Ashland.
Mr. COTTON: For all classes of business?
Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.
Mr. COTTON: All connections of yours?
Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.
Mr. COTTON: All contributing business to the Union Pacific Line at Omaha?
Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.
Mr. COTTON: Are you anxious to please or displease those gentlemen by giving them the best facilities you can for their business?
Mr. MILLER: We are very anxious to please those gentlemen.
Mr. COTTON: If they secure any business in the Willamette Valley which way does it go out?
Mr. MILLER: It goes out over their line.
Mr. COTTON: And by what gateway?
Mr. MILLER: Via Portland.
Mr. COTTON: And Huntington in the case of these other roads?
Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.
Mr. COTTON: Do you interfere with their getting the business or attempt to retard their efforts in that direction to any extent whatsoever?
941
Mr. MILLER: We do not.
Mr. COTTON: When merchandise and shipments going in the direction of Chicago were undertaken to be pulled south by the way of Sacramento or the Sunset Route and over the D. & R. G. and the Rio Grande Western, then these agents were not so active in soliciting it, were they? And it went over the Sunset Route?
Mr. MILLER: That is true.
Mr. COTTON: They are really rivals to the Sunset Route are they not?
Mr. MILLER: They are competitors of the Sunset Route.
Mr. COTTON: And they are trying to get the business to move via Huntington?
Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.
Mr. COTTON: And this year most of it has moved that way has it not?
Mr. MILLER: Well, I don't know; I think probably the most of it has moved via Portland this year.
Mr. COTTON: You spoke about this division of 40% with the local as a maximum to the Southern Pacific. That applied to what classes of commodity?
Mr. MILLER: That applies to everything except lumber and its products.
Mr. COTTON: Both east and west?
Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir.
Mr. COTTON: What are the locals down here in the Willamette to Ashland on first class?

Mr. MILLER: Our first class rate from here to Ashland is about $1.40 or $1.50 or $1.60 per hundred.

Mr. COTTON: What are the other class rates; can you mention them?

Mr. MILLER: If the first class rate was $1.50 and that is approximately correct from here to Ashland, the second class would be about $1.35; third class would be about $1.10; fourth class about ninety cents; and fifth class about 70 or 75 cents.

942 Mr. COTTON: What are the rates to Albany?

Mr. MILLER: First class rates from Portland to Albany I think are 40 or 50 cents a hundred.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know what the divisions were prior to this 40% division?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: What was the division?

Mr. MILLER: The division at that time on merchandise traffic other than lumber was 30% of west of Missouri River proportion.

Mr. COTTON: With the local as a maximum.

Mr. MILLER: With the local as a maximum.

Mr. COTTON: You have stated I believe that on all of this business, taking it up one side and down the other, 40% would be better than the proportion of the rate which the Southern Pacific would receive if the stuff went to Ogden via Sacramento. What are the conditions which enter into your estimate in that regard?

Mr. MILLER: The movement via Sacramento Route entails the lifting of the freight over the Siskiyou Mountains, and over the Sierra Nevada Range. It necessitates hauling all empties north to a greater or less extent. It involves a more costly service and a longer route.

Mr. COTTON: How much longer is the route via Sacramento than it is via Huntington?

Mr. MILLER: From Portland to Oregon it is about six or seven hundred miles farther by Sacramento.

Mr. COTTON: How far is it from here to Sacramento?

Mr. MILLER: It is 682 miles.

Mr. COTTON: How far is it from Sacramento to Ogden?

Mr. MILLER: About 800 miles.

Mr. STUBBS: Call it 700 miles.

Mr. COTTON: That makes how many miles that way?

Mr. MILLER: That is 682 plus 700 would be 1382 miles. The difference from Portland to Ogden via Huntington is 885 miles.

943 Mr. COTTON: It is about 500 miles farther the other way.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: What is the character of the pull down here in the Valley; that is pretty hilly isn't it, up and down and over the mountains.

Mr. MILLER: No that is a very good route; it is down grade to Portland.

Mr. COTTON: A cheap haul isn't it?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: You have an increase of 10%; that is, the Southern Pacific did as allowing the freight to come this way?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: That is, over the old rates. Now, these old rates had prevailed how many years—that old Division?

Mr. MILLER: Oh, a great many years. I think those were the percentages when the through rates via Portland were originally established?

Mr. COTTON: It would look very much as if Mr. Stubbs had made a very good trade for the Southern Pacific, wouldn't it?

Mr. MILLER: I think he made a very good trade for the Southern Pacific.

Mr. COTTON: That is, assuming that Mr. Sproule did not really represent the Southern Pacific and that Mr. Campbell did not really represent the Union Pacific.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Did the O. R. & N. receive some benefits as the results of this?

Mr. MILLER: It did, very material benefits.

Mr. COTTON: What were the benefits.

Mr. MILLER: Additional traffic.

Mr. COTTON: The O. R. & N. got additional business by way of the Huntington gateway.

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

944 Mr. COTTON: Did they receive any additional benefit as the result of having all of these east of Omaha agents routing for the Line?

Mr. MILLER: They did.

Mr. COTTON: Did you have other competitors there in the way of Northern Pacific and Great Northern, who have now practically ceased in engaging in that business?

Mr. MILLER: We did; the Northern Pacific have not ceased engaging in the business however.

Mr. COTTON: I mean are they getting much out of it?

Mr. MILLER: No, they are not getting a great deal of it.

Mr. COTTON: Do you know about what percentage of business the Sacramento Route ever took from the Willamette Valley and Portland, or do you know?

Mr. MILLER: I do not know, but it was a very small proportion.

Mr. COTTON: You are still engaged in business with the D. & R. G.; that gateway is open via Huntington is it not?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: But during the last year about how much business have you received over the D. & R. G. Lines? I mean during the year 1905?

Mr. MILLER: During the year 1905 we received via Rio Grande Western lines about 9,000 tons.

Mr. COTTON: How much did you deliver to them?

Mr. MILLER: We delivered to the Rio Grande lines 110,000 tons.

Mr. COTTON: What is the distance from New York to Portland via the Sunset Gulf Route?

Mr. MILLER: Approximately 5000 miles.

Mr. COTTON: What is the distance from New York to Portland via the Missouri River route?

Mr. MILLER: About 3200 miles.

Mr. COTTON: What is the distance from Chicago to New Orleans via Southern Pacific and then the Illinois Central north or by any other road that may run north?

945 Mr. MILLER: You mean Chicago to San Francisco?

Mr. COTTON: No I mean from Chicago to Portland via New Orleans.

Mr. MILLER: From Chicago to Portland via New Orleans is substantially 4,300 miles.

Mr. COTTON: What is it via Texas points?

Mr. MILLER: What Texas points?

Mr. COTTON: El Paso.

Mr. MILLER: I do not know what that distance is.

Mr. COTTON: What is the distance from Chicago to Portland via Missouri River lines?

Mr. MILLER: It is 2300 miles.

Mr. COTTON: After the stuff got to Ogden via the Sacramento line, were there any other or different lines to interchange business with at Ogden than there is if the stuff reaches Ogden via the Huntington lines?

Mr. MILLER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: Identically the same roads to interchange with.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And identically the same conditions present.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr COTTON: So that the closing up of the Sacramento route simply involved a choice as to how the stuff would move from Portland to Ogden.

Mr. MILLER: That is correct.

Mr. COTTON: Over the Southern Pacific in the one case, or the Oregon Short Line in the other.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And now it is just as free to move from Ogden over any route as it ever was?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: I mean from Ogden east.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But not from Ogden west.

Mr. COTTON: From Ogden west you have no tariff via Sacramento, nor have you any tariff from here via Sacramento?

Mr. MILLER: That is correct.

946 Mr. COTTON: But it is just as free to reach your line via Ogden from the east by any route and thence to come via Huntington as it ever was to reach Ogden and then come out via Sacramento, is it not?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Miller, all of the distributive business in the Willamette Valley is taken from what point; that is what jobbing point?

Mr. MILLER: Almost entirely from Portland.

Mr. COTTON: The rate adjustment is such that Portland even sells San Francisco products and California products in the Willamette Valley to the exclusion of San Francisco jobbers?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. COTTON: Then practically for all of this Willamette Valley country Portland has been for years the distributing center.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: For example, I believe that you have a rate on Sugar into Portland of 15 cents a hundred.

Mr. MILLER: I think so. I think that is the rate by rail.

Mr. COTTON: And the rate by rail from here—the rate by rail from San Francisco to Ashland is what?

Mr. MILLER: About 65 or 70 cents a hundred; but it is more than that. The rate from Portland is about 60 or 70 cents a hundred. The rate from San Francisco must be 80 cents a hundred. The rate from San Francisco to Ashland would be the rate from San Francisco to Portland plus the rate from Portland to Ashland.

Com'r LANE: These rates to Portland are fixed by water competition?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Com'r LANE: How effective is that now?

Mr. MILLER: How effective is the water competition?

Com'r LANE: Yes.

Mr. MILLER: Well there has always been more or less competition by steamer between San Francisco and Portland and there is today.

947 Com'r LANE: How many boats run regularly between San Francisco and Portland?

Mr. MILLER: There is the San Francisco and Portland Steamship Company and there are other steamers engaged on the route; the steamer Roanoke, and I think the steamer Elder is now on there, and there are one or two others whose names I don't now recall.

Com'r LANE: How far up the Willamette do these boats run from Portland?

Mr. MILLER: The boats navigate as far as Corvallis when the water will permit.

Com'r LANE: Do you get your terminal rate from San Francisco to Portland; that is, from places that are further up the Willamette?

Mr. MILLER: No sir.

Com'r LANE: This is the only center at which you recognize water competition?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: You spoke about the "Elder." Is that the "Elder" that was formerly operated by the O. R. & N.

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: One of the boats which we lost?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Miller, you know of no limitation other than shipping by the Sunset Route upon the movement of traffic, do you?

Mr. MILLER: That is all.

Mr. COTTON: I mean the Sacramento-Ogden route?

Mr. MILLER: The Sacramento route is all.

Mr. COTTON: But you don't retard the movement of it in any way whatsoever so far as the shipper is concerned?

Mr. MILLER: No sir.

Mr. COTTON: In regard to this D. & R. G. movement of company material, prior to the 29th of August what rate did you have in effect for the Rio Grande Western and the Denver & Rio Grande and the Western Pacific on company material?

Mr. MILLER: We made a rate of one-half cent a ton per 948 mile in carloads, from Portland and our Columbia River points to Huntington on company material for the Rio Grande lines.

Mr. COTTON: That rate was published, was it not?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And filed with the Commission?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And withdrawn on what date?

Mr. MILLER: It was withdrawn on the 28th or 29th of August last, the date the Interstate Commerce Law went into effect.

Mr. COTTON: That was under the instructions which you had as to the meaning of the word "difference"?

Mr. MILLER: No, it was not.

Mr. COTTON: Was that done supposedly by legal advice?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, sir, that was upon the advice of counsel.

Mr. COTTON: And since that the D. & R. G., and Rio Grande Western and the Western Pacific are made commercial rates?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Miller, you have detailed in answer to Mr. Cotton the various considerations moving to and fro, certain in favor of the O. R. & N. and certain in favor of the Southern Pacific, in connection with the closing of the Sacramento route. Now you think, taking it by — and large, what the Southern Pacific gains in one way and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company gains in another way, that it is a pretty fair trade, do you?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, I do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You think Mr. Stubbs made a fair trade for his company?

Mr. MILLER: I don't know that Mr. Stubbs made it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well assuming that he did.

Mr. MILLER: Assuming that he did, it was a good trade.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you think, don't you, that it would 949 be a very good thing if all the railroads could trade off business in that way in consideration of traffic they were to get in another direction?

Mr. MILLER: I can't answer that question.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well as a general rule that is a pretty good way to do business, isn't it?

Mr. MILLER: It depends altogether on the trade and the conditions of the trade.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That trade involves practically the same conditions as pooling the business, and giving up one thing and taking another?

Mr. MILLER: No, I don't think it does.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is to say, you give the O. R. & N. some traffic and the O. R. & N. gives you a little additional division on the part of the traffic?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, but the O. R. & N. does not get all the business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, that is unfortunate. You stated in answer to Mr. Cotton that there were a lot of very active energetic men here soliciting business for the lines East of Omaha. I have forgotten what adjectives Mr. Cotton applied to them, but they were very active men, and you were asked if you were not anxious to please those gentlemen who were soliciting business in the Willamette Valley, and you said you were, and that is true, isn't it?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But that business that they got goes East over the O. R. & N., doesn't it?

Mr. MILLER: Not necessarily

Mr. SEVERANCE: What way does it go? How can they get business East of Omaha unless it goes over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. MILLER: Handle it in connection with the Northern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It would be rather a round-about way to take the business by the Northern Pacific to St. Paul and switch it to another road and carry it back down to Omaha?

950 Mr. MILLER: It would not necessarily have to go via St. Paul; it might go via Billings.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But Mr. Cotton was asking you about lines centering in Omaha, connecting with the Union Pacific in Omaha?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir, that is right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say you are anxious to please these gentlemen and glad to see them get business?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir, indeed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And carry it East over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You stated further in your examination, in answer to Mr. Cotton, that those gentlemen were in effect rivals of the Sunset Route?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are an officer of the Sunset Route, are you not?

Mr. MILLER: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is it then that you, as an officer of the Sunset Route, can enjoy this success of the gentlemen in getting the business as rivals of the Sunset? Can you explain that?

Mr. MILLER: Well these gentlemen represent lines which are also represented by gentlemen of probably equal ability in the East. They are soliciting business for other lines as against the Sunset Route

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you look on them with complacency and pleasure too? Rather glad to have their friendship; anybody who hates the Sunset Route is your friend; is that right?

Mr. MILLER: Yes, I would be very glad to have him with me on my staff if he would only continue to talk it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is so in spite of the fact that you are general freight agent of the Sunset Route, and have defined the duties of a general freight agent as securing business and revenue for his road? That is so, is it, Mr. Miller?

Mr. MILLER: Well you must not refer to me as general
951 freight agent of the Sunset Route, because I only represent a very small part of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It runs clear down to California?

Mr. MILLER: Well, I only have jurisdiction over 341 miles of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well sir, I think you ought to have more.

Mr. MILLER: Thank you.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And I hope you will get it.

Mr. MILLER: I hope you can arrange it so that I will.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will use my influence with Mr. Stubbs. That is all.

Mr. COTTON: Mr. Miller, you have no jurisdiction and do not represent the Sunset Route any further South than Ashland?

Mr. MILLER: That is all; that is as far as my jurisdiction goes.

Mr. COTTON: And you don't represent the Sunset Route at all, so-called, because that commences South of San Francisco.

Mr. MILLER: I only represent it as being a part of the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. COTTON: You work your business in your own jurisdiction as best you can, don't you?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir.

Mr. COTTON: And as far as your individual road is concerned, that is, the road which is under your jurisdiction, this agreement is very greatly to your advantage, isn't it?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir, very greatly to our advantage.

Mr. COTTON: And is not the effect of this whole arrangement to send traffic along the best route and along the line of least resistance?

Mr. MILLER: Yes sir, and very much in the public interest.

Mr. COTTON: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then this "divvy" was made in the public interest chiefly, was it; is that right?

Mr. MILLER: I don't know whether the public got any 952 part of the "divvy" or not, but I regard it very much to their interest to have the freight move by the lines of least resistance, by the shortest and best route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you think it is to the interest of the public to move their traffic out of Portland over the O. R. & N., don't you?

Mr. MILLER: Modesty prevents me from answering that question.

Com'r LANE: We will not have any more of these pleasantries. If you have any further testimony to introduce you will proceed with its introduction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In view of the admissions made by Mr. Miller, it is entirely unnecessary to call the other witnesses, of which I have a number, because he has admitted all that we wish to prove. That is all with you, Mr. Miller.

Witness excused.

Com'r LANE: Mr. Cotton, have you any witnesses that you desire to examine?

Mr. COTTON: No sir.

Com'r LANE: This hearing is adjourned until next Tuesday morning at ten o'clock in the Appellate Court Room at San Francisco.

953 SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,
TUESDAY, January 29, 1907—10 a. m.

Present: Commissioner Franklin K. Lane.

Appearances.

C. A. Severance, Esq., for the Interstate Commerce Commission.
R. S. Lovett, Esq., and Peter F. Dunne, Esq., for the Railroad Companies.

Commissioner LANE: We will resume this morning the inquiries as to the relations existing between the Union Pacific Railway Company, the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, the Oregon Short Line, and the Southern Pacific Company, and the effect of the consolidation, if any. Mr. Severance will represent the Commission, and Judge Lovett and Mr. Dunne will represent the Southern Pacific and allied companies. Are you ready to proceed?

Mr. SEVERANCE: We are ready. I promised Mr. John D. Spreckels yesterday that I would call him first. I suppose he will be here in a moment. He is not very well and wants to leave the city, and I agreed to call him as the first witness.

Commissioner LANE: It is now 10 minutes after 10 o'clock, and I think you had better put on another witness.

Mr. DUNNE: We will have no objection to your withdrawing your first witness and putting on Mr. Spreckels whenever he may arrive.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Very well. I will call Mr. Payson.

A. H. PAYSON, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Payson, where do you live?

Mr. PAYSON: I live in San Mateo.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is your business?

954 Mr. PAYSON: I am Assistant to the President of the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you occupied that position, Mr. Payson?

Mr. PAYSON: I think four years; I don't remember exactly the date of my appointment to that office. I was in the employ of the Santa Fe before that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What in a general way are your duties?

Mr. PAYSON: My duties have been practically limited to the acquisition of terminals in San Francisco by the Santa Fe Company, and its general relations with the public in the matter of Franchises.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you had anything to do with traffic?

Mr. PAYSON: Nothing whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the representative of the Santa Fe here in regard to traffic?

Mr. PAYSON: Mr. W. A. Bissell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. W. A. Bissell you say, Mr. Payson?

Mr. PAYSON: Mr. W. A. Bissell, and now—Mr. W. A. Bissell for both freight and passenger, and Mr. Chambers for freight traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Bissell is what? What is his title?

Mr. PAYSON: W. A. Bissell, assistant traffic manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am informed that an effort was made to serve a subpœna on Mr. Chambers to appear here, but we are informed he is out of the city. Do you happen to know where Mr. Bissell is in the city?

Mr. PAYSON: Mr. Bissell is in the city.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I suppose we could get him on the telephone, then?

Mr. PAYSON: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Payson, you say that your duties have largely been confined to the acquisition of terminals in about San Francisco Bay, do I understand?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes.

955 Mr. SEVERANCE: And you have had nothing whatever to do with traffic?

Mr. PAYSON: Nothing whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And are not consulted about traffic at all?

Mr. PAYSON: And not consulted about traffic, no.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We were informed that you were, by some one at your office. Mr. Payson, you are one of the incorporators, I believe, of the Northwestern Pacific—is that the title?

Mr. PAYSON: Northwestern Railroad Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Northwestern what?

Mr. PAYSON: Railroad Company.

Mr. DUNNE: If you will pardon me, it is the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, yes.

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that company was formed by whom?

Mr. PAYSON: It was formed by the Atchison and Southern Pacific Companies, holding the stock as owners.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the capital stock of the Northwestern Pacific Company?

Mr. PAYSON: Thirty-five millions of dollars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in what proportions do the two corporations you have mentioned own that stock?

Mr. PAYSON: It is equally divided.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the incorporation of the Northwestern

Pacific, did the Santa Fe have any railroad lines off to the north and west of San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: It did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you state what those lines were and where they ran?

Mr. DUNNE: At this time you refer to the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. PAYSON: It had a line of railway running from Arcata, which is nine miles north of Eureka, in California, southwardly
956 through Eureka, to a point on the Eel River south of Eureka about forty-three or forty-four miles, as I recollect, from its point of origin.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was that line of road built?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't know when it was built. It was already built when it was acquired by the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was it acquired by the Santa Fe?

Mr. PAYSON: I can't give you that information; I would not like to answer that offhand.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't care about the exact date. Give me about the date.

Mr. PAYSON: I think about four or five years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Four or five years ago?

Mr. PAYSON: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are the connections at present, if any, of this line of road running from Arcata through Eureka and to the south?

Mr. PAYSON: It has no connections except with—there is a physical connection at Arcata with a road called—something—Mad River Road, I think, which is practically a logging road running up the Mad River. That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This road, as I understand you, is a little over fifty miles long?

Mr. PAYSON: About that—less than fifty.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know by whom it was built?

Mr. PAYSON: It was built by several people in Eureka. Prominent among them were Mr. John Vance and Mr. William Carson.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has the Santa Fe been operating this road since it was built?

Mr. PAYSON: Ever since it was acquired.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean since it was acquired by it?

Mr. PAYSON: Since it was acquired, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the nature of the traffic tributary to that road?

Mr. PAYSON: Mainly lumber, forest products, with some 957 dairy products from the Eel River Valley. It also does a large, or relatively large, passenger business; there is a good deal of travel on it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This passenger business is in and out of Eureka, is it?

Mr. PAYSON: The passenger business is in and out of Eureka to the various mills, and to the Eel River Valley, which is a thriving agricultural settlement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And where was that built?

Mr. PAYSON: That was built on the southern end, an extension on the southern end towards San Francisco, along the line that will ultimately be built, and it was built to get into another body of timber which was owned by the Scotia Mill.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what point do you transport these various products and lumber over the line of this road?

Mr. PAYSON: We transport logs to the mills, and lumber to the landings.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What landings?

Mr. PAYSON: There is one important landing at what is known as South Bay, which is about nine miles south of Eureka; and the wharves in Eureka themselves. Those are the principal landings.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And from these wharves in Eureka, and this other place called South Bay, to what points is the lumber distributed?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, it goes to San Francisco, it goes to Australia, and it goes to China. We have nothing to do with it after it goes to the wharves.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand. Are there lines of ships running to Eureka that take this lumber?

Mr PAYSON: There are frequent steamers to Eureka, between Eureka and San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And between Eureka and Australia?

Mr. PAYSON: That is an incidental traffic, done in sailing vessels of small size that come in there for orders. It is not a regular line.

958 Mr. SEVERANCE: Then the bulk of the lumber, I take it, comes down to San Francisco. Is that right?

Mr. PAYSON: I think the bulk of it does.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And from San Francisco is it further transported over rail lines?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes. I can't give you any figures about that. Some of it goes east, but a comparatively small amount, as I understand it. The bulk of it is, I think for California consumption, and is distributed from San Farncisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But some of it goes to the east?

Mr. PAYSON: Some of it, but not very much.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over what lines or road does it move to the east from San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, it is moved by any line after it gets to San Francisco. I don't know about the subdivision of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There are only two lines from San Francisco east?

Mr. PAYSON: Only two lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is moved by either of the two lines?

Mr. PAYSON: It is moved by either line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Either the Southern Pacific or the Santa Fe?

Mr. PAYSON: Either the Southern Pacific or the Santa Fe, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of this corporation that owns this fifty mile road?

Mr. PAYSON: Since the incorporation of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): I don't mean the Northwestern Pacific, but what was the name of the corporation that owned it when the Santa Fe acquired its stock?

Mr. PAYSON: The bulk of it was owned by what was called the Eel River & Eureka Railroad.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Eel River & Eureka Railroad?

959 Mr. PAYSON: The Eel River & Eureka Railroad, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By what corporation was the balance of it owned?

Mr. PAYSON: The balance of it was owned by the owners of the Eel River & Eureka, but under different names; they had formed some smaller corporations and built extensions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the Eel River and Eureka Road, or any of these other smaller corporations, acquire the stock or that logging road that you spoke of that ran up the Eel River?

Mr. PAYSON: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is separate, is it?

Mr. PAYSON: That is separate now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That belongs to some other lumber company?

Mr. PAYSON: That belongs to some other lumber company? I think they call it the Arcata & Mad River, but I am not quite sure.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Payson, I think by consent of counsel, if you do not mind, we will ask you to step aside for a few moments and let me examine Mr. Spreckels. He has come in now, and I promised to call him first.

Mr. A. H. Payson was then temporarily withdrawn from the witness stand.

JOHN D. SPRECKELS, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Spreckels, what is your full name?

Mr. SPRECKELS: John D.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you live in San Francisco?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And have for a good many years?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you a member of the firm or corporation, whichever it may be, of John D. Spreckels Brothers' Company?

960 Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir. I am president of the Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Its corporate name is John D. Spreckels & Brothers——

Mr. SPRECKELS: Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Company?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It appeared, Mr. Spreckels, at the hearing of this matter in New York, by the introduction of a resolution from the minutes of the Executive Committee of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, that on the 23rd of July, 1906, Mr. Harriman, the Chairman of the Board, reported to the Committee that he had purchased from J. D. Spreckels & Brothers Company for the sum of thirteen hundred thousand dollars, all of the property of the Coos Bay, Roseburg & Eastern Railroad & Navigation Company, the Coos Bay & Coquille Valley Railroad Company, including coal lands in Beaver Hill—I think it should be, although it says here Fibre Hill——

Mr. SPRECKELS: It is Beaver Hill.

Mr. SEVERANCE (cont'g): —Alluvial Hard Coal Company, with their machinery, buildings, dockage, coal bunkers at San Francisco and docks, coal bunkers, water front property, and terminal lots at Marshfield, and all property complete, in that country, which belongs to J. D. Spreckles & Brothers Company, and the entire company, including all bonds, to be delivered under the guaranty of J. D. Spreckels, free and clear of all incumbrances and liabilities. And the action of the President, Mr. Harriman, in authorizing that purchase was approved. You are familiar with that transaction, are you, Mr. Spreckels?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I am.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also with the property that J. D. Spreckels & Brothers Company sold to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, in a general way only. I have never been to the property and visited it myself.

961 Mr. SEVERANCE: What member of your corporation is familiar with it, Mr. Spreckels?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Mr. Samuels, Mr. F. S. Samuels.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. F. S. Samuels?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is he in the City?

Mr. SPRECKELS: He is in the City; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years, Mr. Spreckels, has your company been interested in that property?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, I would not be positive as to that; ten or fifteen.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say that in a general way you are familiar with the property. In what does it consist?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Coal Mines, a Railroad, and steamship lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And steamship lines, did you say?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now this railroad is how long?

Mr. SPRECKELS: About 29 miles I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And one terminus of that road is Marshfield, on Coos Bay?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir; Myrtle Point.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Myrtle Point?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But it passes through Marshfield?

Mr. SPRECKELS: It passes through Marshfield; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Marshfield is the principal town on Coos Bay, is it not?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And where, in a general way, that is, into what kind of country does the little railroad run?

Mr. SPRECKELS: It runs through a timber country and into the coal fields.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any agricultural country tributary to it?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, I believe there is.

962 Mr. SEVERANCE: And are the products of that agricultural country marketed over this railroad and in those steamships?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, and brought by steamer down to San Francisco. It is principally coal, however; some lumber.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Coal and lumber.

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, and they have some dairy products.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Spreckels, what are the names of the ships owned by this company?

Mr. SPRECKELS: One is called the "Breakwater" and the other is called the "Czarina".

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the tonnage capacity of the "Breakwater"?

Mr. SPRECKELS: The "Breakwater" will carry about 600 tons—that is her capacity in coal.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I beg your pardon?

Mr. SPRECKELS: She is a passenger steamer and——

Mr. SEVERANCE: The "Breakwater" is a passenger steamer?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir. The other, the "Czarina," carries about 1400 tons. She is a collier.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Spreckels, does the "Breakwater" also carry freight?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, she carries freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Carried freight and passengers?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, both.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is her capacity as far as carrying passengers is concerned?

Mr. SPRECKELS: She will carry about 48 passengers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: 48 you say?

Mr. SPRECKELS: 48 passengers, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Between what ports have these boats been plying?

Mr. SPRECKELS: The "Breakwater" has been plying between Coos Bay and San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Between what points?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Coos Bay and San Francisco. And the "Czarina" has plied between other ports as well.

963 Mr. SEVERANCE: What ports?

Mr. SPRECKELS: At a time when we could not get our sufficient quantity of coal to give her a cargo, we would divert her and send her to Portland for a cargo of wheat, for instance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And she would stop in going down the coast, whereabouts?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I say she went up to Portland, for instance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that the "Czarina" has been plying between Portland and San Francisco, and between intermediate ports?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir, not between Portland and San Francisco and intermediate ports. She would go from Coos Bay to Portland——

Mr. SEVERANCE: She would go from Coos Bay to Portland, you say?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then from Portland, where would she go? Would she come to San Francisco from Portland?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, come to San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, if I now understand you, she would go up to Coos Bay, and then go to get a load of grain at Portland and bring it from Portland down to San Francisco?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has the "Breakwater" ever been up to Portland?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir, she has never been diverted from the regular route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Her regular route is from Coos Bay to San Francisco?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how many years has she been in service, Mr. Spreckels—in that service, I mean?

Mr. SPRECKELS: About two years, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About two years?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir, possibly three.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

964 Mr. SPRECKELS: I say possibly three.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long has the "Czarina" been in that service?

Mr. SPRECKELS: She has been in that service for a longer period, probably ten years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Ten years?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the cost of the "Breakwater," Mr. Spreckels?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, I could not tell you, offhand. The "Breakwater" would cost about $75,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About $75,000?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the "Czarina," how much?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, she would cost about $50,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About $50,000?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir. We bought them as second hand boats.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were second hand when you bought them?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir. We bought a lot from the east—they were eastern boats.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the return cargo of the boats running up to Coos Bay?

Mr. SPRECKELS: They were principally engaged in moving coal.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean the return cargo, from here to Coos Bay?

Mr. SPRECKELS: General merchandise.
Mr. SEVERANCE: General merchandise?
Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How large a town is Marshfield?
Mr. SPRECKELS: I could not say as to that. I have never been there.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, you have never been there?
Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Has Marshfield any other direct outlet at present than your steamship line?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir. That is about the only outlet
965 she has. There are other steamers from time to time go in there and take passengers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But the only regular boats were yours?
Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, regular boats, and then the one belonging to Goodall, Perkins & Company—they had a boat running there, and have still, I think.
Mr. SEVERANCE: From what point?
Mr. SPRECKELS: From San Francisco to Coos Bay.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know the name of that boat?
Mr. SPRECKELS: I think it is called the steamer "Plant."
Mr. SEVERANCE: The steamer "Plant?"
Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: She is still running there, is she?
Mr. SPRECKELS: I think so, yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Spreckels, how far is it from Roseburg to Coos Bay?
Mr. SPRECKELS: I think about 90 miles.
Mr. SEVERANCE: I notice the name of this corporation is the Coos Bay, Roseburg & Eastern Railroad Company.
Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you build the road?
Mr. SPRECKELS: I did not, no sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Who built it?
Mr. SPRECKELS: A man by the name of Graham. He came to me at the beginning—he came to see us, the firm, to negotiate the purchase of some rails. He then made a noise like an honest man, and I let him have the rails. If I had required more from him, I probably would not have been able to sell the road to the Southern Pacific, or to anybody else.
Mr. SEVERANCE: I did not hear that last statement.
Mr. SPRECKELS: I said if I had required more than a noise, I would not have had the road to sell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If you had required more than what?
966 Mr. SPRECKELS: A noise. They say making a noise like so and so. I said he made a noise like an honest man.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I judge from your remark that Mr. Graham and yourself are not on the best of terms.
Mr. SPRECKELS: No. sir. I have no use for him.
Mr. SEVERANCE: He built the road. That is all I care about. He built the road, did he?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir, he built the road.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And it afterwards came into your possession?
Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And there were some coal properties there?
Mr. SPRECKELS: Coal properties, yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of coal?
Mr. SPRECKELS: It it lignite.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And the boats bring that down——
Mr. SPRECKELS: To the market here.
Mr. SEVERANCE: To the markets?
Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Who conducted the negotiations with Mr. Harriman for the sale of this property to him?
Mr. SPRECKELS: It was not conducted with Mr. Harriman directly. It was through an intermediary, Mr. Smith—Mr. James Smith.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is Mr. James Smith?
Mr. SPRECKELS: He is the President, I think, of the Western Fuel Company. I don't know whether he has any middle name or not.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And with whom did Mr. Smith have his dealings?
Mr. SPRECKELS: With myself, and also with my brother. I felt at the time that he was negotiating for the Southern Pacific, because at the time that Mr. Collis P. Huntington was still alive, they were then looking into the proposition of acquiring the road, because they wished to overcome the grades on the Shasta Mountains, rather than haul the wheat, as they did, up to Port-967 land, and then bring it down by steamer, that they could cut off about 300 miles up and 300 miles back, or 600 miles in all, by going into Coos Bay. And they having, as I say, during the lifetime of Mr. Huntington, looked into the proposition, and we supplied them with the surveys and different things, and a list of the property that we had, and then the negotiations were never concluded because Mr. Huntington died about that time—for that reason I thought it was the Southern Pacific Company that were negotiating for the property.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Were the negotiations resumed several years ago, or only a short time before the acquisition of the property?
Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, it was last summer—it was not concluded, a payment was to be made for the property on the day of the catastrophe last year, at 10 o'clock that morning, and of course the catastrophe knocked everything out.
Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean the earthquake here?
Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, last spring.
Mr. LOVETT: Will you read the answer of the witness as to Mr. Collis P. Huntington—in which he stated that Mr. Huntington was looking into the sale of the property.
Mr. SPRECKELS: I did not say he personally—I did not mean that.
Mr. LOVETT: For the purpose of understanding him, I would like to have it read. I am not sure I understood him. Will you turn and read that question and that answer. He said something about a shortening of the line 300 miles. It is in reference to that inquiry.

(The answer in question repeated by the reporter.)

Mr. SPRECKELS: I would not say that they tried to overcome the grades, because they could not do it by acquiring this road—that is inaccurate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the time that this trade was concluded, which you state was at the time of the catastrophe last spring,
968 had Mr. Harriman commenced the construction of the line of road, a connection with the Southern Pacific towards Coos Bay?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did he at that time, to your knowledge, have in contemplation such a line?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir, they proposed to build—the route was to be from Myrtile Point, I think, to Roseburg, or some other point on the——

Mr. SEVERANCE: From where?

Mr. SPRECKELS: From Myrtle Point to Roseburg.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how far is it from Myrtle Point to Roseburg?

Mr. SPRECKELS: About 60 odd miles—69 miles, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know, Mr. Spreckels, whether that line is under construction, or a line similar to that is now under construction?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir. I haven't really paid much attention for I have been really sick for the period of a year, and I didn't pay much attention as to what was going on in the way of railroad building.

Mr. SEVERANCE: These matters have been more in charge of your brother, or Mr. Samuels?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir. For one thing, after disposing of the road, I had no further interest in that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say the deal was to be closed the day of the——

Mr. SPRECKELS (intg.): Yes sir. The payment was to be made on that day, the day of the earthquake, and it was not made until——

Mr. SEVERANCE (intg.): But when was the trade made, Mr. Spreckels?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I think on—oh, when the trade was made? I don't know; I was sick, you know, about a year ago in July, and up to the time of the earthquake I was confined to the house, and it was prior to that time negotiations were pending, and as I said, the payment was to be made on the 18th of April, the day of the earthquake, and it was not made, I think, until some months subsequently.

969 Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand that. Do you happen to recall, Mr. Spreckels, how long prior to last spring the negotiations were commenced with Mr. Smith?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Quite a while before that. Oh, I suppose the negotiations ran over a period of six or eight months.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Ran over a period of six or eight months?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were those negotiations thus protracted because of discussions of the price to be paid?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, that had something to do with it, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Smith first approached you or your brother, did he, with reference to the sale?

Mr. SPRECKELS: He first approached my brother, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the initiative did not come from you, but came from Mr. Smith?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Came from them, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did you learn for the first time that Mr. Smith represented the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, I had my suspicion all along that they were the ones, that the Southern Pacific wanted it, because I could see that they had need for that road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Since the purchase by the Southern Pacific, do you happen to know whether they are running the road and the ships?

Mr. SPRECKELS: They are operating the road now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the ships?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This resolution speaks of two railroads. One is the Coos Bay, Roseburg & Eastern Railroad & Navigation Company. The other is the Coos Bay & Coquillo Valley Railroad Company. Were there two corporations there?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, not to my knowledge.

970 Mr. SEVERANCE: You never heard of that last one, did you?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir, I never did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the nature of the sale that you made. Was it the stock of the railroad, or the property?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir, it was a cash proposition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I know; we understand that it was cash to you.

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But I mean, did you sell this property by turning over the stock, or give a deed?

Mr. SPRECKELS: The stock and bonds.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The stock and bonds?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, and the property itself.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the amount of bonds?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I could not say as to that. The bonds were never issued.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were never issued?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you now recall, Mr. Spreckels, the cost of this property to you, that is, of the railroad and coal lands?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, I could not tell you as to that. It was over a million dollars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the whole property cost over a million dollars?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you feel very sure of that, sir?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Oh, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, considerably more than that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was the operation of the boats that you have mentioned a profitable one, sir?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It was not profitable?

Mr. SPRECKELS: It was not profitable?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was the operation of the railroad profitable?

971 Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, yes, there was more profit in that—yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you got in a little more than you paid out?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was the traffic large or small?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir, the traffic was small.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The traffic was small?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you informed during these negotiations as to whether this line of road that the Southern Pacific contemplated building would connect with the end of this road of yours?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, that is my understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is your understanding?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that it is really an extension of yours?

Mr. SPRECKELS: It is an extension, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you sure about that, Mr. Spreckels?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, I thought it was to be an extension to Roseburg, but later I saw in some paper that they were going to some other point nearer the road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know whether it is going to Myrtle Point, your terminus?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I think so, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it a good harbor at Coos Bay?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, a very good harbor, for light draft vessels. You could not load a vessel drawing over 15 feet there. That is the utmost you can take out of there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was the operations of the coal mines a profitable one?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir.

Mr. DUNNE: What did you say?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I said "no."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then, as I understand it, the only self 972 sustaining part of these properties was the little railroad?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir. The profits net on the road were very small.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the operation of the coal mines and the vessels did not prove profitable?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir. I had in mind or contemplated extending the road from Myrtle Point to Roseburg, so as to connect with the Southern Pacific there, and had surveys made, which surveys I think were turned over to Mr. Huntington at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I did not understand that.

Mr. SPRECKELS: I turned it over to Mr. Huntington, or his representative at least, at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you ever get them back?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I could not say. I have no use for them now, anyhow.

Mr. LOVETT: What was that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I asked him if he got them back.

Mr. LOVETT: What?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The surveys from Myrtle Point to Roseburg. In the course of your negotiations with Mr. Smith, did you indicate to him that you had contemplated building a road over to the east?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir, I don't remember that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't remember that you did?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then, as I understand you, the whole story is that you built this road, put on those steamers, did this business at the coal mine, put in a million dollars, the property was operated at a loss, Mr. Smith approached you on behalf of the Southern Pacific to buy you out and paid you $1,300,000 for it?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, about that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is about the story?

Mr. SPRECKELS: That is about the story.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Southern Pacific have now the entire outlet into San Francisco from Oregon?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir.

973 Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. LOVETT: When was that road constructed? Do you remember?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I don't know just what year it was. I think about 10 or 15 years ago—as near as I can remember.

Mr. LOVETT: You said Mr. Huntington, Mr. C. P. Huntington looked into it?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, his representative did; I think it was Mr. Kruttschnitt.

Mr. LOVETT: Who?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Mr. Kruttschnitt.

Mr. LOVETT: You wanted to see the property, I presume?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I did, yes. I was glad to get rid of it.

Mr. LOVETT: I infer from the reference you have made to your sale of rails to Mr. Graham, that you got into it rather unwillingly?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, I had to take it over. As I say, I sold him the rails, and he could not pay for them.

Mr. LOVETT: How far is it, Mr. Spreckels, from the nearest point of that road to the Southern Pacific, the existing line?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, I could not say as to that. My impression is that it is Roseburg—there may be some nearer point—about 69 miles.

Mr. LOVETT: About 69 miles?

Mr. SEVERANCE: About 65 miles?

Mr. SPRECKELS: 69 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, 69. Pardon me.

Mr. LOVETT: What is the character of the country between?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I have never been there and I could not tell you.

Mr. LOVETT: Have you any information on the subject?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I took so little interest in the thing that I didn't go there.

974 Mr. LOVETT: You have no information on the subject, no reports as to the character of the country?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You don't know whether it is mountainous or not?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, it is a mountainous country.

Mr. LOVETT: It is a mountainous country?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Quite a rough country, is it not?

Mr. SPRECKELS: It is a rough country, as I have been informed, going up towards Roseburg, up through the canyon; as I understand it, there is only sufficient room for one rail.

Mr. LOVETT: For one what?

Mr. SPRECKELS: For one rail—one line of road.

Mr. LOVETT: It is a thinly populated country, is it not?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes sir, I think it is—well, I would not say as to that, I really don't know. I think it is thinly populated. I only judge by the travel we had on the steamers.

Mr. LOVETT: Is it not true, Mr. Spreckels, that practically the only outlet for the products and commerce of that country were by boat?

Mr. SPRECKELS: That is all, yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: The Southern Pacific never competed in that, did they?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir, never got in there at all.

Mr. LOVETT: Never handled freight or passengers from the territory served by you?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No sir, except a few who had to go down on urgent business, I suppose. They would take the stage from Myrtle Point up to Roseburg, and take the train there.

Mr. LOVETT: But there is no traffic of any consequence?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Nothing of any consequence.

Mr. LOVETT: I believe that you stated that the "Breakwater" cost $75,000.

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, thereabouts.

975 Mr. LOVETT: Thereabouts?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: And the "Czarina" about $50,000?

Mr. SPRECKELS: About $50,000.

Mr. LOVETT: You understood the coal mines contained the principal inducement?

Mr. SPRECKELS: The coal mines were the principal property there.

Mr. LOVETT: You understood that that was the main object of the purchase, did you not, in acquiring this property?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir. I thought that the Southern Pacific wanted to build a line connecting with their road, I thought at Roseburg, but I think at some other point that they wanted to connect, simply to do away with the haul of wheat from the vicinity of Roseburg, which is a very productive country, up to Portland, and then down by steamer. They could save about 600 miles, as I take it.

Mr. LOVETT: And wished to utilize this 29 miles of existing road as a part of it?

Mr. SPRECKELS: As a part. And then they had landings and wharves, and such other things as they necessarily would have to have.

Mr. LOVETT: On Coos Bay?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir; on Coos Bay.

Mr. DUNNE: Did the Southern Pacific have some coal properties adjoining your coal properties there?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. DUNNE: Not to your knowledge?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No.

Commissioner LANE: Is there any railroad competing with the Southern Pacific there?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir.

Commissioner LANE: Did you have knowledge of any other railroad making any surveys from Eastern Oregon over into your section?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir; excepting merely by rumor. I think the Rock Island proposed to build in there, but it never amounted 976 to anything. It was merely a rumor.

Commissioner LANE: No other railroad sought to buy that property from you?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: Mr. Spreckels, whether the Southern Pacific Company, as a matter of fact, had or had not coal properties adjoining the coal properties connected with your road, the coal properties in that neighborhood were made accessible by this road?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: And the facilities at the terminals?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Spreckels, Judge Lovett asked you if there had been any competition between the Southern Pacific and your line, and you stated, I believe, that there had not?

Mr. SPRECKELS: There has not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As soon as the Southern Pacific got its line through to Coos Bay, there would have been competition, would there not, between your boats and the trains of the Southern Pacific, necessarily?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Well, I suppose so; I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. And it was a very easy way to remove your competition to take the course that was adopted, to buy you out?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I was very glad to get rid of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is no doubt about that. I should think, with a losing property of that kind and $300,000 bonus on top of it, you might be glad to get rid of it?

Mr. SPRECKELS: They appeared to be more anxious to acquire it than I had to hold it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I have no doubt whatever of that. That is all, Mr. Spreckels.

Mr. LOVETT: You were not in a position to be a very formidable competitor of the Southern Pacific, were you?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir.

977 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now let us see about that, Mr. Spreckels. You were in business there?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had a line of boats?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Popular rumor attributes to you sufficient funds to procure more boats if they tried to run you out?

Mr. SPRECKELS: I am afraid we had too many boats as it was, and that is from the fact that we did not have enough work for the two boats we did have, and had to charter one of them to outsiders.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

A. H. PAYSON, recalled.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Reporter, will you kindly turn to Mr. Payson's testimony, and let me know the last question.

The REPORTER: "Mr. Severance: Did the Eel River & Eureka Road, or any of these other smaller corporations, acquire the stock of that logging road that you spoke of that ran up the Eel River? Mr. Payson: No, sir."

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is one question that I did want to ask Mr. Spreckels, which I forgot. You need not resume the stand, Mr. Spreckels, but you may answer from where you are. What coal bunkers in San Francisco went with this trade that you made?

Mr. SPRECKELS: Coal bunkers on the Howard Street wharf.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did your company own the bunkers, or simply lease them—I mean own the dock?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, the dock was owned by the State, and we had the bunkers there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was their value, about? Have you any idea?

Mr. SPRECKELS: No, sir; I have no idea.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you paid a rental for the use of the docks?

978 Mr. SPRECKELS: Paid a rental for the use of the docks, yes, in addition to the regular wharfage charges and dockage charges for vessels.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Reporter, what was that question again.

Mr. PAYSON: If you will allow me, I misunderstood that question. In a previous question you asked me if we had any connections, and

I said with only one foreign road, and that was the Arcata & Mad River, that made a connection, physical connection, with our tracks in Arcata.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I got the name wrong in this last question then.

Mr. PAYSON: You have got the name wrong, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the name of it?

Mr. PAYSON: The Arcata & Mad River. That runs up the Mad River, not the Eel River.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that road is still owned by a lumber company?

Mr. PAYSON: Still owned by a lumber company.

Mr. Payson: So that the Santa Fe's holdings are this line of road, about 51 miles of road—something like that.

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With the connections at Eureka, and the other landings that you have mentioned?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that has been run for four years by the Santa Fe?

Mr. PAYSON: About.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of an organization did that road have? Did you have a manager up there?

Mr. PAYSON: We had a Vice President and General Manager there, and he reported directly to me. The property was under my charge, practically.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What other railroad, if any, did the Santa Fe have which ran into the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: It owned what was called the Fort Bragg and Southeastern.

979 Mr. SEVERANCE: The Fort Bragg and Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is that line located?

Mr. PAYSON: It starts from the coast at the port of Albion, and runs from there about 23 miles southerly and easterly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is Albion from Eureka?

Mr. PAYSON: Oh, pretty nearly 200 miles, I should say.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Nearly 200 miles from there?

Mr. PAYSON: 200 miles, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Further north?

Mr. PAYSON: South.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Further south, I meant to say?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how far is Albion from San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: About 80 miles, I think. Perhaps more than that—nearly 100 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you had this line of road, commencing about 80 miles north of San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir, 80 miles—more than that—perhaps nearly a hundred miles. A hundred miles say.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And running southeasterly?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Towards San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: Towards San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So the southerly terminus of this road, the Fort Bragg & Southerly, is between 75 and 80 miles north, or northwest, of San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, the 20 miles was not directly cutting off the distance to San Francisco. The present southern terminus of the Fort Bragg & Southeastern, by the nearest way you could get to it, would be more than a hundred miles from San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom did the Santa Fe people acquire the Fort Bragg & Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: The lumber interests that had the Albion mill.

980 Mr. SEVERANCE: And what was the purpose of that acquisition by the Santa Fe?

Mr. PAYSON: It was the nucleus of a feeder which would tap the Mendocino timber country and be tributary to San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you bought that line with the intention of making it the nucleus of a line of roads to go up from San Francisco to tap the timber country?

Mr. PAYSON: A part of line of roads to go north to tap the timber country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at that time the Santa Fe expected to construct that line itself?

Mr. PAYSON: It did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. And it was also contemplated by the Santa Fe, that this line, the Fort Bragg & Southeastern, would be extended farther north, to a connection with this other line that you first mentioned, called the——

Mr. PAYSON (int'g): At the time we bought the Fort Bragg & Southeastern, we had not sufficient knowledge of the country to know whether it would form part of a through line from San Francisco north to Humboldt Bay, or whether it could only be used as a feeder to such a through line. Our subsequent surveys disclosed the fact that it could not be made a part of the through line, that it could only be used as a feeder.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As a feeder?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But the line in the north, the Arcata line, was to be part of a through line to San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: It was.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the Santa Fe own any other railroads that went into the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: None, except the Fort Bragg & Southeastern, and the aggregation, which I have described to you, about Humboldt Bay.

981 Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the nature of the traffic moving over the Fort Bragg & Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: Nothing but logs for the Scotia mill—I should say the Albion mill.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Albion mill saws the logs and shipped them down by water?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, what railroad lines did the Southern Pacific have that went into the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: They had the North Shore, the——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): Let us take them up one at a time and have them described. Where does the North Shore line run?

Mr. PAYSON: The North Shore line runs from Sausalito to a point called Cazadero, up just north of the Russian River, with a branch to the town of San Rafael.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long is that railroad?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, I can't say exactly; I think about 80 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how near does that come to San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: Sausalito, which is across the Bay, on the other side of the Bay, on the Marin County shore, about six miles by water.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the Southern Pacific have a rail connection between Sausalito and its lines running to the east and south?

Mr. PAYSON: I can't say exactly as to that. I think it does.

Mr. DUNNE: What do you mean, an all-rail connection?

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Sausalito, Mr. Dunne?

Commissioner LANE: You could have rail connection by Tiburon and through there to the rest of the system?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is what I mean?

Mr. DUNNE: Do you mean, is there at present such an all-rail connection? Is that the question?

982 Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, whether there is a rail connection so that cars could be switched from Sausalito, or from some other point on that road, to your main lines to the east and south. Do you know, Mr. Dunne?

Mr. DUNNE: I don't know of any all-rail connection, except very circuitous one.

Commissioner LANE: That can be done by the Southern Pacific by way of Vallejo Junction.

Mr. DUNNE: It would have to go that way.

Mr. LOVETT: There is a connection up there somewhere that would connect with the Southern Pacific, but I don't know just where.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is this 80 mile of the Southern Pacific from the Fort Bragg and Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: It is not very far as regards distance, but a connection between them would be a practical impossibility on account of the country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On account of the grades?

Mr. PAYSON: On account of the country, the mountainous, difficult country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the distance between them, Mr. Payson?

Mr. PAYSON: You mean from the Fort Bragg and Southeastern, the nearest point of the Fort Bragg and Southeastern?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. PAYSON: To Cazadero?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. PAYSON: Well, it would be, I should say, 80 miles as the crow flies, across the country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It would be 80 miles?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then it is just as far from the nearest point on the Sausalito road as it is from San Francisco, to the Fort Bragg and Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, it is not very much farther, because there is not very much difference. The Duncans' Mills road does not run due north; it runs over towards the coast. I can't speak of these distances, you know, with exact knowledge.

983 Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the next line of road owned by the Southern Pacific which goes into the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: What is called the San Francisco & North Pacific Coast—I believe that was the title for it—now called the California Northwestern, that is the late title for it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long a road is that?

Mr. PAYSON: The California Northwestern?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. PAYSON: I can't say exactly. I think about 137 or 140 miles, but I have never had any direct connection with those properties, and I don't carry those figures in my head.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In making this consolidation, you acted for the Santa Fe, did you not?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir. Those negotiations were made in New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were made in New York?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Between whom? Do you know?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This California Northwestern, you say, is 150 miles long?

Mr. PAYSON: I think so; I am not quite sure about that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the California Northwestern run anywhere near these other lines?

Mr. PAYSON: It runs up the Sonoma Valley; the California Northwestern goes up the Sonoma Valley, which is a valley parallel to the coast, but entirely separated from the North Shore topographically.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is separated from the North Shore line topographically and is also separated from the Fort Bragg & Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: Absolutely. Of course, connections could be made by going through the hills down into the Sonoma Valley.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is still another line of road, is there not?

984 Mr. PAYSON: Of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. PAYSON: That is the Eureka & Klamath.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Eureka and what?

Mr. PAYSON: Klamath.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does that run?

Mr. PAYSON: That runs north from Arcata towards Trinidad, on the coast.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Runs north from Arcata, which is the terminus, is it not, of your——

Mr. PAYSON (int'g): Of our road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of your road, yes?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it runs to what point?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, near Trinidad.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does it reach a harbor on the Pacific Ocean?

Mr. PAYSON: Not yet.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far is it from it?

Mr. PAYSON: Only a few miles. But it is not a harbor, it is an open roadstead.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it under construction?

Mr. PAYSON: Those few miles?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. PAYSON: I don't think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At the present time, then, that line does not reach any port?

Mr. PAYSON: It reaches no port except the port of Eureka—indirectly the port of Eureka.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over your rails?

Mr. PAYSON: Over our rails. And also there is a branch that leaves Arcata and goes around on the spit which separates Eureka from the sea, and therefore reaches tidewater on the Bay of Eureka.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do ships meet it at — point?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: What is that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I asked him if ships meet that branch at that point. What is the class of traffic that moves over that line?

985 Mr. PAYSON: Practically a lumbering road exclusively. It brings logs to the mill on Humbolt Bay and that is practically all—with supplies for the logging camps out.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't think you told me how long that road is, the Eureka & Klamath?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, I don't know. I think about 20 or 30 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About 25 or 30 miles?

Mr. PAYSON: Not more than that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that does not do a general business, as your line running into Eureka does?

Mr. PAYSON: It hasn't got it to do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Except to the extent of lumber?

Mr. PAYSON: And the supplies for the campers out.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Supplies out, yes. Now, the Northwestern Pacific has been organized by those two companies, and it has covered these roads. What additional lines is it proposed to build?

Mr. PAYSON: It is proposed, as I understand it, to build the connecting link between the present northerly end of the California Northwestern and the southerly end of what was the San Francisco Northwestern. In other words, it is proposed to connect the Southern Pacific properties on the south with the properties formerly of the Atchison on the north. And also——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): Do you mean the California Northwestern?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir. The two names are confusing. One was San Francisco Northwestern, the other California Northwestern. The California Northwestern was the——

Mr. SEVERANCE: The California Northwestern is the Southern Pacific line?

Mr. PAYSON (cont'g): Southern Pacific line, and the San Francisco Northwestern was the Atchison line in the north.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They had the Fort Bragg & Northeastern?

986 Mr. PAYSON: No sir, the Fort Bragg & Southeastern is the one.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then that is still another one you have not mentioned yet, is it?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, I described it to you a little while ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think not.

Mr. PAYSON: It is the road from Albion.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, that is the one?

Mr. PAYSON: That is the one.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I thought you called that the Fort Bragg & Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: That is the Fort Bragg and Southeastern, yes; that is the one I described to you.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are speaking now of the California Northwestern?

Mr. PAYSON: The California Northwestern included the North Shore and that other road up the Sonoma Valley.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Belonging to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: Belonging to the Southern Pacific.

Commissioner LANE: You intended, Captain, to extend down this way towards the Bay of San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: That was our plan.

Commissioner LANE: That was your plan, the Santa Fe's plan?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: Instead of that you have consolidated the two roads, and you intend that the road that extends up through Willits shall meet your road up to Humboldt Bay?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: And the connection that you make you call the San Francisco Northwestern?

Mr. PAYSON: The San Francisco Northwestern was the name which the Santa Fe gave to those small properties which it got into a single corporation up around Humboldt Bay.

987 Commissioner LANE: You consolidated those companies there?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir, consolidated them.

Commissioner LANE: And called the consolidated roads the San Francisco Northwestern?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir, the San Francisco Northwestern.

Mr. DUNNE: The Fort Bragg & Southeastern is a lateral?

Mr. PAYSON: The Fort Bragg & Southeastern is a lateral, yes. I did not finish my answer as to the projected construction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Proceed with your answer.

Mr. PAYSON: First the link of which I speak, connecting those properties on the south with those on the north.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long a link was that?

Mr. PAYSON: That would be about 110 miles. And then possibly a lateral which will connect this Fort Bragg & Southeastern with the main trunk line, and tap Mendocino County.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that other line, then, will be controlled by the two companies, jointly.

Mr. PAYSON: By the two companies, jointly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you a contract between the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe with reference to that matter, in writing?

Mr. PAYSON: There is such a contract. I haven't it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who has that?

Mr. PAYSON: It was prepared in New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it in New York, as far as you know?

Mr. PAYSON: As far as I know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is not here.

Mr. PAYSON: Well, I don't know that it is not here.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At least, if it is, you don't know where it is?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't know where it is.

Mr. LOVETT: It is in New York and we will furnish it to you.

988 Mr. SEVERANCE: That contract, as you understand it, contemplates a change from year to year of management, does it?

Mr. PAYSON: As has been reported to me, it gives the two companies alternately a majority of the Board of Directors, in alternate years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We will get the contract in New York.

Commissioner LANE: Judge Lovett, will you let me see that map, please?

Mr. LOVETT: Certainly, your Honor.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I suppose that, in view of having made this arrangement with the Southern Pacific, the Santa Fe has abandoned its idea of extending the lines down to San Francisco Bay. You intend to use this road jointly?

Mr. PAYSON: Not abandoned it. We intend to pay half the cost of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But as an independent proposition, you have abandoned it; you have substituted a joint line for your own proposed line?

Mr. PAYSON: Exactly. We have abandoned the intention of building it alone.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This projected line that you intended to build would that have gone up the coast alongside of either of these Southern Pacific lines?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It would not?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It would have gone through a different valley?

Mr. PAYSON: Through a different valley.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Entirely separate?

Mr. PAYSON: Oh, I beg pardon, perhaps I did not understand your question.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I asked you whether—you said you had contemplated building a line down from the north.

Mr. PAYSON: Quite so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to the Bay?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I asked you whether that contemplated line would have gone up to your line, to your connection, alongside of or in the vicinity of the Southern Pacific lines?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't know. It would not have done so if we could have avoided it. Our surveys were directed towards finding an alternate line which would be practicable and to get into an entirely different territory.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know whether you were successful?

Mr. PAYSON: We were successful in finding possible lines through Lake County.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That country up there is mostly timber country, is it not, Mr. Payson?

Mr. PAYSON: Where do you mean?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, all that northern country from here up. From 50 miles north up to Eureka?

Mr. PAYSON: From the present end of the Southern Pacific Company's lines, I will call them, for the sake of clearness——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. PAYSON (cont'g): From there north to Humboldt Bay, there is practically nothing in the way of timber along the Eel River; it is a stock country pure and simple, of but little value. The redwood timber is not found until you get within a very short distance of Humboldt Bay. There is nothing to feed a railway between the present northern end of the Southern Pacific properties and the redwood timber, which comes but a short distance south of Humboldt Bay.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is a matter of 150 miles?

Mr. PAYSON: 110 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: 110 miles?

Mr. PAYSON: Not 110 miles out of the timber; it will be possibly 90 to 100 before you get to the timber—90 miles, certainly, north.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know, sir, whether there are any other lines of railroad projected into that region, into that timber country, I mean?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't know of any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You haven't heard of any?

Mr. PAYSON: I haven't heard of any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is your company operating steamships?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir, except the ferryboats on the Bay.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I understand, but you do not connect by steamer with any of these northern ports for this lumber traffic?

Mr. PAYSON: There is one exception that I should state. We have a contract with the Albion Steamship Company to bring lumber to San Francisco—the Fort Bragg & Southeastern has a contract with the Albion Steamship Company, by which they take the lumber we deliver at Albion and bring it down to San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the Santa Fe has a contract with the Albion Steamship Company?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By which it takes lumber delivered to it by you at Albion?

Mr. PAYSON: At Albion.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And brings it down to San Francisco?

Mr. PAYSON: To San Francisco, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do they make through shipments to the points on the line of the Santa Fe road?

Mr. PAYSON: No, not—the lumber may go through, but it is not billed through. We know nothing about what becomes of it after we deliver it to them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is no connecting line, no billing through?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They do not issue through bills?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir. We do not know what becomes 991 of it after it leaves Albion. We simply have an arrangement with the steamship company by which they take it down, and that is the end of it as far as we know.

Mr. LOVETT: Until it reaches where?

Mr. PAYSON: San Francisco?

Mr. SEVERANCE: In other words, it has an outlet over the Santa Fe or Southern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: Or Southern Pacific, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Either one?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that a contract which is subject to be terminated at any time, that contract that you speak of?

Mr. PAYSON: That contract was a contract we inherited from the people from whom we bought the road, and it terminates by its terms whenever there is a rail connection with San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that they won't be in your way after the rail connection is made?

Mr. PAYSON: With the rail connection, it ends.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you say that that is the only contract that you have with any steamship line?

Mr. PAYSON: That is the only contract of which I have any knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any contracts or any transactions, Mr. Payson, with any of the Oriental lines, the Oriental steamship lines?

Mr. PAYSON: I have nothing to do with that part of the business. I said that is the only contract of which I have any knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In whose charge would that matter be, the matter of contracts, with Oriental lines—Mr. Bissell's?

Mr. PAYSON: I assume Mr. Bissell would know about those arrangements.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He would know about that?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have charge of the other lines, or have anything to do with the other lines of the Santa Fe in the 992 State, outside of the lines around San Francisco, and in the north?

Mr. PAYSON: I have nothing to do with the operation of any of the lines of the Santa Fe, except these northern properties.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you are familiar with the ownership, are you not?

Mr. PAYSON: In a general way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there a line of road down near Mojave somewhere which is used jointly by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe?

Mr. PAYSON: There is a line from Bakersfield to Mojave over the Tehachapi Pass that is used jointly by the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who owns the line?

Mr. PAYSON: The Southern Pacific,

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long a line of road is that? How much track?

Mr. PAYSON: About 70 miles, I think, I think it is 70 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it operated independently by the two companies, or how is it done?

Mr. PAYSON: It is operated by the Southern Pacific, the Santa Fe paying a rental, which was fixed by the estimated cost of the property, and which is constant for each year, and also a proportion of the operating expenses and maintenances, which is divided between the two companies in the proportion of their use of the road.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you each run through trains over it.

Mr. PAYSON: We each run through trains over it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But it is operated by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: It is operated under the direction of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does that mean any more than that the train dispatcher of the Southern Pacific has charge of the track? You run your own trains, do you not?

993 Mr. PAYSON: The operating officials of the Southern Pacific have control of our trains. Our trains are our own equipment, but they are under the control of the Southern Pacific officials while they are on that track.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But it is your own power that pulls them through?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And your own trainmen?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: All of that is expressed by the contract, Mr. Severance, and we will furnish you that contract.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right, I would like to have that if you will let me have it.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes. I think we have a copy of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Outside of that line there, that 70 miles, is there any track in Southern California that you know of which is used jointly or owned jointly by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't know of any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is none of the track up the valley from Los Angeles to San Bernardino that is used jointly?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't think there is any used jointly by the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe. It is my impression there is none.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Some of that track down in the valley there is used by the Salt Lake Road, is it not?

Mr. PAYSON: I think that what you are speaking of, between San Bernardino, and that part of the country, there is some arrangement with the Salt Lake road about. I am not familiar with the details.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We have the contract relating to that.

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your Company owns the road running to San Diego, does it not?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to have any knowledge
994 as to the steamship connections with San Diego, or does that all come under Mr. Bissell?

Mr. PAYSON: All comes under Mr. Bissell. I have no knowledge of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have no knowledge of that?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir.

Commissioner LANE: Is there any practicable way, Captain, of shipping down the coast from Oregon, excepting over one of the lines that the Northwestern Pacific owns?

Mr. PAYSON: I think it is practicable to come down the coast from—well, by a line of railway. It would be very expensive but it is practicable, possible.

Commissioner LANE: In order to get to San Francisco Bay, would it be necessary to come down over the lines of the Atchison that the Atchison owns, or that the Southern Pacific owns?

Mr. PAYSON: From the north?—no.

Commissioner LANE: What way could the line come down?

Mr. PAYSON: The line could follow the coast for most of the way. It would be very difficult, but it is possible.

Commissioner LANE: You have then, in this consolidation those lines which have the easiest means of access to the Bay of San Francisco from the North?

Mr. PAYSON: I think it is the best line.

Commissioner LANE: And you have all the roads from the north of San Francisco Bay up to the Oregon line?

Mr. PAYSON: Our joint interest with the Southern Pacific extend no farther than Trinidad, than this Eureka & Klamath, which I believe ends somewhere up near Trinidad.

Commissioner LANE: There are some roads up farther north than that in California, are there?

Mr. PAYSON: I believe there is a road projected from Coos Bay to the coast, but there is no road along the coast north of that.

995 Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know anything about the arrangements that are made with the Japanese line of steamships here—the connection?

Mr. PAYSON: No, I know nothing about that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't have anything to do with that at all?

Mr. PAYSON: Nothing whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Nor do you have anything to do with the connections that are made at Los Angeles or San Diego?

Mr. PAYSON: Nothing to do with it whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has the Southern Pacific Company any interest in your San Joaquin line?

Mr. PAYSON: None at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: None at all?

Mr. PAYSON: None at all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is owned by the Santa Fe alone?

Mr. PAYSON: Absolutely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the only part of the Southern Pacific line that you use is the line from Bakersfield to Mojave?

Mr. PAYSON: It is practically a bridge, that is all it is. There is practically no traffic alongside of it. It was simply a bridge from one piece of line to another, over the Tehachapi.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are the terminals in San Francisco in which the Santa Fe is interested owned exclusively by the Santa Fe?

Mr. PAYSON: Exclusively by the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are the terminals around the Bay of San Francisco known as Santa Fe terminals exclusively owned by the Santa Fe?

Mr. PAYSON: Exclusively by the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Southern Pacific has no property interests whatever in any of the terminal lines that come under your management?

Mr. PAYSON: Has no interest in any of the terminal facilities in San Francisco that are known as Atchison terminal facilities.

996 There is no interest in any of the property of the Santa Fe in San Francisco or in Oakland held by the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is no interest, you say, in any of the property of the Santa Fe, in San Francisco or Oakland, owned by the Southern Pacific? That is a correct statement, is it?

Mr. PAYSON: Oh, I beg your pardon. I think I have made one error there. There is a joint ownership of the dockyards out there in the Potrero; that is, the land is jointly owned by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe. But with that exception, the statement is true.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then is it a correct statement of your relations with the Southern Pacific that you have no joint ownership in any railroad properties, either main line or terminals or terminal facilities, except in such as you have in the Northwestern Pacific, and the portion that you use from Bakersfield to Mojave?

Mr. PAYSON: And this joint interest in the stockyards.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all?

Mr. PAYSON: That is all.

Mr. LOVETT: He has forgotten the line from Needles to Mojave, owned by the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that jointly used?

Mr. LOVETT: It is owned by the Southern Pacific, but used exclusively by the Santa Fe. I am referring now to the line from The Needles to Mojave——

Mr. PAYSON: The old Atlantic and Pacific.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, owned by the Southern Pacific, but leased to the Atchison.

Mr. PAYSON: That is a piece of ancient history that I did not know. But I knew we operated it exclusively.

Mr. LOVETT: For all practical purposes it is the Atchison line. The legal title is in the Southern Pacific, but the Atchison has run it since 1879, I think.

Mr. J. C. STUBBS: You have forgotten about the Sunset Oil Fields Road?

997 Mr. PAYSON: Oh, yes, I did forget the Sunset. There is a small road out of Bakersfield to the Sunset oil fields built jointly by the Southern Pacific and ourselves several years ago, and it is jointly owned and alternately operated. We take turns in operating it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Under a similar arrangement to that you have with the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir, not exactly. In the Northwestern Pacific, it is supposed the operation will be continuous, but the majority of the directors will change from year to year, whereas with the Sunset line we actually take turns in operationg the road. The Southern Pacific takes it for one period, and then we take it afterwards for a like period.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That road is practically an oil road exclusively?

Mr. PAYSON: That is an oil road exclusively, goes out to the oil fields at Sunset.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It taps wells owned by the Atchison road?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't think at present it does, and I don't think—when it was built, the Atchison had no property in that territory at all. Since then it has acquired an interest in the Midway Field, which this Sunset line does not exactly reach, but it is in that direction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is the property, then, all property that is also owned by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir, that is not owned jointly with the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is no oil property in the neighborhood of Sunset that you know of, owned by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't think there is any jointly owned by the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe that I know of, tributary to the Sunset line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any independently owned by the Southern Pacific in the Sunset District?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't know of any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long a line of road is that?

998 Mr. PAYSON: About 20 miles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say that was built jointly by the two companies?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, it was a plan of Mr. Tevis, Mr. William Tevis, who lives down there in Bakersfield. He was going to build it himself, and finally the two roads agreed to bear the expense, in other words, take the bonds and jointly own the property.

Commissioner LANE: Now, then, with the exception of the Sunset Road, the lease that you have for the use of the line from Bakersfield to Mojava, and the lease of the line from Mojava to The Needles, the terminals at the union stockyards, and the Northwestern Pacific running north from San Francisco Bay, all the other properties known as Atchison properties in this State, are owned exclusively and controlled by you?

Mr. PAYSON: To the best of my knowledge.

Commissioner LANE: With the exception of what is known as the Clark line that runs into San Francisco—that runs into Los Angeles, I should say—there are no other eastern rail connections to California except the Southern Pacific and the Atchison, are there?

Mr. PAYSON: Not now.

Commissioner LANE: By the acquisition and consolidation of the roads to the north of San Francisco Bay under the Northwestern Pacific system, you have the most practicable route of access from the north?

Mr. PAYSON: I think so. There are other roads possible, but that is the best one.

Commissioner LANE: Is there any practicable way in the southern end of this State, the southeasterly end of this State, for coming into Los Angeles from the south, that is not now controlled either by the Southern Pacific or the Atchison?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't know about that. I understand there are plans for an independent line from San Diego and east over what I believe is a practicable route.

999 Commissioner LANE: That is what is known as the Spreckels line?

Mr. PAYSON: That is what is known as the Spreckels line.

Commissioner LANE: Running east of San Diego over to Yuma?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: And there to connect, possibly, with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: With any line.

Commissioner LANE: Or with any other line of road?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, or with any other line of road.

Commissioner LANE: With which they can make a connection?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: But that does not contemplate going eastward out of California?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't know. I don't know about that.

Commissioner LANE: Have you had any lines surveyed through the north, the northern portion of the State, that is, the Northeastern portion of the State, running from San Francisco Bay up to Lake County and through there?

Mr. PAYSON: We had a survey running north from the Bay of San Francisco to Lake County and thence into the drainage of the Eel River, and so on, to Humboldt Bay.

Commissioner LANE: Was there, at the time the consolidation was made between the Southern Pacific Company and the Atchison of these northwestern lines, any alternative railroad conection from the northwest?

Mr. PAYSON: I don't quite understand the question.

Commissioner LANE: Was there proposed at the time that you made this consolidation, considered possible that a road coming from the east or from the northeast toward any of your lines on Humbolt Bay, would be connected with those lines, that is, alternative to the Southern Pacific?

1000 Mr. PAYSON: Did we have any information that there were other plans of other roads for using that territory?

Commissioner LANE: Yes.

Mr. PAYSON: None whatever. I don't think it was possible.

Commissioner LANE: You don't think it was possible?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, from the east, no; from the Sacramento Valley across to that country, I don't think it was possible. But we heard no plans, at least, I never had any intimation that anybody else was seeking an entrance to that territory. Our arrangement with the Southern Pacific was simply to save expense. We were both staggered by the expense which the surveys disclosed would attend the construction of that line. It is a most difficult country, both for construction and maintenance, and when it came to the question of building two parallel roads into the country, there was not enough in it to make it worth while.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Speaking of there being two parallel roads in the country, had the Southern Pacific in contemplation the extension of their lines to Humbolt Bay?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir. They were also planning to extend their lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they had surveys made?

Mr. PAYSON: They were making surveys, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And both the Southern Pacific and the Sante Fe abandoned the idea of building an independent line which would be parallel, you say, each to the other, in favor of saving expense and building one line?

Mr. PAYSON: Exactly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that line to be operated the way you have stated, one year by one company——

Mr. PAYSON: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the next year by the other?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had you done to the extent of procuring 1001 any right of way for this extension to the north prior to this consolidation?

Mr. PAYSON: Practically none. For a few miles below the southern end, we had a right of way agreement with the farmers, but practically nothing obtained.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had you definitely located your line?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had you decided on the line within reasonable limits? You knew in a general way where it was going, did you not?

Mr. PAYSON: We knew—if we were forced to build an independent line, we would probably have—there is one line marked out as the best line. All of the others are attended with a good many difficulties. They are possibilities, of course, but they involved very heavy grades and heavy work. The best line is along the drawings of the Eel River.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that the line that is to be followed by the joint action of the companies?

Mr. PAYSON: That is the line that is to be followed; that is the line we have practically decided on as the best. But the others could be followed, if necessary.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was it feasible for the Southern Pacific to build a branch to this Humboldt country from its terminal?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir. It would be practically impossible.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On account of the nature of the country?

Mr. PAYSON: On account of the nature of the country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The only feasible way to tap that country is by a north and south line?

Mr. PAYSON: The feasible way is by north and south lines, but there are more possibilities than one in the way of a north and south line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you say that the one you have is better, that there is one that you think is better?

1002 Mr. PAYSON: We think it is best, because it gives a better grade.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Gives you a better grade?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir. It will be more difficult of maintenance, but it will give us a better grade.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The country is materially different, is it, than that to be penetrated by the line to Coos Bay?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Southern Pacific is now building, as I understand, to Coos Bay?

Mr. PAYSON: They are building at right angles to the coast, yes, at Coos Bay.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, as you come further down the coast, does the country get more difficult?

Mr. PAYSON: Oh, I can't say that. They are both difficult.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The difficulties, then, are evidently not insurmountable because the Southern Pacific is now building the line from Coos Bay to Roseburg?

Mr. PAYSON: They are not insurmountable, no, except that it is very costly construction.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Except that it is very costly construction. For that reason you went in together rather than to both build up there and compete with each other?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think that is all. I would like to have Mr.

Bissell, Captain Payson, come here. I want to inquire into property conditions, if he can come this afternoon?

Commissioner LANE: I can adjourn at this time, if you desire it, before you begin the examination of Captain Payson, Judge Lovett.

Mr. LOVETT: I have but a few questions and I can ask them now. These lines sold by the Atchison, or which were subsequently merged into the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, were wholly in the State of California, were they?

Mr. PAYSON: Wholly within the State of California.

1003 Mr. LOVETT: I believe you testified that they have no connection with any other railroad lines?

Mr. PAYSON: Except—no other railroad line extending out of the state of California.

Mr. LOVETT: Well, I am speaking now of railroad lines extending out of the state of California?

Commissioner LANE: That is not literally true, Judge. The Northwestern Pacific, as I understand it, has a connection which crosses over through little Sonoma Valley into Napa, and directly over into Solano County, and thence to the main line of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes, your Honor, but I was only asking about the two companies that the Atchison control-.

Commissioner LANE: The Atchison?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes. Neither of the companies that the Atchison controlled and put into this consolidated company, had any rail connection at all, did they?

Mr. PAYSON: No, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Their only outlet was by boat?

Mr. PAYSON: Their only outlet was by boat.

Mr. LOVETT: The Southern Pacific lines that were consolidated with the Atchison Lines, and into the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, were also within the State of California, were they not?

Mr. PAYSON: Entirely within the State of California.

Mr. LOVETT: Was it your understanding that those lines were consolidated under the laws of California?

Mr. PAYSON: That is my understanding.

Mr. LOVETT: You testified to some arrangement with some line of boats belonging to this coast. I did not catch the name.

Mr. PAYSON: The Fort Bragg & Southeastern.

Mr. LOVETT: The Fort Brag & Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: The Fort Bragg & Southeastern, yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: It connected with a line of boats at Arcata?

Mr. PAYSON: At Albion.

1004 Mr. LOVETT: The Fort Bragg & Southeastern?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir, that was it.

Mr. LOVETT: Did that line, the Fort Bragg & Southeastern, do any business except haul logs for the mills?

Mr. PAYSON: Practically none; a few little supplies for the camps, but practically its entire business is the hauling of logs for the mills, and lumber from one mill that is established on it.

Mr. LOVETT: There is one mill out on the line?

Mr. PAYSON: There is one mill out on the line, yes.

Mr. LOVETT: These lines controlled by the Atchison were not, as they existed at the time of the merger, competing in any sense with the Southern Pacific Lines, were they?

Mr. PAYSON: Not at all.

Mr. LOVETT: When the links necessary to connect them are completed, the effect will be to give those lines an outlet to California, the rest of it?

Mr. PAYSON: To California and the East.

Mr. LOVETT: If the Southern Pacific had completed its lines to a connection with the Atchison, practically the same arrangement might have been effected by the ordinary trackage contract, might it not?

Mr. PAYSON: Quite so.

Mr. DUNNE: Just as at Mojave?

Mr. PAYSON: Just as at Mojave, yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: I think that is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Except that in the case of the Mojave track, as I understood it, you say there is no local traffic?

Mr. PAYSON: I testified to the same thing as regards the country between Willits and the southern end of our line. I said we didn't get into the timber until we reached the southern end of Humboldt Bay.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then there would be no traffic there?

Mr. PAYSON: Very little. It is a stock country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. PAYSON: A stock country; a cattle country.

1005 Mr. SEVERANCE: Does that not constitute rather a profitable line?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes sir, but it is a cattle country that requires so much country to sustain a few cattle, that the business is not large. There is very little business, in other words, between the present ends of the proposed road. You go 20 miles south of the present end of the properties about Humboldt Bay, and you have got about out of the timber, and then from there on down to Willits, the end of the Southern Pacific properties, on the north, there is very little business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would not compare that, would you, with the country between Mojave and Bakersfield?

Mr. PAYSON: Well, there is not so much difference, so far as I have seen it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is not such. You have been over it, have you?

Mr. PAYSON: I have been over it several times.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the only traffic going out of the county is live stock?

Mr. PAYSON: There will be very little of that. The business of the road will be transporting lumber products from Humboldt Bay across that intervening country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Counsel asked you if these lines were not all within the State of California. That is true, of course, but after they are connected up with the main lines of the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe, they will become part of interstate roads, just the same as any other line of track in the State, will they not?

Mr. PAYSON: That is true.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The lumber traffic would move from that country directly through to the east over your lines?

Mr. PAYSON: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You expect it to do so?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think that is all.

Mr. LOVETT: Your understanding is that the ownership
1006 of this line is to be retained in the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, and not merged with the Atchison or the Southern Pacific?

Mr. PAYSON: That is my understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You understood, did you not, also, that half the stock is to be owned by each of these companies?

Mr. PAYSON: I did, and so stated, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, that is what I thought. I believe that is a practical ownership. That is all.

Commissioner LANE: That is all Captain. We will adjourn at this point until 2 o'clock.

Afternoon Session.

R. P. SCHWERIN having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: : Mr. Schwerin, where do you live?

Mr. SCHWERIN: San Mateo.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is your business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Steamship operator.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been in the steamship business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Since 1893.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where did you commence your work in the steamship business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With what company were you first connected?

Mr. SCHWERIN: With the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was that in 1893?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what capacity?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Vice President and General Manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you still occupy that position?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I do.

1007 Mr. SEVERANCE: So that, so far as that corporation is concerned, there has been no change in your title, at least since 1893?

Mr. SCHWERIN: None.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you please state the names of the steamboats that are owned by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company—that is, if you can from memory—or give me the number of steamboats owned by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, when you came here in 1893, say, first?

Mr. SCHWERIN: "The City of Pekin," the "Peru," the "Rio Janeiro," the "Colima," the "Colon," the "San Juan," the "San Jose," the "San Blas," the "Acapulco," the "Barracouta," the "Starbuck" and the "City of New York"—I think that is about all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, which of those ships were engaged in the Oriental trade, if any?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Rio Janeiro," "City of Peking" and "Peru."

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they sailed out of San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And at what ports did they call in the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They touched at Yokohama, Kobe, Nagasaki, Shanghai and Hongkong; and sometimes at the port of Amoy.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Sometimes at what?

Mr. SCHWERIN: At the port of Amoy.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What connection, if any, did you have with the port of Tientsin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: None, except the transfer of freight, from either Shanghai or Nagasaki.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the freight would be brought to your boats at one or the other of those places by coast steamers?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, how long did those three boats continue in that service, Mr. Schwerin?

1008 Mr. SCHWERIN: Two of them were withdrawn after we placed the "Korea" and "Siberia" on the run.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You put the "Korea" and "Siberia" on that same run, and which boats did you withdraw?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Peru" and——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): The "Peking" or "Rio Janeiro"?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, the "Rio Janeiro" was lost.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, yes. Then you had left the "Peking," the "Korea," and the "Siberia"?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We had left the "Peking," the "Siberia," and the "Korea" on the run. There was an interval when we had only two vessels, after we lost the "Rio Janeiro."

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long did those boats make up your Oriental fleet?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Until we got the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria," when we withdrew the "City of Peking."

Mr. SEVERANCE: The "Mongolia" and the "Manchuria" were added?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, and we withdrew the "City of Peking."

Mr. SEVERANCE: So after you had withdrawn the "City of Peking"——

Mr. SCHWERIN: We had the "China" too; I should have said the "China" was put on the run. I should have mentioned her. She was on the run all the time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All the time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So you had four ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: After the "Rio Janeiro" was lost, we put the "Peru" on the run.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had four all the time, did you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We had three on all the time, and we took one off the Panama line and put it on the Transpacific line. The "China" was there all the time. She was there when I went into the company.

Mr. SEVERENCE: Then you had the "China," the "Siberia,"
1009 the "Korea," and the "Peking," and then you got the "Mongolia" and the "Manchuria"?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We added the "Mongolia" and the "Manchuria" and that made five.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then the line consisted of what?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Of the "Korea," "Siberia," "Manchuria," "Mongolia," and the "China," five ships.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What year was that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Korea" and "Siberia" went on the line in 1902, and the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria" went on the line in 1904.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1902 the fleet was made up of the "Korea," "Siberia," "Peking"——

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, prior to 1902 the fleet was made up of the "China," "Peru," and "Peking."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of the "China," "Peru" and "Peking?"

Mr. SCHWERIN: And "Peking," yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that ran back for how many years?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It ran back to the time the "Rio" was lost.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What year was that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: She was lost four years ago, and we substituted the "Peru" for the "Rio."

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not understand my question. I asked you what ships made up the line prior to 1902?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Rio," the "China," and the "Peking."

Mr. SEVERANCE: The "Rio," "China," and "Peking?"

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Rio," the "China," and "Peking."

Mr. SEVERANCE: And for how many years back prior to that time did those ships make up the line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The time I was in the company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then from the time that you came here in 1893, down to the loss of the "Rio," the ships that made up 1010 the line were the three you have just mentioned?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then when you lost the "Rio," you substituted the "Peru" for her?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And afterwards added these other ships that you have mentioned?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; and part of that time the "City of New York" was on the line, when we had extra freight—we put her on for extra freight when we had extra freight. She was also lost.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Schwerin, did you have agents or representatives at the different Oriental Cities?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you kindly name the representatives of your company there from 1893, if you have them in mind—from 1893 down to 1902, when the change was made in the ships that made up the line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Howard, the agent at Yokohama——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): Howard, did you say?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Howard, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Wait a minute. We may as well dispose of him now. Is he still the agent there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He was the agent of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company from the time you came here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At Yokohama?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Go on, please?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Tilden, at Kobe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Tilden?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At what place?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Kobe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is he still the agent there?

1011 Mr. SCHWERIN: He is out of the company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Out of the company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long ago did he retire?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About a year and a half.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to that time, he was your representative, was he?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Not at that point. He was promoted to Hongkong and afterwards to Shanghai, and then finally left the service.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Tilden was your representative originally at Kobe? About when did he leave Kobe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About three years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He was there up to three years ago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From the time you came here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who was at Nagasaki?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Holmes, Ringer & Company, Commercial Agents.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Holmes, Ringer & Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are they still your agents there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They are.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is at Shanghai?

Mr. SCHWERIN: At the present time Mr. Thebau.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you came here——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): We had no agency at Shanghai, regular agency, but we afterwards established an agency there with the fire of—what is that name—connected with the International Bank—Fearin, Daniel & Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What year did you establish that agency?

Mr. SCHWERIN: 1894.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long did they continue to represent you there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Until 1904?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Until 1904?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

1012 Mr. SEVERANCE: Who was your agent at Hongkong?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Van Buren was the agent when I came into the company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Van Vuren?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Van Buren, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long did he remain there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: He remained there till three years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who succeeded Fearin, Daniel & Co., at Shanghai, in 1904?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Thebau.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say Mr. Van Buren was at Hongkong until four years ago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Three years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Three years ago. And who succeeded him?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Tilden.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The same gentleman that was originally at——

Mr. SCHWERIN: At Kobe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who succeeded Mr. Tilden at Kobe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Campbell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Campbell?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, have all these agents—I will read them over to you, and see if I have them correct. Howard at Yokohama all the time. Is that right?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Tilden at Kobe until three years ago, and afterwards Mr. Campbell there.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is still your agent there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Holmes, Ringen & Company——

Mr. SCHWERIN: Ringer—R-i-n-g-e-r.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At Nagasaki. Still your agents there?

1013 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Fearin & Daniel Company at Shanghai from 1894 until 1904, and since 1904, Mr. Thebau?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Mr. Van Beuren at Hong Kong until three years ago, and since then Mr. Tilden?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir—no, Mr. Tilden was afterwards relieved by Mr. Silverstone.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About 18 months ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Mr. Silverstone is still your agent at Hong Kong?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does the freight come from that is brought this way by your line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It originates as far west as Calcutta, and as far north as North China.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it assembled by these various agents at these ports?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What means do these gentlemen take to secure traffic?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, they are in communication with shippers—the usual methods.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is by the ordinary methods that would be employed anywhere?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By personal solicitation, and solicitation by correspondence?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Not so much solicitation by correspondence as solicitation personally, or the shipping men coming into the office and asking if they can get space on the steamers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are these shipments, Mr. Schwerin, largely made by exporters at these ports you have named? That is, do they buy the stuff in the interior, or bring it in, or handle it on commission, or something of that sort, and ship it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; the freight is not only handled
1014 by the houses there but very largely controlled by the parent houses in this country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the freight, where is the freight usually routed? Is it routed by the houses in China or Japan, or is it routed in this country?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Both.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, at all the time that you have represented the Pacific Mail Steamship Company—I am speaking of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company; now when I say "you" and that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company has been represented in the Orient by these gentlemen at various places, they have had practically the same functions, have they not, that is, to look after passenger and freight traffic and procuring it to be sent to this country by your ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did those ships and do they still make through billings of commodities that are destined to points in the eastern parts of the United States?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They issue the bills of lading over there, do they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the official of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company that has charge of the through freights?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Garland is the present manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you anything to do with that part of the business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As the General Manager of the Company, I have the right to approve or disprove.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your function? Do you personally take a hand in the making of rates, or do you leave that to Mr. Garland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, I take a hand in it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How are steamship rates affected? By 1015 what things on the Pacific are steamship rates affected?

Mr. SCHWERIN: By competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Chiefly by competition, are they not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you started out here in 1893, the Pacific Mail was competing for business with all the other lines that were crossing the Pacific, was it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: All the other lines, yes sir, with the exception of the Occidental & Oriental Line, with which it worked in unison.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With the exception of the Occidental & Oriental? Well, did the Occidental and Oriental Steamship line have a separate organization at that time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It had a separate organization, and the Pacific Mail were its agents for freight and passenger business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Pacific Mail was its agent?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Its agent, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As it was or has continued to be during all the time you have been with them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many ships had the Occidental & Oriental?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Three.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many did they have when you came here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Three.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What were their names?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Doric", "Coptic", and "Gaelic".

Mr. SVEVRANCE: What is the third?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Gaelic".

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understood the first two, but not the last.

Mr. SCHWERIN: "Doric", "Coptic" and "Gaelic".

Mr. SEVERANCE: What became of the "Gaelic"?

1016 Mr. SCHWERIN: She was given up. I believe the owners sold her.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For several years you have only had the "Doric" and the "Coptic" have you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you came here, you found that line being operated under the auspices of the Pacific Mail, although in different ownership?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Different management, altogether.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: And different management, I say.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It had a different management?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I thought you said the Pacific Mail Steamship Company acted as its agent?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It did. It didn't manage the line though.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It didn't manage the line? What part of the management was——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): We simply acted as its agents for freight and passenger business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company used its organization to procure freight and passengers for this company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, for which they were paid.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know, Mr. Schwerin, how long the Pacific Mail has been in the Oriental trade.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Since 1868.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was one of the pioneer lines, was it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The only line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It was the only line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Took the first cargo of flour in 1868 to the Orient.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was the Occidental & Oriental line established?

Mr. SCHWERIN: 1874.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You found that in operation when you came here?

1017 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who was its manager?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. D. V. Stubbs.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. D. V. Stubbs?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is he related to Mr. J. C. Stubbs?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Very closely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How closely?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Brother.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, that is close enough. And how long did he continue to be the manager of the Occidental and Oriental?

Mr. SCHWERIN: He is still the manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is still the manager is he?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say the Pacific Mail acts as the agent, but aside from acting as the traffic agent to procure passengers and freight through its organization, the Pacific Mail has not assumed the management of the ships of the Occidental & Oriental?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Nothing to do with the management of the ships.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Nothing to do with the management of the ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know who—well, I think we brought that out before, the ownership of the stock. Now, Mr. Schwerin, in so far as the procuring of traffic is concerned, these two lines are now and always have been since you have been here, acting in harmony?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Through the same instrumentalities?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the Pacific Mail Company, at the time you came here, have any agencies in the United States for its business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Not that I know of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have none in New York?

1018 Mr. SCHWERIN: None except the agency here in San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you ever established an agency in New York?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was that done?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Some time between 1895 and 1897—as near as I can recollect.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who was appointed as agent?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Hawley.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is his name?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Hawley—H-a-w-l-e-y.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long did he continue to be the agent?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Until he left the employ of the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember when that was?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About 1902 I should think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who succeeded him?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Nutting, his chief clerk—or Mr. Spence, his chief clerk, in charge of the freight business, and as our general eastern freight agent. Mr. Nutting is our eastern general passenger agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you establish agencies at any other place in the east?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; in Chicago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who was your agent there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Neimyer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In what year did you appoint Mr. Neimyer?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The same period.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did Mr. Hawley, and after him, Mr. Spence and Mr. Nutting, as well as Mr. Neimyer, sustain any relation to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Not so far as I was concerned. They reported directly to us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Possibly you do not understand my ques-

1019 tion. I ask whether these gentlemen sustained any relation to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, they retained their original titles with the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That does not answer it. What was their original title?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think Mr. Hawley was the general eastern traffic manager, and Mr. Neimyer was the general eastern agent—western agent, I should say; general western agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Schwerin, have you had any other agency in the east, outside of New York and Chicago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No. Those were the only ones who were appointed agents.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had no agency in Boston?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir. We had no regular appointed agent in Boston.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you have any representative in Boston?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, I believe the representative of the Southern Pacific acted for us there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He acted for you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How about Baltimore?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The same way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how about Philadelphia?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The same way. We gave commissions to any—I should say this was principally on passenger business. The agent at Boston never acted for us in freight matters. Mr. Hawley is the only one that acted for us on freight in New York City, and Mr. Niemyer in Chicago, and every ticket agent in the United States of every connecting carrier, trunk line, was appointed as our agent. We asked them to act as our ticket agents, and we pay commissions for all the business they secure.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But nobody had your freight matters in charge other than these general officers in New York and Chicago?

1020 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is correct, is it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Schwerin——

Mr. SCHWERIN (cont'g): That is, they were the only two officers who were appointed by us under a regular form of appointment.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let me ask this: were there any other agents who had authority to make contracts for you for traffic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: If they did, they would have had to do it for those two gentlemen.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They would have had to act as sub-agents under them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they were contracting agents?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of the company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And were also, as you have stated, the agents of the Southern Pacific in a certain capacity?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, did you solicit shipments in connection with the Southern Pacific from the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We solicited shipments to every point in the United States, by any line by which we could move it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By any line by which you could move it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were possibly aware, were you not, Mr. Schwerin, that the authority of the capital stock was owned by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I was not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had it not been brought to your attention?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't think they owned a share of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Pacific Mail stock?

1021 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did they sell it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They did not buy it until after Mr. Huntington died. I am talking about 1893, 1895, 1896, and 1897, when these gentlemen were appointed. I supposed that was the time you were referring to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But have you not been informad recently that they own it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I knew when they bought it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I didn't know but perhaps they had sold it since we were in New York the other day. When did they buy that stock, if you know about it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think it was in the winter of 1901.

Mr. LOVETT: 1900, was it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: 1900? Mr. Huntington has been dead now—he died in 1900, I think.

Mr. LOVETT: He died in August, 1900.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Then they bought it in the fall of 1900.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Schwerin, was the Pacific Mail Steamship Company stock now owned by the Southern Pacific formerly owned by Mr. Huntington?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It was not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By whom was it owned?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It was owned by about, I think they had something like 5600 Stockholders on the book.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know from whom the stock was bought or acquired by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In the street.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It was bought in the street?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the Southern Pacific Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. I think Mr. Hawley and Mr. Harriman sold quite a block of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They did what?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think they sold quite a block of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, Mr. Harriman sold quite a block of it to his railroad company?

1022 Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Harriman had nothing to do with the Southern Pacific at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was before we acquired the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He sold it to the Southern Pacific in the fall of 1900?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; Mr. Hawley and he, I think, sold quite a block short to Mr. Tweed and Mr. Speyer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Sold quite a block of it short, and then afterwards went into the street and picked up the stock and made deliveries?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that was in the Fall of 1900?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that at that time, or from that time, the fall of 1900, the Southern Pacific Company did own the majority of the capital stock of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And still own it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: To the best of my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was prior to the purchase of the Southern Pacific Stock by the Union Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: A few months prior—it was in the spring of 1901, according to the testimony, that the stock of the Southern Pacific was purchased by the Union Pacific. Who owned the stock of the Occidental & Oriental Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: 50 per cent. was owned by the Union Pacific Company, and 50 per cent. by the Pacific Improvement Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Pacific Improvement Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who owned the stock of the Pacific Improvement Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That was owned in equal proportions—
1023 you mean at the time I came into the company?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Owned in equal proportions by the estate of Governor Stanford, by the Crocker Estate, by Mr. Huntington individually, and the Searles—Mr. Searles, in New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was the Hopkins stock—the Searles stock was the Hopkins stock?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that one-half that stock belonged to the Union Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the other half belonged directly to these gentlemen?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What became of the half of the Oriental & Occidental stock that was owned by Governor Stanford and Mr. Crocker and Mr. Huntington and Mr. Hopkins?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It was afterwards purchased by the Union Pacific interests, with the exception of the Huntington stock, which is still owned by the Huntingtons—that is a one-eighth interest.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Still owned by the Huntingtons?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; the Huntingtons.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the balance of it was purchased by the Union Pacific Interests?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean by the Union Pacific Railroad Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you tell when that purchase was made, sir?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I should say between the year 1903 and the year 1905.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Between those years, the Stanford Stock and the Crocker Stock, and the Searles Stock was bought by the Union Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

1024 Mr. SEVERANCE: So that at the present time, seven-eighths of the Occidental & Oriental belongs to the Union Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And one-eighth still belongs to the Huntingtons?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Southern Pacific Company as a corporation never owned any of the stock of the Occidental & Oriental?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Commissioner LANE: Did you give the year in which the Pacific Mail became the agent of the Occidental & Oriental?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir; I did not.

Commissioner LANE: What year was it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I believe they became the agent for the Occidental & Oriental—not speaking of my own knowledge now, but I have heard in 1884. In the Orient, when they first started in, they had a joint agency, and then they split in 1876, and they continued separate agents until 1884, and then the Pacific Mail again took the agency for that Company.

Commissioner LANE: What year did the Occidental & Oriental begin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In 1874.

Commissioner LANE: They were six years under the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The Pacific Mail had been in operation—that was six years after the Pacific Mail had started its transpacific line. But they were in operation on the Panama line afterwards——

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am going to take that up separately, the Panama end of it. I haven't got to that yet. Is that all, Mr. Commissioner?

Commissioner LANE: Yes. I understand that it was 1884 that the Pacific Mail became the agent of the Occidental & Oriental?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think you stated, did you not, Mr.

1025 Schwerin, that that agency for the Occidental & Oriental has continued ever since its inception?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I stated that it had been continuous ever since I have been with the company in 1893.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I say, it has continued ever since its inception, as you understand it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I understand it has continued from 1884.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But I say, it still continues now?

Mr. SCHWERIN: And has continued until the present time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Now, what other steamship lines, regular lines, I am not speaking of tramp ships, but what other lines of steamships were going out of San Francisco and to the Orient, at the time you came here in 1893?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Those were the only two lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Those were the only two lines, the Pacific Mail and the Occidental & Oriental?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were there any lines of steamers going out of any other parts on the Pacific Coast at that time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. The Canadian Pacific were operating a line of steamers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that was in operation at that time to Vancouver?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Vancouver.

Mr. DUNNE: What line is that, Mr. Severance?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Canadian Pacific. And that line was competitive with yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With separate agents in the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there any other line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The Northern Pacific Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Northern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Tacoma and Seattle?

1026 Mr. SCHWERIN: Tacoma.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Tacoma. And that line was in competition with yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What other line, if any?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were any other lines put on between 1893 and 1900, going out of or sailing out of any of the ports along the Pacific here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The Toyo Kaisha came on to San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the Japanese line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: To San Francisco, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And when did that start?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In 1899. And the Nippon Nushen Kaisha——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just a moment, before we reach that. Was the line competitive with you, the Toyo Kaisha?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We took the agency of that line—the Pacific Mail did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you have it from the inception of the line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, from the time it first came here?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is by "we" you mean the Pacific Mail?
Mr. SCHWERIN: The Pacific Mail took the agency of that line.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And have since kept that agency?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And just in passing, before we go to the other lines established up the coast or down the coast, is there any other line from San Francisco to the Orient now, with the exception of the three you have named, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, the Occidental & Oriental, and this Japanese line?
Mr. SCHWERIN: At the present time?
1027 Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.
Mr. SCHWERIN: The Standard Oil Company run a line of steamers, yes.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Do they run that line for commercial business?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Oh, yes. They run oil out and commercial freight home.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Oil out and commercial freight home?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. And then there is the Dollar Steamship Company.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What Company?
Mr. SCHWERIN: The Dollar.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Dollar?
Mr. SCHWERIN: D-o-l-l-a-r-, yes.
Commissioner LANE: What is the name of the Standard Oil line?
Mr. SCHWERIN: It has no name. They are just called the Standard Oil Steamers.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How many boats have they? the Standard Oil line?
Mr. SCHWERIN: They run about a monthly service.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How many boats?
Mr. SCHWERIN: It must take four boats to run a monthly service.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Do they take any freight west bound?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Do you mean west bound from the Orient?
Mr. SEVERANCE: From here?
Mr. SCHWERIN: We always speak of the freight as inward freight and outward freight.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Inward freight and outward freight?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Inward from the Orient, and outward to the Orient.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Then we will call it outward freight. Then do they take any outward freight, any cargo except their own oil?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Nothing but oil.
1028 Mr. SEVERANCE: And they bring back anything they can get?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Anything they can get hold of.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Are they represented by you in any way over there in the Orient?
Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: You have never been agents for them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Therefore the Standard Oil Company, on business originating in the Orient and coming to this country, is a competitor of yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the other company you spoke of, the Dollar Steamship Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was that company established?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It has been running the last three or four years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who are the officers of that company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Dollar is the President. I don't know the others.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Dollar is the President?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many ships have they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How frequent a service have they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Their service is irregular. They load lumber, and come back with general merchandise, anything they can get in the Orient.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They load lumber in San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They load lumber from the sound.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And take it to the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: And take it to the Orient. They are competitors homeward, and not outward.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They are competitors homeward?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir. Then we have the French line, the——

1029 Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): Just a moment. As to this Dollar line. Do they have separate agencies in the Orient, to procure traffic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, what was the next one?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The French Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that the same French Line that has ships on the Atlantic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, it is another organization.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Another company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many ships does the French line have?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They have an arrival here every month.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Monthly. Do they compete with you both ways, or only one way?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Only homeward, inward.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What do they take over?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They just keep going around to the eastward all the time, keep a line of ships going around the world.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then they go from San Francisco around the Horn?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, and they touch all along the coast of Central America, Mexico, South America, and so on.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they have separate agencies in the Orient from yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And they compete with you for business from the Orient here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any other line coming inward?

Mr. SCHWERIN: None that I know of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, now we will go up to the Sound again. You have spoken of the Northern Pacific Line. What other line is there?

1030 Mr. SCHWERIN: There is the Nippon Nashen Kaisha, run in connection with the Great Northern.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was established about 11 years ago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Oh, no; established about 1898 or 1899.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was it not established in 1896?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, it may have been, I am not sure about it; I would not be sure of the date of that first operation, but I think it was later than that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was that company represented in any way by you in the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has it been competitive with you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What other line is there up there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: There is a line called the Ocean Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does that sail from?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Tacoma or Seattle.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they have separate agencies from yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And are they competing with you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Both ways?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. Then there is the China Mutual Steamship Company?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The what?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The China Mutual Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The China Mutual?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do they sail from?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Tacoma or Seattle.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They have separate agencies from yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And are competitive with you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

1031 Mr. SEVERANCE: Both ways?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Any other lines?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Then there was the Dodwell line, of Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have omitted the Great Northern line, have you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is the Nippon Nashen Kaisha. I am now along there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I see; you are taking the order in which they were established.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, the line to Portland. In what year was that established?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That was along in 1896 or 1897.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it lasted three years, did it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They had separate agencies from yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Competing with you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who succeeded them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They were succeeded by Samuels & Samuels.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long did they continue in that trade?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They were there two or three years—or it may have been the other way, by the way; it may have been Samuels & Samuels first. Samuels & Samuels were on at the time the O. R. & N. was in the hands of a receiver.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I thought you had that turned around.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir. It was first Samuels & Samuels, and then the other company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were both of them competitors of yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who succeeded Dodwell?

1032 Mr. SCHWERIN: The O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For about three months intervening, there was a man named Graham had some ships running in connection with the O. R. & N., was there not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I never considered that a line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He had some ships there, chartered some ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think he did; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that was run in connection with the O. R. & N.?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know what the connection was. I had nothing to do with it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Run from Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And was it competing with you, so long as it lasted?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We didn't consider it competition.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Too small?

Mr. SCHWERIN Yes, sir; irregular.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In so far as it did any business, it was competitive business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, it took it away from some Transpacific line; if it got any business, it was business that all the lines would have shared. But we didn't consider it a competing line at all, from our standpoint.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not represent Graham over there at all, did you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So if Graham succeeded in getting any business he got it in opposition to you and the other lines?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; that is right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you regard the Dodwell line as a competing line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Samuels' line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Portland and Asiatic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

1033 Mr. SEVERANCE: That Portland and Asiatic Company was organized by the O. R. & N. Company, you have stated—or was it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What became of the Portland and Asiatic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Still running.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At the present time are you representing them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long since?

Mr. SCHWERIN: 1904.

Mr. SEVERANCE: 1904. Prior to that time had it been run independently of you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I had nothing to do with it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, independently of your agency, the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir. It is today independent of the Pacific Mail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. I understand—we will get at that later. But up to 1904, they had agents of their own, had they not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Soliciting traffic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Performing the usual duties of agents?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Today they have the same agents as the Pacific Mail have they not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The Pacific Mail are its agents.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Pacific Mail is its agents?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I notice on the literature put out by the Southern Pacific Road, or by these steamship companies, that the same agents appear as the representatives of the Portland and 1034 Asiatic in the Orient that also appears as agents of the Pacific Mail. That is the case, is it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And this Portland and Asiatic line was put in——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): I would like to correct the thing here, Mr. Severance, and that is to say that in the port of Nagasaki, which is a large coaling port, practically, Holmes Ringer & Company represent all steamship lines that enter that one point, and when you asked me in regard to that one, I neglected to say that that is principally a commercial port attending to the provisioning and coaling of ships.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That only applies to Nagasaki?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have been personally in the Orient, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And are familiar with the way business is done?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You still have the Great Northern to enumerate?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, then the Great Northern came on. Before them came on the Boston Towboat Company, with the Tremont, the Fremont, the Lyra, the Hyades, and the Pleiades.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Lots of stars. Then, in addition to that, were there two ships of the Great Northern.

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Minnesota" and the "Dakota," yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That constitutes the whole list, does it not, of the ships that are plying between those ports, that is, the ports of the Pacific Coast and the Orient, as a regular thing, outside of the tramp books?

Mr. SCHWERIN: At the present time?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there at one time, Mr. Schwerin, a line of boats proceeding from San Diego.

1035 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was that line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: A line put out by a shipping firm.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember who they were, and about when the line was established, and how long it lasted?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't remember the name of the firm—Downing something—no, the name of the firm was——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): Well, that is perhaps not material.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, it was an English shipping firm put the line on, and they were on, I think, about two years.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And between what dates, about?

Mr. SCHWERIN: 1901 and '2 or '3—around there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And was that line a competing line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not represent them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That line was procured to be run by the Santa Fe Road, was it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They ran in connection with the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Was it not your understanding that it was through the influence of the Santa Fe that the line was established?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I know nothing about their arrangements.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All you know about it was that they ran in connection with the Santa Fe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that as necessarily so, because the Santa Fe is the only line reaching San Diego?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I presume so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There are no other railroad lines reaching there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

1036 Mr. SEVERANCE: And there were not at that time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you recall any conferences between the officials of the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific or yourself about the time this line to San Diego was given up?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I had none.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had none?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were not present at any conference between Mr. Stubbs and Mr. Ripley, or any other representative of the Santa Fe, with reference to the movement by rail of Oriental traffic, or at which there was discussed the movement by rail of Oriental traffic brought to this country by the San Francisco lines under your jurisdiction?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I have no recollection of such a meeting.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't remember any such meeting?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember, Mr. Schwerin, about the time that the San Diego line was given up, that there was some conversation or talk as to how the freight coming here from the Orient should go forward to the East, if that line was abandoned and the Santa Fe people brought their Oriental shipments by the way of San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I had always tried to get the Santa Fe into business relations with us; I had always told them I could do it better than they could get it done by anybody else.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I have no doubt you believed it. About that time, Mr. Schwerin, did you represent these modest suggestions regarding your ability to handle it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I have been soliciting this Santa Fe business all the time, and trying to get it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you recall any assurances that were 1037 given to the Santa Fe people that if they would give up trying to support this line out of San Diego, they would be treated fairly in the division of east bound business outside of San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. I know of no meeting where that question was discussed with the Santa Fe officers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With whom did you have your conferences at which you made those assurances? With what individual?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Every time I saw Paul Morton, I told him he ought to give up his business, that we could do it better than anybody else. He was very much dissatisfied with the service he was getting at San Diego.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I thought I could lay my hands on some testimony given by Mr. Stubbs, but I guess I have missed it. You were frequently—well, as the result either of the poor service out of San Diego, or of your solicitation, or that of some of your people, the line was abandoned, was it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I understood the line was abandoned because they lost so much money.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Because they lost so much money? What arrangements do your agents in the Orient make on business coming to San Francisco as to the route that it shall take by rail when it is consigned to the east, or what do they attempt to make? Do you attempt to distribute it fairly between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They do not make any arrangement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say that your agents have the right to make through billings.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that they solicit business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the soliciting of that business, do they solicit or ask the shippers to route it in any particular way after it gets to this country?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

1038 Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the Southern Pacific maintain any separate agencies in the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the Santa Fe maintain any?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then will you explain, if you can, how the business is divided over there, as to removal to the East after it reaches this country?

Mr. SCHWERIN: A ship comes in here and we just turn the whole cargo over to the Southern Pacific; and another ship comes in and we turn the whole cargo over to the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I want to get at.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the way you divide it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you divide it equally? By that I mean, do you first give a shipload of merchandise to one road, and then a shipload to the other?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is the way it is done, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been doing that, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I think the past six months.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For the past six months. Prior to six months ago what method did you take to secure a distribution of the East bound traffic as between the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We just loaded the cars put on the dock, and the railroad did the rating.

Commissioner LANE: The last six months, the Santa Fe has had the boats from the Orient?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It has had the same amount, I think he means.

Commissioner LANE: An equal amount.

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir, I would not say that.

Commissioner LANE: Approximately so?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir, I would not be able to tell how much one road got or the other, without going to the statistics.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The question whether they got an equal
1039 amount would depend upon the amount carried by the respective ships, I presume.

Commissioner LANE: Is it the agreement that each alternative ship go to the Santa Fe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the nature of the agreement?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We have no agreement. We simply have an arrangement for the exchange of traffic. The Southern Pacific now gives a much larger proportion of traffic than the Santa Fe does, and we try to give the Southern Pacific as nearly equal percentages as we can offer them, and the same way with the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, if the Southern Pacific gives you 75 per cent. of the inward bound freight?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir, we would be in duty bound to give the Southern Pacific 75 per cent. of inward bound freight. If the reverse of that were to take place, and if the Santa Fe should give us 75 per cent. of the outward bound business, I would naturally be inclined to give the Santa Fe 75 per cent. of the inward bound business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long do you think that inclination of yours would be indulged, so long as the Southern Pacific owns the control of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The Southern Pacific has never interfered in any shape, form or description, with my operation of the steamship company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They probably have not had reason to.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir they have many times. I think Mr. Stubbs looks upon me in the question of traffic as if I had nothing whatever to do with any incorporation whose stock is owned in the other company which he is employed by.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You think Mr. Stubbs looks on you as a rank outsider?

1040 Mr. SCHWERIN: Absolutely, over and over again—to my sorrow.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Schwerin, to proceed a little further, with this division of business between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific. You say at the present time you give one shipload to one line and another shipload to the other line, and you have done that for six months?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir, about six months.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to six months ago, how did you make the division?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Turned the freight over to the Southern Pacific Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All of it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And then the Southern Pacific Company did what with it? What they pleased?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose that they routed it—they had an arrangement by which they routed a certain portion by the Santa Fe, and a certain portion by the Southern Pacific, but that was done under our, under the steamship company's understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, let us see, Mr. Schwerin. Prior to six months ago, all the freight was turned over by you to the Southern Pacific. Then the Southern Pacific, of course, had absolute control of that freight, could have sent it forward by its own lines, either by Ogden, the Central & Union Pacific route, or the Sunset route, or deliver it to the Santa Fe. That is true, is it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And for how many years had you been delivering all your freight to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Since the—I think shortly after the California and Asiatic line went out of business—the California and Oriental line, I should say, went out of business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the California and Oriental line?

1041 Mr. SCHWERIN: That was the line to San Diego.

Mr. SEVERANCE: While that line was in existence, what did you do with your freight when it was got in here to San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Sent it over to the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Always?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And did the Southern Pacific send all of it East over their lines?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Aren't your relations with Mr. Stubbs' organization sufficiently intimate so that you know what becomes of the freight that leaves here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you don't know as to whether they gave any of it to the Santa Fe at any time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They may have given it to the Santa Fe at that time, without my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, without your knowledge. But they did not do it with your knowledge?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they a year ago give any of it to the Santa Fe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did they not give a certain amount of that traffic to the Santa Fe at all times after the San Diego line was abandoned?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is my impression.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And was it not because of the assurance given to the Santa Fe road that it should have a certain amount of this business coming over the Pacific Mail and its allied lines, that the San Diego line was abandoned?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As I stated before, Mr. Severance, I personally solicited that business myself; I urged the Santa Fe people to give us that business, and I told them, and I talked with Mr. Paul Morton, who was the only Santa Fe man that I had any connection with, and told him that we could transact his business and do it better 1042 for him than he could get it done by anybody else.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Schwerin, that does not quite touch the point, it seems to me. You say you could transact their business. Now, you have already testified that cargoes coming in from the Orient are discharged from your ships and turned over to the Southern Pacific—they were until those last six months?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, it was not the transaction then, of the business of the Santa Fe, in any way, was it, unless you could hold out to them some assurance of traffic. Did you hold out to Mr. Morton an assurance that his line would receive traffic from your ships if he would abandon the San Diego line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That stood to reason, that we had to, in making a traffic arrangement of that kind—it stood to reason that we had to give him traffic in exchange for the traffic that he gave us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I am trying to get at. You spoke of handling his business——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): I made a report to the Santa Fe, and showed them the amount of tonnage which we would give them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, the amount you would give them if they would abandon the San Diego line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir; after we were in operation with the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The amount of tonnage they had been given?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The amount that they had been given; I kept them posted as to the amount of tonnage that passed over their lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you mean tonnage west bound or east bound?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Tonnage east bound, that is, bound from San Francisco to interior points of the United States.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did you get that information?

1043 Mr. SCHWERIN: We kept track of it on the dock. The Santa Fe cars would be switched in to be loaded with Santa Fe freight. We did not load Southern Pacific cars with Santa Fe freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understood you turned all your cars over to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: So we did, but we kept track of the cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You kept track of the amount of the business that was given to the Santa Fe by the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is right, is it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you did assure Mr. Morton, in order to procure them to abandon the San Diego line, that they should have a fair amount, or a certain amount, I don't know how you put it——

Mr. SCHWERIN: I never made any stipulation with Mr. Morton as to any amount.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Not as to any amount, but what was your proposition to him, then, outside of the general statement that you would handle his business better? Did you not give him some assurance?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, I gave him no assurance of a definite amount of freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand, but did you tell him he would get some freight from you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Oh, yes, undoubtedly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was that as near as you got at the actual result?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I told you, Mr. Severance, that I have no idea of ever having discussed with Mr. Paul Morton anything in regard to a definite amount of freight to be turned over to the Santa Fe.

Commissioner LANE: Have you a copy of that circular, or report that you made to the Santa Fe of the business that you have then?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It was not a circular, but in the shape of a report.

1044 Commissioner LANE: Have you got a copy of that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. Everything was burned up in the fire.

Commissioner LANE: Perhaps the Santa Fe people have one.

Mr. SCHWERIN: They may have.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When did you make out that report?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Each month, after the month's business passed over the dock.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to what time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't think there has been any made since the fire. In fact, I am sure there have been none made since the fire.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was delivered to whom representing the Santa Fe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Sent to Mr. Bissell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then he would probably know. Were his offices burned up too?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know exactly as to that. I can tell you, Mr. Severance, that sometimes that freight would run for a month 20 per cent., sometimes it would run 30 per cent., sometimes 17 per cent., sometimes 28 per cent.—it varied from month to month.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It depended upon the amount of freight that the Southern Pacific gave to the Santa Fe. That is all there was of it. There was not any way that the Santa Fe could get in there and get that except by sufferance of the Southern Pacific, was there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think if the Santa Fe people had had cause to complain in regard to the amount of freight they were receiving in exchange for the amount of outward freight they were giving us, that we would have heard from them: they would have found fault with us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were quite content, were they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, we were giving them more freight than they were giving us. They were not giving us the same amount——

1045 Mr. SEVERANCE: I say, they were content, were they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As far as I know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They did not make any fuss about the amount of business they were getting?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You say in those times, you gave them from 17 to 20 per cent. How did you happen to increase that to what might possibly be 50 per cent., assuming that the boats were all equally burdened, six months ago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, a ship may come in here—for instance, the "Mongolia" may come in here with only 1700 tons overland cargo, and the next voyage she might come in here with 8000 tons of overland cargo.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I appreciate that.

Mr. SCHWERIN: There is not a ship comes in with any definite amount of overland cargo.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I appreciate that thoroughly, but if you are without discrimination, turning the ships over to the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific, turning them over indiscriminately as they come, one of them is just as likely to get a big cargo as the other?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes; but if the Santa Fe is not giving us outward tonnage, we would not turn every second ship over to the Santa Fe; we would regulate that so as to have a fair exchange for the amount of tonnage over to us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understood you to say, Mr. Schwerin (perhaps I misunderstood you), that about six months ago you adopted the plan of sending alternate ships to the Santa Fe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is because it just happened that way at the present time. The through tonnage has been very light.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you discharge your cargo?

Mr. SCHWERIN: At San Francisco, Pier 42 and Pier 44.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At some point that is reached by the Santa Fe as well as by the Southern Pacific?

1046 Mr. SCHWERIN: It is switched from the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is switched from the Southern Pacific to the Santa Fe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you caused that to be done with every alternate cargo?

Mr. LOVETT: He said alternate cargoes from——

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean you have been lately, for six months past?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What you mean is that you do not know that you will continue to do that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you have continued that for six months. At whose suggestion, if any one's, did you make that change in the method of handling the amount of traffic for each?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think the question came up in relation to the steamship company routing the overland freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Came up between whom, sir?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Come up between Mr. Luce and Mr. Chambers and myself.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is Mr. Luce.

Mr. SCHWERIN: He is the general freight agent of the Southern Pacific Company in San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who is Mr. Chambers?

Mr. SCHWERIN: He is the general freight agent of the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And this was a conversation between you three gentlemen.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was said at that conversation, in substance, by each of you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I believe that I raised the point that if we turned the freight—if we turned the freight over to the Southern Pacific Company the question immediately arose in regard to the Santa Fe handling the freight. We had had considerable 1047 trouble on the dock in regard to getting Southern Pacific cars, and I think I threatened that unless I had less trouble in getting cars from the Southern Pacific, I would shove all the freight over the Santa Fe; if the Southern Pacific didn't give me any cars, I would send the freight over the Santa Fe, because the freight was congested on the docks there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did that meet with any remonstrance on the part of the majority owners of stock in the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. The owners have never remonstrated or said anything upon the question. We discussed the question and concluded the best way to do, instead of apportioning out of the ship any special cargo, for instance, a cargo that might be served best by the Santa Fe lines, to try to aggregate that cargo out of the ship, that we would turn over the whole cargo to the Santa Fe, and let them bill it out as they saw fit, and then turn over the whole net cargo to the Southern Pacific, and let them bill it out as they saw fit.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Schwerin, did you three gentlemen agree on that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you have since carried out that agreement?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As far as I know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to this date?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As far as I know, it has been carried out.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you give those instructions to your subordinates?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that was satisfactory to the two roads with whom you made the trade?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As far as I know, yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: What was the month in which that arrangement was made?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Sir?

1048 Commissioner LANE: What was the month in last year in which that arrangement was made?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't just recollect what month it was.

Commissioner LANE: Was it about the middle of the year?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. I think it was between September and November. It may have been later than that, when I finally met those people, and we had that conversation about the delivery of the cars of the Southern Pacific and the Atchison there—it may have been November, and it may have been December. I don't remember, Mr. Lane, just when the meeting took place.

Commissioner LANE: Did you adopt any new policy as to the publishing of rates, either on the other side or on this side, for Oriental business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: During last year?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: Did you publish your new rates over on the other side?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They were published by the rail connections in their joint Oriental traffic.

Commissioner LANE: Published by the rail connections on this side?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: For business moving from this side outward?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think there is a joint tariff published by them for inward rates also.

Commissioner LANE: For inward rates?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, Transcontinental; transpacific and transcontinental.

Commissioner LANE: Where could that rate be found over in the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That tariff, do you mean?

Commissioner LANE: That tariff, yes.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Our agents have it over there.

1049 Commissioner LANE: Your agents have it over there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: That is, the tariff for business moving to the United States and inland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: Is that tariff the same to-day that it was a year ago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think there have been some corrections made in the tariff, in relation to certain freights, and also in relation to what they call the outboard freights. You see there is an arbitrary freight originating in Tientsin—they take an arbitrary to Shanghai or Kobe or Newchang or Nagasaki, and these outboard rates were modified, and I think the new rate sheet has got the new, modified rates in it.

Commissioner LANE: Were the rates from San Francisco to eastern points in the United States over the Santa Fe the same as rates to the same points over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: To the best of my knowledge, yes. All the transcontinental lines and all the transpacific lines are billing at the same rates. The principal commodities we bring from the Orient are tea and matting.

Commissioner LANE: Do you import much rice?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Not overland, no; locally.

Commissioner LANE: And silk?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: Are curios of much importance?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. But the great bulk of the commodities are tea and matting.

Commissioner LANE: When you route business over on the other side for the East, say Chicago or New York, do you give a through bill of lading which names the American railroad that carries it to the East?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: You do not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. We give our own bill of lading.

1050 Commissioner LANE: You give your own bill of lading, showing the business as going over the Occidental & Oriental, or the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir—whichever line it moves on.

Commissioner LANE: And that bill of lading runs from the point in China, Hongkong we will say, or Nagasaki in Japan, to Chicago, say?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, via the port of San Francisco.

Commissioner LANE: Via the port of San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: And it is reserved to you to determine there, or at any time you please, just how the freight shall move, once it reaches the port of San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At the time the line was running to San Diego, you routed all the business to the East over the Southern Pacific, did you not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It was routed that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, you caused it to be done, or permitted it to be done?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That was the route that——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): Who routed it? You seem to make a distinction between causing it to be routed, and routing it? Who did it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose it was routed by the Southern Pacific officials.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the abandonment of the San Diego line, prior to their abandoning their line to San Diego and coming up here, the Southern Pacific had all the business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And immediately the line from San Diego was abandoned, and the Santa Fe freight began to go through this port, the Santa Fe began to get a percentage of the inward business, which you say varied from 17 to 20 per cent.

Mr. SCHWERIN: It went higher than that sometimes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Sometimes higher than that?

1051 Mr. SCHWERIN: That is right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Since then, the Santa Fe has had no line of ships in competition with you, and going out of San Diego?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What lines does that division of traffic embrace? Does it embrace the Japanese line, or only the Occidental & Oriental and the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: All three.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All three?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that covers the distribution of all the traffic coming in here by those three lines from all ports of the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When you turn over to the Southern Pacific its share of this business do you have anything to do with routing it to the east, that is, as to deciding what particular route it shall take to the east?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As it leaves the lines of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is left to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know, sir, whether the Atlantic seaboard business, New York business, Boston business, and so on, moves by the Sunset route, in case the Southern Pacific has the routing?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It could move that way, but if it did we would object.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would object to the Sunset route?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We are all competing for the rapidity
1052 with which we deliver tonnage from the Orient destined for the Atlantic seaboard, and we believe that the Central & Union Pacific, and Chicago & Northwestern can make better time than the Sunset—we want that all rail route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You prefer the all rail route?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. The people in New York will telegraph to the Orient asking when the goods will arrive, and all the lines are competing to make the best showing with reference to the time occupied in transit, upon the question of who can give the best service.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You find, do, you, that it is best for you to have the stuff moved by the Southern Pacific, the Union Pacific and the Northwestern?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. That has been the route since I can remember.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That has been the route that you have preferred since you have been there. Do you happen to know whether that is the way——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): The Rio Grande, I believe some of the teas used to go over the Rio Grande

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Some of the teas used to go by the Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They don't any more, do they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know, I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They do?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who routes them that way?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose the railroads.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't mean to say, do you, Mr. Schwerin, that the Southern Pacific Railroad agents here at San Francisco, if they have the routing of the traffic, route it over the Rio Grande?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I have understood that teas are still going over the Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But it is not routed that way by the Southern Pacific, where it is left in their hands to route, is it?

1053 Mr. SCHWERIN: There is nobody else could route it except the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Nobody else could route it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then the Southern Pacific absolutely controls the routing of the traffic after you turn it over to them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It is for their account, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Neither the shippers nor the consignee have any voice in that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: If they have, they never exercise it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They never exercise it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that if the Rio Grande gets any of that traffic, it gets it through the kindness of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, what line to the East does the traffic that goes over the Portland and Asiatic take?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It takes the O. R. & N., the Oregon Short Line, and U. P.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Northwestern?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Can you tell any reason why the traffic goes Northwestern instead of by the Milwaukee & St. Paul, or any other line east of Omaha?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know nothing about that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You merely know the fact, without knowing the reasons?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I merely know the fact. I don't know that it all goes by the Northwestern. I know that it goes up on the Oregon Short Line, and the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, up to the junction of the Union Pacific. After that I don't know where it goes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: After it gets to——

Mr. DUNNE: He has not said it always goes Northwestern.

1054 Mr. SEVERANCE: I understood him to say that that is the way it moved east of Omaha, by the Northwestern.

Mr. DUNNE: No, that was the implication of your question, but that was not his testimony.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I certainly do not want to misquote Mr. Schwerin, or put him in a hole, or anything of that kind.

Mr. SCHWERIN: I want to correct myself.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If I mistook you, correct me.

Mr. SCHWERIN: I made the remark that the Oregon Short Line the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, the U. P., and the Northwestern, because it is the habit to take it on that line. But I mean that after striking the U. P., I don't deny how it went. I know that up to that point it went over the O. R. & N., and the Short Line. I would suppose it would go the shortest route under the same conditions, if we wanted it to go from San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, if you were sending it from San Francisco, that is the route you would have to take?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is the route I would like to have it go.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is the route, as you understand it, that the bulk of the traffic takes?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, because we have a fast freight, are supposed to have an Asiatic fast freight on that line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any difference, Mr. Schwerin, any substantial difference in the character of the commodities that are imported through the Portland gateway and those that are imported through the San Francisco gateway, or are they about the same?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As far as the Portland tonnage is concerned, with the exception of silk, silk piece goods, the rougher or common class of goods that go by tramp steamers rather than by mail and 1055 dispatch steamers, and excluding this local Oriental business which we have largely here in San Francisco, the general tonnage is about the same.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The same class of goods?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Matting, tea and curios.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember whether at the time that the O. R. & N. was running boats to the Orient, or rather had boats running in connection with it, and at the time that the O. R. & N. was independent of the Southern Pacific, whether it was customary for the O. R. & N. boats from Portland to San Francisco, to bring down any Oriental traffic that came in by Portland and deliver it here in San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that was done, was it not, without any extra charge to the shipper?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, but it was a very small amount.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, a small amount, but whatever it was, that is the fact?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We have the same thing for Portland now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you bring goods down from Portland?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: If they come in that way?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Destined to San Francisco?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And who pays the freight?
Mr. SCHWERIN: The same rates apply to San Francisco via Portland as apply to San Francisco direct.
Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand that. But who absorbs that charge between San Francisco and Portland?
Mr. SCHWERIN: It is divided between the Portland and Asiatic line, and the San Francisco and Portland line—prorated.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is the San Francisco and Portland line a 1056 connection, legally, I mean, has it any legal connection with the Portland and Asiatic? Does it belong to the corporation?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. It is an independent organization.
Mr. SEVERANCE: But you expect—and I say "you," speaking of you as representing the Portland and San Francisco line—you expect from the Portland and Asiatic a less carriage charge, do you, for bringing these goods from the Orient that come into Portland down to San Francisco that you would expect on a local shipment?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is what you mean when you say that the charge from Portland to San Francisco is divided between the two companies?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Prorated.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you explain that a little more in detail, what you mean by "prorated"?
Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, we might prorate on our locals—for instance, there is a certain rate, say a six dollar rate from Hongkong to Portland, and there may be a two-dollar-eighty-rate from Portland to San Francisco. If the Asiatic line took the whole of it, the San Francisco line would not get anything. So we prorate that on the basis of our locals, divide the six dollars on the basis of the relation which the two locals bear to each other.
Mr. SEVERANCE: So that in that case, the Portland and Asiatic, instead of getting the $6 for itself that it would have had if the cargo had gone from there to the East——
Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): Gone direct to Portland; it is local cargo that I am comparing there.
Mr. SEVERANCE: I want to be sure that we understand each other.
Mr. SCHWERIN: I am talking about local cargo there.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Let us take the case of an importation from the Orient.
Mr. SCHWERIN: Locally, or overland?

Mr. SEVERANCE: To San Francisco, we will say, and it
1057 comes to San Francisco by way of the Portland & Asiatic.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, that is a local shipment. We call all shipments to the coast local shipments.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Very well. We understand each other upon that term. I am speaking now of shipments from say China or Japan to San Francisco, and instead of moving directly to San Francisco, it comes via Portland.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The rate, you say, to San Francisco is just the same?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE (cont'g): Whether it comes direct by ship to San Francisco, or by ship to Portland then trans-shipped to San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, take your case that you spoke of, suppose the rate on that commodity is $6 from the Orient to any of these Pacific coast points, such as, for instance, San Francisco. How would you divide that revenue between the Portland & Asiatic and San Francisco & Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, if the local rate from Portland was $3, then we would prorate on the basis of 3 to 6.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That would give them half as much for bringing it from Portland down here as the Portland & Asiatic would get for bringing it over?

Mr. SCHWERIN: One would get three-ninths, and the other would get six-ninths.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I say. The San Francisco & Portland would get half as much. That is the basis on which you make the division, is it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In making that division, you act for both parties, do you not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is your best judgment as to what is a fair division?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

1058 Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the time that you established that division, do you happen to know what the charge was that was paid to the San Francisco & Portland line—in the old days when there were O. R. & N. Boats?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know about that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This division you established as soon as you came into charge of the lines, did you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't want you to understand that they always prorated on the basis of the locals. There might be times when we would not prorate on the basis of the locals.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why, Mr. Schwerin; why so?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Because the local Portland-San Francisco rate on the commodity might be so much higher in proportion to the transpacific rate that it would be entirely unfair to the transpacific to prorate on the locals.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In that case, how do you divide it—on some terms——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): Somewhat like Solomon, cut a fair division to each.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Use a knife?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, to leave the transpacific business for a moment, Mr. Schwerin. The Pacific Mail runs ships in other directions, does it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, we have the Panama line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what ports do you run on that line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: To the port of Manzanilla and Mazatlin, San Blas, Acapulco, Coos, Champerico, San Jose, Acajutla, La Libertad, La Union, Corinta, and Ancon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Ancon—that is the new American port.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is a port at Panama?

1059 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Before that port was established you run to Panama?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It is the same thing; they just changed the name of the terminal to Ancon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, Ancon is on the American zone?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, in the American zone.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The canal zone?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you bring out commodities from the east by way of Panama?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you any boats on the other side of the Isthmus?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With what line of ships do you operate in connection with the trade that comes around by Panama?

Mr. SCHWERIN: With the United Fruit Company from Gulf points, and with the Panama Railroad line—from New York—the Panama Railroad Company's steamships—and with the Hamburg American Packet Company from New York to points other than American, and with all the transatlantic lines out of Colon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Out of Colon?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you accept their shipments from Europe, do you not, that way?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Brought from transatlantic points and then on down from New York and across the Isthmus?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, and to all points I have named, the points along the Central American and Mexican coast.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many ships had you in that trade when you first came here in 1893? You need not bother to give the names, but give the number?

1060 Mr. SCHWERIN: There were six running on the through line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, from Panama to San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has that fleet been enlarged or diminished?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Enlarged. We are running nine there now.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are running nine there now?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how long have you been running nine?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About five years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now as to that business, Mr. Schwerin, your line is competitive with the rail lines, is it not, from New York to San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And always has been?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Since 1893, when you went into the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the business, you say, has increased; you have three more ships than you had then?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is their tonnage as compared with the average tonnage of ships that were running on the line in 1893?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, the "Peking" is on that run, and the "Peru" is on that run, and they were transatlantic steamers before.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are they larger than the old boats?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Peking" took the place of three boats, that went off, practically, and the "Peru" of at least two.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Would you be able to without any trouble figure in your head the aggregate tonnage of that fleet in 1893, and 1061 the aggregate tonnage of that fleet at the present time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I could figure it on a piece of paper better than I could in my head.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right. I will loan you a piece of paper, and a pencil too, if you like.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Would it not be better if I gave you that accurately afterwards?

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, just give it as near as you can now, I don't care whether it is absolutely accurate, but just approximately.

Commissioner LANE: Mr. Severance, how soon will you be through with this witness?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't know, your Honor. I should think I would be half an hour longer. That is my impression. I have some other matters that I want to examine him upon.

Commissioner LANE: We will adjourn at 4 o'clock.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your Honor wants to adjourn at 4?

Commissioner LANE: Yes, promptly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then I will not be able to finish with Mr. Schwerin to-night, because it is 10 minutes to 4 now. All of the witnesses I have caused to be subpœnaed may depart now, and they need not return until to-morrow morning, as I shall not be able to take them up to-night.

Mr. SCHWERIN (after making the calculation requested): Roughly, about an increase of one-seventh.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the tonnage originally, and what is it now, about?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About 15,000 tons originally, and it has increased to about 20,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Increased by one-seventh, did you say?

Mr. SCHWERIN: A seventh, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That would be more than that, an increase from 15,000 to 20,000.

Mr. SCHWERIN: 15,000 and 20,000 makes 35,000. 15,000 tons and 20,000 tons makes it twenty-thirty-fifths, which is four-
1062 sevenths, and fifteen-thirty-fifths, which is three-sevenths, and that is an increase of one-seventh.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It was originally 15,000, and now it is 20,000, so that it must have increased 5,000 tons?

Mr. SCHWERIN: And that would be one-seventh of the total tonnage of the two.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I know, but the increase is 5,000 tons, and that increase is from 15,000 to 20,000 tons.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that increase of tons would be a $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent. increase on what it was in 1893. That is right, is it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: You may proceed now until 4 o'clock.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think this will be a good point to take the adjournment, if your Honor please.

Commissioner LANE: Very well. Then we will take an adjournment until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,
WEDNESDAY, January 30, 1907—10 a. m.

Present: Commissioner Franklin K. Lane.

Appearances.

C. A. Severance, Esq., For the Interstate Commerce Commissioner.
Peter F. Dunne, Esq., and R. S. Lovett, Esq., For the Railroad Companies.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Shall we proceed, your Honor?

Commissioner LANE: You may proceed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I must apologize to your Honor and to the witness for my voice today. It is worse than it was yesterday, if anything, as my cold is worse rather than better. However, I will do the best I can.

1063 R. P. SCHWERIN examination resumed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Schwerin, does the Portland & Asiatic Company own its own ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom are they chartered?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Chartered from the Hamburg American Packet Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the Occidental & Oriental own its own ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom are they chartered?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Chartered from the White Star Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are acquainted with Mr. William Mahl, are you not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is the Controller of the Pacific Mail, is he not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Mahl testified at the hearing of this matter in New York that the Oriental & Occidental Steamship Company has gone into liquidation. Is that so?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Not at present.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has there been any change in the matter of the management of the Occidental & Oriental Steamship Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No Sir.

Mr. LOVETT: He did not testify it had gone into liquidation he said he did not know absolutely, but that was his understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He said "which I believe has gone into liquidation" and when I asked him "when"? he said "Possibly within the last six, seven, or eight months."

Mr. DUNNE: I don't think that is so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, I want to find out. Does the Pacific Mail own its own ships, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All of them?

1064 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir. Do you mean own its own ships that belong to the Pacific Mail, or all the ships it operates?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You gave a list yesterday of the fleet.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The fleet of the Pacific Mail.

Mr. SCHWERIN: All that I enumerated as a fleet belong to the Pacific Mail.

Commissioner LANE: Are there additional ships that it operates that it does not own?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, the "Mongolia" and the "Manchuria."

Mr. SEVERANCE: I was just coming to that. That is what I want to ask you about. There was introduced in evidence at New York an excerpt from the minutes of the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Oregon Short Line of the 26th of March, 1903. At that meeting, Mr. Harriman reported that, pursuant to the authority conferred upon him at the meeting of the Executive Committee on February 19th, 1903, he had purchased from the Atlantic Transport Company two ocean steamers, known in the contract as Nos. 5 and 6, now under construction at the New York Shipbuilding Yard, at Camden, New Jersey, at the approximate sum of $2,200,000 each, the delivery of which was expected about the end of the present year, and his action was ratified and confirmed. Are those two ships the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria"?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then those ships belong to the Oregon Short Line, do they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As far as I know they belong to E. H. Harriman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, they belong to E. H. Harriman personally.

Mr. SCHWERIN: As far as I know, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Would it not appear from those minutes from which I have just read that they were bought for the Oregon Short Line?

1065 Mr. SCHWERIN: I never saw the minutes before you read them, or heard of them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Harriman is President of the Pacific Mail, is he not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you act under his instructions?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have a charter party covering these ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom does it run?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Runs between the Pacific Mail and E. H. Harriman.

Commissioner LANE: At what time was it made?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't remember when it was made. The charter parties are in New York now.

Commissioner LANE: What is the date of that minute order?

Mr. SEVERANCE: March, 1903.

Commissioner LANE: It is subsequent to that date, is it?

Mr. LOVETT: Although I have no information on the subject, my understanding is that they were registered in the name of E. H. Harriman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the Ninth Annual Report of the Union Pacific, which embraces the Oregon Short Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, that is, the report to the stockholders, not to the Interstate Commerce Commission—in the report to the stockholders for the year ending June 30, 1906, there appears on page 12 the following: "The total expenditures. In addition to the above capital expenditures, there was passed during the year, on account of construction and acquisition of new lines, and for equipment and other property, the sum of $17,541,755.88." And then after referring to and enumerating some of this property, it concludes, "And in the steamers 'Mongolia' and 'Manchuria.' Those steamers are chartered to the Pacific Mail." Now, it appears from that entry in the Annual Report that those ships belong to either the 1066 Union Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, or the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company. Those companies are making a common report to their stockholders. You never heard of that report before?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I never heard of that report before, until it was brought up in the hearing on Monday.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What hearing was that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: On the salvage case, of the "Manchuria" in Honolulu.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That matter——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): The matter of the price was brought up, and reported in that report—in regard to the value of the ships.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't know what that inquiry is.

Mr. LOVETT: It is a suit pending here——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): It is a suit in reference to the salvage of the "Manchuria."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, yes. They on page 26, also in this report, there are entered a number of items under the head of "Deferred Assets," and among the rest "Ocean Steamers 'Manchuria' and 'Mongolia,' $5,126,796.58, as against a similar charge opposite these steamships in the previous annual report of $4,964,986.07." How long has the Pacific Mail been operating those boats?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Since 1904.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Since 1904?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With whom was the arrangement made for the leasing or chartering of those boats?

Mr. SCHWERIN: With Mr. E. H. Harriman.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who represented the Pacific Mail in the negotiations?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I say who represented the Pacific Mail in the negotiations?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I did.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You represented the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

1067 Mr. SEVERANCE: You are the Vice President of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And your arrangements were made with the President of the same company, Mr. Harriman?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I recognized Mr. Harriman as acting personally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You make a distinction between Mr. Harriman as President of the Pacific Mail and Mr. Harriman individually?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What rental did Mr. Harriman exact for those ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't think I could tell you the exact figures.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Practically?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It varied. The first year it was somewhere in the neighborhood of $20,000 a month, and it was gradually increased until it was $30,000 a month.

Commissioner LANE: For both?

Mr. SCHWERIN: For each ship.

Commissioner LANE: For each ship?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does it depend on the freight carried?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, it is a dead straight charter.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have a regular contract by which the rental increases?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir. In the operation of a new ship, the expenses are always heavier than after you get the ship running, and also the expenses are heavier to introduce a new ship. So I contended that the first—the first six or nine months of the charter, the charter should be less than what it would be afterwards. So the final charter—we are paying, the last rate that we are paying, is $30,000 a month. But I don't just remember how the terms varied from $20,000 to $30,000, and exactly what period that covered.

1068 Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what you are paying now, is it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: $30,000 a month for each ship.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that is paid to Mr. E. H. Harriman, is it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. As far as I know, it is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is the payment made?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In New York City.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By whom?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We remit the money to the controller, Mr. Mahl.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Mahl is also the controller of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Short Line, is he not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: So I understand, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the auditor of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Railton.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He lives here in San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the auditor of the Portland Asiatic Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Railton.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And is Mr. Mahl also the controller of that company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are the Vice-President and General Manager?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is Mr. Harriman the President?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the President?

Mr. SCHWERIN: There is none.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They have no President?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They have no President.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your position with the Occidental
1069 & Oriental Steamship Company? Are you Vice President and General Manager of that Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: President.

Mr. SEVERANCE: President?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then if one of those railroad companies, as appears by the minutes, owns those ships, you don't know it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know it, no sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your only dealing was with your President, Mr. Harriman?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I am dealing with Mr Harriman as the individual owner and registered owner of those ships.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Happening at the same time to be the President of your company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, about the Panama business. I started to interrogate you about that yesterday. Are those ships all the property of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, except from time to time we charter ships on that line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For extra service?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Extra service, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then, as I understand you, the Portland & Asiatic ships are chartered?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Occidental & Oriental ships are chartered?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And those two ships, the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria" of the Pacific Mail line to the Orient, are chartered from Mr. Harriman?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the balance of your ships are owned by the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHERWIN: Yes sir.

1070 Mr. SEVERANCE: The ships comprising what is known as the San Francisco & Portland Steamship Company were formerly the property of the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, were they not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: There is one ship on that line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One ship?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean you have only one ship on that line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago was the San Francisco & Portland Steamship Company organized, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In 1904, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that time had you had anything to do with the running of those ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By whom were they run up to that time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As far as I know, they were known as the water division of the O. R. & N.—as the ocean division of the O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Those ships made the connection of the O. R. & N. with San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; I presume so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know that, do you not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I say I presume so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In 1904, was this company organized as a separate corporation?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And who are the stockholders?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The O. R. & N.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The O. R. & N.?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that the only change of ownership was the fact that they owned it by virtue of stock ownership now, while originally they owned the ships direct?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The proposition was to put the ships into 1071 the hands of steamship men rather than a railroad company, and so they put it into the hands of this operating company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This operating company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were the ships transferred by the O. R. & N. to the operating company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, chartered.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are the ships still owned, then, by the O. R. & N. Company.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So the ships are still owned by the O. R. & N. Company and chartered to the operating company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you are the head of the operating company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, you say there is only one ship on that line, what is here name?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Columbia."

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is her tonnage capacity?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About 1800 tons.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many ships were there when you took charge of that line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Two, the "Elder" and "Columbia."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know whether, prior to 1904 there had been more than two ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know anything about the history of the Company prior to the time I took hold of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know nothing about that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What became of the "Elder?" Was she wrecked?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Lost—she was lost at the Columbia River.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About three years ago. No, it could not have been that long; two years ago.

1072 Mr. SEVERANCE: What efforts have you made since then to replace the "Elder?"

Mr. SCHWERIN: Immediately bought the "St. Paul" and fitted her out and put her on the line, a much better ship than the "Elder." She was lost a year ago last summer, on the coast.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What efforts have you made to replace the "St. Paul?"

Mr. SCHWERIN: Then we chartered the "Barracouta" and "Costa Rica," and the "Aztec" and the "Spokane."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the "Barracouta" belong to the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To what companies did the others belong?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Aztec" and the "Costa Rica" belonged to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you put those into service there from the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Regular official charter. You understand, Mr. Severance, that those ships are insured, and in order to protect the interest of the individual company the charter has got to be made exactly the same as though chartered to Paul Jones, or any other man who is operating the company, entirely distinct and separate company from my own. In other words, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company would charter from the Portland & Asiatic, say, in exactly the way that they would charter from Barneson Hibbard Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Except, I suppose, in the charter of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company of steamers to run from San Francisco to Portland, the whole matter would be in your hands as the managing officer of both companies?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, and the rate of charter would be governed by the ordinary rate of charter for that character of ships.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that was fixed by you?

1073 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many boats have you in service there now?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The "Columbia," "Costa Rica" and "Aztec" have been running there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How frequent is that service?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, we have had this summer a very serious time with that line. If you want me to enumerate all the difficulties we have had, I will be pleased to do so. It takes its beginning from the time of the earthquake.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Go ahead.

Mr. SCHWERIN: At the time of the disaster in April, the "Columbia" was on the Union Iron Works drydock. She was shaken off the blocks, and carried the drydock away, and sunk there. She was there from April till September before they were able to salve her, and repair and restore her to the line. Then about the 1st of May we had a strike on the water front, which tied up all the steamers, and we were finally able to get the line opened without the passenger service—we didn't believe it advisable, with the class of men we were getting, to take the chances of sending the ship to sea with an untrained crew. So we had to abolish the passenger service.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has that been resumed?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That has been resumed, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think the strike was over in September, and we resumed immediately after the strike ceased. We had the "Costa Rica" and "Barracouta" on the line, and as the business developed, we put the "Aztec" on the line. When we got the "Columbia" back, we took the "Aztec" (she carries freight only) off, then the "Costa Rica" smashed her high pressure cylinder, and the inspector would not let us go out and made us put in a new cylinder, and that took six weeks, and she was taken off the line. So it has been one continual interruption on that line since the disaster.

1074 Mr. SEVERANCE: Assuming that the three boats are all in condition—they are now, are they not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Assuming that, how frequent is the service?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Five days; that is, five days for the two passenger ships, and the "Aztec" runs as fast as they can load and discharge. She would take 21 days to make the round trip.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About 10 days each way, between loading and unloading?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, that takes in the time in port. It takes about 5 days to go up and down, that is, 5 days up and 5 days down, and the balance of the time is taken in the difficulties of discharging the ships in port.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long does it take the passenger ships to make the trip?

Mr. SCHWERIN: To Astoria, about 48 hours. They are about 4 or 5 hours going up the Columbia.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the return?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About the same, we run on a schedule.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And so you have a five day passenger service?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Passenger and freight?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And an extra boat which makes the round trip every 21 days.

Mr. SCHWERIN: And also we have been trying very hard to purchase two five thousand ton ships for that line, but we haven't been able to get a satisfactory price yet.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has there been within the last year any change in the rates on that line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think the change of rates was made effective this month.

1075 Mr. SEVERANCE: Was it an increase or a decrease?

Mr. SCHWERIN: An increase.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Could you produce a copy of the tariff, of the former tariff, and of the new tariff?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And let us have it in evidence?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Could you state, without reference to the tariff, about the percentage of increase?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, I could not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the increase cover all classes of freight?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What does it cover?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Roughly speaking, it covers south bound flour and feed-stuffs, and north bound canned goods, heavy wagons, automobiles, sugar—that is about all that I can remember.

Mr. SEVERANCE: General merchandise moving north?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, we have general merchandise in different classifications, that is to say, "general merchandise" is not generally a classification. In our tariffs each article is given a rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: These articles that you have mentioned go under a commodity tariff?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. They just go, for instance, bran, feed-stuffs, flour.

Mr. SEVERANCE: A specific amount?

Mr. SCHWERIN: A specific amount as to the rate.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know, Mr. Schwerin, whether at about the same time that you raised the steamship rates, the Southern Pacific raised its rail rates to Portland and from Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, I haven't heard that they have raised rates.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You haven't heard that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This is the first time you ever heard of their raising rates?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir—I supposed they would.

1076 Mr. SEVERANCE: You supposed they would raise the rates?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not know that a notice had been given that the rates would be increased, by rail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What made you suppose that the railroad would raise the rates?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, they always have raised rates when we raised our rates.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Ever since 1904?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: Was there a consultation between yourself and any of the railroad men respecting the raising of rates before it was done?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We had a differential against the railroad, and I have discussed it with the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, and our rates are governed very largely by their water rate; and I have discussed it with the railroad company. And there has been general discussion as to whether the rates were too low, and whether they ought to be advanced or not.

Commissioner LANE: When was it decided upon to advance the rates?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think it was in November or December.

Commissioner LANE: With what official of the railroad did you deal in matters of that kind—Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: Who is the man you talked it over with?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Sometimes discussed it with the traffic manager, or one of his assistants.

Commissioner LANE: In this particular case, who was it you discussed it with?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In this particular I think I spoke to Mr. Luce about it.

Commissioner LANE: He is the freight and traffic manager here?

1077 Mr. SCHWERIN: He is the——

Mr. LOVETT (int'g): General Freight Agent, is he not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: General Freight Agent.

Commissioner LANE: It was after that conversation, subsequent to that conversation with Mr. Luce, that you made your advance?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, it would not have made any difference whether they made an advance or not, we would have advanced our rates, because the rates were unremunerative. The cost of labor had advanced so, our stevedoring charges had advanced over one-third, and it was costing us as high as 76 cents a ton to take freight out of the ship, and we were getting $2.50 a ton for it.

Commissioner LANE: What is the differential between yourself and the railroad?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think it is about 60 cents a ton.

Commissioner LANE: 60 cents a ton.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. It was absolutely immaterial to me whether the railroad advanced the rate or not. I said we would advance our rates, and the Pacific Coast Steamship Company said they would advance their rates. They were in the same position we were. There had been an advance in the price of fuel and supplies, and an advance in the pay of the officers, and in the crews' wages; and, all together, we were in a very bad shape.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That advance in wages of the stevedores and of the longshoremen would have no effect on the expense of handling railroad traffic, would it? Their traffic expenses were not increased because you had to pay more on the dock?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose not. I suppose our arrangement had nothing to do with them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then their rate was not increased for the same reason that yours was, but was merely increased because you had increased yours?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I suppose that is for them to answer.

1078 Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that not your understanding, Mr. Schwerin, that it was done so as to maintain this differential?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I told the railroad company we were going to advance rates.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They didn't protest vigorously at all, did they, against that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And after you advanced the rates on the different occasions that you have done so, it has been their custom to advance the rail rates at the same time.

Mr. SCHWERIN: We have advanced rates in cases where they have not advanced rates?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where sometimes they have not advanced the rates, you say?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understood you to testify a few moments ago, Mr. Schwerin, that they customarily advanced the rates when you did?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I did, but I think there are cases where they have not done so.

Mr. Schwerin: The general rule is that they do advance the rates when you do?

Mr. SCHWERIN: If they advance their rates we will advance ours, and I suppose if we advance our rates, they will advance theirs, though there is no understanding between us upon that point.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No agreement that they shall do it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But the coincidence exists. When one rate goes up, the other goes up?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As a matter of fact, in my study of the traffic between here and Portland, which is largely a traffic that moves from San Francisco to Portland, the Southern Pacific Company is not a competitor.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We can give so much better service than they can that we get their business.

1079 Mr. SEVERANCE: The railroad men who have testified are under the impression that they are.

Mr SCHWERIN: That is the difference between the steamship men and the railroad men.

Mr. DUNNE: What is that, Mr. Severance?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I say the railroad men who have testified are under the impression that they are.

Mr. DUNNE: You say "the railroad men"?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: You do not mean all railroad men?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Several.

Mr. DUNNE: Several, but not all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Several of them have so testified.

Mr. LOVETT: Some have testified to the contrary.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let us examine into this for a moment. Does not the Southern Pacific Railroad Company carry from here to Portland goods of the same character that you transport by ship?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose they do. I am not at all familiar with what they carry, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If you are not familiar with what they carry how would you hazard this opinion that they are not competitive with you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Because we get the freight very largely unsolicited, and we are not able to handle all the freight that is offered to us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would be if you had enough ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: And if they were competitors, they would take the freight away from us. We make better time to Portland than they make, for instance. A man can order his groceries in San Francisco, and barring those accidents that we have had, he will know just when he will get his goods in Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And as you understand it, the Southern Pacific service is not as good as yours, so that if the order is given here to send it by rail, he does not know when he will get it in Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, transportation by rail has been very much disturbed lately.

1080 Commissioner LANE: One of the reasons the railroad is not competitive is that it cannot give as good service. Is that it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is the way I look at it, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Schwerin, do I understand you now to testify that you don't know what kind of traffic is carried by rail from here to Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: My testimony is that I have never interested myself to see what the railroad takes from here to Portland, yes sir. I suppose they are in the carrying business, and they are out for all the freight they can get. I know that we compete with them, our solicitors will compete against the Southern Pacific Company for every pound of freight we can get.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Our freight solicitors will compete against other freight solicitors in the port of San Francisco for any freight we can get.

Mr. SEVERANCE: If your solicitors are competing with the Southern Pacific for freight, why do you testify that you are not a competitor of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Did I testify to that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I thought you did a moment ago.

Mr. SCHWERIN: I haven't that impression. I testified I did not consider the Southern Pacific were competitors of ours—just at the present time, on account of the congested amount of freight. But if the market was lean of freight, I would consider that they were competitors.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then, as I understand it, you do not wish to be understood as testifying that the Southern Pacific and the boats from here to Portland are not competitors of one another, under ordinary conditions?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir; I don't mean that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No. But it is your opinion that their service by rail is so poor at present that they are not, and that they should not be dignified by the title of competitor?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I could not say that.

1081 Mr. SEVERANCE: What do you mean by your answer?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I mean to say that our service at the present time has been better than the rail service, and for that reason we haven't had such a strenuous time to get freight as we have had at previous times.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is a great deal of traffic moving out of here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; south bound; not so much north bound. The north bound movement has been light.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you need more ships to handle the traffic that is offered, and you are trying to get more?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, trying to get a better class of ships that will handle the business better than we have been able to handle it. For instance, the north bound ships have been going out with light tonnage. For instance the "Aztec" on her last trip had 500 tons, and the "Columbia" on her last trip only had 700 tons—the last voyages up there. But the demand for tonnage is south bound.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is your agent in Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Dewson.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And prior to his employment with your steamship company, what was his position?

Mr. SCHWERIN: He was in the employ of a shipping firm of New York City.

Mr SEVERANCE: You brought him out from the East?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have an agent here in San Francisco for this steamship line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that separate and apart from the agency of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Entirely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: A separate organization?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir, entirely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Under your charge?

1082 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the Pacific Mail run any boats to Alaska?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or to Puget Sound points?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you ever run any boats up there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. We chartered boats that run to Alaska, but we never operated them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think that is all.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Schwerin, you say that you have been endeavoring to get two additional boats for the Portland and San Francisco line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: And you have not been able to secure them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Why?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It has been a question of difference of price between the owner and ourselves.

Mr. LOVETT: Are you restricted in your purchase to American boats?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Why?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It is the coastwise traffic—United States coastwise traffic.

Mr. LOVETT: You can't buy a foreign made ship and put it in this business, because of the tariff that you would have to pay on the foreign built ships.

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, that is not it. They do not permit a foreign bottom to operate in the coastwise traffic.

Mr. LOVETT: I didn't know whether that was it; or whether it was the tariff. I knew there was some restriction.

Mr. SCHWERIN: It is against the United States law to operate a foreign bottom in the coastwise traffic.

Mr. LOVETT: And the supply of American made ships is very small?

1083 Mr. SCHWERIN: We have been in great difficulty to try to get even a charter for that line. We have not been able even to do that.

Mr. LOVETT: I believe you testified that the principal amount of traffic on that line was south bound, that is, from Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It has been lately, yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: What is the character of the traffic? That is as a rule, I am not speaking of any exceptional conditions, but as a rule?

Mr. SCHWERIN: South bound has been mostly mill products.

Mr. LOVETT: Mill products?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Flour, feed, bran and oats, and shakes and shingles and laths.

Mr. LOVETT: Where does it originate?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Most of it originates in Portland, and I suppose along the line of the O. R. & N.

Mr. LOVETT: Those boats do not handle any traffic coming from the east, do they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Now, as to the north bound cargo. What is that ordinarily?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Canned goods, sugar, salt, cement.

Mr. LOVETT: Products of California?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir, almost entirely.

Mr. LOVETT: I believe you testified that on account of conditions existing at this time, at least, on account of the better time that your boats make, the Southern Pacific has not been able to compete with you. That is under present conditions?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Is it not true, Mr. Schwerin, that as a rule, generally speaking, railroads are not equal to competing with ocean carriers, that is coastwise carriers? Is that not true on the Atlantic? That is, I mean from seaport to seaport, I am not speaking of the ordinary river steamers, but of coastwise steamers?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think they get the first call on the traffic.

1084 Commissioner LANE: Is that true as to the rates, or as to time and facilities?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Time and facilities.

Mr. LOVETT: Time and facilities, my question was addressed to?

Mr. DUNNE: From seaport to seaport?

Commissioner LANE: From seaport to seaport.

Mr. SCHWERIN: For instance, the Old Dominion Line has the bulk of the traffic between Norfolk and New York City.

Mr. LOVETT: And the Morgan & Mallory Steamship lines have the bulk of the traffic between New York and New Orleans and Galveston?

Mr. SCHWERIN: So I understand.

Commissioner LANE: What is the basis for the differential between the railroad and the steamship?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose it is based upon the fact that the rail lines give a security which the steamer does not. The bill of lading in the case of the rail line covers the risk to freight, whereas on the steamer the owner has to insure his own risk.

Commissioner LANE: That differential, 60 cents in your case, is far more than would cover the insurance?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That 60 cents a ton?

Commissioner LANE: Yes.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, I should think the insurance would cover about 30 cents a ton.

Commissioner LANE: So that there must be considered that there is some preference to be given a railroad?

Mr. SCHWERIN: But the railroad has always had the higher rate, on account of the fact that it costs more to operate than it does a steamship line. The railroads have always insisted, in a division with the steamship line, for a larger share of the through haul and through traffic—everywhere in the world, the world over, that is true.

Commissioner LANE: That the railroad has insisted upon its larger proportion?

1085 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, on the ground of its increased expenses. It costs more to operate a railroad than it does a steamship line.

Commissioner LANE: As between yourself running a coast line of steamers, and the Shasta route from here to Portland, you could put the Shasta route out of business, so far as the direct freight going from Portland to San Francisco is concerned, in the matter of rates, and in the matter of time, at present?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I could not say that, because I could not control the shippers. But if I found our rates were diverting business from us, I would be forced to lower our rates again.

Commissioner LANE: Do you know how much cheaper you can haul a ton of freight from Portland to San Francisco than the railroad can haul it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I do not.

Commissioner LANE: You do not know the comparative cost by railroad and steamboat in competition?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: That is all, Judge.

Mr. LOVETT: I believe you testified that you also operate steamers between New York and various South American and Central American ports.

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Between San Francisco, I should say, and various South American and Central American ports?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: The Pacific Mail Steamship Company has no steamers on the Atlantic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: And never has had?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: When?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It used to operate a line from New York to Panama, and the Panama Railroad Company would not allow us to continue there, in connection with the Panama Railroad.

1086 Mr. LOVETT: When was that discontinued?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think it was late in '90's.

Mr. LOVETT: Late in the '90's?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Are there any other lines besides yours operating between San Francisco and Panama, and South American and Central American ports?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, the Cosmos Line and the French Line.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: How long have they been operating?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The Ocean Line has been operating there about 10 years.

Mr. LOVETT: Has the Pacific Mail Steamship Company had competition between San Francisco and the southern ports ever since you have known it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, very severe competition.

Mr. LOVETT: Does not the Hamburg American Packet Company operate ships on this coast?

Commissioner LANE: That is the Cosmos Line, is it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. I believe the Hamburg American Packet Company—there are common stockholders in the Hamburg American Packet Company and in the Cosmos Line, but I do not understand that the Cosmos Line is really owned by the Hamburg American Packet Company.

Mr. LOVETT: But the Hamburg American Packet Company, as such, does not operate steamers on the Pacific between the ports mentioned?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: I believe you stated that there has been competition on the Pacific between San Francisco and these southern ports ever since your connection with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: And there is competition now?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: What was the name of the line that was 1087 promoted by the Santa Fe system from San Diego to Asiatic ports?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The California & Oriental.

Mr. LOVETT: The California & Oriental?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: When did that line go out of business. Do you know, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Sometime along in 1902, 1902 or 1903, as near as I can remember.

Mr. LOVETT: About 1902 or '3?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: How often did that line sail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They were supposed to have a steamer first every month, and later they, I believe they contemplated having two steamers a month, or a steamer every three weeks, I don't remember which.

Mr. LOVETT: And what was your service from here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We had a steamer then about every nine days.

Mr. LOVETT: You had a steamer then about every nine days. And you had been for some time soliciting business from the Atchison for Asiatic ports?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You believe that you could give them better service than the line from San Diego gave them, did you not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We thought so.

Mr. LOVETT: When did the Atchison get its line into San Francisco. About when, Mr. Schwerin, Do you know?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir, I don't believe I remember that date.

Mr. LOVETT: This line from San Diego was opened by the Atchison before the time it got its rails in San Francisco, was it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, this line was in operation—I know that when the line started, there were no Santa Fe rails in San Francisco, because the steamship line came here and delivered its local cargo and then went south and delivered its overland in San Diego.

1088 Mr. LOVETT: How long had you been making your efforts with Mr. Morton, I believe you said yesterday—how long had you been making your efforts with Mr. Morton to get the business of the Atchison, the business from Asiatic Ports?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I don't know; it is so long ago I can't remember. Almost from the very beginning of my connection with the line, I tried to persuade the Santa Fe to give me the business, and every time I saw Mr. Morton, I would joke him about it, or talk earnestly to him, or any way to try to persuade him to give me the business.

Mr. LOVETT: Did you finally arrange with him to get some of the business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The last talk that I had with Mr. Morton was in the Waldorf in New York, and I told him if he would give us a share of his business, that we would agree to give him equal rates and division with any other connecting carrier from the port of San Francisco.

Mr. LOVETT: The point I was trying to develop, Mr. Schwerin, is when the arrangement with the Atchison, or when the arrangement by which you succeeded in getting their business, was made with reference to the discontinuance of the Oriental line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: This conversation I had with Mr. Morton was long after the California and Oriental line had gone out of business.

Mr. LOVETT: You had no arrangement with him until after that line went out of business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Some time after that line went out — business.

Commissioner LANE: Did they go out of business in view of any conversation that you had with Mr. Morton or the Santa Fe people?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Absolutely not.

Commissioner LANE: Absolutely not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Commissioner LANE: It was not in pursuance of any agree-
1089 ment or understanding that they should get a share of the business, that they put that steamship line out of business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: Do you understand why the steamship line went out of business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I understood, both from Mr. Morton and from the agent of the line here, that they were losing considerable money—the line was very unprofitable.

Mr. LOVETT: Your information was that the line had been unprofitable?

Mr SCHWERIN: And I understood from the steamship end of it that the Santa Fe declined to hold the sack any more for the steamship company.

Commissioner LANE: I didn't hear that.

Mr. SCHWERIN: I understood that the Santa Fe declined to hold the sack for the steamship company.

Mr. DUNNE: I think Mr. Ripley gave some testimony before your Honor in Chicago upon that subject.

Commissioner LANE: There was a lot of statements made in Chicago about the steamship company, but not as to the reason why it went out of business.

Mr. DUNNE: He said it was disastrous, he used that term.

Mr. LOVETT: Then after that line was discontinued, you arranged with the Santa Fe to get some of their business, and to reserve space for them on your ships out-bound, so as to use their freight?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We had to do that. We had to agree to let them have a certain amount of space on the outward bound ships otherwise they would not have been able to contract it, and we would not have known what they would want to carry, how much.

Mr. LOVETT: And in return for that, you would agree to give them some portion, and you did agree to give them some portion, I think you said 25 per cent.

Mr. SCHWERIN: It varied above and below 25 per cent., but we tried to give them about 25 per cent.

1090 Commissioner LANE: It depended entirely on the amount of freight you get from them, the amount you would give to them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, I can't say that, Mr. Lane, for the simple reason that the Santa Fe—it is one of the things we complained about, that the Sante Fe has not given us as much freight as we have given them, and we have continually kept after the Sante Fe to get after their agents to get more freight for us.

Commissioner LANE: And you at the present time give them more than they give to you.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: Then why don't you cut them off?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Because I want to have an argument on my side for them to get after freight, because we have all the Sante Fe men working for us to get freight to the port of San Francisco—we are getting freight from the northern lines who are working against us to get freight from the South.

Commissioner LANE: Do they pull freight that would naturally go to the South?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Oh, yes. All the freight originates in common, competitive territory.

Commissioner LANE: So you are trying your best to keep on to good side of the Santa Fe people?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. Every pound of freight that is taken out of this port can be moved to the Orient without coming here at all. In other words, our business can be absolutely taken away from this port, our transcontinental business, and go out from the South and be served just as well as through this port as far as the rail service is concerned, and getting it to tidewater.

Commissioner LANE: That is not a matter of rates, then but it is a matter of competition between the solicitors?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't think you understand. I mean physically that can be done. Therefore we want to get all the solicitors we can to work for tonnage from the port of San Francisco 1091 to feed our line, in competition against the railroad lines that are working for freight for the steamers that go to the north.

Commissioner LANE: Now, then, when you make a rate from the Orient for business to Chicago, or some point that is served by the Santa Fe, there is no competition between the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific, or between the Santa Fe or Southern Pacific and Union Pacific, upon a rate for that import business is there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, there was a time when we could make a rate from the Orient to any point in the United States without consultation with the rail lines at all; the initial carrier has the right to make that rate, but now, under the Interstate Commerce ruling we have to give 50 days' notice. We are out of competition with the Orient, you may say, with the Orient entirely because the Suez line, with whom we compete there, can change their rates every day, and we have got to give 30 days' notice. They can come in within 30 days and contract, and then we come in with another 30 days' notice under which we will contract, and they can come and contract again, in that way divert all the tonnage.

Commissioner LANE: Do you think the through rate from Hongkong to Chicago comes under that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: You publish those rates?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. They are published and filed with the Interstate Commerce Commissioner.

Commissioner LANE: And you are enabled, by the ownership of the boats by the railroad, to absorb a portion of the inland freight rate?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir. How do you mean, absorb it?

Commissioner LANE: I mean this, that you can make a through rate from Hongkong to Chicago upon business and not publish the proportion from Chicago to San Francisco, and from San Francisco to Hongkong. You simply make one through rate, and that through rate may be divided up between yourselves and the railroad people as you see fit?

1092 Mr. SCHWERIN: As I understand it, yes sir. We can arrange the division as we may desire.

Commissioner LANE: Yes.

Mr. SCHWERIN: It is a matter of traffic arrangement.

Commissioner LANE: Traffic arrangement between you two?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: Is that rate open at San Francisco to the Santa Fe?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: You have the same rate, then, with the Sante Fe inland which you have with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir, the same division.

Commissioner LANE: The same division of through rate?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: Just exactly, your Honor, like the orange rate from Southern California. The initial line makes the connection with a number of companies and thereto is the same through all these connections.

Commissioner LANE: So it is practically the same as if you published a rate to San Francisco, and a rate upon import business from San Francisco to Chicago. Is that so, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I suppose that could be done, but that never has been done.

Mr. LOVETT: The Suez competition that you referred to is principally to the Atlantic seaports?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You are at a disadvantage with respect to that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: We are entirely at a disadvantage with respect to that. They are all foreign steamships, operated very cheaply, and as tramps.

Mr. LOVETT: The route of this traffic that originates in the Orient and that comes to your possession for the East is in the hands of the Pacific Mail, is it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: So far as turning it over to the initial carrier is concerned.

1093 Mr. LOVETT: That is what I mean.

Mr. DUNNE: Your Honor asked a question about publication. The through rate from the Orient is published as a through rate.

Commissioner LANE: That is what I understand.

Mr. LOVETT: The routing of it, so far as the initial carrier is concerned, that is, the carrier taking it out of San Francisco, is in the hands of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: And where the carrier has to deliver it beyond its own lines, it turns it over—that is, it has the control of the railroad carriers?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: So far as the carriers beyond the initial carrier are concerned, then, the initial carrier has control of the routing?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Coming back to the point where we were considering the arrangements for this business that you get with the Atchison. You testified yesterday something about there being no agreement. What do you mean by that? Do you mean no written agreement?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Or contract. You do mean to convey the impression that there was not an arrangement?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I said there was an understanding.

Mr. LOVETT: You testified yesterday that there was an undertsanding.

Mr. SCHWERIN: An understanding, yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: By which you intended to give them about 25 per cent. of the business, as near as you could apportion it, in that way?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: May I ask you this question: What was the reason that you named that, if there was any reason, aside from your desire to get the Santa Fe solicitors at work for your steamship company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know that I understand your question.

1094 Commissioner LANE: Why was it that you gave that agreement to give them 25 per cent. of the business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, the reason was that we contemplated trying to build up the San Francisco line, and to put on large carriers across the Pacific—we contemplated putting on the "Korea" and "Siberia," which were nearing completion, and then I was trying to get a larger shipment, which finally culminated in our getting the "Manchuria," and I wanted to work it up and have all the solicitation I could get. It was absolutely impossible for me to consider that the Santa Fe, from my discussion with Mr. Morton, would work to give us outward tonnage unless I would agree to give him inward tonnage. And in our discussion, he used to laugh, and he said "If I do that, I will swamp you," and I said "Try it on." And finally it started with 25 per cent. and they never gave us a full 25 per cent. of our outward tonnage. They are working more actively lately than they did previously.

Commissioner LANE: These conversations with Mr. Morton were held prior to 1904?

Mr. SCHWERIN: These conversations were held, well, probably running back six or eight months prior to the time that he finally said that he would give us some of his business.

Commissioner LANE: And these conversations are held subsequent to the going out of business of the San Diego line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Absolutely so. There was no line out of San Diego at the time we talked this over. Prior to that time it was merely a question of solicitation, to give us the business, because we joshed them about losing so much money, and that they didn't know how to run a steamship line. There was a good deal of talk in that way, and every time I got a chance at him I tried to persuade him to come over to our line. This talk about a division occurred after the Santa Fe actually got its trackage into San Francisco, where they could make connection with us, direct rail with us, over their own lines.

1095 Mr. LOVETT: You were trying to get business from the steamship company, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is what I was out for, first, last, and all the time.

Mr. LOVETT: You tried to operate the Pacific Mail in the interest of the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Entirely so.

Mr. LOVETT: And not for the Southern Pacific line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I didn't consider the Southern Pacific at all in the matter.

Mr. LOVETT: And if you could make an arrangement with the Atchison to increase your business, you desired to make such an arrangement, did you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I certainly did.

Commissioner LANE: But you can't very well eliminate Mr. Harriman as a consideration, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Harriman has never suggested even a single instruction to me upon that question.

Commissioner LANE: When you come to a division of the through freight between yourselves and the Central and Union Pacific line does not Mr. Harriman have anything to say about that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. That matter is fought out between Mr.

Stubbs and myself, and he treats me just as though I were a foreign connection.

Commissioner LANE: You don't suppose that Mr. Stubbs has any communication with Mr. Harriman to see what proposition shall be made?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I know he has not. We settle those things, and we settle them ourselves.

Commissioner LANE: Those things are left to you entirely?

Mr. SCHWERIN: As to Mr. Stubbs, when I first started in with negotiations with Mr. Stubbs, the Southern Pacific hadn't a dollar of interest in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. That was way back in 1893 and '4.

Commissioner LANE: Yes, of course, but conditions have changed since then.

1096 Mr. SCHWERIN: I understand, but our divisions have not changed.

Commissioner LANE: Your divisions have not changed?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, we have the same divisions.

Commissioner LANE: Your divisions are just the same now as they were then?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They are just the same now as they were then, exactly.

Mr. LOVETT: You don't know of any reason why Mr. Harriman should and the Pacific Mail worked in the interest of the Southern Pacific against the interest of the Pacific Mail, do you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I can't imagine such a thing.

Mr. LOVETT: You don't know of any reason why the Southern Pacific should object to your handling business for the Atchison, do you, or any other line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir. The Pacific Mail is simply a connecting carrier with the Southern Pacific and the Atchison.

Mr. LOVETT: The Pacific Mail Steamship Company is simply a connecting carrier with the Southern Pacific and the Atchison for this Asiatic traffic, is it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: That is the way I look at it; yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You spoke yesterday, testified yesterday about the routing of the Asiatic traffic, and the intention to give 20 or 25 per cent. to the Atchison, and I don't know that I understood exactly your testimony upon that point. You testified, as I understand, that about six months ago it was turned over to the Southern Pacific here, what do you mean by that? I am not clear as to your meaning there.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, we have the only rail connection, our docks rather have the only rail connection there is in San Francisco.

Mr. LOVETT: That is the rails on your dock are Southern Pacific rails?

1097 Mr. SCHWERIN: The tracks belong to the Southern Pacific, yes.

Mr. LOVETT: The Atchison has no tracks there?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Actually the Atchison has no rail connections to our docks, and any freight to or from our docks must be passed over the trackage of the Southern Pacific to reach the tracks of the Santa Fe.

Mr. LOVETT: Is that what you meant by your testimony that all the traffic was turned over to the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I meant that the Atchison Company would turn their cars over to the Southern Pacific Company, to be again distributed over to the Santa Fe, to their own line.

Mr. LOVETT: And did the Southern Pacific settle with you for your charges, or did the Atchison settle with you for your charges on freight to go via its lines, and the Southern Pacific for freight that was routed by its lines?

Mr. SCHWERIN: On the inward bound freight, we would bill direct to the Santa Fe for our advance charges for freight routed by the Santa Fe, and the same way to the Southern Pacific. On the Outward freight the Santa Fe would collect direct from us for their proportion of the through rate on any charges there might be, and the same way with the Southern Pacific—they would collect direct from us their proportion.

Mr. LOVETT: In other words, while the traffic was turned over to the Southern Pacific, or on the Southern Pacific tracks, it was in pursuance with the arrangement you had with the Atchison that certain portions of it should be routed by the Atchison, and the Atchison settled with your company for the charges on that that was moved by the Atchison?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: Does that mean that it was not left to the Southern Pacific Company to decide what should go to the Atchison at all?

1098 Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, it is up to us.

Mr. LOVETT: Is that all your honor?

Commissioner LANE: Yes.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Severance asked you something about the arrangement for chartering the "Manchuria" and "Mongolia," and you testified, I believe, that the charter or contract was with Mr. Harriman. You don't know whether the beneficial ownership of those boats is in the Oregon Short Line, or the Union Pacific, or Mr. Harriman; but he is the registered owner?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Was the rental, or charter, I believe, is the term you used, that was paid for those ships, reasonable, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, it is a fair charter.

Mr. LOVETT: You regarded it as fair to the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You testified just now that at the time the present rates or divisions, I believe you call it, with the Southern Pacific were put in by agreement between Mr. Stubbs and yourself, that the Southern Pacific Company had no interest in the Pacific Mail. That is correct?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You testified yesterday to the appointment of certain agents in the East, Hawley in New York, and Neimeyr in Chicago. When were those appointments made?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In 1894 and 1895.

Mr. LOVETT: In 1894 and 1895?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Somewhere along that period.

Mr. LOVETT: The Southern Pacific had no interest in the Pacific Mail at that time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You were working with the Southern Pacific as a connecting line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: There were certain questions that would come up from time to time that required quick action in the East, in 1099 competition for traffic, and I solicited to have those people appointed there, so they could communicate direct with me, and get our authority as to what we were willing to do at the steamship end of it, and they acted there entirely under that understanding.

Mr. LOVETT: In 1900 and 1901, Mr. Schwerin, about how frequently were the sailings of your vessels from this port?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About the same as they are now, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: That is about every nine days?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: How often were the sailings from Puget Sound at that time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: There was one, at that time there was really one, what we considered one regular line there which had sailings that were absolutely definite. The Canadian Pacific and ourselves consider that we run those lines on railroad train service. That is, we know just exactly what ship is to come into port, and exactly what day she is to leave, and they carry mails. Outside of the Northern Pacific Steamship Company, that operated at that time from Tacoma, I think the Canadian Pacific and ourselves were the only ones that maintained an absolutely regular schedule, although they advertised a schedule possibly of dates of sailings.

Mr. LOVETT: How often were the sailings from the Sound?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Very frequent; there were a great many tramp steamers coming in there under the guise of regular lines, and sailings were very frequent.

Mr. LOVETT: Were they as often, do you think, as your sailings—that is, all the lines from the Puget Sound?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; I should think they were more frequent.

Mr. LOVETT: More frequent?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

1100 Mr. LOVETT: Were there other lines running out of here at that time besides the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The Pacific Mail—I am speaking of the Pacific Mail, and by that I mean what we call the San Francisco lines, the three lines.

Mr. LOVETT: Yes. It takes the three lines to make the nine days' schedule, does it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: The Dodwell line from Portland was discontinued by 1900, was it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think it was discontinued somewhere along in 1900, yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: The Portland & Asiatic Company was organized in 1901?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir; at least, I think so; I was not connected with the line at that time.

Mr. LOVETT: No; but you have general knowledge of it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Along in that period, I think—yes, that is right; about 1901.

Mr. LOVETT: Were there any regular lines out of Portland for Asiatic ports at that time?

Mr. SCHWERIN: There was a line advertised there, but we didn't consider it a line.

Mr. LOVETT: In 1900 and 1902 was it in operation?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Prior to 1901.

Mr. LOVETT: Prior to 1901?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Prior to 1901.

Mr. LOVETT: What line do you refer to?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think Mr. Graham started a line there.

Mr. LOVETT: You refer to the Graham line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: If that be deemed a line, there was that line, but there was no other line out of Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: How often were the sailings of the Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They were at first to sail once a month.

1101 Mr. LOVETT: Did they maintain that schedule?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir; nowhere near it.

Mr. LOVETT: I beg pardon.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Nowhere near it.

Mr. LOVETT: How many steamers were they operating?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Three.

Mr. LOVETT: Were they carrying both freight and passengers?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir; freight only. I believe they did carry some inward Asiatic passengers.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Schwerin, what is the principal traffic of the Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Almost entirely flour.

Mr. LOVETT: Do you understand why that line was established?

Mr. SEVERANCE: You mean going out flour?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir. I understood it was to take care of the business that originated of the lines of the O. R. & N.

Mr. LOVETT: The flour industry.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Flour and grain—to protect, have the grain go to the mills on the line of the O. R. & N., and to protect the grain going to the south.

Mr. LOVETT: But flour was the principal commodity that they transported?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir. We have got two ships there now with a full cargo of flour.

Mr. LOVETT: Has that line ever been able to compete with the San Francisco & Puget Sound lines for business from the East, Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. SCHWERIN: You mean from the East, the Atlantic seaboard?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes.

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Why, if you can give the reason, was that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: On account of the irregularity of the service. May I scratch that out. A man who ships from the East wants to know when his freight is going to leave the seaport through 1102 which the freight passes, and he will figure to send his freight over by rail and reach the port so as to go by a certain steamer. We maintain our schedule some five, six, seven to eight months ahead of our sailings, so that a shipper in correspondence with the Orient can tell his correspondent what freight he is going to get a long time ahead. If a man puts his agreement into the form of a contract, he would contract that freight to be delivered by a certain steamer. It is to maintain that traffic, hold that traffic, that we have tried so hard to maintain our schedule. On the Portland and Asiatic line, they get bunched up sometimes in Portland, and then again they get bunched up in the Orient. They advertise a steamer to sail on a certain date, and she may sail two or three weeks later than that. The result was that the shipper would be continually growling about his freight, or, there might be some delay on the railroad, and the freight would not get in until the steamer had left, she might have gotten out at near her schedule, and then there would not be another steamer at all for a month, and meanwhile that freight would lie in Portland for a month waiting for a steamer; whereas in San Francisco, in case he missed one steamer, we had another steamer in 9 days, and that would take the freight right forward. That was the superiority of our line over the Portland and Asiatic, so far as the shippers are concerned, and what they demanded in the handling of this Oriental freight.

Mr. LOVETT: A line that is not able to afford more than a monthly service really cannot compete with a line running on a 9 or 10 days schedule, on business that originates some distance from port?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir. We look upon our line as an express service, as against tramp service in some of these other lines. We were not able to accumulate the overland freight in Portland, as you can do in some ports of the world—they won't stand for that at all.

1103 Mr. LOVETT: What has been the result of the Portland and Asiatic Steamship Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, it has been a decided loss, as a financial venture.

Mr. LOVETT: Have you a statement showing the result of its operations?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir. Here is the statement.

Mr. LOVETT: Mark that "Exhibit No. 1, Schwerin." We offer that in connection with Mr. Schwerin's testimony as Exhibit 1 to his testimony, it being a statement of the earnings and expenses of the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company for the year ending June 30, 1902, and for each subsequent year.

Commissioner LANE: Does it show a loss for each year?

Mr. LOVETT: It shows a loss for each year, except for the year ending June 30, 1905, during which the Japanese Russian War was in progress, which helped it out. It shows a loss for the entire period of $283,749.29.

Commissioner LANE: On the face of those figures why do you maintain the line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, if we don't maintain the line, Mr. Wilcox, who has the Portland Flouring Mill, will be compelled to close that mill at the Port of Portland, and the people of Portland would very seriously object to having that enterprise destroyed there and moved to Puget Sound. He has another mill at Dayton upon which it would have some effect. Then all the grain that originates along the line of the O. R. & N. would go to Puget Sound Mills, and mills along the lines tributary to Puget Sound, and be milled there, and shipped to the Orient.

Commissioner LANE: So that really you can stand a loss on the steamship line, because of the freights you get on the O. R. & N. from the tributary territory to Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, they are doing that.

Mr. LOVETT: Without this steamship line, your under-
1104 standing is that the grain originating on the O. R. & N. in northern Oregon and Washington would go to the Northern Pacific and Puget Sound, and then out by the Puget Sound lines to the Orient, and Portland Mills and Portland grain people would be practically out of business, would they not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir, unless they got tramp steamers to come in there from time to time and take the cargo and take it out across the Pacific. But they would have no regular service that they could well send their flour by, or sell it against. They sell their flour on monthly deliveries, and there must be a steamer there regularly, in order to meet those monthly deliveries.

Commissioner LANE: Has the Wilcox mill expanded at all in the last four or five years?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It has doubled in capacity in the last three years.

Commissioner LANE: It has doubled in capacity?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: How much larger is it now than it was in 1900?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't remember the exact capacity, but I know he has told me he had doubled his capacity.

Commissioner LANE: On export business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir; on the number of barrels per day he turns out at the Portland Mill.

Commissioner LANE: Do you know what proportion for export he has increased?

Mr. SCHWERIN: His tonnage?

Commissioner LANE: Yes. Do you know what the increase in tonnage has been?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think his tonnage has just varied from year to year—some years more than others, and some periods of the year more than others, varying quantities all the time. We have gone out of Portland with not enough freight to ballast the ship.

Commissioner LANE: Ten years ago they shipped a good deal of flour across the ocean, did they not?

1105 Mr. SCHWERIN: From Portland?

Commissioner LANE: Yes.

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir; not such a large amount ten years ago. We had 72 per cent. of the total flour sent to the Orient from here until the time Mr. Wilcox came into the market.

Commissioner LANE: At what time was that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I think he became a factor—it is just about ten years ago that he became a factor, and he has gradually worked it up until he has got the control of it—reversed the situation between the Sound and San Francisco.

Mr. LOVETT: You understand that the O. R. & N. Company owns the stock of the Portland & Asiatic?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I understand so, yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: And you understand that the object it has in maintaining this line of steamers at a loss is to hold the traffic to its rails?

Mr. SCHERWIN: Yes, sir; to its rails.

Mr. LOVETT: As against the Great Northern and Puget Sound lines?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Without the support of the O. R. & N. in that way, could a steamship line of this character be maintained out of Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Unless somebody wanted to simply pay the operating expenses of steamers, it could not.

Mr. LOVETT: In other words, as a steamship proposition, it is not practical, is it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Commissioner LANE: Could it be made so, if you ran a regular schedule, put on more boats up there and did a regular competitive business with San Francisco?

Mr. SCHERWIN: The more steamers you put on there, Mr. Lane, the more money you will lose.

Commissioner LANE: Why could you not do the same kind of business over the Short Line and the O. R. & N. that you do over the Central, Union and Southern Pacific?

1106 Mr. SCHWERIN: If the San Francisco line was dependent upon through freights alone they would go out of business. There is not a steamer out of the port of San Francisco to-day that we could run if it were merely a question of freight, I mean transcontinental freight. But we have here inward and outward passenger business, and we also have a large passenger business between the Orient and the Hawaiian Islands. It is a combination of the freight and passenger business that permits this line to run, although this year the Pacific Mail line has lost nearly half a million dollars here in this port.

Commissioner LANE: Go on.

Mr. SCHWERIN: We have mentioned a fairly regular schedule out of Portland. The only time that our schedule has varied we were running four steamers—and in reality it has been at the earnest solicitation of the Portland shippers that we have made the divergences that have caused the irregularity of the Schedule, and have sent one of our steamers, instead of sending it over to Hongkong or Moji, at their earnest solicitation, to Kakodate or Newschwang, or some other place out of the regular line, and as those vessels are freight carriers and run to maximum speed, it is impossible, when making those divergences, to get them back into the schedule again without some little lapse. We tried to maintain a steamer every three or four weeks. Now, in Portland, you have had an illustration there of the "Oregonian," lying four or five days at St. Helens trying to go up the river to discharge a cargo. And while she is lying there, she ought to have been up there and discharged. The "Nikomedia," again, appears up there off Astoria, and we have worked in Portland day and night to keep those ships on schedule. And the same way in the Orient, we have turned them around in Hongkong in 48 hours, unloaded and loaded in 48 hours, working day and night, and we come over to Portland and we can't get in on account of the bar. Then we make up that time again at Portland and go down the river and lie there 7 days trying to get over the bar again.

1107 Commissioner LANE: That is what I was trying to get at——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): We not only have the difficulty of not getting this passenger business, but we have physical difficulties to contend with on the Portland line.

Mr. LOVETT: The ships out by the Portland and Asiatic are not passenger steamers?

Mr. SCHERWIN: No, sir, they are modern freighters.

Mr. LOVETT: Does the Portland and Asiatic own any steamers?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Has it ever owned any, so far as you know?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. LOVETT: It charters them?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: How long, for what period at a time, does it charter these ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: This present charter—I believe the previous charter of the "Intervelli" Steamers was three years.

Mr. LOVETT: That is, the original charters of 1901?

Mr. SCHERWIN: Yes sir.

Mr. LOVETT: That was for three years?

Mr. SCHWERIN: And this charter was for the period of three years and an option of two more, as I remember, and we declared the option—we have so declared it.

Mr. LOVETT: When were the present charters made?

Mr. SCHWERIN: They were made in 1903, and became operative

I think, in 1904, that is, negotiations were made in the spring of 1904.

Mr. LOVETT: I asked you just now about the frequency of the sailings from Puget Sound in 1901. About how many are they now, taking all of the lines?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I should say, including the lines and the tramp vessels—do you include both?

Mr. LOVETT: Yes.

1108 Mr. SCHWERIN: I should say they are more frequent than they were in 1901.

Mr. LOVETT: You testified yesterday about the handling of some business originating in the Orient and going over to Portland via the Portland & Asiatic, and then to San Francisco by the San Francisco lines. Was that business of considerable volume, or small?

Mr. SCHERWIN: Very small.

Mr. LOVETT: Practically trifling.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, it is practically nothing, except some shipper in the Orient may at some time route his freight that way and we take it.

Mr. LOVETT: It is not a traffic of any consequence, really?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir. It is not a physical way to ship the business, when we have as many steamers coming into San Francisco; it is an unreasonable way to ship business under those circumstances. Not only that, but our rates in competition with the Dollar Line and the Standard Oil Company's steamers to San Francisco at the present time are very low, and then the trans-ship to San Francisco again is practically not remunerative at the present rates that prevail.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Schwerin, you have spoken of the losses in the operation of the Portland & Asiatic. I understood you to say the Pacific Mail sustained a loss of half a million dollars this last year?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the capital stock of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: $20,000,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does it pay any dividends?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Indirectly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Paid for the "Siberia" and "Korea" out of earnings.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Just finished up paying for them this last year. Think run into some $1,300,000 in the last four years, I think.

1109 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Lovett asked you if the rental that you paid for the "Mongolia" and "Manchuria" was fair, and you stated it was fair?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who pays the insurance and taxes on those boats? Does the Pacific Mail pay it or the lessor?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Insurance is taken out in the name of the Pacific Mail, E. H. Harriman beneficiary, as I remember it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who pays the premium?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The premium is paid out of this $30,000 which we send on to New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I want to know.

Mr. SCHWERIN: I suppose so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The Pacific Mail does not pay the insurance premium?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who pays the taxes on the boat?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Mr. Mahl, I suppose.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that paid by the Pacific Mail?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is paid by the owner?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know what the taxes and insurance amount to, approximately?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The Legislature of the State of New York, by an act to promote American shipping, in the foreign trade, collects no taxes upon an American bottom in the foreign trade.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So there are no taxes?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know what the insurance amounts to per annum?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, but they are insured for nearly four millions of dollars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know what the premium amounts to—you mean the two boats together are insured for about four million dollars?

1110 Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, and it is pretty nearly three per cent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: About $120,000?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The aggregate rental, or what you have to pay is $720,000 a year for the two boats?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And out of that are there any fixed charges, aside from the $120,000 for insurance?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The owners pay for all the repairs and all the maintenance of the ships.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They pay for all the repairs?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, all the maintenance of the ships, all the upkeeps and outfit, and all the renewals.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know what that originally amounts to, in percentage to the value of the ships?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, I do not, I know Mr. Harriman told me they had not made very much money on the ships.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were saying that the Portland and Asiatic cannot compete with San Francisco on business originating on the Atlantic Seaboard. How is it with business in the Orient and destined to eastern points in the United States?

Mr. SCHWERIN: It is the same difficulty here. Kobe is one of our principal ports, and sometimes in the port of Kobe there are four different lines of express steamers, and we have a pretty hard time getting any freight on a tramp steamer against four express steamers, for instance, the "Minnesota" might be there and the "Fremont" might be there, and the Canadian express steamer in there, and perhaps one of our express steamers in there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I noticed the other day, Mr. Schwerin, when we were in Portland, an item about this ship that you spoke about, being stuck in the ice?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, the "Arragonia."

1111 Mr. SEVERANCE: And it gave a statement of the tonnage, the commodities on board of her. There were 7000 tons, were there not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't remember just what was on the "Arragonia" but the newspaper report is absolutely misleading, Mr. Severance, because we have had the "Manchuria" and "Mongolia" go out reported with 17,000 to 18,000 tons of freight in them, when we have not more than 3,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't know anything about that?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I would be very glad to furnish you with the inward manifest of the "Arragonia."

Mr. SEVERANCE: As a matter of fact, you do bring back from the Orient considerable portions of merchandise, on the Portland & Asiatic boats, do you not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, we bring back some, but we don't bring back anything like full cargoes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you bring back full cargoes on the Pacific Mail boats?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Sometimes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you usually?

Mr. SCHWERIN: At certain periods of the year, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do your agents over there in the Orient work equally hard for all the boats they represent?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Those are our instructions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you instruct them to compete on behalf of the Portland line with yourself acting for the Pacific Mail, do you, as actively as they can?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are your instructions in that regard?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I will tell you. There is a certain class of freight that we can get by tramp steamers, that moves by tramp steamers. We can't get silk, or silk piece goods, or high grade curios, for the tramp steamers; they all move by the express steamers. But we will work just as hard for the Portland and 1112 Asiatic line for the matting and teas, and for general curios, as we will for the San Francisco line. Those are our instructions. For instance, we may have a steamer, on the berth now, and then there may be an interval when there will be no steamer on the berth. Shippers in the Orient will almost invariably ship by the first steamer, and they will give the preference to the better steamer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then, as I understand it——

Mr. SCHWERIN (cont'g): Then again——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Pardon me. I thought you had finished.

Mr. SCHWERIN (cont'g): Then again, where freights control in the East, we try to solicit freight in this country by the Portland and Asiatic line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do the Portland and Asiatic Steamship Company have agents in the East?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir. Mr. Ten Broeck.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In New York City.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You solicit, your agents in the Orient solicit just as actively for the Portland and Asiatic as they do for the Pacific Mail, and the Occidental and Oriental, do they?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, or the T. K. E.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the agents are the same?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir; that is the Pacific Mail Steamships Company is the agent in the Orient for the Portland and Asiatic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I understand.

Mr. SCHWERIN: And we get a commission, we transact the business of the Portland and Asiatic, and they pay us a regular commercial commission; the same as we pay any commercial house that transacts the business for us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Suppose a Pacific Mail ship is in port at an Oriental port at the same time with a ship of the Portland & Asiatic. How do your agents distribute the cargo between those two, the cargo that they have accumulated to ship to this country?

1113 Mr. SCHWERIN: They don't distribute it. For instance the ships may be in the port of Hongkong. If we allowed the agent in liners we will say he will go to Kobe and have no space, and go to Yokohama and have no space.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let us imagine they are both at Yokohama, the last port of call.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Before the ships arrive there, the agents have been engaging space. The San Francisco line might not have more than 200 tons of space allotted to Yokohama, and the Portland & Asiatic steamer might have 550 tons of space available for Yokohama. Our agent will go out and try to get all the freight he can to fill up the 200 tons of space on the San Francisco steamer, and what he can for the Portland & Asiatic steamer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you give the Portland & Asiatic steamer what the Pacific Mail Steamer cannot carry. That is the idea, is it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what you said just now.

Mr. SCHWERIN: You asked me a question involving a specific case. I say they go out and take all the freight they can get. If the shipper declined to ship the 200 tons on the San Francisco steamer, and said he wanted to ship on the P. & A. steamer, it would go on the P. & A. steamer.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand, but the first duty of the Pacific Mail agents over there is to load the Pacific Mail steamers, because that is a more important branch of your business than the Portland & Asiatic Line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I can only say, Mr. Severance, that the agents have no instructions of that kind.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I thought from your statement just now that they did.

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir. That is merely a physical way of explaining to you when you take the port of Yokohama, our ships go into Yokohama in the busy season of the year jammed for freight.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do I understand it that it is to be left to 1114 the discretion of your agents in the Orient, as far as unrouted traffic is concerned, as to which way they will send it?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The agent must use his own discretion to get the ships unloaded, and get as much competitive freight as he can get hold of.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, competitive as between your lines and outside lines?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is no competition between the Portland & Asiatic, the Occidental & Oriental, the Pacific Mail, and the Japanese line, controlled by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, but they are all four lines competing against the Great Northern and Canadian Pacific and other lines?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, you might describe it that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is about right?

Mr. SCHWERIN: About right, yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do the Pacific Mail take shipments from the Orient for Los Angeles, the port of San Pedro?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How are they delivered? How are shipments for Los Angeles delivered? Are they trans-shipped at San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Trans-shipped by the Pacific Coast Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were asked by the Commissioner, and also by Judge Lovett, with reference to these conversations with Mr. Paul Morton concerning the San Diego Line. In 1902, there was an investigation in Chicago—it was January, 1902, five years ago and Mr. Stubbs, Mr. J. C. Stubbs, gave testimony there. He was asked about this same matter, and I would like to see if your recollection corresponds with what Mr. Stubbs testifies to. Mr. Stubbs was asked with reference to all-rail shipments from California, orange shipments, and the maintenance of rates, and about a certain arrangement between Mr. Morton and Mr. Stubbs.

1115 Mr. LOVETT: From what page are you reading, or about to read?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Page 24 of the record. Then the testimony is as follows:

"Mr. DAY: Is there not an understanding regarding the percent-
"age of the transpacific traffic that the Atchison shall have or take?

"Mr. STUBBS: No sir. The Atchison has run its own lines. Its "own steamers.

"Mr. DAY: Where?

"Mr. STUBBS: From San Diego.

"Mr. DAY: Is it running now?

"Mr. STUBBS: I don't know whether they are running now or "not.

"Mr. DAY: Is there any arrangement that the line shall be "abandoned?

"Mr. STUBBS: There is an understanding that after the 1st day "of April, I will not be sure about the 1st day of April, I believe "that the Santa Fe will use the transpacific lines from San Fran- "cisco.

"Mr. DAY: Is that what is popularly known as the Pacific Mail?

"Mr. STUBBS: That is one of them?

"Mr. DAY: What was the consideration for that proposal? How "was the Atchison to profit or benefit by them?

"Mr. STUBBS: I think the understanding is that it will receive "a fair share of the traffic from those steamers.

"Mr. DAY: Is that an arrangement between the Southern Pacific "railroad officials or the Union Pacific Railroad officials and the "Atchison?

"Mr. STUBBS: I don't think there is any agreement.

"Mr. DAY: Or understanding; is it an agreement between the "steamship company and the railroad, or all three?

"Mr. STUBBS: I don't think there is anything more than the ex- "pectation of that result.

"Mr. DAY: There has been no promise?

1116 "Mr. STUBBS: I think there has been no complete prom- "ise.

"Mr. DAY: Well, what propositions were made?

"Mr. STUBBS: Well, propositions were made to the effect that if "you work for the San Francisco lines, you get a fair share of the "traffic.

"Mr. DAY: That they will abandon the San Diego part?

"Mr. STUBBS: It would not be stated that way, in my judgment. "It would be stated, 'If you work in connection with our lines from "'San Francisco, we will see that you get a fair share of the busi- "'ness.'

"Mr. DAY: What steamship line at San Diego is the Atchison "connected with?

"Mr. STUBBS: I don't recall the name of the line."

Does that correspond with your recollection of the transaction and the negotiations?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I have never known Mr. Stubbs to have this discussion that he spoke about there. I was not present at the time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would not undertake to say, would you, that Mr. Stubbs has not correctly stated the suggestions that were made to the Santa Fe Company?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir, I could not state as to the correctness of that statement.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All you know about it is as to your talk with Mr. Morton?

Mr. SCHWERIN: And from time to time I have talked generally on the question.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Talked with Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Talked to Mr. Stubbs and talked to Mr. Sproule.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you talk with Mr. Stubbs and Mr. Sproule about the desirability of getting the Atchison to quit San Diego, and bring their stuff here?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Naturally. They were connecting carriers of ours.

1117 Mr. SEVERANCE: You were asked this question by Judge Lovett, and I was a little surprised at your answer. Judge Lovett asked you whether the Southern Pacific had any reason to object to your giving traffic to the Santa Fe, and you said "no." Do you mean that sir, that the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, carrying freight east from San Francisco, has no reason to object to your handing traffic over to the Santa Fe, "no object in objection"—that is the way the question read, I think.

Mr. SCHWERIN: Perhaps I may not have understood Judge Lovett's question just as you put it now. But I have always recognized my right as Manager of the Pacific Mail and the affiliated San Francisco lines, to work those lines in every way that I know how for the benefit of San Francisco, and for the individual lines, and that I had a right to go to the Sante Fe and to ask the Sante Fe to make an arrangement with me by which they would give me a larger share of their through freight, in return for which I could turn any or all of the business of our lines over to the Sante Fe. I have always believed I had that right.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what you meant, then, by that answer?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You did not mean by that that the Southern Pacific would not have less traffic if you gave it to the Santa Fe? They would, would they not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, naturally, if the Southern Pacific Company had had the entire traffic that came in, and a part of it were given to the Santa Fe, they would lose traffic. But we felt that we were building up this traffic all the time. There is a larger volume of traffic coming in, and the competition for outward traffic was very fierce, and we wanted the entire assistance of the Santa Fe if we could get them to help us through this port.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not want us—

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): I do not recognize the railroad at all, and do not consider the railroad at all.

1118 Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Schwerin, you do not want the Oriental traffic coming to California or going from California to the Orient to be divided between two Ports, but you want to bring it all to San Francisco?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Naturally. My interests lie in the port of San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you operate in connection with the Hawaiian Line?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You take shipments from here and take them up to Portland?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And also the Panama route. That is all.

Mr. LOVETT: We have no further questions.

Commissioner LANE: Mr. Schwerin, you understand there is a difference between the statement as made by Mr. Stubbs and the statement as made by you this morning in relation to the reason for abandoning the Don Diego line across the Pacific?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No Sir, I don't think so. As I understand Mr. Severance's question, it was whether I had previous knowledge of that understanding that Mr. Stubbs may have stated as taking place between him and the Santa Fe officers.

Commissioner LANE: As I understand Mr. Severance, he asked if you knew whether that was correct statement as made by Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't know what conversation Mr. Stubbs may have had with any officers in relation to this question, except with myself.

Commissioner LANE: Except yourself?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I can't remember, Mr. Lane, that Mr. Stubbs and myself were present at any meeting with Santa Fe officers where this question was seriously considered.

Commissioner LANE: You did not know that Mr. Stubbs was carrying on negotiations with the Santa Fe Railroad for the abandonment of its steamship line across the water?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No Sir.

1119 Commissioner LANE: And making an arrangement by which that business was to be diverted from San Diego to San Francisco, and go over your lines to the Orient?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No sir.

Mr. DUNNE: I don't think Mr. Stubbs' testimony will bear that construction, your Honor.

Commissioner LANE: I understood that that was Mr. Schwerin's statement, that he knew nothing about any transaction, anything in the way of a negotiation looking towards the divergence of this traffic, until after the San Diego line had been abandoned. Now, then, I understand Mr. Stubbs' statement to be that there were negotiations of that kind.

Mr. DUNNE: I don't understand Mr. Stubbs' testimony to mean that this general traffic arrangement between the Santa Fe and Pacific Mail Steamship Company was made as a result of and in transpacific connection out of San Diego. I understood the historical fact to be that that transpacific connection had ceased because it was financially unprofitable, and that it was after that and independently of that that the general traffic arrangement between the Pacific Mail Company and the Santa Fe was entered into.

Commissioner LANE: I may have misunderstood the statement of Mr. Stubbs as read by Mr. Severance from Mr. Stubbs' testimony. Will you kindly read that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I wish Judge Lovett would kindly read it for me, my voice is so bad, if you don't mind, Judge Lovett.

Mr. LOVETT: I will read it. I understood also Mr. Schwerin to testify that he had frequently solicited this business from Mr. Morton during the existence of that line.

Mr. LANE: So I understood.

Mr. LOVETT: But that no arrangement was made until after that line was discontinued.

Commissioner LANE: Yes. Now, if Mr. Stubbs' statement, as I understand it, is correct, Mr. Stubbs was negotiating for the 1120 abandonment of the steamship line and transfer of the traffic to the Pacific Mail, over which Mr. Schwerin is in absolute control.

Mr. LOVETT: I will read the statement, your Honor:

"Mr. DAY: Is there not an understanding regarding the per-"centage of the transpacific traffic that the Atchison shall have or "take?

"Mr. STUBBS: No, sir. The Atchison has run its own lines, its "own steamers.

"Mr. DAY: Where?

"Mr. STUBBS: From San Diego.

"Mr. DAY: Is it running now?

"Mr. STUBBS: I don't know whether they are running now or "not.

"Mr. DAY: Is there any agreement that the line shall be aban-"doned?

"Mr. STUBBS: There is an understanding that after the 1st day "of April, I will not be sure about the 1st of April, I believe"——

Commissioner LANE: Right there. Mr. Schwerin, do you know of or were you a party of that understanding relating to the 1st day of April.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is 1902.

Commissioner LANE (cont'g): 1902.

Mr. SCHWERIN: I can't recollect of having any definite talk with Mr. Morton in relation to the operation of our lines positively, until after the abandonment of the California & Oriental line.

Commissioner LANE: You do not know that there was an arrangement, not a contract, but an arrangement or a gentlemen's understanding, that after the 1st day of April, 1902, there should be a transfer of their business to you?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I will frankly state that my impression is that there was an interregnum, that the California & Oriental line had practically gone out of business when Morton told me "Well, we will give you some of the business." But I want to say that this had been talked over (you understand unofficially) for all of the two or three years that the California & Oriental line had been running.

1121 Mr. LOVETT: Does your Honor desire the rest of this read?

Commissioner LANE: Yes. I want to see how far Mr. Stubbs went.

Mr. LOVETT: I did not finish the last answer of Mr. Stubbs. I will repeat it:

"Mr. STUBBS: There is an understanding that after the 1st day "of April, I will not be sure about the 1st day of April, I believe "that the Sante Fe will use the trans-Pacific lines from San Fran"cisco.

"Mr. DAY: Is that what is popularly known as the Pacific Mail?

"Mr. STUBBS: That is one of them.

"Mr. DAY: What was the consideration of that proposal. How "was the Atchison to benefit or profit by that?

"Mr. STUBBS: I think the understanding is that it will receive
"a fair share of the traffic from those steamers.

"Mr. DAY: Is that an agreement between the Southern Pacific "railroad officials, or the Union Pacific railroad officials and the "Atchison?

"Mr. STUBBS: I don't think there is any agreement.

"Mr. DAY: Or understanding; is it an agreement between the "steamship company and the railroads, or all three?

"Mr. STUBBS: I don't think there is anything more than the ex-
"pectation of that result.

"Mr. DAY: There has been no promise?

"Mr. STUBBS: I think there has been no completed promise."

Commissioner LANE: "No completer promise" is the language.

Mr. LOVETT (cont'g): "Mr. DAY: Well what propositions were "made?

"Mr. STUBBS: Well, propositions were made to the effect that if "you work for the San Francisco line, you get a fair share of the "traffic.

"Mr. DAY: That they will abandon the San Francisco 1122 "part?

"Mr. STUBBS: It would not be stated in that way, in my "judgment. It would be stated, 'If you work in connection with "'our lines from San Francisco, we will see that you get a fair "'share of the business.'

"Mr. DAY: What steamship line at San Diego is the Atchison
"connected with?

"Mr. STUBBS: I don't recall the name of the line.

"Mr. DAY: Is there not an agreement regarding the division of "the"——

Commissioner LANE: That is all there is that I wanted to hear. Thank you. That account differs from your statement to the Commission, does it not, as to there being an agreement or understanding that the Santa Fe should have a proportion of the business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: From what Mr. Stubbs says there taking his testimony there, it seems that he had discussed that thing with the Santa Fe in relation to a proposition of that business.

Commissioner LANE: Was he not trenching on your preserve when he was negotiating for transpacific business?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I have asked Mr. Stubbs to help me in a great many things.

Commissioner LANE: But you did not ask him in tha matter?

Mr. SCHWERIN: In this? I have discussed that question with Mr. Stubbs, as to our advisability of handling the Santa Fe traffic for the benefit of the steamship line, a great many times and I have discussed with the other officials of the Southern Pacific Company, in regard to the port of San Francisco, building up the port of San Francisco, that is, the steamship connections. You understand, Mr. Lane, the more steamers that can be gotten out at the port of San Francisco and an increasing of the importance of the port of San Francisco, will naturally increase the volume of the tonnage that moves by the port of San Francisco, and I look to the question of having the rail connection, in fact I have asked the 1123 Southern Pacific to help me in that direction, to help me to get the Santa Fe to make a traffic arrangement with us.

Commissioner LANE: Is it in furtherance, or was it in furtherance of any negotiations which you had with Mr. Stubbs, that this agreement was had?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I have no doubt Mr. Stubbs may have discussed the thing with the Santa Fe people—must undoubtedly have done so.

Mr. DUNNE: Mr. Schwerin, do you understand that there is anything in this testimony that has been read here of Mr. Stubbs' statements, which goes to the point that he made this understanding?

Mr. SCHWERIN: No, sir, I do not.

Mr. DUNNE: Do you understand this to be any more than a suggestion that he knows as a matter of history, that there was some such arrangement, or result, or expectation?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I so understand it, the way it was read, yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: By the way, Mr. Schwerin, do you know whether the date here specified by Mr. Stubbs was before or after the abandonment by the Santa Fe of its transpacific water connection at San Diego?

Mr. SCHWERIN: What was the date, please, that he specified there?

Mr. DUNNE: The date he specified is April, 1902.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the time they were to begin the work at San Francisco on the transpacific line?

Mr. DUNNE: Yes. He says here he is not certain about the date, but assuming provisonally that that was the date, do you happen to know whether or not at that point of time the Santa Fe had abandoned its connection with the water carrier out of San Diego?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Well, I would not like to state on that. I am not positive of the exact date that they abandoned that line?

Mr. DUNNE: At all events, Mr. Schwerin, independently of this whole question of abandonment, the Santa Fe had a connection with a water carrier at San Diego and you had been seeking 1124 yourself, prior to the abandonment of the connection, to have the Santa Fe establish joint traffic relations with you. Was that not so?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir, during the entire time, practically—well, not the entire time, but practically after the first year of the operation of the California & Oriental.

Mr. DUNNE: As connecting carriers?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: May I ask, Mr. Schwerin, if Mr. Stubbs did not do this, and you didn't do it, who did it? Now, as I understand Mr. Dunne's question, it is based upon the implication that Mr. Stubbs did not carry out that arrangement, and you say you did not. Now, then, is there anybody in authority, anybody with authority from you who could carry it out?

Mr. SCHWERIN: I don't think I have said I didn't carry out that arrangement, Mr. Lane.

Commissioner LANE: You have mentioned the arrangement, and——

Mr. SCHWERIN (int'g): You mean in regard to these negotiations?

Commissioner LANE: At the time that Mr. Stubbs testifies to; at the time that he refers to prior to the 1st day of April, 1904?

Mr. SEVERANCE: 1902, your Honor.

Commissioner LANE: 1902, yes.

Mr. SCHWERIN: I can only answer that question by saying that that was a matter of general discussion all along the line in relation to our getting control of the Santa Fe outward tonnage.

Commissioner LANE: The whole thing amounts to this: That there was an understanding and that Mr. Stubbs knew about it, and I want to know by whom it was done. Mr. Stubbs, as I understand him, didn't do it, and as I understand you, you didn't do it. Now I would like to know just who did?

Mr. SCHWERIN: The first information I had upon the sub-
1125 ject was that the Santa Fe—and Mr. Paul Morton told me "Well, I guess we are going to give you some business" in New York, and I asked him when "Well," he said, "I don't know when." I don't remember the date of this conversation, but he said, "We have thought the whole thing over, and we are not going to put on a line of our own, and we will give you the business." Now, we had previously discussed many times before that in relation to a division of the traffic outward and homeward. So I understood that when the first arrangement was made in regard to the division of the traffic I understood from Mr. Sproule that the Santa Fe had accepted my proposition, and the date of that I am unable to state—had accepted my proposition that we were to reserve a certain amount of our tonnage space for the outward Santa Fe traffic, and we were to give them in the neighborhood of 25 per cent. of the homeward traffic.

Commissioner LANE: I think that is all.

Mr. DUNNE: I would like to ask this question of Mr. Schwerin: This matter had been developing and progressing, this question of joint traffic relations between your company and the Santa Fe, throughout quite a period of time, had it not?

Mr. SCHWERIN: Yes sir, it was all mixed up, and it is absolutely impossible for me to state now how the thing culminated in an agreement.

Mr. DUNNE: I was just going to put that question to you, if it would not be extremely difficult to reduce the proposition of its concrete elements?

Commissioner LANE: It manifestly is, Mr. Dunne. There isn't anybody that appears to know exactly how it was done.

Mr. DUNNE: I want your Honor to appreciate that we want to give you all the information that we can.

Commissioner LANE: I appreciate that.

Mr. DUNNE: That this thing had been going on a long time, backwards and forwards, to and fro, and to take it and give it concrete dimensions and proportions and limitations is very dif-
1126 ficult to do, and that is true of a great deal of business that this witness does, or any other man of large affairs.

Commissioner LANE: Are there any further questions to be asked of Mr. Schwerin?

Mr. DUNNE: That is all, Mr. Schwerin.

Commissioner LANE: At 2 o'clock we will take up informally a matter touching the 20 cent unloading rate that has been put in here, and I would like to have the traffic officials of the Southern Pacific and of the Santa Fe present at that time. It probably will take but a very few minutes, and immediately after its conclusion we will continue this inquiry. We will now adjourn until 2 o'clock.

After Recess, 2 p. m.

At the opening of the afternoon session, the Commission considered informally the matter touching the 20 per cent. unloading rate referred to by the Commisioner Lane at the adjournment hour. At 3 o'clock P. M. the hearing of the inquiry was resumed.

Commissioner LANE: You may proceed gentlemen.

Mr. SEVERANCE: We will call Mr. Shotwell.

W. J. SHOTWELL, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live Mr. Shotwell?

Mr. SHOTWELL: San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is your business?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Railroading, representing the Denver & Rio Grande, and other through lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived in San Francisco?

Mr. SHOTWELL: About 14 years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And during that time what business have you been in?

1127 Mr. SHOTWELL: Representing the D. & R. G. principally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your title here?

Mr. SHOTWELL: General Agent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has that been your title all the time you have been here?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What are your duties?

Mr. SHOTWELL: I am representing the traffic department, soliciting freight and passenger business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Soliciting business?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you state how the business of the Denver & Rio Grande, both in and out of San Francisco, the business in which you share in and out of San Francisco, compares with the business you did prior to 1901?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Well, we are not doing as heavy a business to-day as we did in 1901.

Mr. DUNNE: Will you speak a little louder, please.

Mr. SHOTWELL: We are not doing as much business to-day as we did in 1901.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And previous years.

Mr. SHOTWELL: And previous years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the difference, in a general way—say in percentages?

Mr. SHOTWELL: We are doing less than 50 per cent. of the business to-day than we were in 1901.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you state, if you know, the reason for that?

Mr. SHOTWELL: The reason is that the Southern Pacific devote their efforts to securing the business for the Union Pacific, and in that way that effects our traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How was it before 1901? What was the attitude of the agents of the Southern Pacific towards your Company and the Union Pacific?

Mr. SHOTWELL: I considered them neutral.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They were neutral?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Yes, sir.

1128 Mr. SEVERANCE: And how soon after the acquisition of the Southern Pacific stock by the Union Pacific did you find this change take place in the attitude of the agents of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Well, it was gradual.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And is constantly more noticeable?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Becoming more noticeable, yes sir, at the present time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In soliciting business, in the position—I assume that you are in opposition to the Union Pacific in soliciting business?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In soliciting business in opposition, in your work of soliciting that business, what do you find is the attitude of the agents of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific in routing business?

Mr. SHOTWELL: I find that the business controlled by the Southern Pacific agents is almost invariably routed either by the Union Pacific, or by the Sunset to New Orleans.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I want to get at. Does the business that originates or goes to any particular section go by either one of those routes as against the other?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Yes, sir. I consider the business subject to the control of the Southern Pacific is routed one way or the other, by the Sunset or by the Union Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is there any difference as to the way it is routed, depending on the origin of the traffic?

Mr. SHOTWELL: I think they usually—at the present time I don't know that there is very much difference or very much preference one way or the other, but previous to 1901 the Sunset route business was considered by us to be seaboard business and southeastern states business—southeastern territory of the United States—or business that could be reached by New Orleans.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know now, which way, if either way, the Southern Pacific Agents endeavor to route traffic that goes 1129 to the seaboard or comes from the seaboard, as between the route by Ogden and the Union Pacific on the one hand, and the Sunset on the other?

Mr. SHOTWELL: I think they are neutral as to that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Neutral.

Mr. SHOTWELL: As between these two routes; yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is this testimony that you have given with reference to the efforts made by the Southern Pacific to influence business with the Union Pacific as against your company testimony that applies only to the freight business, or does it apply also to the passenger business?

Mr. SHOTWELL: It applies to both.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. SHOTWELL: On both freight and passengers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You may examine him.

Mr. LOVETT: We have no questions.

Mr. DUNNE: I would like to ask him one question. You are an officer of the Western Pacific, are you not?

Mr. SHOTWELL: A Director; yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: You are a Director of the Western Pacific?

Mr. SHOTWELL: Yes, sir.

J. D. MANSFIELD having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live, Mr. Mansfield?

Mr. MANSFIELD: In San Francisco.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Commercial agent of the Denver & Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is your immediate superior?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Mr. Shotwell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This gentleman that has just testified?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Yes, sir.

1130 Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of work do you do as commercial agent?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Under Mr. Shotwell, I have the direction of the solicitation of freight business, and general charge of the detail connected with the freight business here.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How large a force has the Rio Grande here that aids in the solicitation of its business?

Mr. MANSFIELD: In the solicitation entirely?

Mr. SEVERANCE: In the office work in connection with it too?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Our entire force in this territory is 16 men.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, in this city?

Mr. MANSFIELD: No, sir; in the territory assigned to this agency.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the extent of the territory of this agency?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Its present lines are the Bakersfield and San Luis Obispo and the Oregon State Line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many are there in this City, Mr. Mansfield?

Mr. MANSFIELD: There are 12.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How does the number of men that you have soliciting traffic now compare with the number that you employed here four or five years ago?

Mr. MANSFIELD: It is larger.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have more?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you hear Mr. Shotwell's statement as to the falling off of business?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What have you to say as to that?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Well, his statement is correct, so far as my knowledge goes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What do you find is the attitude of the agents of the Southern Pacific and Union Pacific here in the matter of routing business, their attitude towards your company?

1131 Mr. MANSFIELD: Do you want to—do you couple the agents of the Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific together?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will take the Southern Pacific alone, the agents of the Southern Pacific?

Mr. MANSFIELD: The agents of the Southern Pacific are, or rather their attitude is, I don't know, you can't call it unfriendly, but their efforts are directed to the securing of business for the Harriman lines, that is, the Union Pacific and the Sunset route.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, their efforts are combined towards securing business for both of their lines, or either of them, as against you?

Mr. MANSFIELD: As against the Rio Grande?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you noticed any change in the attitude of the Southern Pacific agents in that regard in the last three or four years?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the change?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Well, while in former years their attitude was neutral, so far as the line selected beyond Ogden is concerned, at the present time they are favoring the Union Pacific as against us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. LOVETT: What is the Western terminus of your line?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Ogden.

Mr. LOVETT: How far is that from San Francisco?

Mr. MANSFIELD: It is, I think, about eight hundred and some odd miles.

Mr. LOVETT: How does the traffic that you secure in San Francisco get to your line?

Mr. MANSFIELD: It gets to us over the Southern Pacific.

Mr. LOVETT: Entirely, does it not?

Mr. MANSFIELD: No, sir. From this territory, it does, yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: Do you send any California business East bound over the Texas & Pacific?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Yes, sir.

1132 Mr. DUNNE: The Texas & Pacific is a part of the Gould system, is it not?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Popularly so known.

Mr. DUNNE: And the Denver & Rio Grande is a part of the Gould system, is it not?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: The Western Pacific is also a part of the Gould system, is it not?

Mr. MANSFIELD: I presume it will be.

Mr. DUNNE: And when the Western Pacific is completed, you expect to favor the Denver & Rio Grande?

Mr. MANSFIELD: I don't know what we will expect to do when that time happens.

Mr. DUNNE: As a railroad man you have no doubt about that, have you?

Mr. MANSFIELD: Well, condition—I would not want to say as to that.

Mr. DUNNE: Well, I won't ask you to commit yourself. That is all.

WILLIAM A. BISSELL having been duly sworn testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Bissell, where do you live?

Mr. BISSELL: I live across the Bay at Alameda.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And where is your office in San Farncisco?

Mr. BISSELL: San Francisco—673 Market Street.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your business?

Mr. BISSELL: I am Assistant Traffic Manager of the Atchison System.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is your Traffic Manager?

Mr. BISSELL: They have no Traffic Manager; they have a Freight Traffic Manager, and a Passenger Traffic Manager. Mr. Gorman is Freight Traffic Manager, and is over me, and also Mr. Black, located in Chicago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you assistant to both of them?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are the chief representative of the traffic department here on the coast?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

1133 Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the General Freight Agent of your company?

Mr. BISSELL: On the coast?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes sir.

Mr. BISSELL: Mr. Barnwell—W. G. Barnwell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is Mr. Chambers?

Mr. BISSELL: He is Assistant Freight Traffic Manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is he assistant to you?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes. He is in active charge of the detail business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is in active charge?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And your work is confined largely to supervision?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You keep yourself posted as to the traffic conditions, however, do you not?

Mr. BISSELL: Reasonably so, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you connected any way with the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir, I am a director of the Northwestern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In addition to being a director, are you an officer?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who has charge of the traffic of that system, the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. BISSELL: Mr. Ryan, F. X. Ryan.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was his position prior to the organization of the Northwestern Pacific?

Mr. BISSELL: He was General Freight and Passenger Agent of the California Northwestern, and also of the North Shore.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are those the Southern Pacific lines that went into the combination, or were they the Santa Fe lines?

Mr. BISSELL: As far as it was publicly known, they were neither; they were independent lines. I don't understand——

1134 Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): Mr. Bissell, Mr. Payson testified yesterday that there were certain lines belonging to the Southern Pacific and certain lines belonging to the Santa Fe that went into the Northwestern Pacific, and he named those lines you have spoken of?

Mr. BISSELL: He is better authority on those matters than I am.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't remember whether he said they were Southern Pacific or Santa Fe lines?

Mr. BISSELL: He must have said they were Southern Pacific lines, if he said either. They are the lines we always supposed were controlled by the Southern Pacific, and the lines he referred to as the Santa Fe were the lines up north, on Eel River.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the amalgamation of these lines up north, who had control of the traffic conducted over the Santa Fe line?

Mr. BISSELL: Up in the north there?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes sir.

Mr. BISSELL: Mr. Porter, at Eureka.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to whom did he report?

Mr. BISSELL: He reported to Captain Payson.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Captain Payson.

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He did not report to you?

Mr. BISSELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understood the Captain to say yesterday he did not have anything to do with the traffic, and so I was going to find out who had.

Mr. BISSELL: I think Porter ran the business without very much reporting to anybody.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What little reporting he did do was to Captain Payson?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What has become of him now?

Mr. BISSELL: He is still there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is he doing?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, he is in charge of those northern lines. The Northwestern Pacific has not been in existence long enough 1135 so as to get down to any outline of the business. So far as I know, the officers continue just as they were.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I don't think I asked Captain Payson yesterday, and I will ask you as a director: Has the Northwestern Pacific started in on the construction of lines that are to tie the system together?

Mr. BISSELL: The actual construction?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. BISSELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you let any contracts?

Mr. BISSELL: I don't know that we have. It is not a very good time of year to build railroads up in that country.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have located a line?

Mr. BISSELL: There have been several surveys. Captain Payson could probably tell you about that.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He knows more about that?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then you have very little to do with the line, with the exception of being a director?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far east does your jurisdiction extend, Mr. Bissell?

Mr. BISSELL: To Chicago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, all the way to Chicago?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And covers what traffic?

Mr. BISSELL: All the traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All the traffic?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir, freight and passenger.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You are familiar with the eastern movement of fruit from Southern California, are you not?

Mr. BISSELL: Somewhat, yes sir. I have not had very active control of the detail work of that for some time. In a general way, I am familiar with the situation there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who has the direct control of that?

Mr. BISSELL: Mr. Chambers is closer to that.

1136 Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Chambers is closer to that, you say?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir, to the detail of that work.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has there been, so far as you are advised, the last two years, any change in the method of handling the fruit crop of Southern California as between the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe?

Mr. BISSELL: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The traffic is divided up about the same as it was four or five years ago?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, I could not say as to that; as a general proposition, I should say yes. The traffic is so located there that it would naturally divide about equally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does your road make any effort to get fruit traffic that originates on the Southern Pacific lines in Southern California?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir, we take business from other lines.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you solicit it? Do you have men actively at work trying to get business from other lines, in competition with the Santa Fe?

Mr. BISSELL: As to that I could not say. I don't think we do because the main effort we have had for the last three or four years has been to get our cars back fast enough to take care of the fruit that was offered.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact, Mr. Bissell, that an arrangement has existed for a number of years between the Southern Pacific and your company, by virtue of which you have each refrained from endeavoring to get business of that character originating on the line of the competing road.

Mr. BISSELL: In Southern California?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. BISSELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has there never been any such arrangement, to your knowledge?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, there was—I presume you refer to the 1137 testimony that came out on the former case and partly exploited at that time. The business is so located down there that it naturally about evenly divides itself between the two companies and we have always had all we could do to get our equipment back to take care of our own. We have taken fruit at times from the Southern Pacific, and at times they have taken fruit from our line. As a general proposition, if it were up to me, I should prefer to take the fruit that originates on our own line, as then we do not have to divide the earnings with anybody.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Bissell, the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe lines are very close together, are they not, between San Bernardino, we will say, and Los Angeles?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And there is a large amount of fruit that might easily be procured by one company as against the other by active solicitation. Is that not true?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, that is true in a measure, but most of that fruit is controlled—the routing of most of that fruit is controlled by the location of the packing houses? If an orange shipper had a packing house on the line of the Southern Pacific, he would not ship over our line unless there was some unusual condition of affairs.

757

If the Southern Pacific had no cars, he might haul his fruit over to our line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you make any effort to get fruit that belongs to packers on the Southern Pacific track by holding out the offer of efficient service, or facilities, or anything of that sort?

Mr. BISSELL: Why, we have at times done so, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago did you do that?

Mr. BISSELL: I could not tell you exactly.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not do it now, do you?

Mr. BISSELL: I don't think so. We haven't equipment enough. We have always had a hard time to get that equipment back to take care of the business originating on our own tracks.

1138 Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you increased your equipment?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. Bissell: Does the business increase faster than your increase in equipment?

Mr. BISSELL: The business has shown a general increase, and we have also had less ability to get our cars back from the east.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Why?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, on account of the weather conditions that exist there—I don't know that I could give you the detail of it, but it seems to be harder every season to get our equipment back.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Bissell, have you been the last few years operating your own refrigerator cars, or not?

Mr. BISSELL: We have been operating our own cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: For how many years have you done so? Have you answered?

Mr. BISSELL: I was trying to think how many years. I don't remember. It might be 6 or 7 years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many refrigerator cars have you?

Mr. BISSELL: We have at the present time approximately 6000, I believe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And how recently have you procured these cars? You did not procure those 6000 cars at once, did you?

Mr. BISSELL: No, oh no. I think the additional equipment this year was about 600 cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You added 600 cars this year?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then, as I understand it, you do not solicit business in opposition to the Southern Pacific; and the reason you give for that is that you are shy of equipment?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Aside from that you would actively solicit that business off the tracks of the Southern Pacific, or would you 1139 prefer, as you said a moment ago, to let each line take the fruit that is naturally tributary to it?

Mr. BISSELL: It would depend a good deal on many conditions, Mr. Severance. If we were short of business, I think we would endeavor to full up with that business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You think you would?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Stubbs—you are acquainted with Mr. Stubbs are you not?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Stubbs testified at Chicago on this subject on the 8th of January 1902, and he was asked if there was any arrangement between his company, the Southern Pacific, or his companies throughout—his companies, the system that he represented—and the Santa Fe, and he answered first that the general arrangement was that they would consult and agree upon rates. He was then asked if there was anything regarding the percentage of traffic each should have, and he said this: "There is an understanding, but it is not in writing. You may say it amounts to an understanding that, so far as the orange business is concerned, we will endeavor to work an equal division of that traffic. That arises from the fact that it is about so divided in its production on our local lines in California there is about 50 per cent produced on the lines owned by the Santa Fe, and about 50 per cent produced on the Southern Pacific and so far as possible we agree that we shall not interfere with each other's local business." Now, is that agreement still in force?

Mr. BISSELL: I don't—the general policy is still in force, we would not go on to the line of the Southern Pacific and offer to take their oranges, and team them over to our line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have heard of railroads competing with each other, have you not, in different parts of the country?

Mr. BISSELL: In that way.

1140 Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir—we have done it ourselves, but that was before we were held down so tightly by the law.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But you do not approve of that policy as applied to the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe in California?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir, nor under present conditions, I don't believe there is anything in it.

Commissioner LANE: I did not hear what you said a moment ago to the effect that you had heard of competition, one road competing with another.

Mr. BISSELL: In that way, yes—taking business off the other line and teaming it over. I told him I had heard of it, and I had done it. As I understood it, he then asked me if we were doing that in Southern California, and I told him "no."

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that, as far as the orange crop that is raised in that big valley running back from Los Angeles, in which both Redlands and San Barnardino are, and in which both the Southern Pacific and your line have trackage, there is no competition for the business?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, of course it is necessary to know what you mean by that, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No effort made by your line of the Southern Pacific to procure the business. You simply take that which comes to you?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir, that is correct under present conditions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is another railroad in there now, is there not, known as the Salt Lake Line?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What kind of an attitude do you have towards the Salt Lake line with regard to the orange business?

Mr. BISSELL: In regard to the orange business, I could not tell you much about the details of that, Mr. Severance. Mr. Chambers handled that personally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is he here?

1141 Mr. BISSELL: No sir, he is not here at the present time. I believe that there was quite a lot of oranges went east over the Salt Lake road last year.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know, or have you been told by Mr. Chambers, about what percentage, what part of the oranges raised in that vicinity, the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe are willing to concede to the Salt Lake road?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You haven't been told?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not know?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now Mr. Bissell, which way do the oranges move to the east, as a rule, that go over the Southern Pacific from that region? Do they go by Sunset, or go up to the Ogden?

Mr. BISSELL: I don't know of any oranges going east by Sunset. Do you mean extreme east?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Anywhere east?

Mr. BISSELL: I could not tell you about that, Mr. Severance, except I have a general understanding that in the early part of the season they move the oranges east by El Paso, and later on they move them east by Ogden, as the weather moderates.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When they go by El Paso they are taken on to Chicago by the Rock Island or the Texas Pacific?

Mr. BISSELL: I think they are divided. I don't know how that is. I know they don't go over the Santa Fe.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know that they don't go over the Santa Fe?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir, they do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I suppose you don't want them to on account of the insufficiency of equipment?

Mr. BISSELL: They are not loaded in our equipment, Mr. Severance. We would be very glad to get them in Southern Pacific equipment at Deming or El Paso.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Bissell, is any effort made by the Southern Pacific to stimulate its orange traffic in that region by making 1142 quicker deliveries at Chicago and eastern points that are made over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. BISSELL: That are made over the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, by giving quicker service. Do you compete with them that way?

Mr. BISSELL: You asked me if there was any effort made on the part of the Southern Pacific.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, the Santa Fe. My voice is so bad, I don't wonder that you do not understand.

Mr. BISSELL: Why, our physical condition has been such, the condition of our equipment has been such, that it has taken every effort that we could put forth to ake care of that business for the last two years—the last three years, I guess—and we have done the best we could to handle that business, and I think this last year we have satisfied the growers down there pretty well. But we have been in such shape, as I think you well know, that we have not been able to make any special record runs across the continent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I wanted to get at whether you had tried to give a quicker service than the Southern Pacific.

Mr. BISSELL: We have tried very hard to give them good service down there, and we have succeeded fairly well.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is the schedule time that you endeavor to maintain on shipments of oranges from that valley to Chicago?

Mr. BISSELL: Eight days.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Eight days?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know what time the Southern Pacific and Rock Island make?

Mr. BISSELL: I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you ever been told as to whether they try to make the same time as you do?

Mr. BISSELL: Why, I suppose they try to get it there as quick as I can.

1143 Mr. SEVERANCE: You try to get it there in eight days?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is it not a fact that they try to get it there in eight days too?

Mr. BISSELL: You will have to ask them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that?

Mr. BISSELL: You will have to ask them. I don't know what their schedule is.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You don't know what it is?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you ever had any conversation with Mr. Stubbs upon the question of the rapidity of that service?

Mr. BISSELL: Oh, I think more than likely I have, but I have had no conversation with him in regard to the time that I can recollect.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not remember any talk with him in which you agreed between yourselves that you would endeavor, each of you, to make eight days?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir, I have no recollection of any such talk.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or any other number of days?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know anything of the service over the Salt Lake road?

Mr. BISSELL: I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You know nothing about that?

Mr. BISSELL: Nothing whatever.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know anything about the way the Salt Lake rates are made? Are they made after consultation with you?

Mr. BISSELL: That I could not say.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You must be able to testify as to that.

Mr. BISSELL: The Salt Lake rates?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes. Would they not have to talk with you before they make rates?

1144 Mr. BISSELL: With reference to through car services?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I mean the Salt Lake road east. I am speaking of the combination of rates over the lines of the Salt Lake line and the lines east of Chicago.

Mr. BISSELL: I think most of the rates were made before the Salt Lake came into the business. I think so, and I think there has been very little change in the business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did the traffic managers have any consultation with reference to the rates to be put forward?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Never did.

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No talk at all?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know who has charge of the traffic department of the Salt Lake road?

Mr. BISSELL: I understand Mr. F. A. Weir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Used to be with one of the roads out of Chicago?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir, years ago he used to be with the Alton.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He lives at Los Angeles now?

Mr. BISSELL: I understand he does, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You heard the testimony of Mr. Schwerin here yesterday with reference to the division to be made on Oriental traffic?

Mr. BISSELL: I heard part of it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In which he testified that for the last six months they have been giving it by alternate ships to your road and the other road. Mr. Schwerin testified that for the last six months, the traffic arriving by the Pacific Mail line and other lines under his control, into San Francisco, were divided between your line and the Southern Pacific, first one ship to one line, and then one ship to another line. Were you consulted about that before that rule was established?

Mr. BISSELL: He testified it was the result of a talk between Mr. Luce, Mr. Chambers and himself.

1145 Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Chambers did not consult you about that?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many years have you occupied this position with the road? How many years have you been in charge of the traffic department in the west?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, I have occupied this present position for about eight years—eight or nine years, I have forgotten which. Before that, I——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): You were with the company then, at the time the steamships were running from San Diego to the Orient?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir, I have been with this company for 24 years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I know you had been with them for a long time.

Mr. BISSELL: All the time they have been connected with the Pacific Coast traffic.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I knew you had been with them a long time, but I didn't know when you were first connected with them.

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Bissell, were you consulted by Mr. Schwerin, or any of these other gentlemen, with reference to the advisability of giving up the San Diego route, and routing your Oriental traffic by way of San Francisco?

Mr. BISSELL: No, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You were not.

Mr. BISSELL: No, sir, not in that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, in what way were you consulted, if at all?

Mr. BISSELL: Why, I was never consulted by any official of any steamship company of the Pacific Mail—in regard to giving up the California and Oriental Steamship Co. We gave the California Steamship Company up because it was a failure.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I understood that. And prior to the time you gave it up, had you any conversation with Mr. Schwerin 1143 or with Mr. Stubbs with reference to doing your business with the Pacific Mail or the companies coming into San Francisco?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, I don't remember to have had any conversation or personal talk with Mr. Schwerin or Mr. Stubbs with regard to that feature of the case. I have talked it over with our own people. I knew that the Pacific Mail were anxious to do our business for us if we abandoned that field down there. At the time that steamship line was put on, we didn't have our own line in here, you understand.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand. How long after your line reached San Francisco, did you quit the San Diego line?

Mr. BISSELL: My recollection is that it was about a year. My recollection is that that steamship line went into existence in 1899 and that our contract with them ended in 1902. I think it was in the spring in both instances. I think the contract ended in the spring of 1902. Now, you will understand in regard to this that I have lost all the papers that I had. I looked yesterday to see if there was anything upon this, and I could not find anything.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you have this up with Mr. Morton, Mr. Bissell. You said you talked with your own people?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did Mr. Morton tell you that he had had it up with Mr. Schwerin and Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. BISSELL: Mr. Morton—I could not tell you exactly what Mr.

Morton told me. I could tell you the general trend of the conversations that I had with him.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Give us that.

Mr. BISSELL: They were to the effect—the general subject was under discussion at that time, Mr. Severance. We had propositions not only from the Pacific Mail, but we had propositions from other people to go into the steamship business, and they were all of the same ilk as the California and Oriental—we were to hold the 1147 bag; the other fellow got the turkey, and we got the crow, if there was any. We finally were told by our people that there was a prospect of our ability to do business out of the port of San Francisco, which, in my judgment, is the only port in this State where the business can be done. I talked it over with Mr. Morgan several times. My recollection is that I told Mr. Morgan that if we could make a satisfactory arrangement of that kind, it was the best thing we could do.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, was an arrangement made, and if so, who made it?

Mr. BISSELL: I could not tell you who made it, but such an arrangement was made, that we should do business——

Mr. SEVERANCE (int'g): Everyone seemed to agree that there was some arrangement made, and that there was talk about it, but we seem to be unable to find out who made the arrangement until this matter came up about six months ago. We know who did that. But before you came here to San Francisco do you know who it was, representing your company, that made an arrangement with the Pacific Mail, and do you know what the arrangement was that this person made?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir—I don't know positively, but I assume that Mr. Morton made the arrangement. The arrangement was to the effect that we were to have certain space on the Pacific Mail steamers leaving this port, and that we were to receive a portion of their inbound cargo.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What portion?

Mr. BISSELL: 25 per cent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: 25 per cent.?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you understood that that was the arrangement when you concluded to work through San Francisco?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has that arrangement ever been changed as to percentages?

Mr. BISSELL: Not to my knowledge.

1148 Mr. SEVERANCE: In what way did you get that traffic? Was it switched over to you by the Southern Pacific at the docks?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir; it is the only way we can get it, Mr. Severance, the way the docks are arranged here. Are you familiar with the docks here?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, I understand that. It is unloaded on the tracks of the Southern Pacific and switched over to you?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir. Our cars are put in on the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's dock, and loaded there on the Southern Pacific track.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then the amount of traffic that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company agreed to give you, this 25 per cent. of their traffic, is not determined by the amount of traffic you are able to give them, but you get 25 per cent. of the traffic coming from the Orient, irrespective of the amount you give them?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, we had certain—we were assigned a certain amount of space. Of course the amount of business that we were able to give them would vary with our ability to fill that space.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Exactly.

Mr. BISSELL: We did our utmost to fill all the space we could get.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is to say, they agreed to take a certain amount of tonnage?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And if you furnished less, they took what you did furnish?

Mr. BISSELL: Took whatever we could furnish.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was there ever any instance where you had more tonnage than they cared to take?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What did you do with it in that case?

Mr. BISSELL: We had to hold it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Up to the next boat?

Mr. BISSELL: When Mr. Schwerin chartered extra steam-
1149 ers—it was the time when there was a big run on cotton over there—he chartered extra steamers as fast as he could get hold of them, and they took that cargo.

Mr. SEVERANCE: As I understand it, no matter whether you filled that space or not, they were bound under this arrangement to give you 25 per cent. of the traffic destined for the east?

Mr. BISSELL: That is my understanding.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is the best of your belief that they have done that—have they?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have made no effort, have you, through solicitation of the shippers or consignees of that traffic, to secure more than 25 per cent.?

Mr. BISSELL: East bound?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. BISSELL: No, sir, we have not. That is all done on the other side, in the Orient, and we have nothing to do with it.

Mr. LOVETT: You do not mean East bound, you mean inward bound?

Mr. BISSELL: No, he asked me about inward bound.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By "east bound," I mean east bound to the United States.

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir; what Mr. Schwerin designated yesterday as inbound business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Inbound business. And so far as the Southern Pacific is concerned and so far as you you know, the Southern Pacific have made no effort to secure more than the remaining 75 per cent.?

Mr. BISSELL: So far as I know, no railroad company has ever solicited that business.

Commissioner LANE: I do not understand that this business is solicited, any of it, by the Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe, and they take 25 per cent. for the Santa Fe and 75 per cent. for the Southern Pacific. The Oriental business, for instance, is taken as a whole, is it not?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: And then divided?

1150 Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: And are not solicited by any railroad?

Mr. BISSELL: That is correct.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And neither the Southern Pacific nor the Santa Fe competes for it, other than to have this arrangement with the steamship line, that is true, is it?

Mr. BISSELL: That is true. The competition is between the Pacific Mail and the Suez route and the tramp steamers; it is over in the East.

Commissioner LANE: And the other lines here?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: Puget Sound lines?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: One other feature of that matter. Different kinds of commodities are different as to rates?

Mr. BISSELL: Are what?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Rates differ as to different commodities. For instance, you get more for silk than you do for bags, do you not?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does this 25 per cent. mean 25 per cent. of the tonnage or 25 per cent. of the revenue?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, it was meant, as I take it, in my understanding of it, though I never had any explanation of that, but I assumed it meant 25 per cent. of the general cargo that the Pacific Mail Company brought into this port, and if we ran short of tonnage on one class of goods, we would run over on another.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then it is probably 25 per cent. of the revenue?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, it would probably work out that way. We never keep any check of it on the revenue. I stated that the 25 per cent. was to be as near as we could get it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then if in one cargo you get a lot of low price commodities, they would make it up to you on another?

1151 Mr. BISSELL: Even up on another, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How far to the east was most of this stuff moved that you got on the boats?

Mr. BISSELL: Well, there is a good deal of it goes to Chicago, and a good deal of it goes to New York. Chicago and New York are the principal ports it goes to.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you happen to know how that moves, the Southern Pacific part of it?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir, I do not.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Outside of these oranges in Southern California, and the Oriental traffic, is there any other traffic originating here in California, or moving to the east from California, concerning which you have an arrangement for division with the Southern Pacific?

Mr. BISSELL: I don't know of any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Those two are the only ones you know of?

Mr. BISSELL: I don't know of anything else.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

Mr. DUNNE: That is all, Mr. Bissell.

Commissioner LANE: One other question, Mr. Bissell. Does the arrangement about the division of oranges include other fruits?

Mr. DUNNE: What was that question?

Commissioner LANE: Does the arrangement in reference to oranges include other fruits?

Mr. DUNNE: What arrangement?

Commissioner LANE: That they won't interfere with each other's domain.

Mr. DUNNE: Go on and answer that briefly.

Mr. BISSELL: What other fruits do you mean?

Commissioner LANE: Any other fruits, Mr. Bissell?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Grape and lemons, for instance.

Mr. BISSELL: It is all handled down there under the head of citrus fruits. We make no distinction between oranges, lemons and pomelos.

Commissioner LANE: Does it include anything else besides citrus fruits?

Mr. BISSELL: I do not know of anything else. The ar-
1152 rangement, I suppose, is the arrangement he refers to, what he read from Mr. Stubbs' testimony.

Commissioner LANE: You know there was such an arrangement as that, do you not?

Mr. BISSELL: I explained to Mr. Severance all I know about it.

Commissioner LANE: Does that arrangement cover anything else but citrus fruits?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: Nothing else?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: It does not touch any other commodity?

Mr. BISSELL: I don't want to mislead you on that, Mr. Commissioner. The statement that I made was that we never pirate on one another's preserves down there, we never do it on any other freight. We can take freight from their track and take it over to ours, but we can't do it without hauling the freight, of course.

Commissioner LANE: So you can't reach out for any business from them; that is what I understand, is it?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir, we try to get all the business from them we can.

Commissioner LANE: All the business of every kind excepting on citrus fruits?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: Is that right?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: But you have come to an understanding as regards citrus fruits. Does that touch canned fruits?

Mr. BISSELL: No sir.

Commissioner LANE: It does not touch canned fruit. You fight for canned fruit, do you?

Mr. BISSELL: The only business that we can be held to be included in what you call an arrangement down there is business for which special equipment is required, and it takes all of the equipment we have got to take care of the fruit we have to handle 1153 for our own rails. We take canned goods in any kind of equipment.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is one other question that slipped my mind that I want to ask. Do you want to ask any further questions, gentlemen?

Mr. DUNNE: No, go ahead, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Bissell, do you remember a conversation you had with Stubbs about the time your line came into San Francisco upon the subject of this State toll? That was under discussion here day before yesterday?

Mr. BISSELL: No, I don't remember ever having discussed the subject of State toll with Mr. Stubbs.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never had any talk with him on the subject?

Mr. BISSELL: I don't remember any such talk. You say at the time our line came in?

Mr. SEVERANCE: About the time you came in here; yes sir.

Mr. BISSELL: I have no recollection of any talk with him.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you not have a conversation with Mr. Stubbs in which you called his attention to the fact that the Southern Pacific was bringing a good many commodities in here by the line this side of bay, and that it would be necessary for you to absorb that charge to compete with them? Did you not urge Mr. Stubbs, to take out that charge on the business coming up this side of the bay for that reason, and did he not tell you he would take it out?

Mr. BISSELL: Take out the charge for State toll?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The extra 5 cents on the stuff that did not come across the bay?

Mr. BISSELL: No, sir; I do not remember any such conversation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never had a talk with Mr. Stubbs about that?

Mr. BISSELL: I have no recollection of ever having discussed the subject with Mr. Stubbs.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In any way?

1154 Mr. BISSELL: In any way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or at any time.

Mr. BISSELL: Or at any time.

Mr. DUNNE: Mr. Bissell, I would like to ask you a question or two about this charge situation. The area in Southern California devoted to the production of Oranges is approximately distributed equally between the two initial lines, is it not?

Mr. BISSELL: It is.

Mr. DUNNE: There is some territory between San Bernandino and Los Angeles, referred to by Mr. Severance, where the tracks run tolerably close together?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: The oranges are collected in packing houses, are they not?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: Some packing houses are local to your rails, and some packing houses to the rails of the Santa Fe. Is not that correct?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes—to the Southern Pacific you mean?

Mr. DUNNE: To the Southern Pacific, I should say, yes.

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: Now you made the statement to Mr. Severance that the general policy (and you used the word "policy")—that the general policy still remains that you shall not go upon the rails of the Southern Pacific to take oranges out of one of their packing houses, and reciprocally, they will not scalp oranges from your packing houses. That is the general policy is it not?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. DUNNE: I want to ask you whether, outside of that general railroad policy which obtains in that territory, there is anything between your company and the Southern Pacific in the nature of a contract and bargain that you shall not do those things?

Mr. BISSELL: There is absolutely nothing.

1155 Mr. DUNNE: Are you not at entire liberty to-morrow or the next day, to go upon their rails and scalp oranges local to their packing houses, if you so wish?

Mr. BISSELL: We are, so far as being limited with any agreement with the Southern Pacific.

Mr. DUNNE: Yes, sir. Do you understand as a railroad man, or as a layman, for that matter, that there is any law in this land that compels you to compete for that kind of business?

Mr. BISSELL: Not in that way.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you want the legal opinion of the witness?

Mr. DUNNE: I want to clear up this situation. I don't want any misconception about it. It was thoroughly exploited in the Orange Routing case. That is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Just a minute. In view of the fact your legal opinion has been asked by my friend upon a question a moment ago let me ask you this: You say there are packing houses on your tracks and packing houses on the Southern Pacific tracks. Have you felt that you were at liberty legally to put solicitors in the field and try to influence the growers to patronize the packing houses on your tracks as against the ones on the other track, and would you do that?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you do that?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do do that?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Right along?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir, try to get them to build packing houses on our tracks.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you keep soliciting agents out down there to get oranges put into packing houses upon your tracks against those upon Southern Pacific tracks? Do you do that?

Mr. BISSELL: Ordinarily. Those packing houses, if I can answer this question this way——

Mr. SEVERANCE: Any way you desire.

1156 Mr. BISSELL: Ordinarily those packing houses are built by the different associations, and we never have very much success in asking a man from one association to take his oranges over and put them in a packing house that belonges to another association. But I think we do what you wanted to know about there. Whenever an association is going to put up a packing house, we try the best we know how to get them to put their packing house upon our line, so as to get the business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you do that, although it may result in giving you more than 50 per cent. of the business?

Mr. BISSELL: Yes, sir. I don't understand that the business down there is divided 50 per cent. and 50 per cent. I understand that it divides about equally.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you want it to remain that way?

Mr. BISSELL: No. I don't want it to remain that way. I would like to have a different deal on it. I would like to have more of it if I thought I could get it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You would like to have more of it if you thought you could get it without a row?

Mr. BISSELL: Without getting into complication.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And without getting into competition?

Mr. BISSELL: I think we are competing for it, Mr. Severance.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.

E. E. CALVIN, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live, Mr. Calvin?

Mr. CALVIN: I live in Oakland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what is your position?

Mr. CALVIN: Vice President and General Manager of the Southern Pacific Company, Pacific system.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over what extent of the line of that company does your jurisdiction reach?

1157 Mr. CALVIN: North to Ashland, east to Sparks, and southeast to the Rio Grande.

Commissioner LANE: A little bit louder, if you please.

Mr. CALVIN: Shall I state it again?

Commissioner LANE: What was the last? How far southeast do you go?

Mr. CALVIN: To the Rio Grande.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you mean the Rio Grande River?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir. It is about three miles this side of El Paso.

Mr. LOVETT: The Texas boundary line.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that you have charge of the lines from here north to Ashland and to the east as far as Sparks, and southeast to practically El Paso?

Mr. CALVIN: That is it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the operating man that has charge of the Southern Pacific lines north of you and beyond you? Is it Mr. O'Brien?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does Mr. O'Brien report to you?

Mr. CALVIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have no relations of any kind with Mr. O'Brien?

Mr. CALVIN: No.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who is the General Manager of the lines east of Sparks?

Mr. CALVIN: Mr. Bancroft.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Bancroft of Salt Lake City?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is also Vice President of the Oregon Short Line, is he not?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your duties are confined largely to the Southern Pacific System?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not have jurisdiction over any part of the Short Line or the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company?

Mr. CALVIN: No sir.

1158 Mr. SEVERANCE: And to whom do you report, Mr. Calvin?

Mr. CALVIN: To Mr. Kruttschnitt, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To Mr. Kruttschnitt?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you also report in any matters to Mr. Harriman direct?

Mr. CALVIN: Sometimes, in special matters.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Special matters?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But in the ordinary routine of your business, you report to Mr. Kruttschnitt?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Does the Traffic Manager here report to you or Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. CALVIN: He reports to Mr. Stubbs, sir, as I understand it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are your duties wholly in connection with operation?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you have anything to do with the traffic at all?

Mr. CALVIN: I am not responsible for traffic.

Mr SEVERANCE: How many divisions of the road are there in your jurisdiction? You have general superintendents, have you not?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes, sir, two.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have two?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over what particular territory do they have jurisdiction?

Mr. CALVIN: What we call the northern district is comprised of three divisions, all north of Santa Barbara and Fresno. The other general superintendent's territory, which is known as the southern district, comprises the lines South of these two points.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you been with the company here?

Mr. CALVIN: At this place?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

1159 Mr. CALVIN: About two years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And prior to that time where were you?

Mr. CALVIN: I was a year at Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And before that?

Mr. CALVIN: 7 or 8 years at Salt Lake.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was your position at Salt Lake?

Mr. CALVIN: General Superintendent for a short time, and afterwards Assistant General Manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of the Oregon Short Line?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Then you have been connected with the Southern Pacific Company how long? Only the two years, or also the year that you were in Portland?

Mr. CALVIN: The year I was in Portland, I had charge of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon, north of Ashland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you occupy the same position at Portland that Mr. O'Brien occupies now?

Mr CALVIN: Precisely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you had jurisdiction over the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon north of Ashland and over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to 1901, when the Union Pacific purchased the stock of the Southern Pacific, there were no officers, were there, who had jurisdiction over any parts of the Southern Pacific system, and at the same time over the Union Pacific, Oregon Short Line, or O. R. & N.?

Mr. CALVIN: Not so far as I know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In these days, the lines were operated independently of each other, that is, the Southern Pacific was operated independent of these other three lines?

Mr. CALVIN: So far as I know.

1160 Mr. SEVERANCE: And in those days you were an official of the Oregon Short line?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know whether at that time, when you lived at Salt Lake City and were an official of the Short line, and prior to 1901, there was competition existing between the Southern Pacific and the lines running northwesterly to Portland the Short Line and the O. R. & N.?

Mr. CALVIN: No sir, I don't know as to that. I had nothing to do with traffic management.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had nothing to do with traffic?

Mr. CALVIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You never had?

Mr. CALVIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Your duties were confined simply to operation?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Are you the head of the car clearing house system?

Mr. CALVIN: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: To whom do the car service agents make reports?

Mr. CALVIN: You mean on the Southern Pacific?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. CALVIN: We have an officer with the title of Superintendent of Transportation, and that officer reports to me.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Up in Portland the other day, we found an official by the name of Meyer there who was Car Service Agent of the O. R. & N. and Southern Pacific lines in Oregon.

Mr. CALVIN: That corresponds to our office of Superintendent of Transportation.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It corresponds to that, does it?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir, only our office carries with it little more authority than does his, that is all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That official reports to you, does he?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

1161 Mr. SEVERANCE: And he has to do with the distribution of cars?

Mr. CALVIN: Only in a general way, he had charge of the details of it entirely.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who else has charge of them?

Mr. CALVIN: No one.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Have you anything to do with that?

Mr. DUNNE: I think you misunderstood him. I think he understood you to ask if he himself had charge of the distribution.

Mr. SEVERANCE: No, I asked him if this Superintendent of Transportation had. What is his name, Mr. Calvin, your Superintendent of Transportation?

Mr. CALVIN: Richardson.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He lives here in San Francisco.

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Has he charge of the distribution of cars?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: On the Southern Pacific system?

Mr. CALVIN: The territory that I cover, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The same territory that you cover?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He reports to you, does he not?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in the handling of cars, he treats all the cars of the Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Short line, and O. R. & N. as company cars, does he not, as distinguished from outside cars?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long ago was that policy adopted?

Mr. CALVIN: Well, I don't recall the exact date, I think about two years ago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By whose direction?

Mr. CALVIN: I think it was by general agreement of all the General Managers of all those lines. I know the matter was discussed in the meeting of General Managers.

1162 Mr. SEVERANCE: Where was this meeting held? Here or in Chicago?

Mr. CALVIN: In Chicago, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In Mr. Kruttschmitt's office?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was not that system established over all these allied lines under instructions from Mr. Kruttschmitt?

Mr. CALVIN: It was after conference with the General Manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: The orders came from him?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr SEVERANCE: The man in Portland, Mr. Meyer you say, reports to Mr. O'Brien, does he not?

Mr. CALVIN: I think he reports to the General Superintendent; there is only one General Superintendent of that system.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Of the whole system?

Mr. CALVIN: The lines entering at Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He reports to the General Superintendent and the man here reports to you?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where does the Union Pacific Car Agent report?

Mr. CALVIN: I could not say positively, but I assume to the General Superintendent.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What I want to get at is this: Is there not any one central place to which these reports are made, so that you know the situation of the cars of the whole system?

Mr. CALVIN: The general direction of the movement of cars on each line is in the hands of the General Manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I understand that. But haven't you any central bureau that is constantly in touch with these various car service agents of Superintendent of Transportation since you adopted this system of treating the cars of all these four lines as cars of one company?

Mr. CALVIN: Well, there is a sort of car clearing house
1163 that just keeps track of the mileage of the cars, but not of the distribution of them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Where is that clearing house located?

Mr. CALVIN: In Chicago, I think.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In Mr. Kruttschmitt's office?

Mr. CALVIN: Well, I am not positive as to that. It does not come into the matter of operation, and cuts no figure in handling of the equipment.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You do not know about that?

Mr. CALVIN: It is an accounting matter.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, under the car service rules, you have an eastern car comes out here loaded, and it is your duty to get that car back to the initial, is it not?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That rule is abrogated, is it not, in the case of the Union Pacific equipment. For instance, you treat that the same as Southern Pacific equipment?

Mr. CALVIN: You treat the Union Pacific equipment just the same as Southern Pacific equipment as to leading.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is what I am talking about. How, is there not some means by which your department here, the one over which you have jurisdiction, keeps touch with the same department of the Union Pacific we will say, with reference to cars?

Mr. CALVIN: In the event that there is a shortage of any class of equipment, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How do they do it, by correspondence?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Or are reports interchanged?

Mr. CALVIN: No sir. There is a report interchanged showing any surplus equipment that there may be on in any General Manager's territory. That is the only regular report that is made.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And to whom are these reports sent?
1164 Are they sent to a similar official of the other divisions?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir, sent to all of the other General Managers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And duplicates sent to Mr. Kruttschmitt?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is the nature of the reports that you make to Mr. Kruttschmitt?

Mr. CALVIN: In regard to cars?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Oh, generally, Mr. Calvin. How often do you report, and concerning what matter?

Mr. CALVIN: Any matter of any importance that I want advice on.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Any matters of any importance. Well, for instance, you want additional equipment, or you want steel rails, or anything of that kind. Do you communicate that fact to Mr. Kruttschmitt.

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What other matters, in a general way? Can you give the classes of matters concerning which you make habitual reports to Mr. Kruttschmitt?

Mr. CALVIN: Any matter affecting the policy of the property.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do the other general managers of the Union

Pacific, and the Short Line, and the O. R. & N. do the same, so far as you know?

Mr. CALVIN: So far as I know.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is done, is it, for the purpose of maintaining a uniform policy throughout the entire system of Harrison lines, so called.

Mr. CALVIN: Well, I don't know the reason for it.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But they do it?

Mr. CALVIN: I think so.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Lovett suggests that I ask you this, If you had a shortage of cars in your territory, and you have reason to believe that Mr. O'Brien, or Mr. Bancroft, or some of these other gentlemen occupying positions akin to yours on other divisions, have cars, how do you manage the matter?

1165 Mr. CALVIN: I take it up direct with them.

Commisioner LANE: What was that? I did not hear.

Mr. CALVIN: I take it up direct with them.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And do they send you empties?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir, if they can.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Judge Levett suggests that if that is not successful, you probably take it up with Mr. Kruttschmitt?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Is that true?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He is over all you gentlemen—he is the manager to whom you can all appeal?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Whose directions you will take?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: Would it not facilitate things in the matter of car service, Mr. Calvin, if you had in connection with your car service or your car clearance one man who was at the head of that bureau for all of the roads?

Mr. CALVIN: I think it would.

Commissioner LANE: And who would have control over the handling and disposition of the equipment?

Mr. CALVIN: Well, only as to the division of it between the different sections of the country, after considering the requirements and the importance of the traffic. I understand that is contemplated by all of the western railroads, a clearance of that sort.

Commissioner LANE: Then in that case you would not apply to the Manager of the road in Portland, but you would apply to the head of that bureau?

Mr. CALVIN: I assume so, yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: You have only applied the car clearance idea on your system up to the present time to the extent that 1166 all equipment that belongs to any of the independent roads that have been consolidated, is treated as if it belonged to any one?

Mr. CALVIN: Yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is all.
Mr. LOVETT: That is all.

ROBERT A. GRAHAM, having been duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is your first name?
Mr. GRAHAM: Robert A.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Where do you live?
Mr. GRAHAM: I live in New York at the present time.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you lived in New York?
Mr. GRAHAM: About four years.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to that time, where did you live?
Mr. GRAHAM: Coos Bay, Oregon.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What was your business at Coos Bay, Oregon?
Mr. GRAHAM: I was manager of the Beaver Hill Coal Company, and of the Coos Bay Railroad, which I built.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you ever in any other business in Oregon than that?
Mr. GRAHAM: In 1899 I went into the Oriental Steamship business.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How long were you in that business?
Mr. GRAHAM: From 1899—from October, 1899 to the spring of 1900—no, 1900 to 1901?
Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, from the fall of 1900?
Mr. GRAHAM: Until the spring of 1901, yes sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: What ships did you have in the Oriental business?
Mr. GRAHAM: I had the steamer "Universe," the steamer "Adata," the steamer "Eva," the steamer "Monmouthshire," and the 1167 steamer "Carmarthanshire."
Mr. SEVERANCE: Speak louder so that we can hear you, Mr. Graham. What was the tonnage of these ships?
Mr. GRAHAM: The "Universe" was 4,000 tons. The "Adata" and "Eva" were 5,200 tons each, and the other two were 4,500 tons each.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you own these ships?
Mr. GRAHAM: No sir.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Or have them under charter?
Mr. GRAHAM: I had them under charter.
Mr. SEVERANCE: From whom were they chartered?
Mr. GRAHAM: From the owners, who lived in Europe. There were some of them in Glasgow, and some in London, and one in Hamburg.
Mr. SEVERANCE: How long had you had those ships under charter?
Mr. GRAHAM: Prior to going into this business.
Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes, prior to going into the Oriental business from Portland.
Mr. GRAHAM: I had the steamer "Universe" almost a year, and steamer "Eva" only a month or so, and the other three I got for this Oriental business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In connection with what corporation were you operating those Oriental boats?

Mr. GRAHAM: The corporation was the Oregon & Oriental Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I say, in connection with what company were you operating them?

Mr. GRAHAM: With the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: With whom did you make your arrangements?

Mr. GRAHAM: With Ben Campbell.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was his position?

Mr. GRAHAM: Traffic manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to the time that you went into that business had other ships been operated in connection with the O. R. & N.?

1168 Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir. I succeeded to the Dodwell Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you operating under a written contract, or was the contract not signed?

Mr. GRAHAM: The contract was never signed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Was it prepared?

Mr. GRAHAM: It was prepared and reduced to writing, but it was not signed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How many trips did those boats make?

Mr. GRAHAM: We had a sailing—the "Universe" sailed in September, 1900—no, The "Eva" sailed in September, the end of September or beginning of October, 1900, which was the first shipment, the first boat out; the "Universe" sailed in November and the "Adata" sailed in December, the "Eva" sailed again about the end of January, and the "Adata" sailed in—I don't remember; I think it was in the next month.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is you mean sailed from Portland to the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir, and return.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did those ships bring back cargoes from the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What arrangement did you have for soliciting freight in the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: We had one general agent in the Orient whom we sent out there, and we had local agents in each community—commercial houses out there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Who was the agent, the general agent?

Mr. GRAHAM: Mr. J. V. Creighton.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Prior to his going into your employ, what was his business?

Mr. GRAHAM: He came from the Northern Pacific to me; he was assistant to the traffic manager.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At Tacoma?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir, he was located at Spokane.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At Spokane?

1169 Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: He went out to the Orient as your representative?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Under your arrangement with the O. R. & N. whose business was it to solicit business in the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: Our business.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What success did you have in procuring cargoes for your steamers in the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: We had good success.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you operating that in harmony or in competition with the Pacific Mail and the other San Francisco lines?

Mr. GRAHAM: We were in competition with every transpacific line along the coast.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the arrangement between the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and yourself with reference to the routing of the traffic to the east, that is, to the east in the United States, that you might bring over from the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: We routed it on through bills of lading. The bill of lading required us to route it from China, say, through via the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what connection east of that?

Mr. GRAHAM: Their connections.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And their connections?

Mr. GRAHAM: Their connections.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was exclusive, was it?

Mr. GRAHAM: That was exclusive; we could not do anything different under our contract.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What arrangement did you have in relation to soliciting traffic in the United States to be shipped to the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company undertook to solicit traffic for us with all the machinery that it had, and the agents at its disposal, and we were excluded from having an agency in the United States except in New York, where we 1170 might have one if we wanted it, or we could have one in Victoria, British Columbia. I think those were the only two places where we were permitted to solicit ourselves on this side. Other than that they were to solicit for us.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What lines of boats, if any, were going out of Portland that succeeded your boats?

Mr. GRAHAM: The Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How did you happen to quit that business?

Mr. GRAHAM: They notified me—the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company wrote me a letter and notified me to quit—after the 10th of April they refused to give me any further traffic, or extend to me the use of their docks or wharves, and if I brought any further traffic to Portland, I should be charged the full local rate for it, to its destination.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was because they had organized their own company?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: What date was that?

Mr. GRAHAM: They wrote me a letter on the 10th of March.

Commissioner LANE: On the 10th of March of what year?

Mr. GRAHAM: 1901: It was to take effect in 30 days.

Commissioner LANE: Have you a copy of that letter?

Mr. GRAHAM: I haven't it here, but I can furnish it at New York. It is there with our other papers in connection with the litigation under that contract.

Commissioner LANE: Please state the purport of that letter, what it contains?

Mr. GRAHAM: I may say in connection with that that they found as an excuse, they gave as an excuse for cancelling that contract, that I had got local rates to the coast here, which I did, from 1171 China, and they said in view of the fact that I had got those rates to the coast, that they would withdraw from me any further privileges of their wharves and terminals at Portland, Oregon, and that they would refuse to deliver me any more freight from transcontinental points to our steamers, and if I brought any further freight to Portland, I should have to pay wharfage and the local charges there, and pay through the full local rates to the destination of the freight, to whatever point the freight was destined.

Mr. SEVERANCE: While you were engaged in that business——

Commissioner LANE (int'g): Who signed that letter?

Mr. GRAHAM: Benjamin Campbell, as Traffic Manager of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you undertake to furnish that letter to the Commissioner.

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: All right. We will be glad to have you do it. During the time that you were engaged in this business in connection with the O. R. & N., did you take in the Orient any freight for San Francisco?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir, and Los Angeles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. GRAHAM: And Los Angeles.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And Los Angeles. What arrangement did you have with the O. R. & N. or any one else, for the delivery of this freight after it reached Portland?

Mr. GRAHAM: The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company undertook to deliver it by their steamers to San Francisco for a dollar a ton, and to Los Angeles by their steamers and by the Pacific Coast Steamship Company's Steamers for one dollar and a half a ton.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, trans-shipped at San Francisco?

Mr. GRAHAM: Trans-shipped, yes sir. We absorbed the rate of $1 a ton to San Francisco, and $1.50 a ton to Los Angeles, the 1172 same thing which would apply to any freight that originated in San Francisco that would offer to go to the Orient by way of our steamers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is, you would transport it from Los Angeles to Portland, that is, the O. R. & N. would transport it from Los Angeles to Portland by the steamers of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company and their own steamers for $1.50 a ton, and they would transport freight from San Francisco by their own steamers for you for $1 a ton?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And you had to absorb that charge of $1.50 in one case, and $1, in the other?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That was done in competition with these boats leaving from San Francisco?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, Mr. Graham——

Mr. GRAHAM (int'g): Well, there was a—it was understood, though it was not a written contract, that where any considerable portion of freight involving a good many hundred tons were offered us in San Francisco for the Orient, that we would send one of our steamers here for it. The O. R. & N. did not undertake to carry cargo up there for us in big quantities; thousands of tons, for example, and in one instance, where we were offered here about 1,500 or 1,600 tons of cargo, principally salt meat and salt, and bicycles in cases, as I remember it, and some canned goods, amounting to some 1,500 tons, we brought the steamer "Universe" in here and loaded at this port, and then sent her to Portland, Oregon, and finished the cargo in the Columbia River.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the nature of the commodities that you transported from this county to the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: From this country to the Orient?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Yes.

Mr. GRAHAM: Flour, canned goods, packing house products.

1173 Mr. SEVERANCE: From where?

Mr. GRAHAM: From Chicago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Chicago? What else?

Mr. GRAHAM: We get this cargo, as I explained to you, from San Francisco of salt beef and salt, and merchandise such as bicycles in cases, and stuff of that kind. Then from Portland we got considerable quantities of hardware and some structural steel.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did that come from the east?

Mr. GRAHAM: That came from the east on cars.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Over the O. R. & N.?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir, and was delivered to us at Portland.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And from the Orient to this country, what classes of commodities did you bring in?

Mr. GRAHAM: Jute and mats. The jute came from the East Indies sections, and the mats we got at Yokahama and Hongkong; and we brought tea and curios, and Chinese provisions, largely, too.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the point of destination of that stuff?

Mr. GRAHAM: It was all over the United States and Canada, mostly east of Chicago.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How is that?

Mr. GRAHAM: Mostly east of Chicago. Some of it went to Toronto and Montreal, and some went to New York and New Orleans and Baltimore and to Boston and Philadelphia.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long have you known Mr. Stubbs?

Mr. GRAHAM: I think I have known him since about 1890 or 1891.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Stubbs concerning this boat line to Portland?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When was it?

Mr. GRAHAM: About—it was in the fall of 1900.

1174 Mr. SEVERANCE: Where was that conversation?

Mr. GRAHAM: In Mr. Stubbs' office in New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In New York?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir—in San Francisco, I mean.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What was the conversation?

Mr. GRAHAM: I have forgotten just how it started, but the gist of it was that if we were going to be in the Oriental business, and going to have steamers here, plying between this coast and the Orient, he would like me to come to San Francisco with them, to bring the traffic to the Southern Pacific, and he offered me an arrangement whereby we could get the cargo and the boat together at the Long Wharf in Oakland; it could not be brought together at this side, it was considered; we had some considerable discussion on that subject, but it didn't end in anything definite.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Had you at that time started in at Portland?

Mr. GRAHAM: I had started in at Portland, yes sir, but the Portland people were delaying about signing the contract, and, as I remember it, it was just at a time when they had filed Articles of Incorporation in Oregon for their Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company, and they tried to persuade me that the object of the Articles of Incorporation of the Portland & Asiatic Steamship Company was not to run me off the line or to put me out of business, but to have a fortnightly sailing out of Portland and the Columbia River instead of one every month, as I was giving them—my contract required me to have 5 steamers of 4,000 tons capacity at least, and to give them a monthly service.

Mr. SEVERANCE: By the way, it appears by the testimony of Mr. Schwerin, and also by the testimony of Mr. Fred Campbell, that these ships going out of Portland have been operated at a loss. How did you come out with your boats?

Mr. GRAHAM: Ours were not operated at a loss—we had a profit on every steamer that we sent and brought back.

1175 Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, at the time that Mr. Stubbs had this talk with you, and wanted you to run in connection with the Southern Pacific, the Southern Pacific was a competing line with these other competing lines with which you were affiliated later?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir, that was not later than the end of December, 1900.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What did you do with the ships after they notified you you had to quit?

Mr. GRAHAM: We worked some of them for a while out of New York, and others of them were worked by the owners until the charters expired, and the difference was charged to me, the loss in the charter, and they finally expired, and I got rid of them that way; some of them I got rid of right away. Those ships were chartered—this contract was supposed to run for three years. The first steamer, The "Universe," that I chartered, was not chartered with this contract in view. Neither was the "Eva." The "Universe" was chartered for two years, and the "Eva" for one year, which was easy to get rid of. But the "Adata" was chartered specially to carry out the contract with the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, and so were the "Monmouthshire" and the "Carmarthenshire." The "Adata's" charter was for 18 months with the privilege of 18 more, and so were the other two in the same way—to run three years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This freight that you took to the Orient like packing house products from Chicago, and other freight of that character, was solicited to you by whom?

Mr. CALVIN: By the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company, as far as I know, for the Union Pacific System, as it was put up to me. We had our correspondence in a measure with Munroe, of Chicago, and the Omaha agent of the Union Pacific was a pretty rustler. But a lot of business was given to us out of that territory by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road, in connection with the Union Pacific at Omaha.

Commissioner LANE: You will not conclude with this witness within a very few minutes, will you?

1176 Mr. SEVERANCE: I have already finished this branch of the subject, but I cannot finish with him to-night. I want to ask him about the construction of that Coon Bay road; he built that. He is the man that had that peculiar loud noise, or something that Mr. Spreckels spoke about yesterday.

Commissioner LANE: I think we had probably better adjourn and go on tomorrow morning, Mr. Dunne, your toll case comes up to-morrow morning. Do you know how long that will take?

Mr. DUNNE: I don't think it will take a great while.

Commissioner LANE: We might put it over until afternoon.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Could I be permitted to finish our case in the morning?

Mr. LOVETT: We would like very much to go on with this to-morrow. I understand that both Mr. Severance and myself want to get away to-morrow evening.

Commissioner LANE: Very well. Then the present inquiry will go over until 10 o'clock, to be resumed at that time.

Mr. DUNNE: And the toll case will go over until 2 o'clock?

Commissioner LANE: The toll case will go over until 2 o'clock, yes.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA,
THURSDAY, January 31, 1907—10 a. m.

Present: Commissioner Franklin K. Lane.

Appearances.

C. A. Severance, Esq., for the Interstate Commerce Commission.
Peter F. Dunne, Esq., and R. S. Lovett, Esq., for the Railroad Companies.

Commissioner LANE: The state toll case will not be taken up this afternoon, gentlemen, but will be taken up tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

1177 Mr. DUNNE: If your Honor please, I have an engagement for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Commissioner LANE: Will 11 o'clock suit you, Mr. Dunne?

Mr. DUNNE: 2 o'clock would suit me better. Tomorrow is our Law and Motion Day. You do not expect to occupy much time, do you, Mr. Mann?

Mr. MANN: Not very much. I think not over an hour. Not very much time, no.

Commissioner LANE: Very well. Then we will take it up at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. MANN: It may be after a consultation here, I may ask during the morning session to make some motion with respect to the toll case, and I suppose counsel will be here during the forenoon. Will your Honor instruct all witnesses under subpœna to be present here tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock?

Commissioner LANE: The witnesses that are subpœnaed in the state toll case, the jobbers' and manufacturers' case, will be here tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Proceed with the inquiry, gentlemen.

R. A. GRAHAM, examination resumed.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Graham, can you give the names of the agents of your line of boats in the Orient?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir. The commercial house of Arnold-Kerberg were the agents in China and on the coast, and the house of Strong & Company were the agents in Japan.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You have a general agent there, Mr. Creighton?

Mr. GRAHAM: Mr. Creighton was the general agent, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were your agents any of them at the same time the agents of the Pacific Mail and allied lines?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir, not that I ever knew of.

1178 Mr. SEVERANCE: How many trips did these various ships of yours make, Mr. Graham?

Mr. GRAHAM: Outward?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Well, outward or inward, either one. Just name them separately. Take the "Universe."

Mr. GRAHAM: The "Universe" made two outward trips. The "Eva" made two outward trips. The "Adata" made one outward trip. That was all.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the "Monmouthshire"?

Mr. GRAHAM: The "Monmouthshire" came on at the other side, and she never made an outward trip. She made one inward trip.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When goods were brought from the Orient to go east from Portland, who routed the goods?

Mr. GRAHAM: Sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When goods were brought over to Portland by your steamers from the Orient and were then transported to eastern points in the United States, who routed the goods?

Mr. GRAHAM: The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You had nothing to do with that?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: They had the exclusive right to route the goods?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Commissioner LANE: Was that a matter of agreement, or was that simply that the goods originated on their lines?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I am speaking of the goods coming from the Orient to this country, your Honor.

Commissioner LANE: The O. R. & N. on the other side routed the goods?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir. We were required under our contract to give through bills of lading via the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company lines; they were specified in the through bills of lading, and when they came to Portland, the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company insisted upon specifying and sending them over 1179 the lines that they connected with after they went east upon their line.

Commissioner LANE: So really you routed the goods, but under an agreement with the O. R. & N. that they should go over that line?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Let us see if I understand this.

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you fix the routing after they left the rails of the O. R. & N.?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir. The only routing we fixed was before they left their point of origin in China or Japan.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And that routing was by your ships, thence by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the subsequent connections to the east were fixed by the O. R. & N.?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir. The through bills of lading did not specify what the connections would be, but the O. R. & N. regulated that themselves.

Mr. SEVERANCE: In carrying out that arrangement, did you have any differences with the O. R. & N. as to connections east of Omaha?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What were they?

Mr. GRAHAM: We wanted to give some of the business for distribution in the east to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, because the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul was very industrious with their agents in giving us traffic in their territory, and we wanted to reciprocate and encourage them. But Campbell, in an interview I had with him, told me that he would not permit that; that he had nothing to do with the routing of the goods, and he would not let them go over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What road did he send them over?

Mr. GRAHAM: The Northwestern and Illinois Central.

Mr. SEVERANCE: From Omaha?

1180 Mr. GRAHAM: From Omaha.

Mr. SEVERANCE: You stated yesterday that your contract with the O. R. & N. was reduced to writing, but was never signed?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I show you a printed copy of the paper marked "Appendix A", commencing on page 14 and running down to page 22 of the Amended Libel and Interrogatories in the case of Robert A. Graham against the Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company, pending in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, and I will ask you whether that is a copy of this contract which you say was agreed to but never signed?

Mr. GRAHAM: It is, yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I will offer this in evidence. Judge Lovett consents that I may use this copy instead of the original?

Mr LOVETT: Subject to any corrections, if there should be any.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Subject to any corrections, certainly.

Commissioner LANE: Will you introduce it and mark it as an exhibit, or will you just read it into the record?

Mr. SEVERANCE: It is too long to read, in my state of voice I think it had better be simply copied into the record. I will hand it to the stenographer when I get through with it and he can copy it into the record at this point.

The matter offered is as follows:

"APPENDIX A.

"Memorandum of agreement made and entered into at Portland, Oregon, United States of America, this 1st day of October, 1909, between the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, first party, and R. A. Graham, second party.

1181 "That whereas the second party desires to establish a line of steamships between Hong Kong and the ports of China and Japan, and the city of Portland, Oregon, United States of America, said steamships to be suitable for the intended trade between the ports of China and Japan and other Asiatic ports, and Points in the United States of America and Canada and Europe; and

"Whereas, the first party is engaged in operating a railroad in the northern portion of the United States of America, and is desirous of forming an alliance for the purpose of controlling passenger and freight traffic and other business between the above mentioned points.

"Now, therefore, it is hereby mutually covenanted and agreed between the parties hereto as folows:

"1. Establishment of steamship line.

"(A) The second party shall procure, establish and commence to run a monthly line of steamships between Hong Kong and the ports of China and Japan, and the port of Portland, Oregon, within one month from the date hereof. Said steamships shall be capable of carrying four thousand (4000) tons of measurement cargo.

"(B) The second party shall have the right, should there be insufficient traffic offering during the slack season (January to April inclusive) to run one steamship every two months in place of monthly.

"(C) If the traffic offered shall increase so that it is practicable to run more steamers than provided for by this agreement, either by shortening schedule time or running extra steamers, the second party shall supply them.

"(D) The second party shall have the right, should it be deemed advisable or become expedient, in order to meet competition, to call at Honolulu, and at Victoria, B. C., on the voyage to and from Portland, Oregon, and also to send its steamships on to San Francisco after leaving Portland on the inward voyage, returning to Portland before leaving on the outward trip.

"2. Divisions of through rates on overland cargo.

1182 "(a) The through rate by steamship and rail shall be divided equally between the parties hereto, provided that:

"(B) The first party shall receive a minimum of seventy-five (75) cents per hundred (100) pounds to and from points east of Chicago, which are ordinarily termed "Eastern Common points and which include in the main: New York, Troy, Albany, Schenectady, Buffalo (N. Y.), Boston, Fitchburg, Gloucester, Lawrence, Salem, Springfield, Worcester (Mass.), Hartford, New Haven (Conn.), Baltimore (Md.), Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Pittsburg (Penn.), Cleveland, Cincinnati, Toledo (Ohio), Indianapolis (Ind.), Detroit, Port Huron (Mich.), Paterson (N. J.), Concord, Manchester, Nashua (N. H.), Providence (R. I.), New Orleans (La.), Memphis (Tenn.), Toronto, Brockville, Kingston, Ottawa, Cornwall, Hamilton, London, Prescott (Ontario), Montreal, Quebec (Que.).

"(C) The first party shall receive a minimum of fifty (50) cents per hundred (100) pounds to and from points ordinarily termed Western Common points, and which include in the main: Chicago, (Ill.), Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth (Minn.), Omaha (Neb.); Council Bluffs, Sioux City, Dubuque, Keokuk (Iowa), Leavenworth, Atchison (Kansas), Kansas City, St. Joseph, St. Louis (Mo.), Milwaukee (Wis.), Winnipeg (Man.):

"(D) Any reduction in the through rate from the above basis shall be borne by the second party until the minimum accruing to the steamships shall be thirty-five (35) cents per hundred (100) pounds. Should it become necessary or advisable to accept through rates lower than upon above basis such lower rates shall first be agreed upon between the two parties hereto, and after deducting from the agreed through rate such arbitraries as are demanded by the connections of the first party, the balance of the through rate shall be pro rated in the proportion of: To the first party fifty (50) cents, and to the second party, thirty-five (35) cents.

"(E) Should it become necessary, in order to meet the 1183 competition of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Steamship Line, or other competing lines, in the transportation of raw cotton or cotton piece goods (Domestics), destined to Asiatic ports, the first party is hereby authorized to reduce the minimum accruing to the second party to a basis of twenty-five (25) cents per hundred pounds to meet such competition.

"(F) On raw silk and silk piece goods and other valuable cargo, requiring equal to passenger train service, there shall first be deducted from the through rate one dollar ($1.00) per hundred pounds, to be allowed the first party for such expedited service, and the remainder of the through rate to be divided as provided in Article Second and paragraphs A. and B.

"4. Traffic (cargo and passenger) between Asiatic and Pacific coast ports.

"(A) All traffic between the Pacific Coast and Asiatic ports shall be for the sole benefit of the second party.

"(B) The second party, wherever possible, shall forward such cargo by the railroad of the first party, or by the railroad or steamship lines controlled by the first party, at a rate to be agreed on, which shall not exceed twenty-five (25) per cent. of the through rate per steamship freight list, and with a minimum to the first party or its connections of one dollar ($1.00) gold per ton per steamship freight list.

"(C) The first party shall assist the second party in obtaining low rates between Portland and other Pacific Coast points on cargo handled at Portland to or from connecting lines.

"(D) On cargo from which the first party receives no benefit, the second party will pay to the first party the actual cost of labor service at Portland, which shall not exceed twenty-five (25) cents per ton.

"5. Asiatic Cargo to Western Local Points.

"(A) For cargo in not less than carload lots of 24,000 lbs., gross weight or tons measurement (25) of forty (40) cubic feet, from Asiatic ports to points on the line of the first party between Portland and Omaha, the second party may issue through bills of 1184 lading at the current rate of freight on similar goods to parallel points on competing lines.

"(B) For cargo in less than carload lots to the local points above mentioned, the second party shall, not issue bills of lading beyond Portland, and the first party shall have the right to charge thereon its local rate from Portland to destination.

"6. Agencies.

"(A) The second party shall have the exclusive right to appoint agents in Asiatic ports, who shall be duly authorized to act as agents for both parties hereto, and who shall have power to issue bills of lading and passenger tickets and to make and name rates on all traffic to points in the United States, Canada and Europe, subject to clauses two and five (2) and (5).

"(B) The second party shall have the right, should it be deemed advisable or necessary, to appoint, at its own expense, agents in Portland, Oregon, or Victoria, B. C., for the management of the steamships at the port of call, and to procure traffic from the Pacific coast, and for the purpose of assisting and advising the first party in all matters pertaining to the steamship service.

"(C) The second party shall have the right, should it be deemed advisable or necessary, to appoint an agent at its own expense, in New York, United States of America, whose duties shall be to assist in procuring traffic for the steamship of the second party, and who shall be under the control of the first party, as regards rates.

"(D) The first shall have the exclusive right, with the exception above (Paragraphs "B" and "C") to appoint agents in all points in the United States, Canada and Europe, and the second party hereby authorizes the first party and its appointed agents to act as agents for the second party and to issue bills of lading and passenger tickets, and to make and name rates on all traffic for the Asiatic points served by the steamships of the second party, subject to clause two (2).

1185 "7. Commission to agents as remuneration for procuring traffic.

"The first party shall pay the agents of the second party a commission of five (5) per cent. on its earnings on all Asiatic traffic procured by them, and the second party shall pay the first party for its agents a consideration of five (5) per cent. on its earnings on all traffic for Asiatic ports obtained by the agents of the first party.

"8. Tallying of cargo.

"(A) on arrival of the steamships at Portland, the cargo shall be carefully tallied out by the officers of the steamships in conjunction with the officials of the first party—all damaged packages shall be set aside and a full and correct list thereof made, and for claims on such damaged packages the second party shall and hereby agrees to be responsible. The first party shall give to the steamship a receipt for all cargo received at Portland and as regards cargo to be carried over the lines of the first party, the responsibility of the second party shall cease, on correct delivery at Portland.

"(B) On cargo destined for Asiatic ports and delivered to the steamships at Portland, a careful tally shall be kept by the officers of the steamship in conjunction with the officials of the first party. All damaged packages shall be set aside and a full and correct list thereof made—and for claims on such damaged packages the first party shall and hereby agrees to be responsible. The steamship officers shall give a receipt for all cargo taken on board at Portland which shall absolve the first party from all further responsibility.

"9. Quick dispatch of vessels—coals, etc.,—return cargoes.

"The first party agrees to do all it can to assist the second party in obtaining quick dispatch in discharging and loading its steamships at Portland, to assist in making contracts for coal provisions and labor required by its vessels; and authorize and permit

1186 its agents everywhere (saving as specified in clause 6, paragraph "B" and "C") to actively solicit all and any traffic that may be required for the return voyages of the steamships to Japan and China.

"10. Wharfage.

"(A) First party agrees to provide wharfage at Portland free of expense to the second party on all traffic passing over the railroads of the first party.

"(B) On the cargo to or from Portland locally and Asiatic points the first party may make a charge to the shippers or consignees of twenty-five cents per ton per steamship's freight list.

"11. Cost of Advertising, Telegraphing, Stationery.

"The cost of stationery (printing forms, etc.) and of advertising and telegraphing in and from China and Japan shall be the expense of the second party, and the cost for like services in and from the United States shall be borne by the first party, provided such advertising and telegraphing is done with its consent.

"12. Accounts.

"(A) The first party shall render to the agent of the second party at Portland within two weeks after the departure of the steamship from Portland, or sooner, if possible, an account showing the earnings of the steamship inwards and outwards on that voyage and the balance shall be paid at once by the party owing each round trip (inwards & outwards) shall be kept separate: accounts for passengers traffic shall be settled through the general office at Portland as promptly as possible.

"(B) An account for commissions due to the agents of the parties hereto under clause 7, shall be made by the first party as promptly as practically after the steamers' departure from Portland, and the same shall be paid at once by the party owing.

"(C) All accounts shall be rendered in triplicate.

"14. Alliance with Other Lines.

"During the period of this agreement, the second party shall not enter into alliance with — other transcontinental railway
1187 company, and the first party shall not form an alliance with any other Asiatic Steamship line to or from Portland.

"15. Detention of Steamers.

"Unavoidable delay arising from breakdown or loss of the steamships, or from excessive bad weather, shall not be deemed a breach of this contract.

"16. Transfer of Contract.

"Either party shall have authority to transfer this contract to another responsible firm or company, with the consent of the other party.

"17. Duration of Agreement.

"(A) This agreement shall be binding on both parties for the term of three (3) years from the date hereof; but the second party shall have the option of withdrawing its steamships and of terminating this agreement at the end of the second year, or at the end of each succeeding second year of the above period, provided the second party gives to the first party one year's notice in writing of its intention to withdraw its steamships and to terminate this agreement.

"(B) The first party may call for arbitration to determine its right to cancel contract upon giving one year's notice of its desire to do so, provided that the line is not kept up to the standard that will permit of its being fairly marked in composition with other trans-Pacific lines.

"18. Interstate Commerce Law.

"Nothing in this agreement shall be permitted to conflict with the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, a law passed by the Government of the United States. It is, therefore, agreed and understood that this agreement shall be at all times subservient to the requirements of that law, and shall be modified arbitrarily to conform with its provisions, should it become necessary to do so.

"19. Settlement by Arbitration.

"Any dispute arising out of that term of this agreement shall be settled by arbitration. One arbitrator to be selected by each party and the two so selected to choose a third, the decision 1188 of a majority of the arbitrators to be final and conclusive by the parties hereto.

"In witness thereof, these presents have been executed by the parties hereto."

Mr. SEVERANCE: Under what circumstances was this contract prepared, Mr. Graham?

Mr. GRAHAM: This is a contract—the original of this contract was a contract that Mr. Campbell told me was prepared between the Dodwell Steamship Company and the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and that as he had the copies of it, our contract would be identically the same as that, except as to where it referred to the Dodwell People, it would refer to us instead. And he furnished me with a copy with the interlineations on the original—handed it to us—handed it to me rather.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I suppose the Oregon Navigation Company was substituted for the Northern Pacific?

Mr. GRAHAM: The Oregon Railway & Navigation Company was substituted for the Northern Pacific, and I was substituted for the Dodwell people.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And the Portland for Tacoma?

Mr. GRAHAM: And Portland for Tacoma, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: But so far as the substance of the contract is concerned, it was to follow the Dodwell contract?

Mr. GRAHAM: That was the intention, and that was the way the contract was carried out during the working of the contractor the 6 or 7 months we were operating; we were continually operating under this contract as to the division named in the contract, and the conditions of this contract as to commissions of agents and the division of freights.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did you during this time in any particular carry on your business in any manner other than as specified in this contract?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir; except in where it was changed verbally to suit the coming down here to San Francisco by the way 1189 of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company's steamers. That was not specified in the contract, but it was verbally agreed that the rates—that they would work this line in our interests down here to connect with us up there, and the rate would be a dollar a ton, which was the case.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And what was the amount you actually paid, Mr. Graham?

Mr. GRAHAM: That was the amount we acutally paid, yes.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I would like to call the attention of the Commissioner to two or three of the provisions of this contract it having been identified. For instance, Subdivision 14 of the contract, under the head of "Alliance with other lines." It reads "during the period of this agreement, the second party" that is Mr. Graham—"Shall not enter into an alliance with any other transcontinental railway, and the first party"—that is the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company—"Shall not form an alliance with any other Asiatic steamship line to or from Portland."

Commissioner LANE: What is the exact date of that?

Mr. SEVERANCE: I beg pardon.

Commissioner LANE: What is the exact date of that contract?

Mr. GRAHAM: October 1st, 1900.

Mr. SEVERANCE: October 1st, 1900, yes.

Mr. LOVETT: What is the date of that document?

Mr. SEVERANCE: What is that?

Mr. LOVETT: What is the date of the contract that he says is the basis of it?

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you remember the date of the Dodwell form that was used as the basis of this contract?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir. I think it was about 3 or 4 or 5 years earlier than this.

Mr. LOVETT: I thought the date was given there.

Mr. SEVERANCE: This is the date of this contract, October 1, 1900.

Mr. LOVETT: Oh.

1190 Mr. GRAHAM: The original contract as agreed on between Campbell and me and the Dodwell interests, with reference to the Dodwell lines erased, is on file in the Federal Court in New York.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There is another provision here that I call your Honor's attention to. It is the 4th subdivision, under the head of "Traffic (Cargo and Passenger) between Asiatic and Pacific Coast ports." It reads "A. All traffic between the Pacific Coast and Asiatic ports shall be for the sole benefit of the second party"—that is Mr. Graham. "B. The second party, wherever possible, shall forward such cargo by the railroad of the first party, or by the railroad or steamship lines controlled by the first party, at rates to be agreed on, which shall not exceed 25 per cent. of the through rate per steamship freight list, and with a minimum to the first party of its connections of $1 gold per ton per steamship freight list." That was the minimum as applied to Portland and San Francisco, was it not?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And in subdivision 6, under the head of "Agencies," there is "The second party shall have the exclusive right"—and that is Mr. Graham. "To appoint agents in Asiatic ports, who shall be duly authorized to act as agents for both parties hereto, and who shall have power to issue bills of lading to points in the United States, Canada and Europe, Subject to clauses two and five." Clause 2, your Honor, provides, certain minimum at different points—a great many different points. And clause 5 provides as follows: "for cargo in not less than carload lots of 94,000 lbs., gross weight or tons measurement of forty cubic feet, from Asiatic ports to points on the line of the first party between Portland and Omaha, the second party may issue through bills of lading at the current rate of freight goods to parallel points on competing lines."

Commissioner LANE: What is that last?"

Mr. SEVERANCE: I think I will permit your Honor to read it, my voice is so very bad to-day.

1191 (Mr. Severance hands the document to Commissioner Lane, and the latter examines the same.)

Mr. SEVERANCE: Subdivision 10 of the contract, under the head of "Wharfage" says, "First party agrees to provide wharfage at Portland free of expense to the second party on all traffic passing over the railroads of the first party." That was the right that you say was withdrawn by Mr. Campbell in this letter, Mr. Graham?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: And subdivision B of the same general subdivision 10, says, "On the cargo to or from Portland locally and Asiatic ports, the first party may make a charge"—that is the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company may "to the shippers or consignees of 25 cents per ton per steamships' freight list." Then there is a provision with reference to the advertising business, and cost of telegraphing and stationery which is subdivision 11, reading "the cost of stationery (printing forms, etc.,) of advertising and telegraphing in and from China and Japan shall be the expense of the second party"—Mr. Graham—"and the cost for like services in and from the United States shall be borne by the first party"—the O. R. & N. "provided such advertising and telegraphing is done with its consent." Then there is a provision which may interest your Honor, subdivision 18, under the head of "Interstate Commerce Law," which reads "Nothing in this agreement shall be permitted to conflict with the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, a law passed by the Government of the United States. It is, therefore, agreed and understood that this agreement shall be at all times subservient to the requirements of that law, and shall be modified arbitrarily to conform with its provisions, should it become necessary to do so." Now, Mr. Graham, you have been having some litigation with O. R. & N. resulting out of this matter, have you not?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir. It is pending in New York in the admiralty court.

1192 Mr. SEVERANCE: And it is in that suit that this contract as an exhibit was attached to the Libel?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir. That was with a copy of the papers in the case.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Now, just a few questions about the Coos Bay Railroad. Mr. Spreckels spoke of you as a man who made a noise like an honest man in connection with that road?

Mr. GRAHAM: He never did, though, himself.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Will you state the history of that road, that property up there, and what you had to do with it, as briefly as you can?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir: About 1890, a corporation was formed up there at Coos Bay, consisting of the people of Coos County and Douglas County, to build a railroad from Coos Bay to Roseburg, Oregon. Roseburg is on the Shasta line of the Southern Pacific, about 200 miles south of San Francisco—of Portland, I should say. They organized this Coos Bay, Roseburg & Eastern Railroad and Navigation Company, and looked around for a contractor to build the road, and the contract was offered to me to build it. Their facilities for paying it were a subsidy that they were raising among themselves in Coos County and in Douglas County of about $250,000, and then they proposed to issue bonds, and give the bonds and stock and subsidy to some contractor who would build the road. The proposition was offered to me.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Were you living at Coos Bay then?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir. I was living at San Diego, building street car lines down there at the time, and building other lines—the Coronado Railroad—I was a railroad contractor, and living at San Diego. I looked into it and I thought I would take the contract. Mr. John D. Spreckels & Brothers Company at that time were very heavily interested in Coronado and San Diego, and I knew them very well. I met J. D. Spreckels down there at Coronado Hotel about that time, and presented this plan to him. He said he thought it looked a good thing, and wanted to know what the conditions were or 1193 what was my proposition. I told him that I would do the work and give him an interest, if he wanted it, in any way he wanted it. He asked what did I want done first. I said "I will go ahead and grade, if you will furnish us with 30 miles of rails, and when the bonds are sold and this subsidy is paid, you will get paid for the rails." He said "All right," and he further suggested, which I knew, which I was trying to get him into suggest as well as I could, that he wanted to take the laboring oar in selling these bonds, which he thought he could do. We hadn't talked more than half an hour about —, when he telegraphed to his house here from the Coronado Hotel to buy 30 miles of rails, and send them out to Coos Bay, which was done. We went on and graded the road in the meantime, the rails arrived here, and there was difficulty about rights of way up there—among other things that these people in that section of the country are to do was to give us a free right of way, and they were unable to provide the right of way without a lot of litigation, and the construction was somewhat delayed, and when the rails arrived here on 4 different vessels from New York, we only needed about 10 miles of them right away quick—that was all the right of way we had and all the grade we had built. And we took out of this cargo, various cargoes, 10 miles of rails and used them at Coos Bay, the balance Spreckels sold to various people here who wanted them very badly at that time, so that the 10 miles was the original length of rails.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What means of transportation existed then between San Francisco and Coos Bay?

Mr. GRAHAM: There were not anything but steamers—little steamers running up and down. Nick Luning & Company owned a coal mine up there, and they had two or three small steamers, which afterwards were acquired by Goodal, Perkins & Company; and then there was the lumber vessels that were carrying lumber back and forth.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Go ahead.

1194 Mr. GRAHAM: After the 10 miles was laid, we had to take a rest to get the right of way, and the further construction of the road—I think this construction work in the beginning was done in the fall of 1890, and there was not anything else done after the autumn of 1890, when this 10 miles was laid, until about August of 1899, when, after a further conference between Spreckels and me, we decided to go to a point called Myrtle Point, where the road is now. And at that period, they furnished the rails to complete the road to Myrtle Point, and about $90,000 in cash to do the work, and they took as security—they had given us the bonds on 25 miles of road (the distance from Marshfield to Myrtle Point is about 25.7 miles) and they furnished the rails for up there, and took the bonds and a mortgage on a big lot of real estate, and a town site that was at Marshfield, Oregon, on Coos Bay, as further security, and 10,001 shares of stock out of 2,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Out of 20,000?

Mr. GRAHAM: Out of 20,000, I mean, yes sir. That finished the road to Myrtle Point about 1893, the autumn of 1893.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How much did that road cost?

Mr. GRAHAM: To Myrtle Point?

Mr. SEVERANCE: The whole road.

Mr. GRAHAM: The main line to Myrtle Point, which is almost 26 miles, cost about $260,000. The spur into Beaver Hill Mine, which is three miles, cost about $50,000. The bunkers at Marshfield for the coal about $25,000 to $30,000.

Mr SEVERANCE: What did you say the main line cost—two hundred and what thousand?

Mr. GRAHAM: About $260,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: $260,000 and $60,000 more, that would be $320,000. Go ahead.

Mr. GRAHAM: And the machine shops and terminals and rolling stock and equipment cost about $50,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That makes $370,000 for the road?

Mr. GRAHAM: Somewhere about that, yes, sir.

1195 Mr. SEVERANCE: When were the boats put on, the Spreckels boats?

Mr. GRAHAM: The Beaver Hill mine was opened in 1894, Spreckels owning a half interest in it, and I owning a half interest in it, and the capital stock was half a million dollars, and the stock was equally divided. The land for the Beaver Hill Company cost $65,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: That is the cost of the land without being developed?

Mr. GRAHAM: Without being touched.

Mr. SEVERANCE: What did it cost to develop that?

Mr. GRAHAM: The miners' houses were built, about $70,000 or $80,000, and the machinery, as I remember it, cost about $180,000.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Did that do the development work?

Mr. GRAHAM: No, the development work was very much more—something like $200,000, I think, for development work.

Mr. SEVERANCE: So that the development work and the cost of the property and the building of those houses brought it up to something over $400,000?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir. Now, the steamer "Czarina" was put on the route between here and Coos Bay about the autumn of '96, 1896.

Mr. SEVERANCE: There was two boats. Is that the freighter, or is that the passenger boat?

Mr. GRAHAM: That is the freight boat. The "Breakwater" was put on, I think a couple or three years ago, and I knew nothing about that—I was not interested in the country at that time.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Do you know what the "Czarina" cost?

Mr. GRAHAM: The Spreckels people wanted to sell her to the Beaver Hill Coal Company at the time she came around here, and they told me she cost about $30,000 in the east, and that she had cost $30,000 to refit her here, boilers and all, and I think they wanted to put her into the Beaver Hill Coal Company at $75,000, and I said she was not worth it, and I would not agree to it, and they 1196 said "All right," they would keep her and run her on their own account. So the Beaver Hill Coal Company made a contract with them to pay them $1.75 a ton, I think—$1.75 or $1.80 to carry the coal down here from the Beaver Hill Coal Company, and they kept the steamer on their own account. She never belonged to the Beaver Hill Coal Company.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How long were you connected with the Beaver Hill Coal Company?

Mr. GRAHAM: From the time the Beaver Hill Coal mine was opened in 1894 until December, 1897—or the beginning of 1898.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Mr. Spreckels testified here day before yesterday that that coal mine and the steamship line were both operated without profit or at a loss. How was it during your connection with it? Was it just the same?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir. The steamship line was a very profitable thing, as I understood at the time. The "Czarina" seemed to be making a good deal of money—they said she was. The Beaver Hill Coal Company never was out of the stage of development, all the time I was connected with it, and never paid.

Mr. SEVERANCE: How recently have you seen that property?

Mr. GRAHAM: Oh, I haven't seen it for five years.

Mr. SEVERANCE: It never paid as long as you were with it?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir, it never paid—and has never paid since, as I understand it.

Commissioner LANE: I don't exactly understand the purport of this testimony.

Mr. SEVERANCE: I want to prove, as I did by Mr. Spreckels—I want to prove what this property cost, the character of the property, as to whether it is a paying property or not, and whether there is any reason in the character of the property itself why Mr. Harriman should have paid Mr. Spreckels some $300,000 at least, as a bonus, to get rid of those ships and the little railroad up 1197 there, at the time that he was building lines in connection with the Southern Pacific to Coos Bay. That is the purpose of it.

Commissioner LANE: I suppose you can get at that by one or two very direct questions.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Very well, your Honor. That is all upon that. Did you ever have an option from Mr. Spreckels for the whole of that property?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. SEVERANCE: When?

Mr. GRAHAM: In 1899.

Mr. SEVERANCE: At what figure?

Mr. GRAHAM: $550,000 without the steamers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Without the steamers, you say, did that include everything, Mr. Graham?

Mr. GRAHAM: Except the steamers.

Mr. SEVERANCE: Everything except the steamers?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Commissioner LANE: When did you have that option?

Mr. GRAHAM: I think it was dated in June, 1899, and expired in six months—something like that.

Commissioner LANE: What was the time of the sale to Mr. Harriman? Was it last year?

Mr. SEVERANCE: This last summer. And during all this time Mr. Spreckels testified that these properties had been run at a loss.

Commissioner LANE: Did the property increase in value during that time, that interim of 6 years?

Mr. GRAHAM: No sir, it did not.

Commissioner Lane: Was not railroad property more valuable in Oregon than it was in 1900?

Mr. GRAHAM: Oh, I should think it was of very much less value, because there was a great deal of bridges on it, and they are all 7 or 8 years older. The development of the country has not proceeded very fast.

Commissioner LANE: That is not according to the modern theory of capitalization, is it?

Mr. LOVETT: The option, you say, was for $550,000?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

1198 Mr. LOVETT: And did not include the steamers?

Mr. GRAHAM: No, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Did it include the "Breakwater?"

Mr. GRAHAM: No, sir, not the steamers—neither of the steamers. The "Breakwater" was not on this coast at the time.

Mr. LOVETT: Do you know what the condition of the property is at this time?

Mr. GRAHAM: Not from my own personal knowedge, no.

Mr. LOVETT: When were you on it last?

Mr. GRAHAM: Not for five years.

Mr. LOVETT: You have not seen the property for five years?

Mr. GRAHAM: No, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: You don't know whether it has been improved in that time or not?

Mr. GRAHAM: Only from general discussion from that country, which I hear very often. I know all the people up there, and the directors of the road that live there.

Mr. LOVETT: But you have no personal knowledge of the condition of it during that five years?

Mr. GRAHAM: No, sir. I have kept track of it by inquiry, and by getting reports from up there.

Mr. LOVETT: Mr. Spreckels testified yesterday that the property had cost him considerably in excess of a million dollars. You don't believe that is true, do you?

Mr. GRAHAM: I know that is not correctly true. He figures commissions on every dollar that he furnished up there.

Mr. LOVETT: How do you know he does?

Mr. GRAHAM: Because I know I was charged with the commissions. Every time he rendered a statement, and he furnished $10,000, upon this statement and the one he rendered last month, he charged a certain commission, which was his right under the contract, for the way along.

1199 Mr. LOVETT: Did you have a lawsuit with Spreckels about it?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir, I did.

Mr. LOVETT: And did you also have a lawsuit with the O. R. & N. Company?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Have you ever had any important business transaction about which you have not had law suits, Mr. Graham?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir, a good many. But I never ran away from a lawsuit in my life.

Mr. LOVETT: You run into them, do you not, instead of running away from them?

Mr. GRAHAM: I seem to have a faculty of getting in, whenever there is an opportunity.

Mr. LOVETT: Will you please just state what your arrangement or contract with the O. R. & N. Company was?

Mr. GRAHAM: In what respect?

Mr. LOVETT: In all respects?

Mr. GRAHAM: Other than what is there?

Mr. LOVETT: You testified yesterday that the establishment of this line of steamers was the result of an arrangement or contract which you made with the O. R. & N.?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Will you please state just what your agreement with the O. R. & N. was?

Mr. GRAHAM: How it led to it—what led up to it?

Mr. LOVETT: No, what the agreement was?

Mr. GRAHAM: The agreement was that I should put on a line of steamers from Portland to the Orient, and get all the traffic we could over there, and they would get all the traffic they could on this side for me to take over there, and we would divide the proceeds as provided in that contract.

Mr. LOVETT: As provided in this contract?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Was that all of the agreement?

1200 Mr. GRAHAM: That was the gist of it. I don't remember of any thing of any great importance other than that—that I didn't cover I was to run a line of steamers, a monthly service, the steamers to be of the capacity of at least 4,000, not less than 4,000 tons each, and other than that we would have to go through the contract to get at the conditions of it.

Mr. LOVETT: Go through what contract?

Mr. GRAHAM: That one there.

Mr. LOVETT: You mean the document, "Appendix A," attached to your amended bill of Libel in the United States Court in New York?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes, sir.

Mr. LOVETT: Does that express all the agreement between you and the O. R. & N.?

Mr. GRAHAM: Yes sir, I think it does, except that question of coming down the coast here in connection with this little line of steamers from Portland here.

Mr. LOVETT: There is nothing with reference to that in this agreement is there?

Mr. GRAHAM: Only further that it was understood that the rate would be a dollar a ton locally on their steamers.
